Hog Quotations

Toronto, Aug. 17 (CP)—Prices were unchanged at $11 dressed weight at Hull, the only bacon-hog market reporting early today.

Chatham later reported prices unchanged there at $8.35 liveweight and $11.40 dressed weight.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 17 (CP).—The Toronto Stock Market closed the week today with the dull trading tempo unbroken. Despite the meagreness of buying demand, however, the price tone continued firm. The gold group posted more gains than losses today and other index groups held steady. Volume was down to about 40,000 shares.

Little Long Lac advanced to $2 for a 15-cent gain and East Malartic ruled 10 cents higher at 2.80. Perron, Aunor, Upper Canada, Malartic Gold Fields and Gunnar all did a little better and fractions were added by Dome and Hollinger. Bralorne at $9 was up 10 cents.

In the base metal group Steep Rock weakened 8 cents to 1.36 and Noranda was off slightly for broken lots.

Senior Oils registered slight improvement. International Petroleum and Imperial Oil advanced small fractions. Walkers Preferred gained ½ to 19. Maple Leaf Gardens Pfd. firmed 1 to close at 8. Canadian Breweries posted a loss of 10 cents to 1.20.

Western oils were almost dormant.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Aug. 17 —(AP)—Leading stocks crawled over a narrow course in today's market as traders waited for developments in the Battle of Britain.

Boosting the two-hour volume of around 100,000 shares was a sale of 13,000-share block of Graham-Paige at 1-2, unchanged.

Among resistant stocks were U.S. Steel, General Motors, Sears Roebuck, United Aircraft, American Smelting, Anaconda, Westinghouse, General Electric, Du Pont, N.Y. Central and Pennsylvania.

Backward a. times were Bethlehem, Phelps Dodge, Eastman Kodak, Chesapeake and Ohio, Youngstown Sheet and Sperry.

Dome and Lake Shores Mines, in the Canadian list, dipped slightly. Canadian Pacific held steady while Canada 4s, among bonds, dipped 3-8 point.

LIEUT. STANNARD IS AWARDED V.C.

Officer of H.M.S. Arab Performs Series of Heroic Actions at Namsos

London, Aug. 17— (CP Cable) — The war's second naval V.C. was awarded last night to Lieut. Richard Stannard of H.M.S. Arab "for outstanding valor and signal devotion to duty at Namsos".

Lieut. Stannard was aboard the trawler Arab in the bombed and burning harbor of Namsos, Norway, for five days of fierce enemy air attacks.

When Nazi bombers fired tons of hand grenades on a wharf, Lieut. Stannard ran the Arab's bows against the wharf and tried vainly to quench the flames with hoses from the ship's forecastle. There was no water available ashore.

Later Lieut. Stannard placed the damaged ship under the shelter of a cliff and landed the crew and the crews of two other trawlers and formed an armed camp.

When another trawler nearly was fired by a bomb the lieutenant with two other men boarded the Arab and moved her 100 yards before the other trawler blew up.

The Arab endured 31 bombing attacks during five days but Lieut. Stannard eventually brought the ship back to England with only one man wounded.

Some Good Lots of Hogs Marketed

On August 14 three hundred junior farmers took part in the judging competition held at the Peterboro Exhibition. Naturally only a few received the distinction of winning prizes and having their names read out at the banquet which followed and published the following day in the newspapers .

That does not mean that the majority receive nothing for their efforts in the competition. The most lasting reward that a judging competition has to offer is in the developing in the individual the ability to make a well balanced judgment. Good judgment is an essential characteristic in an attractive peronality and the judging competitions as they are conducted offer an excellent training.

Some good lots of hogs marketed out of the Belleville district during the week of August 16, 1940, are as follows:

The War This Week

By H. M. PETERS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Britain entrusted her destiny to the keen-eyed aviators who man her Hurricanes and Spitfires when Hitler, in the fiftieth week of the war apparently launched his total air offensive against the United Kingdom.

Day after day all through the week hundreds upon hundreds of German bombers and fighters flew over England.

But hundreds of planes did not return. Hundreds of Germany's best aviators died over Britain. Britain was fighting with a fury never before experienced by the Nazi air force. Not less than 500 planes were lost during the week by the enemy, against a little over 100 by the R.A.F.

Day after day the R. A. F. hammered back, raiding German factories, oil depots and communications. The raids spilled over into Italy where two airplane plants were heavily bombed.

The air attacks overshadowed the week's other developments which included a strain in relations between Italy and Greece. Announcement at Washington and Ottawa that hemisphere defence is a subject of consultation between the United States and Canada, and some territorial gains by the Italians in East Africa.

Three Greek warships were attacked and one, a mine layer, was sunk without warning by torpedoes. Rome newspapers opened a severe propaganda barrage against Greece, the tone being similar to that used by the dictator countries whenever they planned an act of aggression. Turkey gave unofficial warning that a move by Italy against Greece would bring Britain and Turkey to Greece's support.

Advances Won At Heavy Cost.

Britain in announcing some Italian advances over the hot desert in British Somaliland said they had been won at heavy cost. The British withdrawal was attributed to use by Italy of troops originally intended for action in French Somaliland. The French capitulation left Britain with an exposed flank.

President Roosevelt announced the negotiations with Canada over hemisphere defence and also revealed that Britain and the United States are discussing the possibility of British territory being made available to the United States for naval and air bases for defence purposes.

Discussion on the possibility of the United States making available 50 over-age destroyers to Britain was current in Washington but no action had been taken as the week closed.

Australia suffered a grievous loss when four leaders in her war effort were killed in the crash of a bombing plane. The victims were Brig. Geoffrey Street, Defence Minister; J. V. Fairbairn, Air Minister; Sir Henry Gullett, Vice President of the Executive Council, and Sir Brudenell White, Chief of Staff.

Glancing back 25 years:

Britain suffered a severe loss in the week of Aug. 10-26, 1915, when the transport Royal Edward, former Canadian Northern liner, was sunk in the Aegean Sea with loss of 1,000 soldiers, on land, interest centred on the eastern front where Austro-German troops forced the capitulation of the Kovno fortress, key to the Grodno-Brest-Litovsk line in Poland. In the west French forces bombarded German positions in the Vosges mountains and repulsed enemy attacks in the Argonne.

ITALIANS PUBLISH LIST

Rome, Aug. 17 (AP)—Italy published a casualty list today showing 2,052 killed since she entered the war. In the second half of July, 41 men died of wounds from the fighting in France and 95 were killed in Africa.

MURDER CHARGES

The charges arose from a police investigation probing the circumstances surrounding the finding of the wire-bound body of Gordon Archer, 18 months old son of Mrs. McFarlane in the Trent River on July 25th.

James Thow, C.N.R. trackman, first witness called, told the court while working east of the C. N. R. bridge in Trenton on July 25th, he saw "a small body" in the water near the east bank of the Trent River, about 3 or 4 feet from the edge.

He informed fellow workers and they left on a handcar to inform Trenton police.

The body was found lying face down in the water, Constable Frank Lozo testified. He notified Coroner Dr. J. J. Farley and the Chief of Police. Later with Chief Wm. Bain, he conducted the investigation.

He saw a wire attached to the child's stomach to which was tied a loop, as if a stone or weight had been attached, when the body was being removed from the water.

Arms Not Tied

"The child's arms were not tied to the body, witness said under cross-examination. About 3 to 4 feet of old fence wire was wrapped around the body, with a loop attached, he added.

Dr. Erb, Toronto pathologist, examined the body of the dead child at the Cobley Funeral Parlors. His first observation was that the infant had been a healthy child. He observed vegetable matter and small shells in the clothing of the infant. He identified articles of clothing worn by the child.

At the alleged scene of the drowning he found similar vegetable matter and shells similar to that found in the child's clothing.

A band of rusty wire was found around the body, witness said, with a loop attached. He identified wire produced by the Crown.

Further examination of the body revealed a bloody froth oozing from the nose. Lips were swollen, and of a purplest tint, as was the tip of the tongue. A whitesh line encircled the body in a corresponding manner to the wire found on the body.

No Marks of Violence

"Were there any external marks of violence?" the Crown asked.

"There was an abrasion on the nose, a slight scratch near a nostril, and a little bruise over the left cheek," witness replied.

The child was well nourished, Dr. Erb said. Abdominal organs were healthy, showed no evidence of previous disease, nor did the chest organs. There was no evidence of injury around the neck. No bones were broken.

No undue amount of moisture was evident in the lungs, although a number of hemorrhages were apparent. The heart was healthy. There was no evidence of broken bones but there were a few small hemorrhages on top of the head.

Cause of Death

The cause of death, in witness' opinion was asphyxia from drowning. The child had been dead approximately 24 hours, witness thought.

Under cross-examination by E. Ormonde Butler, McFarlane's counsel, Dr. Erb stated the bloody froth may have originated from a nose bleed.

Witness repeated to Defence Council Goodman that there was nothing to indicate the body had been subject to violence.

A piece of shale 18 by 8 inches bearing scratches, said to have been taken from the river above the bridge was identified by witness. Similar stones had been found on the railway embankment, he said.

Another stone produced by the Crown, could not be identified by witness, but he thought it looked like several seen in the river near the scene of the tragedy.

Coroner Dr. J. J. Farley, corroborated former witnesses' statements regarding finding of the body. He lifted the body from the water with a pole. He saw bloody filth on the child's face which he removed with a cloth. There was a decided possibility that the body had been alive within 24 hours of its finding, Dr. Farley said. He would not "hazard an opinion" as to how long the infant had been dead.

Mrs. Francis Mcunteney, Baptiste Street, told the court Mrs. McFarlane came to her home on July 9th, 1940. On July 26th witness accompanied Constable Lozo to the Cobley undertaking parlors where she identified a body of an infant as Gordon Archer. She had taken care of the infant in her home from July 10th to July 25th under arrangements made with accused in which she was to be paid $3.50 per week.

On July 25th, she asked Chief Bain to locate the baby's mother. Mrs. MaFarlane came to her house between 6 and 7 o'clock, with her husband. She told accused that as she had received no money she would have to ask her to take the baby back. Identifying blue rompers in court, witness said she had given them to accused to put on the child that night.

In Good Health

The child was in good health and good condition when he left her house, witness said. She last saw baby alive when its mother took it from the house on July 25.

She had given the baby good care, witness told Defence Council Goodman, "because I had grown to love him."

Witness admitted under cross-examination to having written Capt. Ruston, Belleville, regarding the disposition of the child, but could not recall including a request to secure money from Mrs. McFarlane. She had told Chief Bain she had not received any money.

Accused had promised her the money on the following Monday night, when she was coming to get the baby's clothes, witness said.

In spite of the fact that she loved the baby, witness said she could not have kept the baby even had she been paid for its keep. Other witnesses included J. J. McNab, Civil Engineer, Godfrey Scott and Elmer Bonter, Press photographers.

ELECTRIC SWITCH

Water Poured on Ruins All Night

Firefighters played heavy streams of water all night on smoldering ruins of warehouse and pumpsheds demolished by the blaze.

Hundreds of gallons of gasoline, fuel oil, and coal oil, which poured out of exploding tanks ran in rivers down John to St. Paul Street, ruining gardens and filling cellars. Lawns of many properties are blackened seared areas. Residences reek with gas fumes. Fireman placed patrols over the saturated areas all night, where streams of gasoline-covered water flowed from the scene of the fire.

Streets affected were barricaded and pedestrians and residents were warned against smoking. Chief of Fire William Lynch, face and neck seared with the heat, directed his men in efforts to prevent another general conflagration should the gas-soaked streets ignite.

Many Windows Broken

Residents likewise counted their losses. Windows were smashed. Dishes in houses crashed to the floor when the heavy detonation of the exploding tanks shook the city. A tank top was hurled 500 hundred feet through the air. A man-hole cover ripped high in the air for a distance of 600 hundred feet, and crashed through the wall of C. J. Hanna's home. A jagged piece of metal travelled 700 feet and tore through the top of a parked automobile belonging to Wm. Quinn, John St. resident.

City police likewise did a fine job in patrolling the scene of the fire. It was stated today that Police Constable Arnott received slight burns about the arms.

Pay Tribute to R.C.A.F. Brigade

Concensus of opinion of Cities Service officials, Mayor Glen Thompson, Fire Department officials and police was that the entire southern part of the city was saved from the flames mostly by the gallant effort of 100-asbestos-clad airmen of the Trenton base of the R.C.A.F. under Commanding Officer Group-Captain J. S. Sully, the airmen and their modern fire-fighting equipment fought the stubborn flames for five hours. They removed furniture from houses in the danger zone, and in their asbestos suits, plunged through walls of flame to loosen valves in the blazing tanks.

Plant Manager Waddell stated: "I am very proud of the fine efforts of the R.C.A.F. and the Belleville firemen. Mainly through their gallant efforts a large part of the city was saved."

Acting Police Chief Arthur Harman and Fire Chief Lynch were of the same opinion. "Those boys were magnificent, and a lot of credit is due them."

The blackened flame-scarred airmen left the scene of the fire in high spirits. "Join the R.C.A.F. and put out fires" one shouted.

"I'll swear I saw Hitler's picture in one of those tanks," grinned another..

100 Drums Naphtha Saved

The airmen, augmented with civilians, dashed in the terrific heat of the blazing tanks and rolled one hundred drums of highly inflammable naphtha gas to safety. "All in the day's work," smiled a young fledgling. "At least, it's a bit better than drilling on a hot day."

An Air Force truck dashed about the scene of the blaze carrying cans of water to smoke-begrimed fire-fighters.

As equally gallant were the members of the Belleville Fire Department. Every available man and piece of equipment was pressed into service with the majority doing a 24-hour stunt on guard and other duties.

OFFICIAL FIGURES

Night operations by the Nazi Air Force were concentrated mainly on Wales, where a number of casualties and at least one death was reported.

Estimate of Planes Lowered.

The Air Ministry meanwhile scaled down its estimate of the number of German planes engaged in yesterday's operations, saying there were not as many as the reported 1,000 which took part in Thursday's mass asasults. Earlier unofficial reports had indicated that as many as 2,500 might have taken part.

Two women and a man were taken to a hospital when two bombs struck in the main square of a Welsh town. Houses were damaged, the windows of three hotels were shattered, and a fire brigade turned out to keep in check a blaze which broke out in the centre of the town.

Two whistling bombs crashed in the middle of another town, damaging property and causing several casualties. One woman said:

"It is remarkable that some people weren't killed. One woman fell from her bedroom into the room below. She was not seriously injured."

German planes also were reported over southwest and southeast England during the night, while a single raider dropped nine bombs on a southwest coast town.

Nazis Faced to Use New Technique

Britain's resistance was so fierce it compelled the German air force to resort to a new technique in its daily assaults.

The Nazi air force has lost almost 80 planes a day since the six successive days of major attacks last Sunday. That toll has been so damaging that the raiders, once past the coast, no longer can concentrate their bombardments on specific objectives but must deploy over a wide area.

Employing a smaller number of planes than on Thursday, when more than 1,000 were believed engaged, the Germans Friday bombed many places in many counties, with two of the chief attacks directed at the Thames Estuary. Both were turned back before the raiders could strike at London itself, although the second wave dropped explosives in the southwestern suburbs.

An official statement said first reports indicated the number of persons killed was small despite widespread damage. The casualties included some of the personnel of R.A.F. airdromes, it was stated.

Charge Residential Town Attacked.

In a communique reporting destruction of 71 German planes to 18 British Friday "although full reports are not yet available", the government charged the Germans for the first time with staging a "deliberate attack" on a non-military objective.

The communique said "several persons were fatally injured" in an attack on the "residential town of Eastbourne", peacetime resort on the south coast.

The Nazi warplanes dive-bombed the town. R.A.F. fighters tangled with the Germans in dogfights obscured by clouds from watchers on the ground. Several bombers were believed to have been shot down, while the body of a German pilot was found on the roof of an empty school and another Nazi airman who balled out of his plane was drowned in the sea.

The first attack on the London area came at lunch time. The massive Nazi flying column, met by British fighters and anti-aircraft fire, was spit in two. Part of the raiding force was turned back before it reached the outskirts of the city, while the others battled their way up the Thames estuary, bombing the Tilbury docks, Northfleet and Barking.

Then they skirted around the southeast portion of London without dropping any bombs in this area.

New squadrons came roaring up the estuary at tea-time. This time they loosed their cargoes over the southwestern suburbs.

Counters Nazi Claims.

Meanwhile the Air Ministry, countering Nazi claims of having lost only 32 planes Thursday, issued a special communique showing that, although most of Thursday's air battles took place over the sea, "it is now known that 49 enemy aircraft were brought down on land.

"The German high command will find it difficult," the ministry declared, "to explain how the wreckage of 49 of their aircraft came to be strewn over the British countryside if their total losses for the day were only 32."

The Air Ministry also announced complete destruction of the Nazi squadron which launched a dive-bombing attack on Croydon Airdrome just outside London Thursday. "Not a single one of the enemy formation returned to tell the tale," the ministry reported.

Twenty to thirty Junker bombers were said to have been used in the attack.

ACQUISITION

Aboard Roosevelt train en route to Norwood, N.Y., Aug. 17—(AP) — President Roosevelt came to upstate New York to keep a rendezvous with Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada and discuss western hemispheric defence problems and American acquisition of naval and air bases in British possessions on this side of the Atlantic.

The President and Mr. King arranged to dine together at dusk, behind the drawn curtains of a special train pulled up on a siding at Ogdensburg, N.Y.

An inspection of 90,000 troops engaged in the nation's biggest peacetime war manoeuvres had been announced as the purpose of the President's trip, but this faded to secondary importance when White House officials announced last night after Mr. Roosevelt had left Washington, that he would confer with Mr. King.

Conversations Under Way

A prelude to tonight's meeting was the President's press conference statement in the capital yesterday that conversations were under way with the Canadian government on "the defence of the American hemisphere' and with the British Empire's government on "acquisition of naval and air bases by the United States for American hemisphere defence, with special reference to the Panama canal."

He gave no hint whether these conversations had reached the point where an announcement of plans of action would be in order.

Lending significance to the meeting with Mr. King was the fact that Jay Pierpont Moffatt, Minister to Canada, was invited to be present.

It was expected, too, that Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, also

Roosevelt's Pledge in 1938

Washington, Aug. 17—(AP) — The pledge of assistance President Roosevelt made just two years ago to Canada, officials here believe, may provide the background for discussions when the chief executive meets Prime Minister Mackenzie King at Ogdensburg, N.Y., tonight.

Speaking at Kingston, Ont., on Aug. 18, 1938, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"The peoples of the United States will not stand idly by if domination of Canadian soil is threatened by any other empire."

The President also said that if the hopes for peace then entertained proved futile, "we can assure each other that this hemisphere at least shall remain a strong citadel where civilization can flourish unimpaired."

Interpreting today's meeting in the light of that speech and Mr. Roosevelt's announcement yesterday that western hemisphere defence discussions were under way with Canada, informed officials said it was not unlikely that the President's objective was to bring Canada into the parnership of the other nations of the new world in forging an impregnable hemisphere defence.

Some officials regarded today's meeting as the first step in assuring Canada that the United States meant to fulfill the pledge President Roosevelt made two years ago.

Eyewitness Seeks in Vain For Evidence of Damage Claimed by German Radio

C.P. Correspondent Says Play-by-Play Description of Mythical Air Bombardment of England Friday Evening by Special Squadron is "Utter Poppycock"

NO RAIDS ON C.A.S.F.

(Sam Robertson of the London Bureau of The Canadian Press was assigned to make a check of elaborate German description of Friday's attack on the London area. He pursued the German statement, made his London survey and wrote the following story.)

By SAM ROBERTSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 17 (CP).—The propaganda maestro for the German air arm went completely berserk Friday—unless the entire population of the United Kingdom was submerged in a deep trance.

From a vantage point in London I am able to state without fear of contradiction that the bombastic statement of the Nazi news and propaganda agency giving a play-by-play description of a mythical air bombardment of England last evening "by a special squadron with a special mission" is the most utter poppycock ever cooked by the imagination of man—even a madman.

"Air raid on air raid alarm . . . howling of sirens . . . thunder of guns in London today," the statement read.

Bombs fell in the suburbs. But if a gun was discharged in the centre of the capital it must have been a popgun. A couple of planes were heard over the city; they flew so high above the clouds they could not be identified and could not have reconnoitred if they were German and that was their mission.

"A black smoke screen is drifting over the east end slums of London," the statement said.

That wasn't smoke, Herr Goebbels. It may have been steam rising from the people getting hot under the collar at the cockeyedness of your propaganda.

In its opening paragraph the statement said the special squadron "has as its objective all points of military importance, etc., etc."

I anxiously telephoned headquarters of the 1st. and 2nd. Divisions to find out whether there had been any raids on Canadian Active Service Force formations.

"There are no bad odors around here. There hasn't been a German in the vicinity all day," said the duty officer at the 1st. Division.

"We are healthy and happy and haven't had any unpleasant callers today," was the reply at the headquarters of the 2nd.

The Nazi pipedream was so all-embracing geographically it wasn't practical to check every point at which the statement said the "German machines threw their deadly loads with the greatest of precision."

But if it was as cuckoo on all points as it was on those I checked the line near the end of the statement which boasted: "We suffered no losses," should have been corrected to read: "We suffered no losses excepting our minds."

Police Blotter

Leonard Phillips, Consecon, complained to city police Friday that he had been forced to swerve his motor car sharply to the right to avoid an oncoming automobile on Victoria Ave. As the result of avoiding a head-on collision Mr. Phillips' car struck a parked car owned by Bruce May of this city, resulting in tail-light and fender damage to the latter vehicle. "I had to swerve to the right to avoid being struck by a car travelling east, which forced me into Mr. May's vehicle," explained Mr. Phillips.

R. J. Morton, of Noranda, Que., reported to police that his motor car had struck and broken off a city stop sign on William St. Mr. Morton stated he was starting his car when the collision occurred. The matter was reported to the City Engineer's Department.

Three inebriates shared the cell block with two transients, who sought shelter at the police station last night.

FAMOUS PARK CLOSED

Vichy, France, Aug. 17—(AP)—French Press reports said today that the famous Paris park, the Bois De Bougloen, has been closed to French police and civilians by the German authorities as the result of shots fired by an unidentified person on a German sentinel there.

LARGE AMOUNT PRODUCE OFFERED

Apples Plentiful Along With Large Supply of Tomatoes and Vegetables

Almost every available inch of space was filled on the Belleville market on Saturday morning as farmers from the district displayed the most complete line of summer vegetables and other market commodities which have been shown this season. Summer flowers, including many displays of Gladioli, added a colorful touch to a produce lined market.

Shiro plums in increasing quantities headed a long fruit list, retailing at 75c the basket. Montmorency cherries were still displayed by the odd vendor at 80c the six-quart basket. Huckleberries held steady at 15c per single box and 2 boxes for 25c with 6-quart baskets going for 65c. Raspberries sold at 15c per box straight, both red and blue varieties, while blackberries went for 25c the box. Currants sold at 10c the box or 3 boxes for 25c for the red and white varieties with black English Currants bringing 25c the box.

Apples were plentiful with Red Astrachans selling at 15c the berry box, 25c the half-peck or at 40c the 6-quart basket. Harvest apples were to be had at 25c the basket, 35c the peck or at $1.00 bushel. Tomatoes continued to decline in price as increased quantities were displayed, selling at 35c the 6-quart basket and 50c for eleven quarts.

Potatoes 80c Per Bushel

Potatoes held steady at former prices, selling at 25c the peck or at 80c for bushel lots, while all kinds of vegetables were to be had at the usual price of 5c the bunch. Pickling onions were 10c and 15c the pint or 70c the 6-quart basket. Cucumbers sold at 25c the basket with "gherkins" going at 30c the basket. Corn was 15c and 20c the dozen. Celery 10c per head with cauliflower retailing from 20c downward. Peas sold at 35c the quart..

Muskmelons were displayed by many vendors at 20c downward or at 90c the basket. Red peppers were 65c the basket.

Grade "A" large eggs sold at 28c with prices ranging down to 25c, while butter was 30c per pound or as in some cases 2 pounds for 55c.

Broilers sold from 60c to 80c the pair with fowl ranging downward from $1.25 each. Ducks were to be had at 75c and 80c each.

Whitefish retailed at 18c per pound, while many thrifty looking young porkers were offered at prices ranging from four to five dollars each.

CHAPTER 15
Tony's Mother

Going into her cabin, Brooke did not undress but sat on the edge of the bed, her eyes disturbed with the certainty that in the end Tony would be hurt. She knew that Rod had had these same thoughts — that in the end she would be hurt. Queer, this reverse. She was in Rod's position now, seeing Tony as herself, ardent, optimistic, believing . . . Tony, young and dear, whose love touched her face with radiance again. And how difficult it was to reject that which is given too rarely! "There are two kinds of people, the ones who hurt and the ones who are hurt." Who had said that? She pondered for some time before she remembered that Julian had said it. She thought, "If I ever see him again, I'll tell him that it is quite possible to be both."

One day at sea passed almost unnoticed into the next and Brooke had lost all count of time until the small calendar in her bag reminded her that they would be in Colon the next day.

Sultry tropical heat kept Mrs. Kingsbury on the ship and permitted Brooke the freedom to explore Colon and Panama City with Tony. His boyish enthusiasm had never been more pronounced than now. He showed her places he had seen many times before, places new and strange and exciting to her.

As they stood in a small shop in Panama City where gifts were incredibly inexpensive, Tony said, mopping his forehead, "Let's go some place for a cool drink. From the freezing temperatures of Michigan to this! I know a place and a bartender."

In a small, cool underground cafe, Tony made what he called his semi-annual greeting to a villianous-looking, unkempt bartender, then joined Brooke again at the round table, smiling at the sight of her dark hair, moist and curling childishly about her flushed face.

"And I complained about leaving Michigan and history," he said, and laughed the young, throaty laugh that had come so familiar. "I was never any good at keeping a secret. I'm going on to Hawaii as soon as I've seen my mother in California and paid my reluctant respects to the executors."

"But, Tony, I work! I've had freedom on the ship because there's been no place for Mrs. Kingsbury to go. She doesn't know about you." But Ellen did, having once or twice encountered them together and Ellen had looked as if she shared a highly amusing secret. "We're going to visit Mrs. Kingsbury's niece, you see, and several strikes have been called on me before I meet her."

"It doesn't seem right that you have to do it!" He glanced away thoughtfully and frowned. "I've lost something, I suppose, knowing only university life and having more money than I need. Maybe it's retarded my development. I haven't as people say, lived. Girls were well, just good fun. Until you . . ." He looked back at her and smiled his most effective smile. "This is a bit overwhelming for me. Why do you suddenly look unhappy, Brooke?"

She disregarded the tall frosted glass placed before her and her voice went a little out of control when she spoke. "Because love is unhappy, Tony, and because I tell myself often that I can live without it and that I want no part of it any more. I was in love, engaged, and he married some one else." All the years of her life in one small sentence . . . "It hasn't been very long ago."

"Then you were in love with some one who wasn't good for you!"

She could have laughed derisively. Instead she laughed so quietly that there was no sound of laugher as she picked up the cold glass.

Tony said slowly, "I see. I understand. But I don't care. It doesn't make the least difference to me."

"Don't make a plan to your life and live for it. When it smashes, you'll smash with it. Not just emotionally but everything will be chaotic. I used to think that people were either all good or all bad, all black or all white. I don't know. I—I was never at sea before. Perhaps in time I won't even be startled at . . new ports. It seems absurd in a way that one person can mean so much. But one person can. It's as if his personality had been fused with mine and I can't lose it. I hadn't meant to say so much."

His eyes were tender. "I'm glad you did. But I can't understand him! No, don't tell me. I'd rather not hear it." Then, "don't you want to drink?"

"Want it and need it."

"We haven't much time."

Nothing is ever finished, she thought. If only human associations had a beginning, a middle and an end. If she could have her way, the association with Tony would end when they reached California. Yet, even if they said a final goodbye, a part of him would remain to hurt and haunt occasionally. But he, she was certain, had no intention of saying a final good-bye. The colossal optimism, the helpless egoism of people in love!

x x x

The ship had been in the Los Angeles harbor some hours before Brooke met Tony on deck, having told him the previous evening that she was certain Mrs. Kingsbury would be anxious to be off on the next part of her trip as soon as they had docked. She had risen early and packed and put on the blue tailored suit. Walking to him, hatless, her hair blowing, she thought that the prompt suggestion of breakfast would relieve them of a prolonged and painful farewell.

"I don't want to get off this ship," he said sadly. "Aren't you going to tell me where you'll be, Brooke?"

She told him the hotel where she would be stopping until Saturday and said, "I haven't had breakfast, have you? Has Bill gone?"

"I haven't seen him. But I saw Harriett before she left with five pieces of baggage and poor Mr. Ricardo looking very downcast in the offing." His voice was unfamiliarly sharp: "All right. Let's have breakfast. Our last . . the last of everything!"

He looked so completely miserable at breakfast that she said, "Tony, call me at the hotel, and if I can get away . . ."

"But you're leaving on Saturday!"

She said gently, "and for how long I don't know." If only he would not look as if she meant to hurt him!

"And even if I can break away and follow to Hawaii, you'll be tied up. What's the use? I'm sorry. I'm behaving badly. You, and the setup I can't fight, and a few other things. I never wanted to go home less. I never felt less like seeing mother's crowd. I've never played around with them much but there are always people there, open house . . . It may be different this time but I doubt it."

She smiled. "I'll have another cup of coffee while you smoke your cigarette and then I must go."

"At least this is better than if I had to sit at this table three times a day and not see you across from me."

"Much better. I couldn't bear that either."

The cigarette finished, Tony said "I can't kiss you here, Brooke . . ."

"Let's not say good-bye. I've said too many. Let's not say any of the usual things."

They arose together. She said, "We'll meet again," and glanced up and smiled at him before she walked away.

Mrs. Kingsbury and Ellen were, as she feared, waiting, the former impatient now to be on land. She did not see Tony again but as she followed Ellen down the gangplank she had a feeling that he saw her from the deck. Tears clouded her vision. You also weep for one you cannot love . .

That night Tony telephoned just as she was leaving her room to join Mrs. Kingsbury for dinner.

"Will you ask her if she'll let you off tomorrow afternoon?" he appealed. "Say you've got an uncle you haven't seen for years or a cousin in the movies. Say anything. We'll have a lot of people here, but we don't have to stay."

"I'll ask her."

"I'll be there," he said quite gaily.

She told Mrs. Kingsbury the truth. "One of the passengers lives in Beverly Hills and has asked me to meet his mother tomorrow afternoon."

The old lady glanced at her sharply. Then she said, "I'll be resting tomorrow afternoon."

Brooke wore the tailored blue suit and frilly white silk blouse and little pancake of a blue hat and blue pumps as she met Tony halfway across the lobby the next afternoon.

"Hello," he said and his eyes were adoring again.

Outside, when he opened the door of a new cream colored roadster, he said, "My stepfather's. A beauty, isn't it?"

Brooke smiled. "It's the most expensive car I've ever been in, Tony."

"I've an expensive family. Shall we go out and meet them and get it over? Then we can go somewhere else . . ."

"Does your mother know I'm coming?"

He smiled. "No. I just ducked out and said I was bringing a guest. You don't have to explain anything to her and she doesn't often ask me questions. She's learned not to expect too much of people, even of me. She's the most completely shock-proof person I've ever known. She looks marvellous. There'll be a good many people there. You might even see your favorite movie star. If only you had longer to stay. There's so much to see here . . ."

An informative guide, Tony pointed out places of interest. Soon luxurious homes loomed into view and Tony turned the car into a road that led to a palatial white house shimmering in the afternoon sun.

"This is it," he said parking the car in a driveway crowded with expensive cars. "It's new to me, too. Mother had her house rented. She came back rather suddenly and took this . . . ."

"It's beautiful . . ."

The huge house was overflowing with people as they entered. Tony nodded, saying an indifferent greeting as he looked over heads for his mother. Brooke caught a brief glimpse of a dramatic actress who in real life was merely a big-eyed little blonde girl in a simple sport dress. A second later she glimpsed a cinema siren who in real life had a bridge of prominent freckles across her famous nose. But the many other faces were strange and totally oblivious to her as they consumed cocktails and lighted cigarettes and chatted.

"Where's mother?" Tony demanded of a tanned youth with tired eyes.

"Haven't seen her, old boy. When did you get back?"

"Yesterday," Tony said and introduced Rick Townsend with some reluctance. Tony looked at Brooke. "I'll find mother and then we'll leave."

Rick asked Brooke how long she was going to be in California, whether she wanted to meet the freckled siren, why she didn't have a screen test . . .

She heard Tony's voice behind her, saying, "Brooke, I want . ."

Turning, she saw Irene in a blinding flash, conscious for a second only that it was Irene, that she wore something long and green, that she had many bracelets on her arm . . .

CHAPTER 16
Mutual Surprise

Brooke's heart seemed to stop beating, then jumped into her throat, paralyzing her. Slowly, very slowly as she stared at the small, sharp-featured face with a brilliant painted-on smile, and at the sleek dark head she came to realize through a tumult of feelings that Irene was Tony's mother . .

Nor was Irene so shock-proof as her son believed. Though her brilliant smile did not fade, the light of the welcoming hostess, the liveliness in her wise, merry eyes died quickly.

"Why, why, hello, dear," Irene said.

"You know each other?" Tony cried, delightedly. "I don't get it!"

Irene said, "Yes, isn't it? But obviously you didn't tell her my name."

Irene was thinking fast, Brooke thought. Not until then did it occur to Brooke that Rod was here in this room . . . And she felt like laughing and crying all at once because this was so funny—and so tragic—and so—mad. Rod here! She felt weak and aching. It was fantastic—but it was true. It was true!

Irene's eyes were piercing. "You came out on the ship with Tony? Oh, I see. Brooke hasn't a cocktail, darling." She laughed her husky, musical laugh. "Stop staring and go get her one. I won't let her run away."

He went reluctantly. Brooke stood still. She wondered if she were swaying on the high blue heels. Her head was light. And she was trembling so that it occurred to her that she would not be able to hold the cocktail when Tony brought it.

Irene lifted her firm pointed chin. Though her eyes were restless and troubled, she laughed again. "If I could think of anything clever, I wouldn't say this is a small world."

Brooke, valiant, too, said, "I didn't know that Tony was your son. He didn't mention your name and I thought that . . that you were going to Hawaii."

"Of course you did," Irene said kindly. "We intended to but we had to change our plans at the last minute. You came out with . ."

"With Mrs. Kingsbury. We are leaving for Hawaii tomorrow."

Obviously relieved, Irene said, "How nice!" Before she could say more, a woman guest claimed her and she moved away, saying to Brooke, "thank you for being sweet to Tony," and went across the room leaving Brooke still wondering if she were swaying. Her throat felt parched, her eyes were taking swift flights over the crowded, noisy smoky, room. They came to rest finally upon the tall figure of Rod just entering the room.

He saw her. He was so shocked his face was expressionless. She knew he was trying to decide whether or not to come to her, and what attitude, if he came, to use with her. Had he changed? Not in appearance. He was wearing brown (his most becoming color, she had told him often) and his face, usually pale from an indoor life, had a healthy tan. He looked splendid.

She couldn't bear it if he came, she thought, and she couldn't bear it if he did not come. She felt herself weakening, weeping in her heart because she could not weep here in this huge, elegant room filled to overflowing with important people. All memories of him seemed to rush upon her . . of what he was thinking? What was he feeling?

She saw him make his way to her . . .

"Why, Brooke . . ."

She made her trembling mouth smile. "I am as surprised as you are, Rod." But, though she longed to be flippant and amusing and indifferent, she couldn't be — because she had never learned how to be. "How are you? You look—fine." And because words helped, she went on more quickly, "I came out with Mrs. Kingsbury and met Tony on the ship." She could be cruel and say, "your stepson." Looking up at him, she saw nothing except shock and embarrassment on the square, handsome face.

She thought, "it's elegant, Rod, what Tony bitterly calls the 'setup' here." She wanted to laugh at herself because she had visualized them in Hawaii—had wondered what she would do if she happened upon them there. In the end, she thought, if this were the end, she had shocked Rod into speechlessness. But she did not want to laugh at him or at Tony or at Irene. Queer that now, though tomorrow she would probably feel quite different, she liked Irene . . .liked Irene—when she had thought she hated her...

Rcovering, Rod said, "you look fine, too, Brooke . . ."

She wondered whether people felt like this when they were drunk—light-headed, silly, aching to talk just to be talking . ..

"I am," she said brightly, her voice breaking a little. "I, that is, Mrs. Kingsbury and I, are going to Hawaii tomorrow." Where was Tony? She felt as if she were breaking into little pieces . .

"I've thought about you a lot, Brooke, and . . ." Rod said, low. He cleared his throat—his voice wouldn't go on. And she saw that his hand was unsteady when he drew a silver cigarette case from his pocket and opened it.

She heard Tony's voice before she saw him.

"Do you know him, too?" he asked cheerfully. "Say, where have I been? I thought I'd told you all about myself, Brooke. Sorry I was detained. Had to listen to a story of a big deal that didn't go through. . ."

She thought, "Rod, we must pretend. We must!"

But Tony, sensitive, saw the strain, their embarrassment. And Brooke saw beads of perspiration suddenly appear on his forehead, saw all joy swept from his eyes.

Tony said tightly, "I'm sorry I . . ." To Rod, "Excuse us, will you?" and to Brooke, "let's get out of here."

Brooke did not look back as Tony guided her through the guests and outside to the car. He drove at a high speed through the rolling hills.

She sat quietly, shaking, wildness in her thoughts, unleashed again, remembering Irene's brilliant smile and the liveliness shocked out of her eyes; Rod, immovable, withdrawn and uncomfortable; thinking that Tony's next move and his next speech were unpredictable. The faces came and went until there was only Rod's square face, his uneasy voice . . . She thought, "I'd give ten years of my life to know what he was thinking then; what his thoughts have been since he married Irene . . If only I knew!" Her heart ached, the old bruise hurt again.

Looking ahead his jaw sharp, Tony said, "It was Rod, wasn't it? What a fool I am! It was the one thing I didn't tell you because I didn't want to jump at conclusions until I'd met him. And I liked him, probably because I expected something far worse when she wrote that he wasn't much older than I am. I expected some sort of beautiful playboy and found that he was sane and serious and substantial. It might even last! But how . . ."

In a controlled voice she spoke to his set profile, telling what now seemed so brief a story of her coming to New York, the afternoon at Barney's and the telegram in the night weeks later . .

Tony cried, "Cruel!" Then, his words rushing, "I haven't any illusions about my mother, Brooke. She hasn't any about herself but she's honest to the core. When we're alone sometime, she'll tell me all about this. She'll say she knew how rottenly unfair it was to you, and all that ...You have no defense against her honesty. She's been hurt so much herself, and yet she isn't callous. She'll help any one. I sound as if I'm defending her, don't I? Perhaps I am. I can't help it. She wanted him—and I want you . . ."

They rode on without speaking. Brooke's thoughts in chaos again. She held her breath and thought: "I could marry Tony and make it very difficult and embarrassing for Rod and Irene. I could weaken now and let him love me." But the effort would cost her too much. Revenge is most expensive for one who seeks it. Sometimes, she thought, you hate your mind for the ugliness it can create.

Finally, she said, "I'm going away tomorrow, Tony, and . . "

"I'm going with you."

"No, you are not. I couldn't see you. There'd be constant friction."

"I can't go back there! Every time we'd look at each other—"

She was thinking more of Tony now than of herself, Tony who had become a responsibility.

"You can go back to school and take your degree and demand your freedom. In the end you'll probably turn to banking and a girl they approve of."

He stopped the car abruptly at the top of a hill and drew her to him. Miserably, he said, "Don't get maternal about me, Brooke."

Her face against his smooth face, she closed her eyes, weakening an instant when he kissed her, thinking that perhaps the devotion she felt for him would be enough—drawing away, pushing back her hair when she knew that it was rest she needed more than anything else now and that tomorrow, when she left, she would be glad to go alone.

"You wouldn't marry me, would you, Brooke?"

She smiled at him kindly. "And face the executors? No, Tony. You're in no position to marry now. You said so yourself. There are too many things unfinished, too many loose ends. We can't run away from facts . . ."

"Yes, you're right. But when am I going to see you again?"

CHAPTER 17
Journey's End

"See me again" Brooke repeated. "Not," she said slowly to Tony, "before I return. Mrs. Kingsbury hasn't said how long we'll stay at Hawaii but when we come back, we'll probably stop a few days here between ships or trains—if she decides to go back east by train...."

Tony glanced away. 'You're the only person I've ever known with whom I could be myself, spouting a lot of pretty theories, believing in them, living in myself, conscious of the beauty of natural things, not liking people much. But I've never told you this either—that I want to write, that one or two people have encouraged me. One of my professors said, "Writing is the result of a deep and rich experience. Go out and live first. "That's one of the reasons I've rebelled at the rulings of powers that be. There's so much to see, and I want to see it all."

Tony looked at her, his eyes deep and tender, his mouth pulled into a quiet, half smile. "I've got to go back, haven't I. I don't quite know how I feel about Rod, but, funny thing, I can't hurt my mother by making a scene and pulling out. I suppose I can't hurt her because I know I can. I'm one of the few people who can. She's proud of me. I don't know why."

"It's only temporary anyway," Brooke said, calmer now. "You'll be going back soon. That is their life, and your life is your own."

His smile broadened. "You can be so exciting and yet so restfull."

"And so hungry...."

He laughed quickly. "Maybe that's what's the matter with me. I'm hungry."

"No rebellion?"

He looked at her. "I'll be waiting."

She left him at eight o'clock, Mrs. Kingsbury's reading time, and left Mrs. Kingsbury at nine o'clock and went to her room and opened the windows wide and looked down upon a strange city, her thoughts whirling. She had left Tony with the promise to see him again when she returned, and her thoughts followed him back to the palatial house and its oddly assorted occupants, the son, the mother and the young husband. What grim humor Jim would extract from that situation! What could Julian Carlton say to that? She could not guess.

The next afternoon, from the deck of a second ship, she lifted her hand in farewell to no one in particular and went to her cabin to the flowers Tony had sent and to the small white card on which he had written, "I'll be waiting."

Not until the second day at sea did Brooke notice that Mrs. Kingsbury was rapidly failing. She had sent Brooke away that morning, saying wearily and irritably that she had no need of her. In the evening she dropped into a heavy sleep before Brooke had read five pages of a thrilling mystery story which ordinarily would have gripped her interest. Closing the book quietly, looking at the inert figure breathing heavily, Brooke wondered if the old lady's deterioration had been gradual and she, excited by her first ocean voyage and by meeting Tony, had not noticed it. Though Mrs. Kingsbury had never offered friendship, Brooke felt that she would never forgive herself if she had failed in her obligations.

She remained until Ellen came. But Ellen did not linger and they went out into the corridor together.

Brooke asked, "Is she ill, Ellen? She doesn't seem the same."

"I've been seeing the change ever since we left New York" Ellen whispered, shaking her head sadly. "Her mind, too. She forgets things. And she doesn't eat anything. I asked her to send for the doctor and she got mad, wouldn't hear to it. It would be terrible if something happened here. I wouldn't know what to do."

"I don't think she should be left alone."

"But if she wakes up and finds me, she'll be mad. She won't admit she's sick. She says she's just tired....."

"All the same, I think we should look in at her tonight—all night."

Leaving Ellen, Brooke went to her deck chair, rested her head against it and closed her eyes and listened to the music. It was fortunate, she thought, that she had done nothing more than murmur "Good morning" to friendly passengers and had not, not feeling festive, dressed for dinner. Moreover, the mood to be gay, to dance and to meet people had left her completely.

Past midnight, when she was lost in soothing music and the warmth of a beautiful night, she heard Ellen's hushed voice and saw her pale face loom terrifying out of the darkness.

"Oh, Miss Brooke! She's worse.. I think..I think it's a stroke!"

The stout, fair young doctor said that it was a stroke and gave only a small hint of hope.

Before morning he walked around the deck with Brooke and said, it's risky business, these old people travelling. It makes it so difficult for their relatives when they die far from home. What will you do?"

"I don't know.

He grinned at her. "You don't seem the drifting type. I am. It's gets pretty dull. But you are beautiful. I noticed you when you came on."

"Will she live?"

He said curtly, "No."

Brooke did not change her clothes again until a few hours before the ship dropped anchor in Honolulu, five hours after Mrs. Kingsbury died.

Dressed in a dark sheer frock and small dark hat, Brooke picked up the remainder of her belongings and put them in her bag. Having summoned Ellen and Francis to her cabin, she expected them at any moment though indeed there was little that could be said and nothing that could be done until they reached Honolulu and Jessica Forbes met them.

Brooke tried to think, fighting fear of her predicament. Anxiety and hope had kept her awake and stimulated her. The kindness of the officers and passengers and particularly the stout, fair young doctor had been very hopeful. But the old lady who had been dying for three days was dead, and Hawaii, the land of sun and beauty and leisure, was before them and she, Brooke, was stranded and alone with insufficient money for a return voyage. It was one of the starkest realities she had ever faced.

The door was open and presently Ellen, her pale face drawn, her eyes red from weeping, and the swarthy Francis, who had always obeyed Mrs. Kingsbury's orders with a grunt, stood outside.

Brooke asked them to come in. Ellen said, "There's nothing we can do until we dock and see Mrs. Forbes. I'll meet her and talk to her. Undoubtedly she'll take charge."

Francis scowled. "How'm I gonna get back to New York?"

"I'm wondering that myself," Brooke said.

Ellen said to the chauffeur, "if you go off and get drunk, we'll never find you."

Francis retorted, "I won't get drunk until I'm paid and if she thinks she's gonna get out of payin' me...."

He went out, scowling darkly. Ellen's anger dried up her tears.

Brooke looked at the stout figure in black kindly. "What are you going to do now, Ellen?"

Ellen, no longer a servant, met Brooke's tired dark eyes directly. Taking a deep breath, speaking still in low tones, she said, "I was prepared for this. I've saved my money and now—now I'm free. I've been in service since I was twelve when I was sent out as a mother's helper and had to stand on a stool to wash dishes. That's a long time...."

Her timid smile was by way of an apology for her next words. "I, well, I got to liking new places and going from being with her. So I think I'll keep on going until I'm tired of it. Then I can live with my sister in Vermont and help her out. She has a big family."

Ellen's second smile was more apologetic than her first. "You know, I hate these clothes, but servants have to dress like servants I like bright colors and now I can wear them."

Mrs. Kingsbury's death had given Ellen her freedom and the privilenge of wearing bright colors.....

Brooke said, "You've been very good to me, Ellen, and so capable that I felt useless."

"But I couldn't do the things you did, Miss Brooke. She worried about her papers and letters, and she liked to be read to, I couldn't do that to suit her. She liked you. Oh, she never told me, but I knew. She was afraid to let you know she liked you. She didn't trust nobody. She always thought everybody was after her money. The trouble with her was that she never had a home."

After a moment, Ellen asked, "What are you going to do?"

"I don't know, Ellen," How could she possibly know?

"You'll have to stand up to Mrs. Forbes," Then, "If there's nothing else. I have some things to put in my trunk."

She left with her customary quietness. One day soon, Brooke thought, Ellen would realize that she could speak as loudly as she chose. She could even shout and knock over things, making a frightful noise.

Brooke was trying to put her thoughts in order when the young doctor stepped in.

I was taking a walk with pop and he said, Just for a pleasant little change, how would you like to walk exclusively on your own feet for a while?

Meening to keep off of his shoes, and I said, I canthelpit, pop it's just part of my 7 years bad luck.

What the dooce are you talking amout? pop said and I said, That's what it means when you break a mirrer. And I showed him my little round celluloid mirrer with nothing left of the glass but cracks, and pop said, That's old fashion superstition.

Well it's still true, because it started before the mirrer hadn't been broken hardly 5 minutes, I said. Puds Simkins gave me a sourball for going a errand with him, and I expected it to last for at least a half a hour and here I went and swallowed it while it was still the same size it started, and right after that I found a cent missing out of my other pants where I know it absilutely positively was, I said, and pop said, You proberly spent it.

No sir, pop, you cant name me any cent I ever spent without knowing it, I said. And that's a way everything's been going ever since, I said, and pop said, Horse blankets to blazes you're on my feet again, just for that you can shine my shoes for me when we get home.

I might of knew it, it's part of my 7 years bad luck, I said. I proberly cant help walking on your feet any more than flying, I said, and pop said, Let me see that mirrer, and I handed it to him and he banged it down in the street so hard there wasn't even any glass left in it, saying, That's how much I believe in superstitions.

Well G. pop, it was broke already, there's no rule about that, I said, and he said, Then we'll make up a rule, and the rule is, if you break a broken mirrer it changes your bad luck to good luck.

And he bought me a ice cream cone to prove my good luck had already started again, seeming like a good proof.

To Welcome Windsors With Dinner Party

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 17. (CP)—An exclusive dinner party the night of their arrival will give the Duke and Duchess of Windsor their first taste of Bahaman hospitality.

A few hours after he takes an oath as Governor to "well and truly serve" his King-brother, the Duke is to escort his wife to the fashionable Emerald Beach Club—where they will be guests of the colony's highest ranking officials and their wives.

The Duke and Duchess sailed from Bermuda yesterday, but the name of the steamship they boarded and the time of their arrival are secrets of State—necessarily so because of possible danger in the Atlantic Ocean from German raider or submarines.

Present at the dinner in addition to the Duke and Duchess, will be members of the Executive Council—equivalent to a Cabinet, the Chief Justice, the Speaker of the Assembly and their ladies.

CANADA, U. S. PLAN JOINT DEFENCE OF N. AMERICA

Britain Hurls Powerful Attack on Coast Near Calais and Boulogne

Permanent Board Will be Named To Ensure Safety

Conference of U. S. President, Prime Minister King Far-Reaching

(By De Olas B. Cornell Associated Press Staff Writeer).

Hyde Park, N.Y., Aug. 19 (AP)—President Roosevelt initiated conversations with State, War and Navy Department officials by telephone today to get their suggestions for naming American members to a joint Canada-United States defence Board, which he expects will be set up by Thursday.

An agreement to create the board was reached yesterday at a conference, at Ogensburg, N.Y., between the President and Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada.

White House officials said the President hoped the board's first meeting to consider mutual defence problems of the two nations could be held early next week.

The place for a meeting has not yet been decided. But a presidential aide said that was not important since subsequent meetings would be held, both in Canada and the United States.

Mr. Roosevelt had no callers today, the temporary White House said, but arranged to make a brief talk tonight to his Duchess County neighbors over a single local radio station.

Ogdensburg, N.Y., Aug. 19—(CP)—Canada and the United States, the two great strongholds of democracy in the New World, today were moving toward joint effort to ensure the safety of North America from dictatorship aggression.

Behind curtained windows of a private car on a special train, President Franklin Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King concluded a week-end conference here with announcement that agreement had been reached to set up at once "a permanent joint board on defence."

The simple, brief statement said the board, consisting of "four or five members" from each country, would "consider in a broad sense the defence of the north half of

How long can it rain! Many looking up at the clouds wonder just how long it will rain, or how long it will take for the clouds to rain themselves dry. This never happens; the air is never rained dry. But since the rain comes not only from moisture which was already in the air over a certain place, but also from imported air continually brought in by the wind, rain may continue as long as the process which is making it rain continues. This may be for a short or a long time. A change of the wind may cut off the supply of moist air and the rain will stop; or bring in air of greater water content and intensify the rainfall.

Probable Joint Defence Committee

Ogdensburg, N.Y., Aug. 19—(CP)—Here are the heads of defence services in Canada and the United States who probably will be members of the joint defence committee to be set up by the two governments:

Canada:

Maj.-Gen. H. D. R. Crerar, Chief of the General Staff; Rear-Admiral Percy W. Nelles, Chief of the Naval Staff; Air Commodore L. S. Breadner, Chief of the Air Staff.

United States:

Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the Army; Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations; Maj-Gen. H. H. Arnold Chief of the Air Corps.

AUSTRALIA PLANS AIR SPEED-UP

Aim is to Accelerate Output of Pilots by Several Means

Sydney, Aug. 19 — (CP Cable)—Arrangements have been completed to speed up immediately Australia's air effort under the Empire Air Training Scheme as advocated by military commentators for some time—especially after the collapse of France.

The plans will accelerate the output of pilots by reducing the training period of outstanding recruits and by permitting the doubling of the present rate of enlistment.

As a result of a shortage of more advanced types of training planes, a greater number of elementary trainees are being sent to Canada for advanced training. An agreement has been reached for this purpose between the Commonwealth and the Canadian Governments.

Total enlistments including all categories under the scheme now number 31,000 with 6,000 still waiting on reserve lists.

TRENTON WOMAN INSTANTLY KILLED NEAR MILLBRIDGE

Mrs. Jessie Allore, Victim of Crash Between Motor Car and Heavily Loaded Truck

3 OTHERS INJURED

Herbert Herrington, Belleville, in Charge of Truck, Charged With Manslaughter

Herbert Herrington, eighteen year-old Belleville truck driver, of 161 Mary Street was formally charged with manslaughter in Madoc late Saturday night, following a motor accident, that claimed the life of Mrs. Jessie Allore, 35, Trenton and sent four Belleville residents to hospital with severe injuries.

An inquest ordered by Chief Coroner Dr. Robertson, was adjourned indefinitely, following preliminary investigation by a jury empanelled by County Constable Wells, of Madoc.

The dead—Mrs Jessie Allore, Trenton.

The injured—Mr. William McFee, 43 Myers Street, Belleville, fractured skull and collarbone, lascerations and facial bone fractures.

Mrs. William McFee, head injuries.

Fourteen Injured In One Accident

Toronto, Aug. 19—(CP— Fourteen persons were injured on the Dundas Highway west of here Saturday when the truck in which they were riding went out of control and turned over. They were on their way to stage a play at Kitchener Saturday night and all belonged to the Ukranian Church of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, Toronto.

Ten were brought to hospital here for treatment.

Other injured were treated on the spot by three doctors and allowed to go to their Toronto homes. For several minutes the ditch along the highway looked like a war casualty clearing station, motorists said. Some of the injured were hurled through the roof of the truck while others had to crawl out through jagged glass.

The driver of the truck, Joseph Kotyek, told police the truck went out of control on a bend in the highway.

Nazi Plane Losses Pass 700-Mark

By The Canadian Press

Destruction of German planes over the British Isles passed the 700-mark today for the intense raids which began Aug. 8.

As compiled by The Canadian Press the score is:

	German	British
Aug. 8	61	18
Aug. 11	66	26
Aug. 12	62	13
Aug. 13	78	13
Aug. 14	31	7
Aug. 15	180	34
Aug. 16	75	22
Aug. 18	141	22
Total	694	155

Isolated planes shot down on Aug. 9, 10, 17 and 19 brought the total German losses to more than 700.

Canada-U. S. Defence Decision 'Far-Reaching' Says London Times

London, Aug. 19 —(CP—Cable)—The announcement of formation of a joint Canada-United States defence board was displayed prominently today on the front pages of London's morning newspapers.

The Times in an editorial described the announcement from Ogdensburg as a decision of "far-reaching import" and said it was not an isolated move.

It is "not surprising," the paper said, that the United States is anxious to establish naval and air bases to protect the Panama Canal. It said the suggestion that the United States Government might have the use of areas suitable for this purpose in the British West Indies "has been received sympathetically in this country."

The Daily Telegraph's United States correspondent in a dispatch from Ogdensburg said, "This is not a simple question of the United States obtaining facilities and Canadian bases, but of coordinating American and Canadian plans to resist a German thrust towards the New World."

Urgent Appeal for Voluntary Assistant Deputy Registrars

An urgent appeal was made today through the press for more voluntary assistant deputy registrars to help in the registration of every person sixteen years of age and over in the three-day period ending Wednesday, August 21st.

Col. W. R. Rierdon, Registrar for this district, made it clear that there are not enough voluntary assistant workers as yet. Considerable time is taken in recording answers to the questions on the registration card and hence the need for the help of everyone who can spare time, especially in the mornings when the number of voluntary assistant workers is not large.

Anyone who can spare the time will be doing a public service to the country and to the people who must register.

Persons who can spare time will please communicate their willingness to offer their services by telephoning No. 217.

THIS APPEAL IS URGENT!

British Parliament Is 'Watchdog of Liberties' Under Stress of War

New York, Aug. 19 (CP). — The New York Times said today that Britain's parliament has "outdone itself in recent weeks as a watchdog of the liberties" that still remain under stress of war.

The government, "with all its dictatorial powers of wartime" has yielded to the House of Commons on matters affecting individual freedom several times, the Times said.

Instances given by the newspaper were the withdrawal of the proposed tax on books and newspapers; modification of treatment of enemy aliens, and the abandoning of the "hush hush" silent columns aimed at curbing gloomy talk.

These steps, said the Times, "are proofs of the self-disciplined soundness of British democracy even in a crisis that demands of ever individual the willingness to give up life itself."

Approves Bill to Permit U. S. Ships to Carry Child Refugees

U. S. Senate Makes Unanimous Decision—Bill Goes Back to Representatives

FEW AMENDMENTS

Washington, Aug. 19—(AP)—The United States Senate approved unanimously today legislation to permit American ships to remove child refugees from war zones.

The bill had already passed the House of Representatives and now goes back to that body for action on minor Senate amendments.

As passed by the Senate the bill would permit unarmed and unconvoyed American vessels to transport from war zones children under 16 years of age, provided safe conduct was promised by belligerents. Heretofore, American vessels have been barred by United States law from visiting war zones.

Every child brought to the United States would be required to be sponsored by some American person or corporation so that he would not become a public charge.

There was little discussion of the measure beyond a routine explanation by Senator Theodore Green (Dem.-Rhode Island) and a statement by Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Rep.-Michigan) that the foreign relations committee was "completely and enthusiastically unanimous" in its approval.

Hitler's Guarantee Worthless

Senator Henry F. Ashurst (Dem.-Arizona), however commented that "I do not believe that safe conduct as guaranteed by Adolf Hitler is worth anything."

"The nation or the man," Ashurst said, "who relies on Mr. Hitler's word for anything, indeed has sweetbreads for brains."

Terming Hitler a "man who imagines himself a werewolf," Ashurst asserted that the German Fuehrer would send the refugee children "to be devoured by the monsters of the deep, if he could thereby advance himself or his views one inch."

COLLISION FATAL AT NEWTONVILLE

Police Say Drivers Blame Headlights for Accident to Automobiles

Newtonville, Ont., Aug. 19 (CP)—Mrs. Isobel Pierdon of Toronto was killed near here late yesterday when the car in which she was a passenger collided with another. Police said the drivers complained they had been blinded by the glare of headlights.

Mrs. Pierdon's husband, driver of the car, suffered scalp wounds and her daughter, Isobel, received minor injuries. J. S Johnson of Grafton, Ont., and his wife in the other car were not seriously injured.

Lewis Gunner Shoots Down 3 Nazi Dive Bombers

London, Aug. 19 (CP).—An aircraftsman who witnessed a raid on the southeast coastal area Sunday said today that a Lewis gunner aged 18, shot down three German dive bombers single-handed.

When the attack came, the aircraftman said, "I did not feel too good but when I noticed the 18-year-old lad coolly handle his Lewis gun and bring down three all by himself it thrilled me as nothing had done before."

Two German planes were reported to have collided and crashed in the same engagement.

CENSOR HOLDUP OF AIR RAID NEWS BRINGS PROTEST

Daily Telegraph and The Times Insist 'Lying' German Accounts Should be Counteracted Immediately

9-HOUR DELAY

By PAT USSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 19—(C PCable) — A nine-hour hold up by the censors of descriptions of Friday's air battles in the London area for overseas transmission evoked vigorous editorial protests today in the Daily Telegraph and The Times.

The papers insisted that "lying" German accounts should not be allowed to get "play" in newspapers due to lack of news from Britain.

The Telegraph front-paged a new story headed "Nazis nine-hour lead in raid new to U.S." And telling how correspondents of American news agencies ran into a stone wall in their efforts to cable stories for Friday afternoon editions.

The Canadian Press encountered the same difficulty.

Captioning its editorial, "The lie must not win again," The Telegraph termed the delay in releasing cable news a "grave error" and added: "There should be no such delay in organizing a counter-offensive to the blitzkrieg of lies.'

Reports Held Up

The Times said "lies should not have the field to themselves even for an hour." It complained that American correspondents were prevented from cabling their stories "until a ridiculously late hour."

News of yesterday's raids went to North America even before the "all

ALUMINUM PLANT NEARRHEINFELDEN HEAVILY BOMBED

R.A.F. Night Raiders Score Direct Hits on This Important Works in Germany

STRIKE AT ITALY

Zeppelin Works at Friedrichshafen and Armament Plants Along Lake Constance Are Targets

Basel, Switzerland, Aug. 19 —(AP)—British night raiders scored hits on one of Germany's largest aluminum factories just across the Rhine from the Swiss town of Rheinfelden.

Although there was no official estimate of the number of raiders engaged, their objectives appeared widespread. Other bombers, one of which dropped a few bombs on a Swiss railroad line on the southern shore of Lake Constance, attacked the German industrial district on the northern side of the lake.

The fact that air raid warnings were sounded three times during the night at Geneva and Lausanne indicated still more bombers also struck at northern Italy.

Reports from Romanshorn said bombing planes struck at German armament plants along Lake Constance, including the zeppelin works at Friedrichshafen, during the night.

Romanshorn is on the southern or Swiss shore of the lake directly opposite Friedrichshafen.

The reports came simultaneously with a Swiss high command announcement that unidentified planes had dropped bombs on the railway on the Swiss side of the lake during the night.

The communique said there were no casualties and the railway line was not cut but that telephone and telegraph lines were broken.

The bombs dropped during the night, the communique said, fell between midnight and 1 a.m. (7 p. m. and 8 p. m. EDT, Sunday) between the villages of Diessenhoffen and Schlatt in the Canton of Thurgau, near the lake

Air raid alarms sounded twice in Geneva, Lausanne, Basel, Zurich and Berne between 11.30 p.m. and 3 a.m., indicating the planes, like the invaders on three nights last week, had crossed Switzerland twice en route to and from the German lake ports and possibly northern Italy.

In Berne, the capital, anti-aircraft guns went into action.

SCHOOLS OPEN SEPT. 3

Brockville, Ont., Aug. 19 (CP).—At a special meeting of the Board of Education this afternoon it was decided to open the primary and secondary schools Sept. 3. The board decided to concur with Premier Hepburn's plan to furnish students for farm labor if needed and encouraging girls to sell war savings certificates.

R. A. F. Squadrons Strike at Points Across Channel

Sunday Air Raids Cost Huns Losses Of 141 to 22 British, 10 Pilots of Latter Being Safe

London, Aug. 19—(CP)—A final check-up of yesterday's air battles over Britain showed that the Germans lost 141 planes against 22 British fighters, the Air Ministry announced today.

The statement said:

"Full reports of yesterday's air fighting establish that, in all, 141 enemy air craft were destroyed. One hundred and twenty-six of these were shot down by our fighters, 13 by anti-aircraft fire and two by search light crews.

"Twenty-two of our fighters were lost, but the pilots of 10 of them are safe."

London, Aug. 19—(CP)—Britain launched a thundering attack against the Nazi-held French coast early today and simultaneously established an increasingly favorable advantage for her defence forces in history's greatest air war.

Squadrons of Royal Air Force planes, aiming their blows at the likeliest jumping-off place for any attempted invasion of Britain, loosed such a heavy cargo of bombs over Calais and Boulogne and the channel coast in between that the flare of the explosions lighted the streets of Dover, 20 and more miles away.

In Dover there were reports of Nazi troop concentrations across the channel. In London, the British Press Association reported R.A.F. bombing of five German divisions, perhaps 100,000 men, on the French beaches, only to withdraw the report when the government declined to confirm it.

Nazi Loses 9 to 1 on Sunday

Main target of the pre-dawn British raid, third within little more than 24 hours, appeared to be Boulogne, where in the first attack on Saturday night, coastal command bombers were said to have dropped three tons of high explosives that "ringed and criss-crossed" the harbor with "spreading flames."

Dr. Harold Welsh "Slightly Better"

Dr. Harold E. Welsh, M.L.A. for East Hastings, who was stricken with a sudden illness while in Kingston last week, was reported today as having taken a turn for the better.

The condition of the popular Roslin physician was regarded as being extremely grave over the week-end, but a noonday report today stated that his condition had improved.

Dr. Welsh is well known in medical and political circles of Hastings and surrounding counties.

Full Treaty of Mutual Defence Necessary Says Herald Tribune

Setting Up of Joint Defence Committee Does Not Go Far Enough, Newspaper Claims

COMMON CAUSE URGED

New York, Aug. 19—(CP) — The New York Herald Tribune said today the only criticism from Americans on the joint defence committee to be set up by Canada and the United States would be that "it does not go far enough."

The program announced Sunday at Ogdensburg, after a meeting of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King, "is not the full treaty of mutual defence, formally ratified by the constitutional agencies of both countries, for which the situation already urgently calls.

"It is not the complete understanding, capable of being put instantly into effect, which safety already demands," The Herald Tribune continued. "A board set up by executive agreement can study; it cannot bind. It can recommend, it cannot secure that the means are made ready for carrying out the recommendations should necessity dictate."

Task Crying for Performance

The paper called the Ogdensburg development "An important beginning upon one task crying for performance."

The Boston Herald commented: "An attack on Canada, or on any of Britain's other possessions in this hemisphere, would immediately hang a sword over our land, our cities and our people. We should at once have to make common cause with Canada and fight beside her to the end. Plainly we shall be prepared to fight more effectively if our military staffs have had an opportunity to consult frequently with each other. This opportunity the new 'joint board on defence' will provide."

What Minimum Safety Requires

The Dallas News said:

"Undoubtedly the minimum safety of this country requires that either in peace or war the United States must implement the working alliance already in existence between the two branches of English-speaking peoples. That is the meaning of President Roosevelt's hint that we will acquire bases on a reciprocal basis.

"There may well be no swap of destroyers for bases in the present negotiations, but if we acquire defence outposts from Nova Scotia and Newfoundland to Trinidad, we automatically make it possible for England to withdraw her West Indian and Canadian squadrons for service nearer home."

Don Bradman and W. H. Ponsford set an all-time partnership record for any wicket in test cricket six years ago today at London. The Australian pair, battling against England, rolled up 451 runs—Ponsford hitting 205 not out and Bradman 244. Ponsford was out next day for 266.

MURDER INCLUDED IN 9 FATALITIES DURING WEEKEND

Four Meet Death by Drowning in Smallest List of the Summer in Province

ONE KILLED IN CAR

By The Canadian Press

Nine persons met violent death in Ontario during the weekend, four by drowning. The list—one of the smallest in the Province this summer—included a murder.

The body of Jerry Blackbird, 32-year-old Indian of the Walpole Island Reserve in Lake St. Clair, was found in a shallow channel Saturday. His head had been crushed by heavy blows. An anchor chain was looped about his ankles and fastened to the gunwale of a rowboat. Police arrested Steven Kiyoshk, 53, also a Reserve Indian, on a charge of vagrancy. They said he was found wiping blood from the floor of his home.

A gas explosion in the basement dining room of the Norton-Palmer Hotel in Windsor killed Kenneth Schrum, 25-year-old food checker of the hotel. Firemen estimated damage of $50,000 to the first three stories of the hotel, one of the largest in the city. At least a score of persons were stunned by the explosion, due to ignition of gases escaping from a transformer room.

Mrs. Jessie Allore, 36, Trenton, was killed and four Belleville citizens seriously injured when the car in which they were riding near Madoc was struck by a truck. Driver of the truck, Herbert Herrington, 18, Belleville, was charged with manslaughter.

At Belleville, the body of George Duby, 46, was found in shallow waters of the Moira River beneath a railway bridge. It is believed he fell from the structure while crossing it Saturday night.

The body of Brownie Duczminski, 18, Transcona, was recovered from Fish Hawk Lake, 55 miles southeast of Kenora, after his canoe upset. The youth had been sent from Kenora as an extra firefighter.

George Fielding, 18, drowned in the Grand River at Cayuga, and Gordon Cross, 14, Rockwood drowned while swimming near the village of Everton.

Archie Spencer of Rodney, was killed when his car collided with a truck near St. Thomas. The body of Charles Sullivan of Toronto was found on railway tracks at Oshawa. He evidently fell from a freight train.

WEIMAR AREA BOMBED

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

RAINFALL WELCOMED BY DISTRICT FARMERS

Farmers throughout the district welcomed last night's rainfall with open arms as pasture lands and root crops were suffering greatly from the effects of the continued dry weather which has been prevalent for the past few weeks. Pasture lands in particular were sadly in need of the rain as the grass was rapidly drying up with a considerable falling off in the milk flow being noticeable. Root crops were also in need of rain, with considerable uneasiness being felt for the late potato crop and other vegetables, while tomatoes in many districts were also badly in need of moisture.

GRASS FIRE SOON REDUCED

A blazing grass fire on Station Street near Cannifton Road caused the Belleville Fire Brigade a short run on Sunday around the noon hour. The grass, having become tinder dry by reason of the continued dry weather, was blazing merrily when the firemen arrived but the application of a few cans of water soon had the blaze under control.

FIREFIGHTER LOSES WALLET AND MONEY

Gaston Gareau, a member of the Royal Canadian Air Force party, which did such excellent work in assisting to fight the Cities Service gasoline tank fires on Friday, didn't mind the job he did. In fact he liked it, but what he did mind was the loss of his wallet which contained identification cards, photos, and an amount of cash.

He notified police and anyone finding the wallet can leave it at the city police station.

FARMHAND KICKED IN FACE BY HORSE

3rd Sidney (Special) — Delbert McCurdy, 3rd Sidney, is a patient in Belleville General Hospital, suffering from injuries inflicted by a kicking horse. On Saturday when Mr. McCurdy was stabling the horses at the noon hour, one suddenly kicked out at him. He was severely lacerated about the face but is improving at the hospital.

PINNED UNDER CAR, DIES

Toronto, Aug. 19—(CP)—Frederick John Andrew, 29, of Toronto was killed late yesterday when he was pinned under a car. He had been riding on the running board when the car, said to have been operated by his father, Charles E. Andrew, got out of control. The accident occurred north of Toronto. Five other passengers of the car escaped without injury.

Fire Chief Thanks All Organizations For Fine Co-Operation

Fire Chief William Lynch took time out today from recuperation from severe heat-sears on his face and neck to pay tribute to people and organizations who worked quietly behind the scenes at Friday's disastrous Cities Service gasoline tanks fire. Chief Lynch has been confined to his home since Saturday with burns.

Members of the Salvation Army and the Belleville Red Cross did a splendid job, the chief said, going from place to place to bring coffee, and sandwiches to hard-pressed firefighters. Augmenting these organizations were the gifts of the Dickens and other restaurants who sent down food and drink. Individuals residing in the vicinity likewise did a splendid job in assisting the firefighters with refreshments.

The fire chief also paid a fine tribute to members of the Royal Canadian Air Force who assisted in the fight. "They were grand, and contributed greatly to the ultimate victory over the flames."

But the chief did not forget his own department. "While everyone agrees the Airmen did a yeoman service, they should not forget the heroic part played by members of the Belleville Fire Department. Six injured and burned, perhaps, gives some idea of how the boys worked. They did not hesitate one moment in the performance of their duties, and at no time thought of personal danger. They obeyed orders to the letter, and in fighting a fire, the first of its kind in Belleville, they showed a fine spirit of co-operation and fortitude of which the residents of this city might well be proud."

Fireman Jack Thompson, who was severely burned about the hands and face during the explosion of one of the large tanks, is recuperating slowly in Belleville General Hospital. He will not lose his eyesight, but it will be some time before he is fully recovered from the serious burns in other parts of his body. Other burned and injured members are recovering nicely.

London, Aug. 19 (C.P. Cable)—The Exchange Telegraph Agency today quoted the Bremen radio as describing the new Canada-United States defence board agreement as "nothing less than incorporation of Canada into the political system of the United States of America."

CITY VETERANS DECORATE GRAVES

Imperials and Women's Auxiliaries Join Veterans On "Decoration Day"

Colored berets of Canada's famous fighting divisions, mingled with those of Imperials and Women's Auxiliaries here yesterday, when war veterans of the city and district swung along city streets to the Belleville and St. James cemeteries, where floral tribute was paid to the memory of fallen comrades at the annual Decoration Day services.

The Rev. Claude T. Olmstead, minister of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church officiated at the brief ceremony held before a large crowd at the Belleville Cemetery Mausoleum.

In a short address, Mr. Olmstead brought out the salient points of Lieut. Col. John McRae's immortal "In Flanders Fields" and how they apply to present world conditions. "We are at war again after a quarter-century of suffering, and now we are sending our sons to battle. Old soldiers must shudder in their graves when they think of it."

"As we decorate these graves we rededicate our lives to all that our comrades died for, and pray God to bless our efforts to bring us victory that will usher in a lasting and permanent peace."

Following the service veterans placed floral bouquets and tiny Union Jacks on the graves of fallen veterans in both cemeteries. Many civilians took advantage of the services to decorate the graves of departed ones.

Marched Behind Band

The veterans left the Armouries shortly after one-thirty p.m. and swung along Bridge Street to the stirring tempos of the Belleville Municipal Band and the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) Pipe Band. Near Albert College the columns dispersed and were taken to the cemeteries by three buses of the Rawson Line.

Members of the C.N.R. War Veterans organization, immaculate in maroon blazers, berets and cream flannels, were "piped" from the Belleville Cenotaph to the Armouries previous to the general "fall in". Appreciation was shown by the railroad vets, when they presented the pipers with a small purse of silver for refreshments.

Incidentally the Pipe Band paid beautiful tribute to their late leader and teacher, Pipe Major Albert Johnstone, when they formed a circle about his grave and played a Scottish lament. The Belleville Municipal Band supplied the incidental and accompanying music during the service.

3-Legged Heifer Brings Red Cross $50 in Draw

Patriotic citizens of the district of Hoard's Station subscribed the amount of $50 to the Red Cross Society of Campbellford and Seymour, through the efforts of Messrs. W. J. Snarr and J. Brown, who held a draw for a most unusual prize, at Hoard's on Friday, August 16th. The prize was a two-year-old heifer raised by Mrs. M. Hanna of the 12th Concession of Rawdon. The animal has only three legs—one hind quarter being entirely missing. The draw, held at Brown's garage, was made by Donna Sharp, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Sharp, the winning ticket being held by Mr. Jas. Thompson of Menie. Over one hundred enthusiastic persons were present.

Mr. Snarr and Mr. Brown bought the animal for $25, and after procuring a permit from the local Red Cross, had the tickets printed and sold.

Police Blotter

An assault on a member of His Majesty's fighting forces, a car theft, ditto a bicycle and an even half-dozen of the boys, who gazed on the wine, when it was red, constituted police activities over the week-end.

Two men, who have since been identified by eye witnesses of the affair, launched an assault on a soldier outside the Globe Cafe, Front Street, late Saturday night, inflicting injuries that necessitated his being sent to hospital. The victim of the assault was knocked against a parked automobile during the melee, causing facial and head lacerations. The assailants are known to the police, who intimated today that action will be taken.

Shortage of fuel in the gas-tank of his automobile probably saved his car for William A. Bowerman, Carrying Place. Leaving the vehicle parked near Upper Front St. on Saturday night, he returned about 11.20 p.m. to find the car missing. It was found later in a ditch near Shannonville, where the thieves had left it with an empty gas-tank.

In a similar vein is the story of Langley Evans, 47 Alexander St., who parked his "bike" in too conspicuous spot. Along came a person unknown, who calmly confiscated the bicycle. It was recovered later by police.

Six inebriates were hauled into police court this morning and paid the conventional fines of ten dollars and costs.

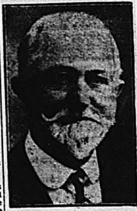
9 PASSENGERS KILLED ON BRITISH R. R. in Year 1939

London, Aug. 19—(CP Cable)—Nine passengers were killed and 795 injured in railway accidents in Great Britain during 1939, official figures showed today.

James Texts Store Wealth of Education

Hidden behind the modern, yet unpretentious front, of the James Texts, internationally known publishers of educational material, and far from the prying eyes of Front Street pedestrians, lies a wealth of education on paper, in books and in boxes, that would astound the average citizen could he but visualize it.

From this plexus of educational information and supplies, go the lines of communication that take text-books and other matter pertaining to schools to the far-flung sections of the world. To China, Japan, and other countries, where the James name is synonymous with school supplies, go the necessities for education.



Mr. George M. James, well-known educationist, author, traveller, and philatelist, proprietor of the James Texts, internationally famous headquarters for educational and business supplies.

Behind the small yet imposing front of "headquarters" on Front street there is a labryinth of supply rooms, that contain everything from an eraser to the last word in office mechanical appliances. Crammed to capacity with a hundred and one varieties of supplies, the stocks would do justice to an establishment ten times as large.

Thousands of Textbooks

Textbooks, the student's nightmare and the teacher's dream, from the primer to Latin Authors, in fact every textbook written under the sun, is available. Incidentally the James Texts has supplied 80% of the supplies for the Belleville Collegiate Institute for a number of years. A thousand and one scribblers of all hues and sizes pack a single room. Pencils sufficient to write the history of the world in a dozen different languages occupy another. Outline maps, colored cards for art students cram another. Crepe paper towelling and a dozen and one sideline supplies augment the variable stock, that is the pride and boast of the firm.

In another department, filling shelves that reach to the ceiling is package upon package of printer's type, representing examination papers and answers of all branches of education for the past twelve or fifteen years. These are kept in readiness should a demand arise. And while on this subject of printing, forty pages of the new 1941 catalogue are now in preparation. Eight thousand reprints of the entrance reports were done.

In other departments are immense stocks of rubber bands, rubbers, envelopes, books of all descriptions, so many in fact that a visitor would have the impression that he had already earned a college degree after an inspection.

School Necessities

Nor have the members of the firm neglected the important business phase of mechanical business and school necessities. One of the more modern mechanical aids to business and school is seen in a new dictaphone which receives dictation and repeats immediately, with records capable of receiving a number of messages. An up-to-date mimeograph machine capable of delivering 20,000 copies from a single stencil; a new mechanism that drops paper drinking cups in one's hand, and many other new appliances form but a part of this branch of the business.

One of the most important activities of the firm is the sale and maintenance of typewriters. The only establishment that represents four outstanding makes of these machines, it has practically every model available. In conjunction with this department is the typewriter "hospital" where an expert mechanic services and repairs machines at moment's notice. Adding machines of the latest mode are also available. A new filing folder that is proving popular with business men, has been recently added to the stock.

Decorative Supplies

Other variances of this remarkable stock include greeting cards for all seasons and occasions; art pictures, some of which came from France and Switzerland, and many other home and office decorative supplies.

Recently the front interior was given over to the hands of interior decorators and now in a handsome new "garb" of ivory and cream presents a fresh attractive appearance.

The large stocks in this particular department were moved "thanks to a highly efficient staff" and the entire work of decoration done overnight.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES

Canadian Press Staff Writer

All Britain today became a single coordinated defence area as belief grew in some circles that the Nazis would seek to press their invasion attempt soon—before Autumn's bad weather forces postponement until next spring.

The Royal Air Force hammered a large stretch of the German-held French coast during the night, causing fires and explosions so vast that they lighted the streets of Dover, 22 miles from the nearest continental port of Calais.

Whether the R.A.F. was blasting German troop concentrations was not clear. The press association put out a story saying British fliers had disrupted forces of five German divisions but withdrew it later when officials said it was incorrect.

The government took the step of making the entire United Kingdom a defence area to frustrate "enemy landings by air or sea," indicating it, too, felt that the time for a Nazi invasion attempt might not be far off.

Slackening on 12th Day

Nevertheless, the 12th day of the stepped up German attack saw a slackening of the air war. German raids were not as heavy yesterday and last night as previously and their proportion of losses was higher than ever. The Air Ministry said the R. A. F. and other defences downed 141 German planes while 22 British craft were lost.

Reports from Berne and Basel in Switzerland showed the R. A. F. was carrying the fight to the enemy on a wide front. Observers in the Swiss cities said British bombs fell at various near-border points, including the famous zeppelin home at Friedrichshafen. Rome dispatches said the R.A.F. raided northern Italy again today. Reports of damage were not issued at once, but the Italians said planes dropped leaflets.

R.A.F. Blows In Somaliland.

In Africa the R.A.F. smashed at Italian troops and bases used in the Somaliland campaign and British ground forces continued their gradual and orderly withdrawal toward Berbera, the capital.

Great importance was attached to the agreement reached Saturday at Ogdensburg, N.Y., between Prime Minister Mackenzie King and President Roosevelt to establish a permanent consultative body of military officials to deal with problems affecting defence of the northern part of North America.

Students of North American affairs hold it would be suicidal of the United States to refrain from helping Canada in the event of an attack, for an enemy established in the Dominion would have a first-class springboard for invasion of the United States along the 3,000 miles of unprotected frontier which are a symbol of brotherhood in peacetime but might become a source of acute danger under different circumstances.

Some suggested the agreement did not go far enough in that it provided merely for consultation, but left the question of possible joint action to the future.

It was noted with satisfaction, too, that progress was reported in talks having as their object United States use of Canadian and Birtish-held ports as defence bases for the Americas. In some circles it was said fruition of such talks would enable the Royal Navy to withdraw its West Indies squadron for service elsewhere.

Registration Booths In All Parts of City Crowded All Day

Each and every one of the twenty-three polling booths in the city were crowded at an early hour this morning as the stock-taking of residents, which is the National Registration of all persons in Canada 16 years of age and over, commenced and will continue through Tuesday and Wednesday.

As early as ten o'clock this morning, registration booths in the various polling divisions in the city were urgently phoning to the central registrary office at Shire Hall, asking for more volunteer deputy registrars to assist in the registering of persons already waiting their turn at the booths.

Heavy and all as the rush of persons seeking registration at the city booths was this morning, however, it was expected that polling booths throughout the rural districts would experience an even greater rush. The event of last night's rainstorm would temporarily put an end to harvesting operations it was thought, and farmers would take advantage of this enforced lull in their work to get registered.

No fear was felt by Assistant Registrar, Fred Wiggins, this morning of any shortage of volunteer workers for the city of Belleville, but, as he stated, "the trouble is to get them when you want them. By far the greatest majority of our volunteers have offered their services for the afternoon and evening, which leaves us short of workers in the morning, and we have been rushed this morning getting enough volunteers out to meet with this unexpected rush at the polling booths.

OBITUARY

MRS. EDMUND R. SPENCER (Sidney Township)

Woman, Passenger in Car, Critically Hurt at Trenton

Mrs. Alice Griffiths Rushed to Belleville Hospital Early Sunday Morning

CAR HITS TRUCK

Trenton, Aug. 19.—(Special) — Mrs. Alice Griffiths, 211 Front St., Trenton, was seriously injured and rushed to the Belleville General Hospital early Sunday morning following a rear-end collision at the corner of Dundas Street West and Dufferin Avenue. She is suffering from internal and chest injuries.

The injured lady was a passenger in an automobile driven by Clarence Casselman of Smithfield, that was proceeding west. The Casselman automobile was following a truck on Dundas Street, when the truck stopped at the traffic light at that intersection.

According to the Trenton police, the light was green and the stopping of the truck was unexpected. The Casselman automobile collided with the truck doing considerable damage to the car. Charges are pending.

The injured lady was attended at the hospital by Dr. R. A. Gibson and Dr. G. S. Cronk. She is reported as resting comfortably following an operation to relieve the hemorrhage.

Slight Injuries Received

Roy Ellis suffered slight injuries when he collided with a truck driven by L.A.C. Garnet Kleinstueber of the Royal Canadian Air Force, Trenton. He was taken to Dr. J. W. Farley where he was given first aid.

According to the police, the truck was being driven east on Dundas Street when Mr. Ellis walked from between two parked cars in front of the Post Office. The impact threw Mr. Ellis to the pavement, causing lacerations over the left eye. He was allowed to return home. No charges are pending.

Hundreds Register

Hundreds of Trentonians went back to school today, to register under the National Registration Plan. All registrations were taken at two schools the College Street School for those living on the East side of the Trent River and Dufferin Street School for those on the West side of the river.

Italian Airdrome At Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, Bombed

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 19 — (AP)—The Italian military airdrome at Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, was heavily bombed yesterday by British air raiders, a Royal Air Force communique said today.

The communique:

"Royal Air Force bombers raided the Addis Ababa military airdrome. Direct hits were registered on four hangars. A petrol fire was started as the result of the bombing. All our aircraft returned safely."

"Numerous bombing raids and reconnaissance flights were made in Somaliland with the object of breaking up convoys of motorized vehicles and harrying troops advancing on Berbera. Considerable damage was done to enemy formations.

"One of our aircraft was shot down by enemy fighters, one member of the crew making a parachute descent."

Willkie Accepts Nomination

Rushville, Ind., Aug. 19—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie was completing arrangements today to open a nation-wide speaking campaign at Coffeyville, Kansas, in mid-September—unless, he said, "President Roosevelt would like to meet me beforehand" in joint debates.

The Republican Presidential nominee challenged the President Saturday to arrage foreign and domestic issues "face to face."

Willkie accepted the Presidential nomination at Elwood Saturday in a speech calling for "some form of selective service," and charging that Mr. Roosevelt "courted a war for which the country is hopelessly unprepared."

In his campaign address, Willkie expects to take up one by one the major issues on which he touched Saturday. Although he expressed agreement with some objectives of Roosevelt's foreign policy, he declared.

BRITISH BOMBERS SHOWER LEAFLETS ON NORTH ITALY

Tell Italians "They Were Shedding Their Blood to Make Germany Greater"

SITUATION EXPLAINED

Rome, Aug. 19.—(AP)— British bombers showered leaflets on Northern Italy today telling the Italians they were shedding their blood "that Germany, Italy's hereditary enemy may become greater".

"Hitler, not England, points a sword at your heart," the leaflets said. "The responsibility for the victims of the air raids falls on Hitler and his Italian satellites. Do you intend to shed your blood that Germany, Italy's hereditary enemy, may become greater?"

They said the peace between Britain and Italy had "been broken treacherously" and "now British bombers have brought the war to your very doorstep".

(There were no reports in London of British air raids on Italy today although Basel, Switzerland, dispatches said unidentified air- in the vicinity of Friedrichshafen, craft raided southwestern Germany near the Italian border.)

R.A.F. Shoots Down 513 Nazi Planes In Past 7 Days

London, Aug. 19—(CP)—The Air Ministry announced tonight that Royal Rir Force fighter planes during the past seven days had shot down 513 German planes.

(A Canadian Press compilation from Air Ministry statements showed more than 700 German machines destroyed in the 12 days since Aug. 8th.)

The announcement said:

"During the last seven days of air fighting, fighter command pilots shot down 513 Nazi raiders, of which 377 were bombers or fighter bombers, 73 per cent of the enemy's losses.

"Twenty-two British fighters were lost yesterday, 12 of the pilots of which are safe. This figure of 12 marks an addition of two to this afternoon's communique."

(The seven-day total of this announcement refers to German planes shot down in combat and does not include those downed by anti-aircraft fire or other causes).

'Little Damage' Is Caused in Sunday Night Raids

London, Aug. 19—The Air Ministry announced today that, "in general," German air raids last night caused "little damage."

The official communique said:

"Later information confirms that, in general, little damage was done in the raid on this country yesterday evening.

"A number of high explosive bombs, however, which fell on a town in southeast England, damaged some houses and caused a small number of casualties, some being fatal.

"During last night enemy air activity was not on a large scale, but bombs were dropped at a number of points in England and South Wales. Little damage was done and few people sustained injuries."

Five of Family Aggregate 408 Years

Five members of the Reid family aggregating 408 years, gathered at the home of Mrs. Fannie Morrison, Tweed, yesterday, to fid farewell to the seventy-nine-year-old lady, who is leaving for Weston, Ontario where she will make her home with Mrs. William Brad.

Besides Mrs. Morrison, 79, were three brothers, Archie Reid, 80; John, 76; Nathaniel, 82 and one sister, Miss "Lib" Reid, who is 82. A number of younger members of the family, including Mr. Jack Morrison, son of Mrs. Morrison and his wife, 177 Pinnacle Street, were at the function.

The elderly lady has resided in Tweed for the past twenty-two years and is moving to her new home in the immediate future.

Senator Criticizes Bullitt's Speech

Washington, Aug. 19—(AP)—Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Dem.-Idaho) told the Senate today that the address of Ambassador William C. Bullitt, predicting a German attack on the United States if Great Britain is defeated, was "little short of treason".

Bullitt's speech, Clark added, amounted to "an appeal to the American people to go into an unprovoked foreign war now for which he says they are not prepared".

This, he asserted "comes mighty, mighty close to being false to his country".

Bullitt, Ambassador to France, made the address yesterday in Philadelphia. He urged adoption of conscription and supported aid for the British fleet.

The Idaho Senator added that Bullitt's speech was "not only approved but inspired by the State Department".

Embattled Britain Our Outpost Against Unleashed Forces of Destruction', Says Col. Breckinridge

Noted New York Lawyer and Former Assistant Secretary of War Under President Wilson, Calls Hitler 'Insatiable Tyrant' Who Would Crush Last Strongholds of Freedom — Col. Breckinridge, Broadcasting Over CBC, Salutes Canada and Says 'My Hope for My Country is That the United States Draw Its Sword for Freedom and Humanity'

The following is the full text of the radio speech delivered by Col. Henry Breckinridge, noted New York lawyer and Assistant Secretary of War in the Wilson Administration, in the series "LET'S FACE THE FACTS", Sunday night August 18th. Col. Breckinridge, speaking from Montreal, at the invitation of the Director of Public Information, was heard over a national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Fellow Citizens: I am not a citizen of the British Commonwealth of Nations, but I claim to be a citizen of the Commonwealth of Humanity. I dare say more than "fellow citizens." I dare say "my brothers and sisters." For all who love liberty are brothers and sisters.

I salute the "Lady of the Snows." Every dweller in this western hemisphere should salute her. For the moment she is our only representative in the most dire battle ever fought for freedom. May it not be said much longer that Canada is the only nation of the west fighting for the priceless heritage of the west—liberty!

I could well imagine myself a Canadian irritated at hearing a citizen of the United States speak. I can fancy myself asking, "Why does he not back his words with action?" "If he speaks for any considerable number of his fellow countrymen, why does not his country join the fray?"

The first reason I am speaking is because I have been courteously invited. Another is that I shall speak no word on this occasion which I have not uttered publicly in different form many times in the United States. Suffice it finally to say in this connection that it would give me great satisfaction to serve against the Nazi with the armed forces of my country. Meanwhile, I honour those who have followed the example of Kermit Roosevelt and have translated into action the sentiment and opinion of millions of Americans.

Few Times in History Like Present

Only a few times in all recorded history has western civilization faced a crisis like the present. At Thermopylae and Marathon, Greek valour saved the original fountain head of our culture. Had Greece gone down, the Oriental way of life and thought would have prevailed. In all probability, premature death would have struck the grace, beauty and freedom of thought which was Greece.

In 453 Rome fell to the Barbarians and for centuries night shut out the light of civilization. The small flame escaped extinction in the isolated and enduring sanctuaries of the church. Perhaps, the present danger is more like the moment preceding the Fall of Rome and the beginning of the Dark Ages than any other day of history.

In 732 Charles Martel and European chivalry save Christian civilization from the Moor at Tours.

During the Thirteenth Century the Golden Horde of the Mongols ravaged from the coasts of China to Hungary, Russia and India, conquering most of the known world.

In the Fifteenth Century the Turk recoiled from his unsuccessful siege of Vienna.

On all these occasions the spirit of the western man has risen to save by a hair's breadth his culture and his freedom. Rivers of blood were shed but civilization did not die.

Today's Danger Greater Than Ever Before

The danger today is greater than any that has gone before. The reason is simple and should be clear to every intelligent mind. In preceding crises, arms were simple, easily hidden, wdiely and individually owned. As late as the American Revolution the Minute Man at Bunker Hill was about as well armed as the British regular. Today, a people conquered and disarmed is at the mercy of the conqueror— a victim ready for permanent and hopeless slavery. The unarmed man cannot rebel successfully against airplanes and tanks. The radio brings instant news of disaffection and carries the ruler's orders at a speed of 186,000 miles a second. From the nearest air field fly the squadrons to rain death and obliteration upon the defenseless population. It is conceivable today that a single conqueror can rule the world.

One Insatiable Tyrant

Hitler is the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse rolled into one insatiable tyrant. The banner over him is blood. He consolidated his domestic power by the synchronised murder on a single day in 1934 of all his German rivals. Treachery is the basis of all his diplomacy. As he destroys one victim he lulls to sleep with sweet assurances the next on his list. The British Commonwealth of Nations and the American Nations stand alone between him and the total conquest of all the free peoples of the earth. If America sleeps and Britain falls, America will awake to its doom. The world cannot survive half slave and half free. Hitler knows this and relentlessly pursues his ravening race to destroy the last citadels of freedom. He must destroy liberty or liberty will destroy him. He rightly recognises this as a war of annihilation. We too should recognise it and my deepest conviction is that my country should furiously organise its vast latent power into unassailable and irresistible military might for the utter defeat of the Scourge of Satan that has been loosed upon humanity.

Nazi Invincibility a Myth

The cult of the invincibility of the Nazi is a myth. He invents none of the instruments with which he enslaves his own people and attacks all the rest of the western world. The tank is based on the caterpillar tread invented by an American for farm work and first used in war by the British at Cambrai in the last World War. The airplane is an American invention; the submarine, also, and the machine gun. In the last war the Nazi's predecessor did give poison gas to the world. He initiated the submarine murder of non-combatants at sea and also contrived the murder of Edith Cavell. Now the Nazi adds to these foul accomplishments the persecution of the Jews, the harassing of the Catholics and Protestants, the aerial bombardment of civilians, the enslavement of whole peoples and the widespread treacheries of his Fifth Column agents.

The Nazi employs the inventions of other men to destroy humanity. Take him out of his cross-country armored engines and he is no better than any other average man and decidedly inferior to the run of mine Canadian or American. Match him in the air with equal numbers and he will succumb. In the last war it was conclusively demonstrated that in the air and on the ground, man for man, the Canadian was his master. If the Canadian airman really gets at him in the present conflict the minions of Hitler's air force will expiate in bitterness the crime of their slaughter of women and children. The place to destroy Hitler is in Germany; not America.

Isolation of America Another Myth.

Another myth is the isolation of the American Continent. The fool and the knave point to the 3,000 miles of Atlantic water as an insulation against the wars of Europe. They acclaim the broader Pacific as a protection against Asia. Every bright school boy knows that Iceland and Greenland are easy stepping stones for the modern giant, Aviation. Seven years ago the Italian Balbo reconnoitred the route from Rome to Chicago with twenty-four planes. He did it easily and without incident. Greenland nearly touches Canadian territory in the north and one point of Greenland actually is east of Iceland. Hitler knows all this. The German von Gronau also reconnoitred this route and the German Udet is an expert on Iceland's strategic location for controlling the air and sea lanes of the great circle course between Europe and America in the northern latitudes. Denmark owns Iceland and Greenland, and the Nazi has conquered Denmark. You know St. Pierre and Miquelon off your coast and you know the Nazi has conquered France who owns these islands. Finally, we are advised by the American friends of Hitler, (and I am ashamed to say they exist), to be prepared to negotiate agreement with him. I should prefer to make a treaty with a poisonous snake. Hitler's plighted word, on each occasion that he has pledged it with an innocent and honourable neighbor, has been but a preparation for plunging his serpent fangs into the living body of his deluded victim. What man in his right mind would negotiate with him? The only hope of humanity is the destruction of Hitler; not his appeasement. Better make a pet of a tiger or set a wolf to guard young children than trust this fiend in human form so long as the breath of life is in him. Should we stand by until the assassin has murdered every other member of our family and plan to negotiate agreement with him when he has completed his orgy of crime?

Hitler's Mouthings Blaspheme.

Hitler prates of race in the face of his own seamy lineage and childless sterility. Well, we know something of race in Canada and the United States. We have accepted the word of God where it is written that He "made of one blood all the nations of man". We have learned that men of differing race, colour, language and religion can live together in peace and co-operation. The German race is as complex a mixture as the population of the United States. Hitler's mad mouthings blaspheme God, fly in the face of the plain facts of ethnology and deny the history of the hitherto happy life of the American Continent.

Salute To Canada.

Canada, I salute you. You have cast out doubt and fear. You have accepted the inescapable challenge and willed that freedom must live; that the danger of death is preferable to the certainty of defeat and slavery. Each nation of the western hemisphere should follow your example. Right or wrong, every one of our American nations for a century has lived on the basic fact that the British fleet controlled the Atlantic. Self-interest, intelligence and courage dictate that we give Britain unstinted aid. It doesn't even matter whether or not we like the English. Embattled Britain is our last outpost against the unleashed forces of destruction, slavery and hell. Glory to the man and nation that give successful resistance to the menace. My prayer for you is that you endure and win. My hope for my own country is that the United States draw its sword for freedom and humanity. Children of Montcalm, heirs of Wolfe, God speed you!

Old Secret Weapon Dodge Again Used by Nazis

(By The Canadian Press)

From two points today came reports of new efforts on the part of the axis partners to weaken British morale pending an attempt an invasion.

One was the old secret weapon dodge. At Brussels, Louis Lochner, Associated Press correspondent, was told that what is left of Hitler's navy is trying out a new weapon "which officers insist will surprise the world when the moment comes to use it." Lochner reported that "the nature of the weapon and the exact location of the pre-invasion trials through which it is being put are, of course, strictly withheld from publication."

Talk of secret weapons has come up periodically, mainly from Nazi sources, ever since the war started. Hitler himself threatened one in a speech last fall. This has been identified variously, the identifications ranging from magnetic mines—which were used in the last war—to "nerve gas."

Lochner reported the German army attitude toward the threatened invasion as: "By September it will all be over." He wrote that preparations go forward on the coast behind a camouflage screen(and behind a camouflage screen and acter have been devised."

Meanwhile, in Rome, the Mussolini mouthpiece Virginio Gayda wrote in the weekly Voce D'Italia that "there is no doubt that the next few weeks will disclose Germany's employment of even vaster forces and even more resolute methods" in the attack on Britain. At the same time, however, he wrote of a "violent war of attrition" rather than in invasion attempt.

Gayda also took occasion to charge that the French were helping Britain's defence of British Somaliland, accusing the Governor of French Somaliland of commanding French troops beside the British, and of giving cannon, machine-guns, munitions, pilots, planes and high officers to assist in the defence, after the French-German-Italian armistice was signed.

2ND WAR LOAN ISSUED EARLY IN SEPTEMBER

Terms Will Likely be Announced on September Sixth

Canada's Second War Loan will be issued early next month for a total of from $250,000,000 to $300,000,000 of new money and holders of Dominion of Canada 4½% bonds maturing September 1, next, will be given an opportunity of exchangng given an opportunity of exchanging those of the Second War Loan, Honourable J. L. Ilsley, Minister of Finance, announced this morning.

Mr. Ilsley said that plans are at present being formulated for the issue of Canada's Second War Loan, the terms of which, it is expected will be announced on September 6, probably being followed by the opening of the books for the loan on September 9. If this schedule is followed it is likely that the new Loan will be delivered to purchasers about October 1.

While holders of Dominion of Canada 4½% bonds maturing on September 1 may, of course, obtain repayment of their bonds on that date, it is expected that a large number of such holders will wish to renew their investment in Dominion of Canada securities and will therefore not present their maturing bonds for payment until the terms of the Second War Loan have been announced. The amount of the loan will be increased to provide new bonds issued as a renewal of the maturing obligations.

Provision will be made to compensate holders of the maturing bonds who decide to convert into the new Loan for any loss of interest which they may sustain as a result of the dating of the new bonds. It will always be possible, however, if for any reason a holder decides that it is impossible for him to convert his holdings into the New Loan, to obtain cash for the face value of his maturing bonds at any time after September 1.

From present indications it is anticipated that many large holders of the maturing bonds will take advantage of the opportunity presented by the offering of the Second War Loan to renew their investment in Dominion of Canada bonds.

Mr. Ilsley expressed himself as being confident, from the information which had already come to his notice that the people of Canada are eagerly awaiting another opportunity to lend their money to the Government for the purpose of financing the ever-increasing part which Canada is taking in the war effort.

Importance of Cheese Industry Brought Home to Rotary Club

S. J. Joss, Ontario Cheese Producers Secretary, Emphasizes Importance of Industry to Business, and Canada's Contribution to British Markets — Hastings Second Largest Cheese Producing County in Ontario

Following is the full text of an address delivered to the Belleville Rotary Club at their weekly luncheon on Monday, by Mr. Stanley L. Joss, Belleville, Secretary of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association. Mr. Joss was introduced by Rotarian Howard Clarke, while the club appreciation was voiced by Rotarian Jack Hartwick. Guests at the luncheon included Messrs. Mac McLean, Montreal, and Stanley Hagerman, Belleville.

"I do not think I could have a more commonplace or homely subject to talk about than cheese, but most things on the surface are commonplace and it only after we have delved more deeply into their origin that we realise that many stores of intense human interest can be woven around them."

"Cheese has a most interesting background which is not without its touch of romance and adventure to stir the imagination. For instance, tradition tells us that cheese was first discovered many thousand years before Christ in a unique and interesting way. But before I tell you this story, in order that you will appreciate it let me explain very briefly something about the manufacture of cheese. A substance known as rennet is used in the manufacture of cheese and the action of rennet on milk is to bring together all the solids in a coagulated mass which is called curd. This substance, rennet, is made from calves' stomachs. Now apparently in the days of my story skin bottles were used by Arabs to carry their liquid refreshments and these bottles were made from calves' stomachs. Consequently an Arab herdsman who was carrying his lunch comprised of dates and milk, the milk in a skin bottle found to his amazement on opening the bottle that the milk had coagulated and formed a creamy white semi-solid mass. This was curd, which is the first stage in the finished product, cheese. Curiosity tempted him to taste the mass and he found it to his liking. From that time on his tribe experimented with their milk along these lines and these experiments were, we are told, the beginning of cheese making."

Distinctive Types

"Relatively few people appreciate the large number of different varieties of cheese in existence. I would not care to make a guess as to the number there are but I may say that ~~in London~~, England, in the spring of 1939 I had the privelege of going through the warehouse of probably the largest distributor of fancy cheeses in the world. You may at some time have seen the name of the firm I refer to on some of the tinfoil used for wrapping purposes for the cheese distributed by this firm, namely Mattia Locatelli. Although it is interesting to know something about all types, there was one type in particular that rather intrigues me because of the story of its origin. This cheese is matured in caves in some part of France and the curing process takes two years. The caves are a storage provided by nature for this work because of air currents and temperatures suitable for the work. You will appreciate how difficult or nearly impossible it would be for anyone to compete with the manufacturers of this type of cheese because to provide a man-made storage would be practically out of the question from an economic standpoint."

"I cite these two instances, first because they are interesting, but principally in order to add some glamour to that very commonplace commodity, cheese."

It is not my intention, however, to speak about either the manufacture of cheese nor the history of it. What I really want to speak about is the importance of the industry to Canada and if I can, to impress you with the importance of the industry to your own businesses. If you will keep these two points in mind, particularly the one regarding the importance of the cheese industry to your business, you will make it much easier for me to make my point.

Chief Single Industry

"Quoting from the Canada Year Book, 1939: "Agriculture, including stockraising and horticulture, is the chief single industry of the Canadian people, employing in 1931 27.7 per cent. of the total gainfully occupied population and 33.9 per cent, or over one-third of the gainfully occupied males. In addition, it provides the raw material for many Canadian manufactures, and its product in raw or manufactures form constitute a very large percentage of Canadian experts." This quotation is largely the basis of my remarks. It also provides the incentive for my acceptance of your president's kind and flattering invitation to speak to you today. You will therefore excuse me for repeating parts of this statement. You will note that agriculture is the chief single industry of the Canadian people. It provides employment for 28.7 per cent of the total population and 33.9 per cent. of the male population. It provides raw material for many Canadian manufactures and its raw products and manufactured products constitute a large percentage of our exports. That is the importance of agriculture to Canada. If you will realize the importance of this great industry to your respective businesses you will appreciate the point I am going to try to make, namely, agriculture's problems are our problems.

"To develop these points fully would require considerably more study than I have given the subject, also much more time than there is at my disposal, but I will deal very briefly with what I consider the more salient points. However, I am not dealing today with agriculture in general, but with one specific phase of agriculture, namely, cheese. I am merely taking agriculture in its broad sense and working down from there to cheese. I have told you of the value of agriculture to Canada, now let me tell you of the value of the dairy industry to agriculture, and by this method of reasoning I shall arrive at my specific subject, cheese. It is estimated that there are over 700,000 farmers in Canada and over 300,000 of them are milk producers. The dairy industry of Canada is valued at 200 million dollars annually and the cheese industry has been recognised as the balance wheel of this great dairy industry. It is so recognised because it is the industry which utilises our surplus milk, and our cheese is exported to a market where it stands in quality second to none, and we receive for it a premium over the product of any other country. You will appreciate the importance of being able to dispose of surpluses. You know that surpluses have a tremendous influence upon the whole price structure, and you all realise that a favorable market for surpluses exerts a tremendous influence upon the production of a commodity. That is what cheese is doing for the Canadian dairy industry, and that is why cheese has been called the balance wheel of the industry.

Ontario Produces 75 percent

Ontario produces approximately 75 percent of this very important commodity and Hastings county is the second largest cheese producing county in Ontario."

"As a wartime food cheese stands among the highest because of its highly concentrated food value, its splendid keeping qualities, and its convenient packaging, which facilitates transportation. These points would seem to be borne out by the fact that Great Britain has asked Canada and New Zealand to step up their production of cheese, and last spring a contract between our Federal government and the British Ministry of food was consummated for 78,400,000 pounds of cheese at a price of 14c per lb. free on board ship, Montreal, and we are advised that if we can increase this quantity it will be very acceptable."

"Now, gentlemen, this commonplace product, cheese, a product that has been largely responsible for paying farm mortgages and building farm homes, has been going through serious times during the past few years. For instance, for several years prior to the war the farmer producing milk for cheese was receiving approximately 80c per hundred pounds of milk or 1 1-3c per quart. In Ontario there are approximately 25,000 farmers working for returns as low as this and it is not necessary for me to say that such a condition cannot continue indefinitely. It it true that the war time price is above this but we must bear in mind that it is only a wartime price and if it had not been for the war the great economic problem would still be with us. I see in my audience that there are both professional and business men, and it may be that you feel that you have great problems of your own, which no doubt you have, but in my humble opinion the origin of your problems lies in the problem of agriculture, or, in other words, if agriculture were prosperous every other phase of industry in the country would be favorably influenced by that prosperity. To bear out this point, the other day I called on one of the directors of our organization and he was on one side of his fence and I was on the other. In discussing some matters pertaining to the industry and prices he put his hand on the fence and said to me, "If I could afford it I could very profitably put up a new fence here, which would likely cost me $100.00, and I do not think there is a farmer in this county who could not spend $200.00 any day in repairs around his farm if he had the money to do it." This condition undoubtedly exists all over the country and it takes no great stretch of imagination to appreciate the stimulus that industry would receive if these men had the spending power."

Gov't. Recognition

"The importance of the cheese industry has received signal recognition by the governments during the past five years and financial help has been given. The form in which this help was given the reason why it was given, and the time at which it was given may all be criticized, but the fact that it has been given, or if it should be continued in the future should not be criticized. Rather it should be studied by all, and suggegstionse made towards its development and, yes, its continuance."

"I may be repeating myself, but I would urge upon you as urban dwellers and business men to study agriculture problems, not only from the point of view of the country's needs but also because of your own interests. To deny this existance of these problems or to remain silent about them is foolish. To talk about them and have no solution for them might be destructive, but to have a solution or to be convinced you have the solution you must be able to judge the pros and cons impartially with full knowledge of the facts to judge from."

"Personally I view these things without the faintest vestige of sentiment but purey from a business angle and my business philisophy is that business at all times remains business and must continue to be conducted as such purely on the basis of price and profit."

British Forces Have Withdrawn From Somaliland

London, Aug. 19—(CP)—The War Office announced tonight that the British forces have withdrawn from Somaliland.

The announcement said the withdrawal was decided upon as an alternative to reinforcing the British garrison there with reserves who would be of greater use in places more important to the prosecution of the war.

The announcement said: "All guns except two lost in the early stages of the action have been embarked. A great part of the material stores has also been evacuated and the remainder destroyed. Our wounded have been safely brought away."

ALBERTA RANCH ONLY PROPERTY WINDSOR OWNS

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 19.—(CP)—The Duke of Windsor believes the British Government sent him here to administer Bahamian affairs and not to act sa a good will ambassador to the Americas.

He said so in reply to a question when he and the duchess received American newspaper men for the first time since his inauguration as Governor of the Bahamas Saturday.

"I very much doubt the British Government had in mind that my present duties would extend beyond the Bahamas at this time", the former King commented.

The Windsors arrive in the middle of the heat wave that always precedes the rainy season here, and the duchess was so worn after the trying induction ceremonies that she was unable to accompany Edward to services at the 180-year-old Christ Church Cathedral yesterday.

The Duke said that if he and the duchess visit New York in the near future they probably would go on to his ranch near Calgary, Alta.

"That's the only property I own in the world", he said.

EDITORS ENJOY NORTH ONTARIO

North Bay, Ont., Aug. 19—(CP)—Thirty editors of weekly newspapers in the United Stated headed for the Muskoka Lakes district today after a week-end in Northern Ontario. The newsmen are on a goodwill tour of Ontario, having started from Niagara Falls last Wednesday.

Before their departure from North Bay today, the visitors were taken to Callander, where they saw the Dionne quintuplets at play. On arrival here Saturday evening they were tendered a banquet at which Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, physician to the quints, and Col. O. E. Chisholm, officer commanding the Northern Ontario military district, were chief speakers.

On Sunday some of the editors went to Kirkland Lake to see the Lake Shore mine, others took a boat to Temagami while others went fishing.

Aims at Offer Of Federal Union To Great Britain

New York, Aug. 19—(CP)—Announcement of formation of "the New York Committee, Federal Union, Inc." which has as its aim the offering of a federal union to Great Britain was made today in a full-page advertisement in The New York Times.

The advertisement calls for immediate help to Britain by "sending the destroyers, planes and torpedo boats which she needs desperately and which we will not need as long as Britain survives."

It continues:

"But suppose they don't turn the tide? The only way we can be sure of saving the British fleet....and America....is through Union Now.

"What is union?

"It is the thing that Winston Churchill offered the French after the fall of Paris.

Build Greater Republic

"Are we proposing that the time has come to build a Greater Republic,....one that would include our nation and Canada and England and Eire and all other nations, inside and out of the British Commonwealth, that are still free and able to unite?

"Yes—we are."

The advertisement called upon readers to "join the thousands who are demanding that America do something to keep her Atlantic defence." It said that the movement toward union began 16 months ago with the publication of the book Union Now by Clarence K. Streit, foreign correspondent of The New York Times. Federal Union, Inc., is incorporated as a non-profit membership organization with members in every state in the United States.

NEARLY 10,000 VOLUNTEER HELP IN TORONTO

Hamilton Expects Major Portion of Registration Over in Two Days

(By The Canadian Press)

Residents of Ontario gave an enthusiastic response today to the call for National Registration. Returns from a number of points indicated there will be no difficulty completing the registration of the entire adult population within the three-day limit if persons continue to co-operate with officials as they have already.

In Toronto nearly 10,000 persons have offered their free services to assist the government-appointed registrars. In St. Catharines it is reported the registration in Lincoln county is being handled entirely by volunteers without pay. Those examples are typical of the province.

In Hamilton, where about 30,000 industrial workers already have been registered, officials said that the initial opening-day rush brought out 15 per cent of those to be registered. With a heavier rush of business later in the day it was considered likely the major portion of the registration would be completed in two days.

Men, women and a great many High School youths were lined up at nearly every registration booth in the urban centres, giving officials an early taste of action.

In Toronto

Toronto, like Hamilton and other industrial centres, has had a large initial registration among workers in the larger companies. About 300,000 were registered in the provincial capital last week, leaving another 400,000 or 500,000 to register in the ordinary booths.

In Galt Archie Hall celebrated his 82nd birthday by being the first of the town's population to register at one booth.

Ina number of rural sections where the Sunday rains had caused a tie-up in farm operations, farmers and their helpers thronged the registration booths early to have their duty to the county out of the way when they could get back at their farm chores.

"Wash Day" Registration

Monday "wash day" kept a number of housewives from registering during the initial rush but business men and women made up the difference in the early registrations.

In Hamilton those attending to their registrations were asked by the junior Chamber of Commerce to bring their old aluminum utensils with them to be added to a stock of metal which the organization plans selling for use in airplane manufacturing, the proceeds to go to the Red Cross.

GIVEN 5 YEARS ON ARSON CHARGE

Accused Tells Court "I Figure We're Even Now"

Cobourg, Ont., Aug. 19—(CP)—Fred Young, 35-year-old farm hand was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary today for arson. In a statement read in court, Young admitted setting fire to a barn owned by Ezra Harper, Aug. 11. Accused said he caused the fire because he couldn't collect $6 which he claimed Harper owed him. Damage was $3,000.

"You are a dangerous man to be at large. You might do more harm to Mr. Harper," said Magistrate E. A. Gee in passing sentence.

"I don't wish Harper any further harm. I figure we're even now," replied Young.

Register Firearms By September 15

Toronto, Aug. 19 (CP)—Hon. Gordon Conant, Attorney-General of Ontario, anounced today machinery is being set up in his department for registration of all firearms in the province Under a Federal government ruling of July 29 the Attorney's-General of the provinces were asked to take over the registrations.

Under the new regulations all shotguns and rifles must be registered by Sept. 15 and after that date it will be unlawful to buy a firearm without a permit.

The Minister said the new regulations will not work any hardship on United States citizens who wish to bring their own hunting equipment to Canada. "A permit will be issued to any bona fide hunter-tourist at the border. We shall facilitate the proper possession of visitors' hunting equipment."

NEW YORK MARKET SLOWEST IN 22 YEARS

New York, Aug. 19 — (AP) — Search for a real trend proved unavailing in today's stock market.

The session was the slowest in 22 years, with the ticker tape frequently coming to full stops for a minute or so. Transfers were at the rate of approximately 125,000 shares. Near the final hour minor losses and gains were about even-stephen.

BRITAIN STANDS AIR SHOCK OF HUNS

Military and civilian Britain has stood ten days or more of nazi shock and blitzkrieg but the tempo of the people of the nation is as ever it was, resolute, defiant of the foe, confident of victory. Hitler's myrmidons have never met the match of these people before. They take the "blitz" out of that German creation "blitzkrieg" (lightning war) and 'blitz" was one of Hitler's weapons.

Hitler took a long time to get his "blitz' going. He did it over Poland but he hesitated all winter. He did a touch of it in the Scandinavian countries and tried out in full the German conception of war when the nazis overran the Netherlands and northern France. But he did not throw any lightning bolts at Britain until after eleven and a half months of struggle. Just the week before last he started "blitzing" his opponent. Instead of a front he found a moat, the Channel, the North Sea and the Atlantic, instead of a line he found a fortress island. While he has hurled his hundreds and as high as one thousand planes and more against Britain, the British Air Force holds the skies and at the same time strikes paralyzing blows at German military objectives. Friday's gigantic effort succeeded no better than others, though ferocious in the extreme. The attack on Croydon air port was as heavy as the enemy could bring but according to report every nazi plane that engaged in that fight went down. So much for British supremacy.

Its must be extremely difficult to estimate the losses of the foe in such a mad attempt as that of last Friday when nazis were falling out of the clouds in plenty. Many planes may limp away and unknown to the world sink down below the Channel waters where they can do no more harm, thanks to the work of the Royal Air Force.

The war is now on a vast scale, that of air whose supremacy is sought by Hitler.

"The acceleration of action on both sides tends to confirm the expert opinion of Major Alexander Seversky that the battle we are witnessing is not a prelude to invasion by ground troops and naval craft," says The New York Times. "It is invasion. for a time military observers looked to the conflict between Britain and Germany as a decisive test of sea power against the new weapon of air power. Since a British victory finally depends on success in keeping open the lines of communication between the head and the body of the empire, this conception holds good in the long run.

"But as the time shortens in which a landing expedition is possible, as the aerial warfare develops, it looks as if the first and perhaps the crucial test may be of air power alone. It may be, as Major Seversky suggests, that land and rea forces have become 'mere onlookers' in an engagement that starts in the air, develops in the air and will be decided in the air. If this is the new Trafalgar, the 1940 version of Waterloo, the extraordinary fact is that the Royal Air Force, outnumbered by the German, still holds the control of the air over Britain. The longer this control is maintained the more it will be reinforced, by speeding production at home and abroad, and the more the other elements of British strength will fortify her power of resistance."

The R.A.F. is one of the arms of the service that can grow immeasurably. That is the British plan. The future is rich in its promises of more planes to be used to crush the German air force, German bases and communications. With the fleet holding the lanes open on the Seven Seas, and the army ready for any task, Britain looks with confidence to the day when she will have that final say in the end of Hitlerism.

For ten days or more the world has been spectator of the greatest of air struggles, and is cheered as the citizenry and the military forces of Britain hold fast and steady. Many feel that in this fight the fate of civilization will be decided for the right. Therefore hopes and prayers from mankind bolster Britain's spirit and the might and heroism of her armed forces and the soul of her people in industry and in the homes.

HAS BRITAIN NEW SECRET WEAPON?

The Germans have used their magnetic mine and its secret was soon out and the menace was negatived. Then she tried parachutists and there have been counter measures taken by the British since the parachute troops were first used by the Germans in Belgium.

Germany has not said much lately about secret weapons and the Ottawa Journal draws attention to an article in P.M., the new United States newspaper, in a column written by "The General," the writer commonly believed to be Major-General John Perishing, commander of the United States Expeditionary Force in the last war. The article says that there is a new secret weapon and that it is a British secret weapon. The article reads:—

"World War II has indeed fathered a secret weapon, just as Dr. Goebbels predicted. It's British, however, not Nazi.

"The ribbon shell, which was not accurately described in the first reports, is fired from an ordinary AA gun. It has a thin shrapnel-type casting. Inside are spools of tightly-wound inch-wide steel ribbons, small automatically - opened parachutes, a bursting charge of powder and a time fuse.

"When the bursting charge ruptures the case the steel ribbon is spun out into a mesh by the combined action of spring tension and centrifugal force. The ribbon is wound tightly like a watch spring. The centrifugal force comes from the shell's extremely high rate of rotation imparted by the rifling threads in the gun.

"The ribbon mesh will wreck any planes that tangles with it, the inevitable fate of anything that hits anything else at 300 miles an hour. The 'chutes keep the novel barrage in the air a little longer than would otherwise be possible. The pilot cannot see the steel bands until it is too late—most of the time he would never see them at all.

"If the ribbon shell fulfills its possibilities, the brief news report heralding its appearance may have greater significance than the streamer headlines announcing the start of daily large-scale air raids."

Britain invented the tank and the Germans have used that British invention in this war on a mammoth scale. But they have produced nothing original themselves, except organization which was only possible because the German people were so easily dominated and directed by tyranny. The British soon solved the magnetic mine. It is doubtful if the Germans can solve any new invention the British produce.

Registration of commercial prints and labels has been transferred from the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Patents to that of the Register of Copyrights in the Library of Congress.

On Being Original

There is one feature of our lives to which not even war has made a great deal of difference, says The Times, London. The people we meet and talk to in the course of the daily round fall roughly into two classes—those who are quite content to say what every one about them is saying, and those who seem to feel it their bounden duty to say something different. The first class are by far the more numerous. But the minority make up for their lack of numbers by their mental agility and provocativeness. Most of us, greeted with thae remark "Isn't it a lovely day?" are quite happy to reply, with ready-made effusiveness, "Yes, isn't it?" But the man who cannot bear to be a mere echo, even if he cannot contradict outright, must embroider the theme by some such qualification as that it is still risky to sit out of doors, that the glass is falling, or that there is a distinct feel of rain in the wind. These originals are the gadflies of our social life. They buzz around, stinging us out of the conversational slough into which our mental sluggishness often leads us. Though we are content to be personally lazy in these matters, we do like the titillation of having some new thing, or some new aspect of some old thing, brought to our notice. Newspaper posters often play upon that foible. They abound in "sensation," "tragedy," "romance," and "fiasco" to lure the pence out of the pocket of the passer-by. The trouble is that originality of that sort soon defeats itself. The overworked superlatives are heavily discounted. The over-stimulated nerves cease to react. The young man who started the game of crying "Wolf!" when there was no wolf no doubt thought that he had hit upon a very clever device; but he ended by being sorry that he had made a habit of it.

Anyone who has a craze for being original may plume himself on being to some small extent the most original creature in the whole world. For science tells us that life originated in the first living cell, and that all subsequent life arises from the subdivision and infinitum of that primeval ancestor. So, bewildering as the thought may be, everyone of us must have in himself some trace, however infinitesimal, of that unique original. But it is hard to feel enthusiastic about an originality which is shared by every other living thing, and we are driven to other ways of satisfying the desire to be different from those around us. The fact that we are diferent is fundamental. Even the Dionne "quins", though the product of one birth and reared in an environment as nearly identical for all of them as science can make it, already show differences of physique and character which clearly distinguish them from one another. How much greater must be the difference which marks off the rest of us from our fellow-men! And yet it is not enough for many. They want something more. If it is not fame, or wealth, or station, or prowess in one direction or another, then there must be some home-made mark of originality such as eccentricity of dress, deportment, or speech. It is probable that very few of the monocles that are worn were prescribed by oculists as aids to vision.

If all else fails, the would-be original may take comfort from the thought that whenever he says "I" he is marking himself off unmistakably from everyone else in the world. That unique personality is for him the centre of all things. It is through that unshared avenue that he perceives, feels, and knows all the beauties and terrors of Nature, all the joys and griefs of humanity, all the mystery and awe of the universe. All these marvels come to their focus in himself. He finds it difficult to entertain the thought that when he is no longer there to experience them they will not cease to be. If that unwelcome conviction sometimes obtrudes itself, the instinct of self-protection bids him banish it to the farthest recesses of his mind and go on living his life as if it were not there at all. His religion comes to the rescue, forbidding him to believe that "endless shade" can be the final fate of "what is so wonderfully "made."

Risks for Goering

Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering has received the insignia of a new rank from Adolf Hitler and, if it's of metal, he's aggravating one of two risks he faces. If the controller of fats and oils doesn't confiscate him one of these days, the munitions industry is likely to lure him into a shelter.—Windsor Star.

SIR J. LATHAM GOES TO JAPAN

Chief Justice of Australia Sent as Minister to Japan

Melbourne, Aug. 19—(CP Cable)—Sir John Latham, Chief Justice of Australia since 1935, has been appointed Australian Minister of Japan, Prime Minister Menzies announced Sunday.

He will be the first Australian Minister to Tokyo. Supplementing the Prime Minister's announcement, Hon. John McEwen, Minister of External Affairs, said it was hoped Japan will make a reciprocal appointment almost immediately and that an understanding to that effect has been received.

Empire Units Rally to Call

By HAROLD FAIR

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London (CP) —When Hitler's hordes swamped France and Italy stalked like a jackal behind them, the Empire's response was an intensification of its war effort to buttress Britain for the impending single-handed battle.

Canada sent more troops to Britain in addition to providing a force to occupy Iceland and garrisons for Newfoundland and the West Indies. She called more men to the colors and gave the full-speed-ahead order to her industrial set-up. The other Dominions similarly stepped up their contribution.

Even the smallest colonies rushed to the aid of the motherland sending money for purchase of much-needed warplanes. Gifts totalling more than £1,600,000 ($7,120,000) have made possible the acquisition of a colonial fleet of 40 heavy bombers and 160 Spitfire fighters ready for action.

Like Canada, Australia and New Zealand gave the state power to control property and services of all persons. Canada issued a call for thousands more aviators, sailors and soldiers and Australia started recruiting a third division for overseas service. The first contingent of Anzacs arrived in Britain June 20 while other troops from "Down Under" continued training in the Middle East where they have been since the first of the year. The Commonwealth is increasing its 95,000-man home defence force to 250,000.

To meet Britain's need for warplanes, the Commonwealth transferred to the British government her claim on an order for 100 lockheed bombers from the United States.

The Commonwealth took steps to double the munitions output and proceeded with the building for the United Kingdom of a number of patrol vessels to be rushed to European waters. In the financial sphere, a war loan of £20,000,000 ($89,000,000) floated May 29 was oversubscribed by June 7.

New Zealand under a war council of 14 ministers has compulsory service regulations which provide for establishment of a general reserve including all males over 16 and a selection of reservists for service at home and overseas. Selection of reservists will be made by ballot.

The government has decided to form extra specialized units and passed legislation in mid-June unwhich it could assume control of any industry or supplies.

Active in Ethiopia

South Africa's air force showed its value and power June 11, the day the union declared war on Italy. Heavy bombers of the air force bombed Italian military objectives in Ethiopia. Since then frequent reconnaissance and bombing operations have been carried out in Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland.

Framework for expansion of the union's air training scheme is ready but the rate will depend partly on Britain's ability to send material. South Africa's mobile field force, consisting of men prepared to serve anywhere on the continent, also has been in action against the Italians. One contingent is serving in East Africa.

Meantime the Union's government is co-operating with the Netherlands legation in organizing an expeditionary force of Netherlands citizens living in South Africa for service in the East Indies.

While the constitutional question in India still remains tangled, the government nevertheless has decided to quadruple the air force, recruit 100,000 more men for the Territorial Army and add new units to it. Native princes have given airplanes to Britain and now the princesses have offered to buy, equip and maintain four hospital ships to operate in the Red Sea. The lead was taken by the Princess of Berar, daughter-in-law of the Nizam of Hyderabad.

India can supply 90 per cent of her munition needs and a big development scheme is under way to enable the ordnance factories to manufacture the most modern types of weapons and munitions. Output of shells at the end of May was 12 times that at the start of the war. Ammunition stores generally have multiplied seven-fold.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Long Hours of Sleep Unnecessary in Healthy Adults

Sleep is as important as food in building up and maintaining the body tissues. Children that do not get enough sleep are restless, have a poor appetite, and are usually below normal weight. Similarly, for nervous and emotional adults, from 8 to 10 hours sleep is necessary to maintain health. For the average healthy individual, ten hours sleep is usually more than is necessary.

There exists in the minds of many the idea that unless they get off to sleep immediately after going to bed and sleep soundly for 8 to 10 hours, they will suffer both mentally and physically in fact they are in danger of a nervous breakdown!

As mentioned above, sleep is important because it gives all the body processes a chance to rest and enables the body tissues to store energy. Therefore, those who are nervous or not well get more help from sleep than from food and drugs. It would seem, however, that physicians have been attaching too much importance to sleep for the average healthy individual and in many cases these healthy individuals begin to worry about not getting enough sleep and the worry may make them unhealthy in mind and also in body. What they forget is that they may have something on their mind that is bothering them but little, yet their sleeplessness is due to trying to work out a way of overcoming this something.

Dr. J. P. S. Cathcart, Ottawa, Canada, in The National Health Review, states that in adults the importance of sleep is exaggerated that is, in those who have no discomfort or pain.

When a patient comes to a physician complaining of being unable to sleep, it is important to inquire into the likely causes. The most common cause is some emotional situation or disturbance, frequently concerning the events of the day that has just passed. Instead of giving these patients sleeping pills or powders, the suggestion is that the physician should explain how worries or problems keep the nerves alert and cause wakefulness. The patients should also be told that "they will not fall apart even if they lose two or three nights' sleep", that most adults sleep too much, and that worrying too much about loss of sleep does more harm than the loss of the sleep itself.

To one whose active mind will not allow him to pull down the curtain on the events of the day, the suggestion is to relax the body, knees and arms slightly bent, and breathe as if completely exhausted. Tests—blood pressure, pulse, temperature—show this relaxation to be 80 per cent as effective as sleep.

On Leaflet Raids

The very fact that the Germans are throwing leaflets on parts of Britain now seems a strong testimonial that the early British showers of propaganda on Germany were not unproductive. The conditions in the situation of Germans and Britons are so different that Hitler's leaflets are all old news while British sheets given to the French or to Germans carry news the enslaved peoples are not permitted to know. All Hitler's speeches are published freely in Britain and more fully than in the German leaflets dropped from planes. The Nazi tracts carry no news to Britain. On the other hand the occupied territory and Germany do not get any news and have to believe what is told them officially. Thus the peoples under the iron heel of the gangsters over there are starved for news and must take some of it seriously despite the Nazi restrictions upon possessing British leaflets. The intelligence department of the Nazi rulers seem not to be informed that the British are allowed to read the Hitler diatribes and all.

There must be millions of Germans who realize the sort of news fed to them by the authorities and who know nothing at all of what is going on in the outside world, or the opinion of the civilized nations of the present Germanism. These millions also know how fearful their masters are of their hearing the truth about the war and what is said about Hitlerism abroad. While the free Britons are cold about air-borne propaganda there must be an eagerness in Germany to get outside news. The British are giving attention to the enslaved parts of France, too. They are telling the French what happened after the surrender of their supine generals and what the British are doing. It is highly improbable the Petain government is allowed to permit the French to know anything about all the events since they were treacherously snared into serfdom. So the British are concentrating on the French morale. Because the day will come when forty million Frenchmen cannot be wrong. It is within the range of possibilities that in the finales of the war the British may be attackers and that France will again be a battleground. In a British offensive there can be much trouble stirred up in France and other conquered lands. The British have the long view and it is unnatural to think the present map of Europe can stay put for any great length of time. — Brandon Sun.

Hunger Follows Huns' Path

Herbert Hoover is probably the world's chief living authority on famine. He supervised feeding of a large part of Europe in the last war. Since then he has maintained a steady observation of European food supplies. His observations tell of a Europe already on the verge of widespread starvation, and the Winter still months away.

Even today in Poland 1,000 men, women and children are dying daily for want of food. Germany has packed 15,000,000 people into Polish areas that have supported only 10,000,000 in the past, and it is allowing these people only enough food to keep them alive and able to work for the Reich. If 1,000 die daily they will be the weak ones, the aged and the children. They cannot work for the Reich, so they do not matter.

This is only a foretaste of what will happen in Europe next Winter. Then, says Mr. Hoover, Germany will ration its new possessions, including France, and keep the lion's share of the available food for its own people. Already Norway is eating no meat, only fish, and no Norwegian farmer may feed grain to his cattle. Denmark is slaughtering its great dairy herds because the farmers cannot be fed. Belgium and The Netherlands "are already gaunt. Milk and beef are mere memories". Even Russia is worried about her food supplies and took Bessarabia largely because she wanted the Danubian wheat.

Everywhere the story is the same—crop failure, then the destruction of crops by warfare, farmers carrying guns instead of planting their land. Only Britain of all the European countries can be adequately fed. And the Winter coming on.—Vancouver Sun.

W. P. CHRYSLER DIES OF STROKE

Great Automotive Industrialist Has Been in Ill Health for Some Years

New York, Aug. 19—(AP)—Walter P. Chrysler, 65, a one-time locomotive wiper who became one of America's greatest automotive industrialists, died yesterday at his suburban Long Island home in Great Neck of cerebral hemorrhage. He had been unconscious 24 hours.

A funeral service will be held Wednesday at 11 a.m. EDT in St. Batholomew's Episcopal Church here. Burial will be in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery, Tarrytown, N.Y.

Chrysler's quest for success involved many jobs and many changes in salary. He sacrificed high-paying positions on several occasions to take others which he thought held greater possibilities for advancement.

In later years, operating from his own 77-storey skyscraper in mid-Manhattan and director of 25 plants in five States and three foreign countries, he still referred to himself as "a machinist."

Born in Kansas

Born in Wamego, Kan., on April 2, 1875, Chrysler attended school in Ellis, Kan., where his family moved in 1878.

He was the son of a locomotive engineer—and his interest in the huge driving wheels and the simple old boiler of his father's engine induced him to launch his own career as a simple railroad workman.

From this beginning, Chrysler's ambition and mechanical ability led him far afield. In 1908, with $4,300 in borrowed money and $700 of his own, he purchased an automobile just to take it apart.

Worked For General Motors

He took the machine apart and reassembled it 40 times. Four years later he left his managerial post with the American Locomotive Company at Pittsburg to enter the automobile industry as works manager for the Buick Company at Flint, Mich.

This was a move from a $12,000 to a $6,000-a-year job but three years later he was getting $25,000.

Chrysler was made a First Vice-President of General Motors in 1919 and later was affiliated with the Willys-Overland and Maxwell Motor Corporations before founding the Chrysler Corporation in 1925.

Surviving are four children, Walter P. Jr.; Jack, Mrs. Byron C. Foy and Mrs. Edgar W. Garbisch

Dr. L. J. Simpson, Ontario Minister of Education, Dies

Suffers Heart Attack While Walking With Wife on Visit to Picton, Sunday

FUNERAL TUESDAY

Picton, Ont., Aug. 19—(CP) —A funeral service for Dr. Leonard J. Simpson, who rose from a village school teacher to the position of Ontario Minister of Education, will be held at the family residence in Toronto tomorrow night. Dr. Simpson, 58, and Education Minister since 1934, died suddenly of a heart attack while visiting here yesterday.

The remains will lie in state at Collier Street United Church at Barrie, 55 miles north of Toronto, Wednesday, following a service interment will be at Union Cemetery in Barrie.

Dr. Simpson was walking across a lawn with his wife when he collapsed and died almost instantly. Dr. and Mrs. Simpson came here to visit their son, Lt. Douglas Simpson of the Prince Edward and Hastings Regiment. Mother and son returned to Toronto with the body.

Native of Thornton in the Barrie district, Dr. Simpson was graduated from Toronto Model School in 1901 and taught school at Mount Pleasant, near Thornton. He was graduated in Medicine from University of Toronto in 1908 and practised for more than a year at Victoria Mines, near Sudbury, as company doctor of the Mond Nickel Company. He then returned to the Barrie district as a practitioner.

First Elected in 1929

Dr. Simpson first sought election to the Ontario Legislature in 1923 and was defeated in simcoe Centre, a three-cornered fight. In 1929, on his second attempt, he won the riding for the Liberals for the first time in 39 years and was the only Liberal gain in the Province.

In 1937 he defeated Hon. Earl Rowe, then Conservative Leader.

Termed a "bonny fighter" by Premier Mitchell Hepburn, Dr. Simpson was noted for his spirited but fair belligerency in debate. Education was his hobby and he emphasized musical education in schools and amendments to the educational courses. He adopted a policy of eliminating examinations in schools as much as possible and swept aside much of the former examination fee system by having students recommended for passing by their teachers.

Dr. Simpson married Eleanor Dutcher of Thornton in 1911. Other survivors are four daughters, four sisters and three brothers.

Fire Marshal's Dept. Investigates Norton - Palmer Hotel Blast at Windsor

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 19—(CP)—Officials of the Ontario Fire Marshal's Department continued investigation today into the explosion at the Norton-Palmer Hotel which rocked downtown Windsor Saturday night, killing one man and injuring a score of persons.

Kenneth Shrum, 25, a food checker, was crushed to death when an inside wall of a basement dine and dance grill collapsed. Eight of the nine injured required hospital treatment.

Deputy Fire Marshal D. H. Saville arrived yesterday and Fire Marshal William Scott is expected today to conduct the investigation personally.

Fire Chief Clarence De Fields attributed the blast to ignition of gases escaping from a basement transformer. Damage, confined largely to the first two floors of the 12-storey building, was estimated at $50,000.

Elevator Doors Blasted

Service elevator doors were blasted from their fastenings on every floor, dozens of windows in the basement and on the first floor were shattered and the grill room was showered with plaster by the force of the blast.

Frank Brennan, 30, the Maitre D'Hotel, was most seriously injured. He suffered first degree burns, lacerations to the head and body and shock.

More than 100 persons were in the grill room at the time of the explosion. The hotel had been having difficulty during the evening with its electrical system and candles had been placed at the tables as a precautionary measure while electricians sought the trouble.

When the blast occurred the power failed and the room was plunged into darkness. There was no panic. The orchestra continued to play despite the cries of the injured.

HITLER 'OFFERS' TO EXEMPT EIRE

'Merely Another Nazi Promise' is Viewpoint of British Sources

Dublin, Aug. 19—(CP)—Germany has approached the Eire government on the question of exempting Irish shipping from the newly proclaimed "total blockade" of the British Isles and the Eire government will consider the matter today.

Frank Gallagher, Secretary to Prime Minister Eamon de Valera, said, "German messages have been received and they will receive official attention today."

London, Aug. 18—(CP)—British sources scorned today as "merely another Nazi promise" Germany's suggested "arrangements" whereby Eire's shipping could escape the Nazi "total blockade" of Britain.

AT THE McCARTHY

"An Englishman's Home"

The working of the fifth column element, the first motion picture story to show the actual use of parachute troops and thrilling drama which will keep you more excited than if you were taking your first airplane ride, is presented now at the McCarthy Theatre in the exclusive showing here of one of the most timely motion pictures to ever be introduced in England. "An Englishman's Home," which is a production that pays tribute to the heroic efforts of a nation faced with the horror of war, to unite and crush for all time "the mad men of Europe."

Unbelievable scenes of espionage, unthinkable facts of how members of the fifth column learn and act in the midst of a peace-loving people, have been woven into a story that through actual happenings is recorded with about as much accuracy as the screen ever brought to light.

"An Englishman's Home" is powerful entertainment, from its opening scene right up to a climax that will make you cheer when through sheer effort and sacrifice the indomitable Britishers triumph over the insidious enemy spy machine. Edmund Gwenn, Mary Maguire, Geoffrey Tonne, Desmond Tester, Paul Von Hemled and hundreds of the British R.A.F. are the principals in the stellar cast of "An Englishman's Home" which should be a "must" right now for every member of every Canadian home.

Joe E. Brown

Joe E. Brown in "The Gladiator", his funniest feature-comedy, plays a return engagement at the McCarthy in addition to the showing of "An Englishman's Home" and with the presentation also of Latest Fox News Events makes up one of the finest programs seen on the screen this season.

AT THE CAPITOL

"They Drive By Night"

Romance, adventure and all star-studded cast are the unbeatable ingredients that make up Warner Bros.' new film, "They Drive By Night", which had its debut at Sunday midnight. Featuring George Raft, Ann Sheridan, Ida Lupino and Humphrey Bogart in an all star cast, the swiftly paced film packs plenty of laughs, love and excitement.

Joe Fabrini, played by George Raft, is a cold blooded guy who thinks there isn't a girl in the world who can get him to fall for her. He laughs at his brother played by Humphrey Bogart, when he tells how he would like to have a job that allowed him to have his evenings free to spend with his wife, (Gale Page's role). Bogart is bitterly resentful of the fact that his work allows him to catch only occasional glimpses of his wife and is tortured when other girls remind him of her.

Joe always claimed that he didn't go in for that romantic stuff. At least he thought he didn't until he met a waitress, played by Ann Sheridan. Ann gives a deeply moving portrayal of a girl whose sentimentality is hidden behind flippant wise-cracks. And Raft is great as the fellow who lets neither her wise-cracks nor her love go unanswered. He asks her to marry him but the wedding is postponed when Paul crashes over an embarkment and loses his right arm. Joe is then forced to ask a friend of his, played by Alan Hale, a job. The picture builds to one of the screen's greatest climaxes when Ida Lupino, as Hale's wife, falls in love with Joe and goes through with her scheme to win him.

The entire cast give stirring, realistic performances. In addition to the incomparable array of talent in the leading roles, the suporting cast includes such popular players as Roscoe Karns, John Litel and Joyce Compton.

Director Raoul Walsh did a splendid job in keeping the film moving at a clip as fast as the streamlined caravans of the highway portrayed in the picture. Jerry Wald and Richard Macaulay whose brilliant dialogue will be remembered for many a year wrote the scenario. "They Drive By Night" was adapted from a novel by A. I. Bezzerides.

A select group of short subjects closes the all-star feature.

AT THE BELLE

"Forty Little Mothers"

Eddie Cantor comes to the Belle theatre screen for the first time in two years The picture is "The Story of Forty Little Mothers", which is next at the Belle theatre. Cantor, who heretofore was identified with choruses, ensembles, gags, gals and rhythm, changes his technique in this picture and emerges as an actor. In fact, he sings only one song and that is a lullaby, "Little Curly Hair in a High Chair," which he sings to a baby.

"The Story of Forty Little Mothers" is based on the French comedy "Monsieur Petiot," and is the story of a timid professor who inherits a baby and a lot of problems. The story is one that blends pathos, comedy and even drama, which is far afield from the antics of Cantor as his thousands of fans have known him.

Also lending dignity to the production is the presence of Judith Anderson, Broadway stage star, in the cast. She plays the head of a girls' boarding school where most of Eddie's troubles transpire, and is in effect the heavy of the story.

Also featured in the cast are Ralph Morgan, Rita Johnson, Bonita Granville, Diana Lewis and Nydia Westman together with eight-months-old baby "Quintanilla," hailed as an acting "find" that will be the talk of movie audiences for months to come.

"Phantom Raiders"

This is a fast-moving mystery drama featuring the adventures of Nick Carter, famous detective, who goes to the Canal Zone for a vacation and finds himself in the midst of an international ship-wrecking plot. It is packed with action, thrills, romance, intrigue and narrow escapes. The story is based on the famous Nick Carter series of which M-G-M owns twelve hundred and twenty-one story rights, with the most thrilling plot situations used to provide screen plays for the Carter screen adventures.

The popular Belle newsreel will be exhibited on the same program.

BODY OF INDIAN FOUND BATTERED

Fellow Member of Chippewas is Held on Vagrancy Charge

Wallaceburg, Ont., Aug. 19—(CP) —Police questioned Walpole Island Reserve Indians today in an effort to piece together circumstances surrounding the death of Jerry Blackbird, 32, a Chippewa Indian whose battered body was found in a shallow channel in Lake St. Clair. A 53-year-old Indian is held for questioning.

The body was discovered Saturday just off the shores of Squirrel Island. The head had been crushed in by heavy blows and an anchor chain was looped about the ankles and fastened to the gunwale of a rowboat.

Charged with vagrancy and scheduled to appear in court at Sarnia tomorrow is Steven Kiyoshk, member of the same reserve as Blackbird. Police said they discovered him wiping blood from the floor of his home on the island, a few hours after the body was discovered.

Police investigating after complaint had been received concerning a drinking party on the island, said they found bloodstains on the grass about Kiyoshk's home, leading to the St. Clair River, 250 feet away. A bloodstained axe was found outside the house and a liquor bottle bore traces of blood, police said.

Examination of Blackbird's body, which was almost nude when discovered, revealed four definite skull fractures. The body was removed to Sarnia Sunday, where a post-mortem examination will be conducted.

Suppose this newspaper hadn't a single advertisement!

The momentous happenings of a troubled world would still be yours for the reading. The up-to-the-minute news of your country, your town and your community would still be faithfully recorded.

But just think what you'd be missing. WITHOUT ADVERTISEMENTS, HALF YOUR NEWSPAPER'S USEFULNESS TO YOU WOULD BE DESTROYED.

Cereals, meat, bread, fruit and canned foods are more filling than other people's political opinions. This year's automobile, streamlined train, or transcontinental air service will get you further than columns of dispatches from distant wars.

Let the advertisements help you to live! They list the commodities and services which are vital to your very existence. Here, at ease, in your own armchair, you can compare the prices and values of the world's offerings to YOU!

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, August 20

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

ACCORDING to the lunar and mutual configurations there should be a period of opportunity for much productive work in new lines, in which fresh ways of doing things or radical departures from old methods and ideas may take a sudden leap toward profitable and secure objectives. It is a time for tackling progressive projects with audacity and precision, even by spectacular promotional schemes. However, there is need of definite discretion and vigilance as there are signs of pitfalls and snares. Sign papers with care. In the personal or affectional life there are intriguing experiences.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are to have a year of opportunity to put into execution some very progressive if not revolutionary ideas. Innovations, breaking away from effete and outworn systems or methods are in line to attract public attention, with sufficient promotional publicity. But be alert to fraud, trickery and subtle undermining, being particularly careful with papers. In the private life there are also possibilities of intrigue or secret adventures, probably romantic. Be wise.

A child born on this day should be inventive, progressive, creative beyond the usual grooves. It may have a happy talent for writing romantic literature. It needs guidance as to protection against fraud or imposition.

Point Anne

Point Anne — Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Hill and children attended the Plymouth Brethren picnic at Mohawk Beach on Wednesday.

Mr. Maxwell Akey is visiting relatives at Sulphide.

Miss Grace Sheppard and Miss Emma Dafoe spent Thursday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. S. Sheppard.

Mrs. Jack DeVries, of Rochester, N.Y., is visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James MacDonald.

Mr and Mrs. Leslie Wilson and family of Oshawa, have returned home after spending holidays at the home of Mrs Edith Wilson.

Mrs. Wm. Insley and Sheila are visiting in Trenton at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Insley.

Mrs. Grace Ryan spent Thursday afternoon at the home of her mother Mrs. Edith Wilson.

Miss Mabel Hill of Hamilton, is visiting at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. Newton Dopking and son Clinton of Trenton and Mrs. Grant Arney and children, of Watertown, N.Y., called on old friends in the village Friday evening.

Miss Ethel Insley, of Belleville, spent Thursday at her home.

Rawdon

Rawdon—The August meeting of Mount Pleasant-Rawdon Women's Missionary Society convened at the church with ten members in attendance and one small visitor. The service opened with quiet music played by Mrs. Ross Hoard. The president gave the call to worship based on community friendship the theme of the day. A hymn was sung, several ladies read Bible verses and Mrs. John Holmes offered prayer. Miss Muriel Sine read a poem on stewardship entitled "Proportion." The visiting committee reported for five months 51 calls at home and 28 in the hospital a total of 121 calls to date. The treasurer reported over $95.00 to date and there is still a large amount to raise in order to reach the allocation.

Mrs. Edgar McKeown, secretary of Community Friendship arranged the program. Mrs. Ross Hoard contributed a piano solo. Mrs. Frank Smith gave a synopsis of the work of this department. Mrs. Roy Thrasher read a leaflet entitled "The Srtanger". Mrs. McKeown read "The Removal Slip" and Mrs. John Holmes gave incidents in the life of Mrs. M. E. Laughlin in her visiting days at Toronto Hospital as found in the monthly. Miss Gladys Summers rendered "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" with Mrs. McKeown as accompanist.

The president introduced the series of new books entitled "Comrades in the World Church". The comrades are all member of different races. Some white, some black, others brown, yellow or red but all one in Christ Jesus Our Lord and all one in His great endeavour to advance the Kingdom of God. The study of these little books will prove most interesting and in conjunction with the program the annual report book "Romances in Blue" will be studied beginning in September for eight months.

The offering amounting to $3.90 was dedicated and the service closed with the rendition of "O Master let me walk with Thee."

A large number of Rawdon folk attended the funeral of the late Ernest Arthur Brown. Several years ago he served as Councillor, Deputy Reeve and Reeve of Rawdon Township Council. A host of friends will mourn his passing.

Mr. Clarence Allen of Annapolis, Nova Scotia, is holidaying with Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Elliott.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Johnson and family of Trenton and Miss Della Johnson, Belleville, visited Mr. and Mrs. Alex Johnson on Sunday.

Lipsticks and Beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

With brilliantly colored lipstick pigment blazing the beauty trail, mouth contour is something to be considered. Facial attractiveness depends upon soft, strong, perfectly molded lips. And well do we know, my little chickadees, that red smears call attention to the shape and expression of the mouth portals.

Some beauty shops give mouth contour treatments, or include them in the facial. The movements are light, done quickly, are said to so strengthen the surrounding fibers that they will be free of little crinkles that come in middle age. If the beauty budget does not permit professional attention, you can see what you can do during that beautifying half hour before you fall into bed.

Use a muscle oil or a light cream. Apply freely. Place the thumb just under the under lip, do a rotating movement, encircling the mouth. Keep the lips closed, but not tense. Tense muscles do not respond to treatment.

Place the first finger in the centre of the upper lip thumb and second finger at either end. Keep the first finger stationary, lift the lip corners with thumb and second finger, bringing thumb and fingers together. This movement forms the bow.

Use thumb and first finger of each hand to do a fluting motion, starting in the centre of the lower lip, sweeping up at each end, meeting in the centre of the upper lip. Let the cream remain on overnight.

"Facial attractiveness depends on soft, strong perfectly molded lips."

Be fussy about foundation garments. Seek a first class, experienced corsetiere; you will be surprised at the way she can hand along helpful ideas. How to get into a corset, how to launder it, what fabrics are best.

To be properly harnessed is to be inspired to stand, walk and sit correctly. There's no chance of a tummy bulge which ruins so many figures that otherwise would be presentable.. Some shapes are improved by the two-in-one garment, others call for girdle and bra. The boss of the corset works will know at a glance what selection is best for you.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Is "Glamour"—On its Way Out?

Is the word "glamour" becoming frayed, threadbare, and out around the edges? Words, like old coins, after a while begin to lose weight. It was so with the word "genteel". In the early days of Queen Victoria, people would have fought bled and died rather than not be considered "genteel".

But now the dictionary has gone back on that Victorian mirror of refinement, and gives as a secondary meaning: "No longer used by good authors, except in a sarcastic or humorous sense".

Doubtless "glamour" will soon be used only in a humorous or sarcastic sense—we're so utterly sick of hearing it applied to everything.

The word was the inspiration of a bright publicity agent engaged to whoop it up for some society girl about to make her debut. The same method has been tried when the aspirant has Hollywood in mind. The prescriptions are almost identical.

What will be the next word to denote the quality that from time immemorial has made men bow down and worship women? We've had "It" and Ooomph" and worked almost as hard as "glamour" is the indispensable word "personality", which like Tennyson's Brook, promises to go on forever.

No other word in the language defines the difference between two people as well as "personality". It makes you realize the difference between a girl who is beautiful but dumb and one who may be homely but keeps you on your toes through interest.

The charmers of history and tradition haven't always been beautiful. Mary Stuart, according to the portraits of her which have survived wasn't even pretty. Yet men not only lost their heads over her, figuratively speaking, but went to the block in her interests and had them chopped off by the executioner.

Lady Hamilton wasn't the lovely creature Romney portrayed. She became fat and ungainly, but Lord Nelson, a troop of willing slaves and even her own husband were all mad about her. She began life as a nursemaid. Kathie Schratt, the Egeria of the Emperor Franz Josef of Austria, was not beautiful. There are scores of others whose portraits have come down to us to make us wonder how on earth they got away with it.

Personality is an undefinable charm. Perhaps if it could be defined, we would not fall for its magic. It's the something that keeps us guessing that does the trick; the something you try to explain to yourself even while getting caught in its snare.

While the appeal of personality is impossible to define, it's not hard to check off qualities that repel The woman with a high-pitched, rasping voice, or the whine that comes through her nose, the long-winded person who never leaves a detail out of a story, the ingroomed person who sends your thoughts scurrying to soap, flesh brushes, toilet water, hair brushes and the like. The woman who wants to tell you all about herself, and how she caught her last cold. No, you don't have to puzzle over the personality of these people; you just avoid them.

The Girl's Problem

A young lady of Chicago who, when her prospective husband urged her to use her influence to keep him off a "draft", pointed out to him that "a country worth living for is worth dying for," set a fine example for young women everywhere.

It is a difficult thing, of course, for a young man, madly in love with a girl—and just waiting until his financial resources will permit him to marry—to leave his adored one behind. The separation is unpleasant to contemplate; and the prospect that it might be a final separation does not ease the situation perceptibly.

The girls in the case may even outwardly exert their influence to keep these young men out of the army — but if the young men themselves only knew it, deep down in their hearts these same young maidens experience a certain lack of respect for any young man who would hide behind a girl's skirts to avoid an urgent national duty.

The girls and women of Canada are intensely loyal at heart. Many of them would enlist for active service, if women were acceptable in the army. Swayed by natural emotions, more or less selfish, many a girl may plead with her lover to avoid the C.A.S.F.—she might even shed a few tears to make her argument more convincing—but they would be turned into tears of joy and pride if she ever saw him in a uniform.—Chatham News.

A Linen Suit

Nothing is so attractive on a man in Summer as a nice, clean linen suit. Here are a few suggestions as to how to keep the suit in that condition:

"Do not recline in a comfortable chair. For, if you do, the suit will soon be a mass of wrinkles. If you must sit, then sit on the edge of an upright chair.

If a grasshopper or other insect climbs up your leg, do not squash it, as this will leave a stain. Let it climb.

Do not smoke a pipe, for the ashes will fall on the front of the suit and, when you try to brush them off, they will make smudges

Do not permit yourself to become overheated or your linen suit will be a rag. Stay in the shade and fan yourself with a palm leaf or cardboard fan.

Avoid energetic courtesies such as stooping down to pick things up or offering to carry heavy bundles for ladies.

On no account attempt to dance. Excuse yourself on the ground that you have a bad ankle.

By all means keep out of garden furniture. Say that you prefer to stand.

Keep out of all places where you might run into cinders, soot or dust.

Fly to cover at the first indication of rain.

If you must use an automobile, let someone else do the driving and sit gingerly on the back seat. It is a wise precaution to spread your handkerchief where you are going to sit.

In reading a newspaper, hold it at arm's length.

If you follow these instructions carefully, it is just possible that you may wear a white linen suit for as long as 15 minutes or half an hour before you begin to look like something the cat has dragged in.—Buffalo Courier Express.

Festival Of the Onion

(New York Times)

All New York knows and loves its onions, but no more devotedly than the town of Florida in the county of Orange. Today this centre of 6,800 acres of the Empire State's million-dollar onion crop opens its second annual harvest festival. The town is bright with bunting and sacks of new onions. August 15 is rooted deep in medieval observance as a day of thanksgiving for the harvest. Our machine age leaves onion picking to the care of loving hands. The Queen of the Festival comes in fresh from a month in the fields. So will the four hundred youngsters in Polish peasant costumes who will laugh, sing, parade and dance the mazurka. Some of the more hardy will eat onions like apples. The air will be perfumed by the noble Allium cepa.

Why do so many sniff and turn up their noses at the "lowly" onion? History is wreathed on his brow. His source is international. Homer has no more claims on his origin. Egypt thought him divine enough to worship. His is the symbol of Wales and adorns the cap of royalty on St. David's Day. The aristocrats of the table pay honour at his court. The Martini cocktail nestles him. Onion soup is a miracle of flavor. The simmering casserole knows our hero well. In France he is a national ingredient. Breathes there a soul so dead that never aspires to the appetite's Valhalla where steak and onions always head the menu? Where would America be without the hamburger and the hamburger without the onion? The very mention of his name moves the true partaker to tears.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Infantile Paralysis

Although we have never been able to discover the cause of infantile paralysis we know how its affects the victim. It is a disease that causes inflammation of the fluid of the spinal column.

The spinal column is like a power line that carries electricity into cities and towns. If some of these lines are put-out of commission by a bad storm then certain of these cities and towns will be blacked out. In the same way the paralysis caused by the polio virus may hit certain parts of the body, depending on what part of the spinal column has ben affected and how badly this "storm" has affected the nervous system.

So, we see that the spinal column is the real seat of the disease, and that the paralysis—the visible symptoms, are only symptoms.

For this reason, a definite diagnosis of infantile paralysis can first be made at the spinal column before the disease has progressed to the point of paralysing. This early diagnosis is made by means of what we call the lumbar puncture.

To perform this puncture, the child is placed on a hard bed, or table. He lies on his side with his body curled up, the knees drawn up to the chest, the head drawn down as far forward as possible. An injection of a small amount of local anaesthesia is made into the lower spinal column. When this is done there is a slight sting from the prick of the needle, but this is the only part of the procedure which causes any pain or discomfort. A special needle is then inserted between two of the vertabrae and a teaspoon of the final fluid is drawn off. This is the end of the operation, but the child must be put to bed for a day or so or he will suffer from a severe headache.

This fluid that has been taken from the child's spine is examined under a microscope for cells. Normal blood contains about 5,000 to 10,000 cells per CC. If the patient has polio, this count will jump fifty, or even a hundred thousand. In such a case, the inevitable diagnosis is that the child has infantile paralysis.

I have known parents who objected to this lumbar puncture being resorted to on their child. But, properly performed, it does no harm to the child, it causes very little discomfort, and yet it makes a definite diagnosis possible a day or two before the paralysis symptoms appear. The result may well be that the child will recover completely from the disease instead of being left crippled.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1.—My sister is being married in the Autumn, and, for a variety of reasons, only the members of the immediate families are to be invited to the ceremony and reception.

However, she would like to have some kind of "occasion" when she could greet her numerous friends, who are of widely different tastes. I suggested to her that I give a tea or cocktail party in my home from four to six o'clock on the Sunday before her marriage. She is delighted with this idea, for in this way her fiance may share, and it would be an opportunity for her friends and his friends to meet. However, before we made any definite plans we decided to consult you as to whether or not such a party would be proper. What do you think?

2.—What should the form of the invitation be? Would it be correct for me to write the invitations on my visiting-cards?

3.—May we invite relatives and friends young and old?

4.—What do you suggest as refreshments?

5.—Are the hours I have suggested— four-to-six — satisfactory or would three-to-five be better?

Emily

1.—I'm delighted to tell you that I think your party plan is an excellent one, thoroughly proper and charmingly sisterly. I'm sure it will be a memory-making occasion for all concerned!

2.—Yes, writing the invitations on your visiting-card—(or a Mr. and Mrs. card) would be quite the best way. Even if you are planning to combine a tea-party and a cocktail-party, I suggest you use only the word "Tea" on your invitation —this the accepted custom, and rightly so, I think. Also, if you wish you might write the names of your guests of honour over your engraved name. Like this:

To meet
Miss Mary Smith
and
Mr. John Robinson
Mr. and Mrs. George Wood
Tea
Sunday, October first Four to seven Ten Belle Avenue

3.—Yes.

4.—I suggest that you have your dining room table set for the service of tea, with hot coffee as an alternative, if you wish. The tea service at one end of the table, the coffee service at the other, and each presided over by a relative or close friend of the family. On this table, sandwiches, small, thin, and dainty; such accessories as olives (green and ripe)), nuts, mints and other candies; and small tea-cakes. A centrepiece of white flowers.

The drinkables might be prepared in the kitchen and served on trays. Of course you won't forget to provide one or two non-alcoholic drinks. And provide non-sweet nibbly accessories to be served with the drinks.

5.—The three-to-five hours are too early for this type of party. Four-to-six is all right, but may be too limited especially for a Sunday afternoon. I suggest four-to-seven, if that suits your convenience.

Courtesy Tip

Grave dangers lurk in the phrase "company manners". Parents especially should never use this phrase, or should never think this phrase in connection with their children. It admits that they have failed to make their children's mannerliness a habit. And it implies that they expect their children to play a part—inevitably they find out that this is impossible.

4th Sidney

4th. Sidney—A few local young men have gone out West for the harvest.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris and Mr. and Mrs. A. Langabeer spent a few days recently at Weslemkoon Lake and enjoyed a real outing fishing and huckleberry picking.

The farmers are busy with their harvest, some cutting grain, while others are busy threshing.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Smith and baby of Toronto, have been visiting with Mr. and Mrs. H. Gray.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. J. Pitts (nee Rita Woods) on the arrival of a daughter at the Belleville Hospital.

First Day in Action Donahue Brings Down Foe Bomber

London, Aug. 19 (CP)—Arthur G. Donohue, United States pilot who joined the Royal Air Force in 15 minutes after trying for eight months to get into the United States air force, is nursing slight burns in a hospital in Kent after being shot down in a dogfight over the Dover area. Donohue, former instructor at the International Flying School at Laredo, Texas, brought down an enemy bomber the first day he saw action.

ELMER AND DUTCH AWARDED D. F. C's.

Give Up Ceremony of "Drowning the Ribbon" to Take on Nazis

London, Aug. 19 (C.P. Cable)— It was formally announced today the King has approved the award of Distinguished Flying Crosses to the Canadian-South African flying team of Elmer and Dutch who shot down three raiders by way of celebration when the grapevine brought them advance word that the medals were coming up.

Elmer is 25-year-old Acting Flt.-Lt. Lionel Manley Gaunce, born at Lethbridge, Alta., and raised in Edmonton, who was given the D.F.C. "in recognition of gallantry displayed in flying operations against the enemy," according to the Air Ministry announcement.

Dutch is Flying-Officer Petrus Hendrik Hugo, 23, an Affrikaander from Cape Province.

The citation said that Lieut. Gaunce, who commands a flight, displayed "excellent coolness and leadership" since his squadron returned to England from France. In July his flight participated in resisting an enemy air attack on Dover in which three British planes were attacked by 40 Junkers 87 dive bombers. At least two of the enemy were shot down.

Lieut. Gaunce has shot down three enemy aircraft since returning to England.

On Thursday he and Dutch heard unofficially about the D.F.C. and postponed the traditional ceremony of "drowning the ribbon" in the mess to take on a formation of Nazi bombers in a brief but vicious fight.

Elmer got two, Dutch one, officially. But the Canadian said the count was 1½ each way because Dutch got in a burst at Elmer's second plane.

KINGSTON BLONDE READY TO LEAVE

Given Suspended Sentence After Pleading Guilty to Theft

Hazel Wilson, attractive Kingston blonde, who pleaded guilty through her counsel, E. Ormonde Butler, last week to the theft of money from Mrs. W. N. Storms of this city, apparently has no love for this city.

Following sentence of six months' suspended sentence in local police court today, the accused girl promptly retorted to Magistrate Butler, when he asked her how long it would take for her to leave the city, "Just about five minutes."

"Remember," warned the bench, "if you are found in the city within the next six months you will be brought here and given another sentence."

The young lady shook her head, "Don't worry," she said, "I won't be back."

Sentence was given by Magistrate Butler after Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson had informed the court that restitution had been made. Accused, he said, had had a similar conviction registered against her in Cornwall.

Wellington Station Entered by Night

Two slick members of the light-fingered fraternity, who live by their wits, and apparently escape trouble the same way, explained strange actions in Wellington early Sunday morning to County Constable Earl Marvin, and were allowed to go on their way.

Early today, the C.N.R. station was found to have been entered and 35 cents taken from the cash drawer. Entry had been made through station windows.

A later check-up by Belleville Provincial Police revealed the car had borne stolen license plates, the property of R. H. Knocker, 218 Sherbourne Street, Toronto. Mr. Knocker's car is a 1929 Durant, while that driven by the suspects was a late model Plymouth.

The men, one said to be about 5 foot 8 inches in height and weighing 200 pounds and the other a tall slim chap weighing about 165, were seen at 2.30 a.m. Sunday around a car parked on Consecon Street, Wellington, by William Stanley. He notified Constable Marvin, and told him the pair had been seen walking down the C.N.R. tracks near the railway station.

The police officer, questioned the men closely, and was satisfied with their explanations. One appeared to be slightly nervous, but the other, the spokesman for the duo seemed to "know all the answers." Toronto police have been notified.

CHINESE EDITOR WOUNDED

Shanghai, Aug. 19—(AP)—Chan Ching-Chong, an editor of the American-owned newspaper Tamei Wan Pao, was wounded seriously today by an unidentified assailant who shot him as he left his home in the French sector of the International Settlement to go to his office. First reports on the incident said the editor had been killed.

McKeown Reunion At Oak Lake

Rawdon, (Special) — The McKeown annual picnic was held on Monday, August 5th., 1940, at Bird's Beach Oak Lake, with about 100 guests enjoying their basket lunch. Guests were present from Stirling, Belleville, Kirkland Lake, Campbellford, Peterborough, and Whitby.

After dinner the gathering was called to order with Mr. John Bageman as chairman. It was moved and seconded that Mr. Fred McKeown again act as president with Mrs. W. Heath as secretary and Mrs. G. Eastwood, treasurer and Mrs. R. McKeown, Mrs. G. Meiklejohn and Mrs. M. Fleming and Clarence Thompson on the sports committee.

After much discussion it was decided to hold the picnic at Bird's Beach again next year on the first Wednesday in August.

Prizes were given to:

The oldest lady present— Mrs. Sarah McKeown.

The oldest gentleman—Mr. John Webb.

The youngest baby—Betty Burkitt, 7 weeks old.

Coming the farthest distance—Mrs. Harry Roblin, Kirkland Lake.

The largest family—Mrs. S. McKeown.

The sports committee then took charge with contests and games for young and old:

Boys' race 8-10—Jack Burkitt.

Boys' race 10-12—Glenn Haslett

Girls' race 10-12—Doreen Burkitt

Bean guessing contests—Mr. W. Stiles.

Shoe kicking contest—Mrs. W. Heath.

Object race—Clarence Thompson.

Bathing was then enjoyed.

The picnic was a great success and all agreed it was a day well spent and one to be remembered.

TWEED

CONSOL. SCHOOL RE-OPENS SEPT. 3

Board Will Grant Permission to Any Student to Remain Home Until Sept. 16th to Help in Harvest

Tweed — Tweed Consolidated School Board meeting on Friday night decided to reopen the school on September 3rd instead of September 16th, the date officially set by the Department of Education. After reviewing the local situation the Board was unanimously of the opinion that there were few, if any, boys of Tweed Consolidated School who would be able to contribute assistance of value to local farmers in the harvesting of their crops.

As two members of Tweed Consolidated School Board are farmers, it was felt that they were in a position to size up the situation as it applies to the district about Tweed, and they consider the decision a wise one. The Board, desirious of co-operating with the Department of Education, granted permission for any boy or girl who remain at home until September 16th to render what asistance they might in gathering the harvest. On their return to school their teacher will help them to makeup the time lost.

Mr. Maxwell Cotton has accepted a position in the Westclox Co. Peterboro. For the past year has has been employed in the office of Miss A. M. Rayburn in Tweed. Max Cotton will be missed in Tweed, particularly by the Tennis Club, as during the season he has been their "ace" singles player, meeting defeat only once in six matches to collect points for the local club in their league engagements.

Is Swim Expert

Glenn Connor, 13-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Connor last week performed a swimming feat which ranks him among the leading juvenile swimmers in Tweed. He dove off dock at Tweed Park and accompanied by a boat, swam across Stoco Lake, leaving the water at Tom Beatty's cottage on Sugar Island, a distance of approximately one and three-quarter miles, negotiating the distance in one hour and ten minutes. The youngster, who as far as can be learned, is the youngest local swimmer to ever accomplish this swim, stated that he was not unduly tired at the end of his swim.

Sir Malcolm Robertson Elected by Acclamation

London, Aug. 19—(CP Cable) — Sir Malcolm Robertson, Conservative, was elected today by acclamation to the House of Commons seat at Mitcham.

The seat was vacated by the death of Sir Richard Meller, Conservative, who won it in 1935 by a vote of 35,239 to 26,089 from P. Winterton, Labor.

The wartime political truce among the major parties ensured the acclamation for Sir Malcolm Robertson, a former Ambassador to the Argentine.

NAZI SQUADRON WHICH BLASTED CROYDON ANNIHILATED BY R.A.F. FIGHTERS

Typical of the spirit of the British people are these three girls, LEFT, who were pictured giving the "Thumbs Up" gesture after being wounded during the Nazi air raid on Croydon. All three were struck by bomb splinters as Nazi planes dived on the famous Croydon air field. A huge bomb crater made by a falling German bomb during the same raid is pictured, RIGHT. The British air ministry announced the complete annihilation of the entire Nazi squadron which attacked the airport, which is of relatively little military importance, being used largely as a commercial air field.

Italian Reaction

It is interesting to read the closely censored despatches from Italy, following the British bombing raids on Tuesday night. Everybody in Italy, the despatch said, was talking about the raids. Perhaps the British made a psychological mistake in dropping the leaflets with the bombs, the effect of the raids having been sufficient to make Italian people sit up and do some thinking on their own.

There was more than surprise in these raids over Italian industrial cities. There must have been something which passeth understanding. How could the Nazis be so successful in their Blitzkrieg on England and Britain be able, at the same time, to send a heavy fleet of bombers over the mountains, 800 miles, and put the Blitz on peace-loving Italians. It was probably the best antidote for lying propaganda which could have been devised. The time may well come when both Italians and Germans, fed with the pap of fictitious victory from day to day, will be disillusioned. And that may well usher in the day of reckoning for their betrayers. The Italians are more liable to crack up than the Germans, and military reverses will do the trick. Perhaps the Italian psychology is different to that of the Germans, because the British leaflets were reprinted in the Fascist press, with adequate comment for the occasion. In Germany, people who secreted British confetti were sent to jail. For the time being, bombs and still more bombs would make better newspaper reading for the Italians.

Fascist comment on the cowardice of British airmen dropping bombs on peaceful cities should provide the best laugh of the week. What does Mussolini want, war on a limited liability basis but all the spoils of war? And what did Italian bombers do to unarmed Ethiopians and women and babes in Spain? Their record stinks to high heaven.—St. Catharines Standard.

Canada And Japan

Honk Kong reports tell that Japan is sending warships to Indo-China. This, with other things, seems to add up to one truth. The truth that Japan is out to dominate the Far East; to become master of all China; master of The Netherlands East Indies; perhaps master in time of the Philippines and Australia.

So what?

Well, what are Canada's existing relations with Japan?

One answer is that Canada is sending war material to Japan. We are sending her scrap iron. We are sending her nickel. Indirectly, but none the less certainly, we are helping Japan to conquer China. Helping her march to dominate Asia.

Further: take a look at Canada's imports from Japan. What they show is this: That Canadians are permitting Japan to undersell Britain right here in the Canadian market; to oust British producers from the Canadian market.

That is true of textiles.

In 1939 Canadian imports of certain fabrics from Japan increased by between 200 and 300 percent. During the same period Canadian imports of the same fabrics from Britain decreased in proportion. We were refusing Britain's goods, taking instead Japan's goods.

Britain, fighting our battle, fighting freedom's battle, needs exchange desperately. When Canada's buys Japan's goods and refuses Britain's goods, she is hurting Britain's fight for freedom, helping Japan's aggression.

It is time, we suggest, that the government of Canada examined this position. Examined a position that is neither manly nor sensible.—Ottawa Journal.

ON GUARD AGAINST SURPRISE INVASION ATTEMPT

Bren machine-gun and anti-tank gun crews keeping guard on England's coast are on the alert for an attempted surprise invasion by German forces. With the R.A.F. proving more than a match for aerial forces of the Nazis it is thought that Hitler may, in desperation, order an invasion from the sea.

NAZI BOMBS FALL ON LONDON RESIDENTIAL SUBURBS

This demolished house in a southwest suburb of London is pictured after it had been struck by a bomb during the Nazi air raid on Aug. 16. Air Raid Precaution firemen are extinguishing the flames. The air ministry formally charged that German bombers made a "deliberate attack" on the "residential town of Eastbourne" during these raids.

McKechnie of Cincinnati Reds Sends Out S.O.S. for Some Bats To Help His Squad in Hitting

Brooklyn Dodgers Shave Lead of Reds to Four and One-Half Games

INDIANS GAIN

(By Sid Feder Associated Press Sports Writer).

That wasn't an SOS that broke in on your setting-up exercises over the radio this morning. It was only an emergency call from Deacon Will McKechnie to rush his Cincinnati Reds some bats without holes in 'em.

Its a case of getting some bats loaded with base hits—or else. For the Dodgers of Brooklyn, who apparently didn't read the headlines about the Rhinelanders being "in" with the National League pennant, are on the prowl again.

The Reds' weak hitting has been the big reason why they've lost 12 of their last 20 games since the end of July. And so far this month the Dodgers have shaved Cincinnati's league lead down from 7 1-2 to 4 1-2 games.

The "clutch" hitting was missing again yesterday as the Reds lost both games of a doubleheader to St. Louis Cardinals 3-1 and 5-4. At the same time Leo Durocher took over the Brooklyn shortstop chores and helped his Dodgers chill the warmed-up Boston Bees twice 7-2 and 3-1.

Larry French Wins

Lefty Larry French sang the Pittsburgh Pirates to sleep with a six-hitter for a 9-1 Chicago Cub victory, which left the Bucs and the Cubs tied for fifth place. The Phillies completed the National League picture by whipping the new York Giants twice, 6-3 and 8-6.

Cleveland's American League leaders and St. Louis Browns were deadlocked at two-all going into the 10th inning of their first game, when rain washed out the rest of their scheduled doubleheader. However, the Tribe picked up a half game on the second-place Detroit Tigers, for Chicago White Sox scored three times in the ninth inning to knock off the Bengals 7-5.

New York Yankees walloped the Athletics 9-1 behind Steve Sundra's six-hit elbowing in the opener, then went down 7-3 before Johnny Babich.

Earl Johnson, Boston Red Sox newest pitching hope, stopped Senators with five hits for a 4-2 decision.

In Saturday's only game in the National League the Pirates and Cubs battled it out for 13 innings with Bruins finally winning 6-5. In the American League three game program Red Sox outslugged Senators 12-9. White Sox downed Tigers and St. Louis Browns downed the pace-setting Cleveland Indians 2-1.

"JUG" McSPADEN, SAM SNEAD TIE FOR SEAGRAM CUP

Pair Finish Regulation 72 Holes Tied at 281 Strokes Each

Toronto, Aug. 19—(CP)— The men who like to string along with the champion made Harold (Jug) McSpaden of Winchester, Mass., a slight favorite today to take his playoff round with Sam Snead of Shawanee-on-Delaware, Pa., for the Canadian Open Golf Championship.

A playoff was forced Saturday when the sometimes spectacular Snead and the steady McSpaden, who won the title and the Seagram Gold Cup last year at Saint John, N.B., finished the regulation 72 holes deadlocked at 281.

Around the clubhouse it was believed that McSpaden would triumph in the 18 holes of medal play because of the fact that he has shot steadier golf than Snead, who started off like a whirlwind in the first and second rounds only to hit the skids in the final 36 holes yesterday.

Snead, who fired a 67 on the opening day and then followed it up with a 66, had rounds of 75 and 73 while McSpaden, who had a 69 to start and a 70 in his next round, shot a 73 and then finished up with another 69.

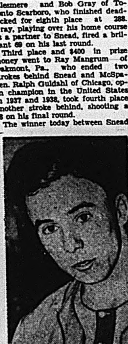
Tournament officials said that half the proceeds from the playoff would go to the Canadian Red Cross.

The best among the Canadians were Stan Horne of Montreal Islesmere and Bob Gray of Toronto Scarboro, who finished deadlocked for eighth place at 288. Gray, playing over his home course as a partner to Snead, fired a brilliant 69 on his last round.

Third place and $400 in prize money went to Ray Mangrum of Oakmont, Pa., who ended two strokes behind Snead and McSpaden. Ralph Guldahl of Chicago, open champion in the United States in 1937 and 1938, took fourth place another stroke behind, shooting a 68 on his final round.

The winner today between Snead and McSpaden will get $1,000 in prize money while the loser's share will be $600. Horne and Gray, besides sharing in the general prize money, also gained an extra $175 apiece from prize money which is available only to Canadians.

Low amateur honors were won by Ted Bishop of Boston, who finished with a score of 292. Bishop was four strokes ahead of Phil Farley of Scarboro, who nosed out the Bostonian for the distinction last year at Saint John.



LOST TO DODGERS

Pee Wee Reese, star $75,000 rookie shortstop of the Brooklyn Dodgers, will probably be out of the game for the rest of the season as a result of a fractured foot suffered while sliding into second in a game against the Phillies.

ROCHESTER WINGS CAN TAKE LEAD BY WINNING TWO

Leaders Now Only One Percentage Point Ahead of Newark Bears

TORONTO LOSES TWO

Baltimore Orioles Shove Toronto Team Further Into Cellar

There's no record instance of a baseball team winning a pennant solely by splitting doubleheaders, and that's why Rochester Red Wings and Newark Bears still are separated by just one percentage point with four weeks left for them to decide the International League's pennant race.

That situation has existed since Thursday, when the Bears made up a one-game deficit but failed to make it a tie because they have played two more games than the Wings. Both were rained out Saturday and yesterday each won the first game of a doubleheader and lost the second. The break in the deadlock is due today when the Wings play two games at Jersey City and Bears one at Montreal.

There wasn't even much difference in the way they won and lost. Rochester had to go 11 innings in the opener to beat the Jersey Giants 3-1 in a mound duel between Charley Brumbeloe and Hughie East.. . Slick Castleman, making his first start since July 31, pitched the Jerseys to a 5-0 victory in the nightcap.

Newark, after taking an early lead, just lasted to nose out Buffalo's Bisons 6-5 in the first game but went down 3-2 before Floyd Giebell's six-hit pitching in the nightcap.

Baltimore Orioles were the only club to win a doubleheader yesterday as the pitchers generally proved too good for the batters. The Orioles had little trouble subduing the last-place Toronto Maple Leafs 9-2 and 6-2, Jack Tising of Syracuse and Bill Crouch of Montreal followed the trend of fine pitching as Tising pitched the Chiefs to a five-hit 2-0 victory in the first game. In the second game after 11 hectic innings Don Ross clouted a homer to give Royals an 11-10 decision.

In Saturday's two-game program the Orioles drubbed Leafs 9-1 and 1-0. Newt Kimball scattered eight safeties as Royals downed Chiefs 7-1 in a night game.

SHOOTS A 68

Stan Horne, of Montreal Ilsemere club, paced one stroke behind Sam Snead to shoot a 68 on the first day of the Canadian open golf championships at Scarboro Golf Club. Snead finished the first 18 holes with a 67 to lead the field.

Yesterday's Stars

(By the Associated Press)

Johnny Rizzo and Joe Marty, Phillies—Former hit two homers, and three singles, driving in six runs in doubleheader win over Giants; Marty hit homer, two triples in nightcap, sending four runs in.

Steve Sundra, Yankees, and Johnny Babich, Athletics—Sundra tossed six-hitter for 9-1 opener win; Babich allowed seven blows to take nightcap 7-3.

Larry French, Cubs—Stopped Pirates 9-1 with six hits.

Ted Lyons, White Sox—Hurled steady ball and collected four hits, himself, to trounce Tigers 7-5.

Whit Wyatt, Babe Phelps and Luke Hamlin, Dodgers—Wyatt and Hamlin pitched seven-hitters in doubleheader win over Bees; Phelps drove in two runs in 3-1 nightcap win.

Mort Cooper, Johnny Hopp and Don Gutteridge, Cardinals — Cooper's seven-hit hurling whipped Reds 3-1 in opener; Hopp's triple and Gutteridge's single sent tying and winning runs home in nightcap eighth inning.

Vernon Kennedy, Browns—Held Indians to four hits for nine innings before rain ended game tied at two-all.

50 "Y" BOYS ENJOY A HIKE

Visit O.S.D. and Montrose Farm and Enjoy Dip in Bay

The Boys' Summer Fun Club of the Y.M.C.A. went on a hike on Friday. Fifty boys turned up at the "Y" at ten in the morning with lunches and bathing suits for luggage. Had it not been for the big counter attraction of the gasoline plant fire, it is hard to say how many there would have been. The first stop was at the grounds of the O.S.D., which had been kindly placed at their disposal. There they had some races and group games before going for a much appreciated dip in the bay. After lunch, five baseball teams played a knockout series, which was won by Team No. 1, captained by Gordon Bankier. Some very good playing was observed. Some of these boys will be stars before long in fast company, fielding and hitting with grace and skill even now at 11, 12 and 13 years of age.

Another swim was most welcome at this point before the boys started the walk to the Montrose dairy farm. Mr. Geo. Graham had been good enough to allow the boys to visit the farm and get a lineup on how things were done. And they saw plenty. A great oat crop was being threshed, when the boys arrived, and it was not long before their hair was full of chaff. They made a thorough round of the barns and stables, including the mows and granaries, and then discovered a pair of ponies in a corral, which they greatly enjoyed riding. Some of the boys had this experience for the first time, and took their falls, for there were some falls, in good part, and no one was hurt, but all had lots of fun.

Then the cows started to come in and as the stalls in the barn filled up, interest was centred there. Finally, as it was getting late, the farm being operated on Standard time, and the boys' homes on Daylight Saving, they had to leave for home without seeing all they wished to see. As they came home, the travelling public took the tired lads into their cars and gave them a lift. Even so, we'll bet that none of them had much trouble getting to sleep.

This is one of a series of projected outings which are designed not only to provide enjoyment, but some educational value as well, which, after all, should be the basic principle of recreation.

$1,200 FOR PAYMENT ON HOUSE STOLEN

Toronto, Aug 19—(CP)— Mike Jendrisha of Toronto reported to police late yesterday that he had been robbed of $1,200 which he had planned on using for a down-payment on home today. He said the money had been taken from his pocket while he and members of his family spent some hours at the Sunnyside Beach resort. He said he noticed the loss after boarding a crowded street car.

SOME EXCEPTIONS MADE

Vichy, France, Aug. 19 (AP)—The right to practice medicine, dentistry or pharmacy in France and her colonies is denied those not born of French mothers by a law published in the official journal today. The only exceptions are those who have been "scientifically honored" by France who have served with fighting units either in 1914-1918 or 1939-40, or natives of Alsace-Lorraine who acquired French nationality as a result of the last war.

HOME GUARDS GET A BOMBER

London, Aug. 19 (CP)—The rifle fire of British Home Guards brought down a German dive bomber which attacked them with machine guns in South London on Sunday, the War Office said today.

"This is the first occasion on which the Home Guard have succeeded in bringing down a German bomber," the War Office said.

SIXTY PER CENT IN FAVOR

New York, Aug. 19 (CP)—More than sixty per cent. of those answering a question as to whether the United States should sell Britain over-age destroyers were in favour of the move, the American Institute of Public Opinion reported today. Sixty-two per cent of those polled approved the sale, 38 per cent were against it.

LOANS WITHOUT ENDORSERS

You can borrow $100 if you can pay back $7.78 a month

Here's a convenient way to borrow and a convenient way to repay. Household Finance is now making loans to employed men and women in this community on a helpful "fit-your-budget" plan. No endorsers or guarantors, no stocks or bonds are required. You may take as long as fifteen months to repay. Or you may repay sooner to reduce the cost.

Choose your own payments

Suppose that you need $100. You find this amount in the first column of the table below. Then read across, picking out the monthly payment which you wish to make. You will see that monthly payments of $7.78, for instance, will repay your loan in full in fifteen months. Or twelve monthly payments of $9.46 each will also repay a $100 loan if you pay on schedule. There is nothing more to pay. You may wish to borrow an amount not in the table. If so, just tell us how much you need and for how long.

Fair treatment

In a case of sickness or unemployment, while paying on a loan, Household shows the borrower every consideration. During the past seven years Household has made over 225,000 loans to Canadians amounting to over $38,000,000 and in not a single instance foreclosed a mortgage or garnisheed a wage cheque.

Borrow on your own signature

All you do is fill in and return the coupon below. We then send a representative to your home to make the simple arrangements for your loan. No credit inquiries are made of your friends or relatives, and you don't have to ask friends or fellow-workers to sign the loan papers with you. You get your loan—without delay or embarrassment—in a pleasant, private transaction.

Why don't you send the coupon for full information about this new service now? You will be under no obligation to borrow.

You can borrow $20 to $500 if you can make these convenient monthly payments

CASH LOAN YOU GET	AMOUNT YOU PAY BACK EACH MONTH Including All Charges

500	257.52	131.31	89.26	68.25	55.66	47.28	38.91

WE GUARANTEE the total amount figured by using this table to be the full amount you will pay, when payments are made on schedule. You will pay less if you prepay your loan in full or in part, since you pay charges only for the actual time you have the money. Payments include charges at the rate of 2% per month as authorized by the Small Loans Act, 1939.

OF HEAVEN'S BENEDICTION

CHAPTER 18
Alone in Hawaii

"We'll be in shortly," the young ship's doctor told Brooke. "You need sleep. What a beastly break for you! But you've been splendid."

"You, too," Brooke said. "You saw to it that I ate, at least."

"Anything I can do?"

"Nothing, thank you. I must see Mrs. Kingsbury's niece who will take charge. Every one's been very kind, you especially."

He smiled. "I came down to make a date with you but it's a queer time...."

"I can't plan anything. I don't know where I'll be."

He held out his hand. "Well, good-bye, then. Sorry you came?"

"A year from now I may be able to answer that. Good-bye, doctor. And thank you again."

The cabin was suffocatingly hot and soon she stepped into the corridor, almost colliding with a small young woman wearing a printed silk frock and carrying a Panama hat, an attractive, sunburned young woman with live dark eyes and long straight black hair worn in a plaited braid coiled round her head.

Brooke murmured an apology. The young woman glared at her.

"I'm looking for Mrs. Kingsbury's cabin. I wonder if...."

Brooke had not realized until now that the ship's engines were silent. Now she knew that this supercilious though attractive person was Jessica Forbes.

"I'm Brooke Carter," she said. Something must have happened to her face, she thought, to make Jessica's lashes flicker and her dark winged brows draw together. "I'm sorry but I must tell you that Mrs. Kingsbury is dead."

Several days later, in a small room in a hotel in Honolulu, Brooke went to close the window and stood looking down on a bright city she was reluctant to leave in a few hours. All had gone—Ellen, excited and perspiring to a trip through the islands; Francis, his wallet stuffed, to the nearest bar, and Jessica to the beach house to her husband and children until she could make plans to take Mrs. Kingsbury to Ohio for burial beside her husband.

And Brooke knew that years later the memory of the first day would make her writhe with discomfort—Francis's demand, "I want my money!" Ellen weeping and nervous! Jessica shocked and desperate. But all of Jesica Forbes' faults, Brooke knew now, were the result of her desperate need of money. To Francis, Jessica had turned and cried. "You'll get your money;" and had left the chauffeur with Ellen and her in a hotel. returning hours later with their money for their salaries. With her was her husband, John, a lean, delicate-looking young man with intense dark eyes and thinning dark hair, who had paced Brooke's room while his wife talked tersely in terms of dollars and cents, giving them enough money for a return tourist class voyage to Los Angeles and the train journey from Los Angeles to New York. She had borrowed the money, she said, and Brooke knew that despair gathered in her mind with the fear that Mrs. Kingsbury, eccentric and distrustful, had not left the estate to her.

When they had gone, Francis scowling, Ellen merely saying that she would return for a proper goodbye and John Forbes without any explanation, Brooke dined with Jessica. She said, as if she were not speaking to Brooke but merely thinking aloud, "John's so impractical. He can't meet emergencies." Then, "Poor Aunt Rachel. I don't suppose she was very happy in her life. Money should give some measure of happiness but she loved money alone. She could have helped us immensely but she was a hard disciplinarian and selfish. I was either to make a brilliant marriage or else be her unpaid companion. When I failed to achieve the first and refused to be the second and married an artist, she never forgave me.

"I think she got a sinister pleasure out of seeing our struggle. At least she taught me what kind of mother not to be. This is rather disrespectful talk of the dead, isn't it? I was devoted to her and she certainly was what one would call a good woman but she failed in little things."

Her dark slanting eyes looked at Brooke gravely. "There was a secret. She didn't know until my uncle died that he had been married before. He was a good many years older than Aunt Rachel. She was his nurse in a hospital in New England when they were married. No doubt she didn't expect him to live long but he lived on to use up the best part of her life, and when he died, she knew from old letters that he had been married before to a girl he'd loved very much. She had died when they were married scarcely a year. I suppose Aunt Rachel felt that while she had all his money, she had never really had him.

"She was ambitious, too, and she could do nothing with her ambitions except follow a sick man around the world looking for a good climate. It hardened her and made her distrustful of all men."

They parted when John Forbes returned. Jessica had telephoned twice since to inquire if Brooke had made a reservation for a return trip. When Brooke told her that she had, she wondered if she would ever know the contents of Mrs. Kingsbury's will. For the last time, Ellen had come, too. Dressed in a white frock with a wide green sash, she had confessed that she, too, hoped to be included in the will. She said that if she were notified, she would write Brooke, sending the letter to New Hampshire when Brooke reminded her that she had no other address.

That had been several days ago. Alone, Brooke had wandered over the city and, eager to see more, had taken a motor-propelled train for Haleiwa which skirted Pearl Harbor and passed many picturesque beaches. At the superb views she had felt a light-headed happiness as if she were suspended above her plight. The next day with a group of tourists she was driven by motor around Koko Head, passing Waikiki, going around Diamond Head, seeing the ruins of an ancient Hawaiian village, through a great sugar plantation that lies between the steep hills, up to Pali and back through Nuuanu Valley to the city.

Excited by the beauty around her, she had thought several times that she would cable Tony to come. To loll lazily on the beach, to dance, to see more of this enchanting place with Tony.... But it was but a pretty dream. She didn't have the money to linger and she was thousands of miles from home. Moreover, she knew now that the love-making of Irene's son had marked the end of their gay companionship.

It had taken her so many years to come to the end of Rod, she thought, standing by the window, wearing a little-girl sort of white linen frock. But since then she had come to the end of several things and several people. She knew now precisely what she must do and that was to get to New York as soon and as inexpensively as possible, seeing only Tony in the interim. Marry him, an imp in her brain proded Arguing with the imp, she defeated it. "I can't marry Tony because I'm not in love with him and because I'm still in love with his mother's husband." She winced. At least, she thought, she had learned to think straight and to see the truth unadorned.

It was time to go. Her bags were ready and her white hat lay on the bed. Gently she closed the window and telephoned for a boy to come for her bags.

An hour later on deck she said a silent "Aloha" not only to the island but to Mrs. Kingsbury, to Jessica and her family (no longer desperate, she hoped), to Ellen and her vivid green sash, and to Francis, his wallet undoubtedly thinner. The faces below, the waving hands were blurred and yet she felt a strange and unlooked-for peace as if she had come not to dream the unexpected but to accept it.

Five days later she went to the same hotel in Los Angeles where she had stopped with Mrs. Kingsbury on the outgoing trip since it was the only hotel in the city she knew. Only a few minutes after she sent the boy away, he returned with a letter for her. Alone again, opening it, she read:

Brooke, my dearest:

I do not know if you will ever get this but as I do not know where to reach you in Hawaii, my only hope is that you will stop here on your return.

I have finally made them see that my position here is intolerable and after a good bit of thinking and arguing with them I have won my freedom for four years. Four years to wander and make deductions and get a degree and maybe write a book. I'd come to you and ask you to marry me again if I thought you would but the private thinking, not the arguing, convinced me that it would be useless. You are not in love with me and we can't even be friends because you are too close to me.

And so I'm off on a cruise on a sailing schooner with a swell chap who makes his living taking rich lads on cruises, charging them, making them work and making them love it.

I thought you'd want to know about Mother and Rod....

Tears blurred Brooke's eyes. She could not see to read on. She sat down with the letter in her lap.

CHAPTER 19
Job Hunting

Brooke wept silently. Finally, the blurring tears wiped away, she read again, "I thought you'd want to know about Mother and Rod." Taking a grip on herself, she went on:

I can't tell you much because she's a marvel at keeping the atmosphere clear and cheerful. But there is no doubt that I (and you) interrupted the honeymoon and that Rod is embarrassed. He seems bored and doesn't seem to fit in particularly with Mother's friends He avoids me naturally.

Do I blame any one? Do I hate any one? I don't know. I've always tried to be fair but this involves two people dearest to me and a man who, although a decent sort, did a cruel and unjust thing. I dislike him keenly when it occurs to me that he probably married her for her money, but when I realize that she probably knew it and how important I believe he is to her, my thoughts go around in circles.

I'm not saying half the things I want to say—how lovely, how wonderful I think you are, and that when I think about you, the only thing I really want is to be with you and that, quite truthfully what appears to be a thrilling trip is actually running away from you and Mother and Rod, hoping when I return I'll have a better idea of what I want to do with my life and that their marriage will either be seasoned or—finished.

Spare me your pity, Brooke, and keep me in your heart. I like to think that we'll meet again in our particular Eden where everything will be beautifully straightened out and there will be a happy movie fade-out for us. But I know that that's absurd and that we'll have to do the straightening out for ourselves, alone. Good-bye, my love, and God bless you.

Tony.

Since now there was no reason to linger, Brooke picked up the telephone and called the station about a train to New York. She was crying so that for a moment she couldn't answer the terse, impersonal voice that asked what she wished.

The clerk at the inexpensive hotel in New York smiled with recognition when Brooke registered and told him that since she expected to be in New York for some time, permanently, she hoped, she would like a monthly rate on a small room.

It was indeed a small room to which the boy led her and though, when the sultry heat of summer descended, it would be unbearable, it was, for the time being at least, a temporary refuge where she could rest after the tiring journey across the continent.

As soon as the boy left, she called Jim at his office, feeling "at home" when she heard him drawl, "Jim Bartlett speaking.."

"This is Brooke, Jim...."

"Brooke? When did you get back?"

"About ten minutes ago. Mrs. Kingsbury died before we reached Honolulu. That's why I didn't write. I knew I was coming back at once. How are you?"

Jim said, "I'm fine." Then, "Died! Wait a minute....What is today?" And after a pause, "Can you meet me for lunch? I want to see you but I can't see you tonight. How are you?"

"I'm tired but I'll meet you wherever is most convenient for you."

With two hours to spare, she unpacked and lay across the narrow bed and looking up at the flowery ceiling. She would have to repeat the whole story to Jim, the whole forty-three days (she had counted them on the train) and she dreaded the repitition....

Tony, his good looks, his attractive smile, his infectious charm came back to her. Was that finished? She ran her fingers through her dark hair spread fanlike on the pillow. Her thoughts, thoughts of a tired mind, drifted. She would like to meet Tony five years hence and find that he had written a good book and discover also that now, in this year of his life, loving her had not made him unhappy long.

She smiled. Thinking of five years hence when she had little money and no work. For during those long days on the train she had decided that, much as she hated to do it, she would ask Barney Glass if he would help her. False pride would not sustain her when her money was gone Other than her desire to be independent and the stubborn determination not to return to Chatham, she had no plans.

A slim girl in blue lovely enough, vivid enough to stimulate the interest of those who hurried past or also waited, she waited for Jim in the lobby of a Broadway hotel. When she saw him, tall, thin, slow-moving, wearing a striped dark suit and an old gray felt hat, she thought she would be fairly safe in wagering that even ten years hence he would be the same—indolent, dreamy-eyed and nondescript—until he smiled.

"Hello," he said cheerfully, taking her hand, pumping it while his eyes asked the questions she would answer a few moments later in the dining-room.

When she finished her story he did not say anything for a few minutes but sat, frowning, looking at her. Then he said slowly, "I expected you to run into all sorts of things, adventures, but not death, and most of all not Rod. He must have felt like a gigolo when he saw you—if he hadn't felt like one before. Is he happy, do you think? Is he getting out of it what he thought he would?"

"I don't know. He was so embarrassed...."

"I wonder why he didn't play up to the part. But, no, he couldn't. He hasn't the imagination. I can't see Rod with people like that. He's too plain, too unsophisticated, too serious. He takes himself too seriously. And Tony Morrison....Poor kid. Tough on him. But that's so much water under the bridge now, isn't it? You look...."

"I look tired. I know it. I detest train travel and can't sleep on trains." To relieve him of any feeling of responsibility he might feel, she said, "Jim, I'm going to see Barney Glass and ask him to help me find a job."

"You've deciden to stay, then.."

"What else? she nodded. "Yes. I'll go home for a week end but not until I find a job. I suspect the house is being turned into two apartments." At his absent stare, she smiled and asked, "Why are you looking at me like that, Jim?"

"He chuckled. "Like what? Well.. I've something to tell you. Hold onto your chair. I'm—I'm going to be married next week."

"Married?" She had never seen him with a girl and had never heard him speak of one.

"I'd have told you about it before. I wanted to, in fact, but she was married and she just got her divorce after waiting three years for it. It was one of those elopements of a nineteen-year-old. It didn't last a year. When she left him, she came to New York, and she's a secretary at the office. Because of the circumstances, I didn't talk about it, didn't tell Rod about her. At the time I thought I'd shock him if he knew I was lunching every day with a married woman! Her name is Jean Carver and she's....well, I can't get worked up to big romance, I guess. I just haven't got it in me. But we have a lot in common, we don't clash, an I think we understand each other. She isn't beautiful but she's.... I want you to meet her. I've told her about you."

What had he told her, Brooke wondered.... "I hope you'll be very happy, Jim."

He smiled. "Thanks, I believe I will. We're trying not to kid ourselves about love and marriage and our future, and we're both content to be small people for the rest of our lives. We'd like to get out of New York, too, because the one thing we both want is a family. So I'll probably use part of the time they're grudgingly giving me for a honeymoon to look for another job in a smaller city. That's the height of my ambition and Jean is satisfied. I wasn't cut out for big things or a grand passion...."

Brooke said, "I envy you. I was content to be a small person, too."

He looked at her. "I was in love with you for a few weeks. Couldn't sleep because of it. That was when I first knew you. But there were reasons other than Rod that made me put it aside. I knew I'd fail you in so many ways....

"You've never failed me as a friend."

Good ewe and wether lambs sold at $10.50 delivered by rail and $10 delivered by truck. Bucks traded at $9.50 and culls $8.50.

Sheep brought $2.50-$5 with a few at $5.50.

Hogs closed previously at $8.90 off-trucks for bacon and $12 dressedweight.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 19 (CP).—Trading was quiet on Toronto Exchange today. Minor losses for base metals were off-set by small gains in other groups. Only 43,000 shares traded in the first three hours.

Preston, Broulan and Leitch posted narrow gains and other golds were mainly steady. Jellicoe reflected, with a small decline, the announcement that the mill was closing down because of failure to find new ore. A decline of 7 cents to 1.31 for Steep Rock was the main in change in base metals.

Bell Telephone firmed 2 to 145, Royal Bank gained 1 and Blue Ribbon Preferred dropped 1⅛. Bids were firm for the western oils with no trades except a few broken lots.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 19—(AP)—Bulls and bears were tamer than usual in today's stock market and the majority dozed through a slightly uneven session.

The list lacked a trend from the start and, near the fourth hour, few leaders were able to show more than minor gains. Negligible declines were plentiful and numerous issues held at Saturday's final quotations.

Among resistant stocks at times were U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Montgomery Ward, N. Y. Central, Boeing, Westinghouse, American Telephone, Eastman Kodak and International Paper Pfd

Backward were Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Standard Oil of N.J., Anaconda and Consolidated Edison.

In the Canadian group International Nickel and Canadian Pacific dipped fractions. Canada 4s, in the Bond Market, gained 3-4 point.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Aug. 19 (CP). — A steady tone prevailed on most of the hog markets reporting early today. However, Brantford liveweights were up 10 cents at $8.35 from its last reporting price on Friday.

Liveweight—Brantford $8.35.

Dressedweight — Brantford $11.50, Hull $11, London $11.50 plus transportation.

Peterborough later reported prices were unchanged with dressedweights at $11.40 plus transportation.

Early Reports Show Registration Very Satisfactory

Ottawa Aug. 19.— (CP) — National Registration machinery went into high gear today as every resident of Canada 16 years old or more began reportina to public registration books fom one end of the country to the other.

Jules Castonguay, chief registrar, said early reports from his deputies in the various constituencies were "most satisfactory" as the machinery began to roll.

More than 8,000000 Canadian residents will record for the government who they are, where they live, what they are doing and what else they could do, during the registration which began at eight o'clock this morning and will continue until Wednesday night. Booths will close at ten o'clock each night.

Hundreds of thousands had taken advantage of the opportunity already afforded those in industrial firms and plants to register their places of employment during the past few days and this will lighten the tasks at the booths, Mr. Gaztonguay said. From the number of forms asked for the expected the largest registration in St. Paul's, Toronto, a riding containing big department stores and industrial establishments.

The smallest registration may be at Dot near Kamloops, B.C., where a total of about thirty are expected to fill out their forms.

Mr. Justice T. C. Davis, associate deputy Minister for National War Services, said today the last report he had had from the organization built up by his department in the last five weeks, came from the Mount Royal Division in Westmount Que. There as everywhere else, matters were going forward well

Produce Prices Steady, Trading Still Slow

Toronto, Aug. 19 — No price changes were registered on the Toronto open produce market Saturday. Very few sales of butter and cheese were made, while eggs held quietly steady.

Offerings of first-grade Ontario butter were light. Most sellers asked 21 3-4c for their stock, but sales were made at 21 1-2c only. Trading was almost at a standstill. Holders of Western butter asked 22c to 22 1-4c, but no sales of this line were reported.

The egg market remained quiet and steady under light receipts and a fair demand. Quotations were unchanged, A-large eggs staying steady at 27c in the graded section and 29c to 30c in wholesale-to-retail trading.

Only the odd lot of new, large current-make cheese was sold at 14 1-4c on the wholesale market. Demand was spotty and the market stayed quiet and draggy.

Doesn't See Any Indians Says British Refugee

Montreal, Aug. 19—(CP)—Bound for wartime homes, 157 British children brought to Canada under government sponsorship reached here today from an east coast disembarkation point, where they landed last Friday.

For 41 of the youngsters, happy but tired after many hours of travel by rail, their journey ended here. Of the others, 50 were bound for points in Western Canada while 66 would reach journey's end in Ontario.

The youngsters, though travel-weary, hopped briskly from the long train and danced jigs on the station platform to get the "kinks" out of their legs. As their luggage was being sorted, they chattered eagerly in accents of a half-dozen British cities.

Reporters seeking interviews found the tables turned as the children plied them with questions about their foster country.

One young lad buttonholed a reporter, pulled him aside and asked to be assured that this was "really Canada."

"You know," he said, "I thought maybe this was Australia. You know, they do things pretty quietly nowadays to keep Hitler's spies from finding out. I thought they might have brought us to Australia because the weather is far too hot for Canada."

"But it is Canada, just the same" replied the reporter.

Still unconvinced, the youngster looked across the railway tracks into a busy downtown street.

"I don't see any Indians," he said. "But then I don't see any kangaroos either. Maybe it is Canada, after all."

R.A.F. SQUADRONS

Britain, having destroyed approximately four German planes to each British plane lost during last week's six successive days of raids, made the ratio better than 9 to 1 in fighting off yesterday's attacks which struck at the outer edge of South London, at Croydon airdrome, at Kent, Sussex, the Portsmouth naval base, Hampshire and Surrey, the East coast, the Midlands, and the South and Southeast coast.

The Air Ministry reported 140 Nazi planes destroyed against a loss of only 16 British—a total second only to last Thursday's peak of 180 and one which, considering an estimated 650 German planes were employed, "represents the heaviest defeat he (the enemy) has yet suffered at the hands of our fighters and ground defences," said the Air Ministry.

Apparently delayed by the weather, the first Nazi raiders crossed the southeast coast in three waves shortly after noon. Aiming at London's defences, they were met by R.A.F. planes and anti-aircraft fire and, after an hour's battle, were turned back short of their goal. But the bombs they dropped caused "some" civilian casualties in the neighborhood of Croydon, London's great airport, and killed "some" service personnel at several R.A.F. airdromes.

The second attack met even less success and even stiffer resistance. The 42 Nazi bombers heading for London were jarred out of formation and driven back over the sea, with at least three of the group shot down, "very little" damage done and "few" casualties were caused.

Enery Planes Jettison Bombs

Among specific instances of defence success were these:

At least six of 30 bombers and fighters shot down in an attack on Portsmouth, the remainder having jettisoned their bombs to get away;

Six bombers and five fighters destroyed by a Spitfire squadron defending its Surrey airdrome;

Three Messerschmitt fighters downed and nine fighters and bombers badly damaged in an attack by a Spitfire squadron on a formation of at least 80 Nazi planes;

Nine German planes shot down by nine Hurricanes in one action over Hampshire, and 11 German planes brought down by 11 Spitfires in another an hour later.

Attacks on 26 Nazi-Held Airdromes in France

The Air Ministry's report on the first of the three week-end R.A.F. raids said that, in addition to the "heavy and successful" attack on Boulogne, other operations were carried out against German oil plants, munitions factories, aircraft stores and railways, as well as against 26 airdromes in Nazi-held France, Belgium and Holland.

TRENTON WOMAN

Mrs. Marjorie Hammett, Victoria Avenue, dislocated shoulder and other injuries.

William Hammett, Victoria Avenue, cuts and bruises.

All with the exception of Hammett who was released following treatment, are in Belleville General Hospital, where they are under treatment of Dr. Gibson.

The accident occurred on the Belleville-Bancroft highway about four miles north of Millbridge. Herrington, who was driving a truck loaded with four cords of slabwood, crowded over on the wrong side of the highway, according to investigating Provincial Police Constable S. Palmateer, and sideswiped a car driven by McFee, while travelling at a high rate of speed.

Motor Car Demolished

The force of impact completely demolished the McFee car, part of which was dragged for a distance of 300 feet before the truck was brought to a stop. A door standard of the car was driven through a heavy wooden part of the truck by the force of the crash.

Mrs. Allore was instantly killed, and the remaining passengers extricated from the wreckage with difficulty.

Dr. Nickle, Madoc physician rushed to the scene of the accident and after first aid treatment ordered the injured people to hospital.

Herrington, who was driving a truck owned by a Belleville business man, was placed under arrest by Police Constable Palmateer and lodged in Madoc jail. He was brought to Belleville this morning and placed in custody here to await a hearing. Police intimated that other charges against Herrington are pending. The accident occurred at approximately 10.15 p.m.

the western hemisphere."

President And Monroe Doctrine

Some observers saw in this action a determination on the part of President Roosevelt to throw the protective mantle of the Monroe Doctrine over Canadian and other interests in the North Atlantic.

It was believed to forecast potential fulfillment of the President's pledge, given at Kingston, Ont., two years ago yesterday, and reiterated here Saturday, that the United States would not stand idly by if domination of Canadian soil were threatened" by an aggressor nation. He told a group of United States correspondents Saturday that this assurance still holds good.

The announcement also lent added significance to a statement made in Ottawa last week by Air Minister Power that important additions were to be made at once to defence force facilities in Newfoundland where there are large, modern land and sea air bases established primarily for peace time North Atlantic air traffic.

Statement Causes Speculation

Brevity of the official statement left Canadians and Americans alike speculating on the extent to which the traditionally isolationist United States would abandon her stand against foreign entanglements, and how far Canada would go in military commitments apart from those concerning the Empire.

Neither the Prime Minister nor President Roosevelt would go beyond their joint, printed announcement when questioned by reporters before they parted at noon yesterday at a railway siding in this border town.

But some indication of the announcement's significance was seen in the fact that Mr. King hurried back to Ottawa and reported at once to the Governor General of Canada, the Earl of Athlone, and immediately afterward entered into informal conversations with members of the war committee of the cabinet. He also conferred with the Governor General before leaving Ottawa Saturday.

Study Land, Sea, Air Problems

The official statement said "this permanent joint board on defence shall commence immediate studies relating to sea, land and air problems including personnel and material....it will meet shortly."

Plans of the two governments were the culmination of lengthy discussions on defence which were openly acknowledged by President Roosevelt in a statement at his regular press conference Friday morning.

Friday evening the White House announced that Mr. King would be a dinner guest on the private car which carried President Roosevelt to this upstate town to review army exercises.

Momentous Conference

The Presidential train was parked on a railway siding close to the St. Lawrence River and overlooking the Canadian shore. From his car window Mr. Roosevelt could see the green mounds of the fort at Prescott, scene of the Battle of the Windmill fought in the war of 1812, the last occasion on which Canada and the United States resorted to arms.

Mr. King, who motored down from Ottawa to Prescott and crossed by special ferry to Ogdensburg, found the President waiting for him in his car lounge and was greeted by Mr. Roosevelt's cheery, "Hello, Mackenzie." They have been friends since Harvard days more than 40 years ago.

A second private car was provided for the President's guests including J. Pierrepont Moffatt, United States minister to Canada, who motored down from Ottawa with the Prime Minister.

Henry L. Stimson, stalwart of the United States Republican party, who recently accepted an invitation to become President Roosevelt's Secretary of War, joined the two government leaders at the dinner table and for later discussions which concluded the agreement on common defence studies. Mr. King remained on the train overnight.

U.S. Base is Forecast

It is believed the plans discussed and to be studied by the proposed board, involve establishment of a United States military, naval and air base in the North Atlantic, presumably Newfoundland and that they are a part of a larger scheme of new world defence to be worked out by the United States with cooperation of the British government.

All three conferees appeared well-satisfied with the outcome of their conversations when they emerged from the train yesterday morning for a drive about the army encampment and air field where some 90,000 volunteers of the first American army under Lieut. General Hugh A. Drum and 137 aircraft, were staging the largest peace-time manoeuvres seen in this country since the civil war.

Tour of Airport

Mr. King sat between the President and Secretary Stimson in Mr. Roosevelt's huge open car for the tour of the airport and a visit to the annual memorial service staged by the 28th (Iron) Division of the Pennsylvania Guard.

Two sleeping cars of Washington newsmen and photographers, a group of Canadian correspondents and cameramen, a number of officials and aides, and large numbers of Secret Service officers and State Police formed a long cavalcade which traversed only a small part of the 1,300 square mile area in which the army exercises are being held.

Before Mr. King arrived by motor from Ottawa, President Roosevelt had spent a day touring under a blazing sun through the military area.

Shortly before the President passed over a culvert near Norwood, Saturday morning, a guardsman on duty along the route discovered a wooden box holding 15 sticks of dynamite. But no fuses were attached and the explosive was harmless, leading officials to decide the dynamite had been forgotten by a road construction crew.

After yesterday morning's tour of the army activities the party returned to the train and the two leaders had a last brief conference. Their joint statement was issued just before the presidential train moved off for Hyde Park, the Roosevelt family home on the Hudson River.

Berlin Declines Comment

Berlin, Aug. 19—(AP)—German officials declined comment today on the decision of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada to establish a permanent joint defence board.

Wilhelmstrasse officials said that they were awaiting the official text of the announcement and that experts must study it before any German reaction can be announced.

CENSOR HOLDUP

clear" signal was sounded.

The Daily Telegraph said "the Associated Press....filed its first dispatch on Friday at 12.23 p.m. Six others on attempted raids, all giving the facts and showing how German raiders were driven back, were filed later.

"None of these was released until 9.22 p.m. nine minutes after the official account was issued to the press . . some time after the last editions of American evening newspapers had gone to press."

Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard said that Associated Press dispatches on the Friday raid "are a fair account of events, containing no information that in any way could aid the enemy. It was not the Ministry of Information who were to blame. The trouble lay in the absurd system of co-ordinations between the ministry, the service departments, and the Ministry of Home Security. Administrative anarchy!"

Slight Damage Done

Friday German raiders appeared over the London area for the first time in this war, attacking the Croydon Airport and the dock area on both sides of the Thames.

While the raid was in progress the cable which serves the Canadian Press and the Associated Press into New York carried other news but hour after hour nothing could be relayed into Canadian newspaper offices from London about the raid.

During this silence the Berlin radio literally filled the air with grandiose claims, which subsequently turned out to hold about the usual Nazi percentage of truth—about 10 per cent to 90 per cent exaggeration.

The Berlin propaganda machine ground out descriptions of enormous fires in the London area, or destruction of British planes, of German "mastery of the air" over the Empire capital and similar claptrap.

Finally, in the early evening, the Air Ministry issued its statement on the day's fighting, showing that damage was minor, that all the planes which attacked Croydon were destroyed and that the R.A.F. shot down 75 German planes while losing only 22.

DEFENCE PLAN PAVING WAY FOR AMERICAN PACTS

Washington, Aug. 19—(CP)—The new defensive arrangement between Canada and the United States may point the way for a system of mutual assistance pacts throughout the western hemisphere the Associated Press says today.

The 21 American republics laid the basis for such a system among themselves at the recent Havana conference of foreign ministers. The joint defence board to be set up by the United States and Canada is expected in informed quarters to establish the form of agreements to be sought, the Associated Press said.

The Havana conference adopted a reciprocal assistance agreement under which, in event of threats to the security of any of the American nations or the hemisphere as a whole, the various countries would consult on the actual form of aid to be given.

This envisaged a series of bilateral or multilateral military agreements.

New Agreement Seen as Link

Canada, however, did not participate in the Havana conference and is not a member of the Pan-American Union. The agreement reached by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King to set up a joint board thus is viewed in Washington as tantamount to linking Canada with the continental defece plan of the Pan-American group.

Some persons in Washington questioned the President's authority to make a binding agreement without senate approval, but endorsers of the defence board idea took the view that the agreement did not constitute a formal treaty.

The join defence board was expected to act only in an advisory capacity.

Howe Sees 'Mutual Benefit'

Halifax, Aug. 19—(CP)—The proposed joint defence measures between Canada and the United States for the defence of the northern half of the western hemisphere would be "of mutual benefit" to both nations, Air Minister Power said in an interview here today.

The Associate Minister of National Defences in the Dominion's eastern command. He was accompanied by Air Vice Marshal Breadner and a group of Royal Canadian Air Force officers.

The proposed measures as announced by Prime Minister Mackenzie King and President Roosevelt would not relieve Canada of the care of her own defences, but it would aid greatly in relieving anxiety regarding the defence of North America, the cabinet minister said.

Welcome Any Assistance

"Our own national pride would prevent us from leaning on any other nation," he declared, "but we would welcome any assistance.

The Air Minister said that the Dominion could make "very important" contributions to discussions on defence, as that problem has been "right on our doorsteps" and has been a pressing and urgent one for Canada since the war started.

Mr. Power said he viewed the announcement from Ogdensburg, N.Y., of the proposal as one of the most important since the outbreak of hostilities.

WORKER KILLED LIGHTING FUSE IN ROCK QUARRY

Attempting to Fix Fuse Which Had Become Dampened

HELPER UNHURT

Donald Ellis, Victim, and Five Others Preparing Blasts to Loosen Rock at Time

Havelock, Ont., Aug. 19.—(CP)—Donald Ellis, 24, was killed today lighting a fuse on the quarry of the Ontario Rock Company here. He was attempting to fix a fuse which had become dampened when it exploded. Havelock is 25 miles east of Peterborough.

George McGowwan, his helper, standing nearby was not injured.

Ellis and five other workmen were preparing blast to loosen rock for the day's work when the accident occurred.

The fatality brings widowhood to Mrs. Ellis for the second time. She previously was married to Harry Pressick who was killed in a mining accident in Northern Ontario a few years ago.

Dr. Donald Holdcroft, coroner said he had not decided whether to hold an inquest.

WORLD ADMIRES BRITISH CALMNESS

But London Times Says Sangfroid is Only 'Gift of Peculiar Steadiness of Nerve'

(By Dwight L. Pitkin)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 19.—(AP)—German air raids on Britain are providing endless new examples of the famed British composure— which the Nazis describe as "das Englische Phlegma".

The British had not given much thought to their sangfroid until American newspapers began publishing stories about it. Now they are laughing at this quality in themselves, which the London Times defined today as "no more than a gift of peculiar steadiness of nerve of instinctive self-control, which prevents making a fuss".

"To claim it for the English is not to commit the insolent stupidity of claiming that the English are braver than other nations", The Times said in an editorial expressing the belief it is impossible to make the Germans understand just what "das Englische Phlegma" means until the Nazis are beaten.

British Sangfroid

I saw plenty of this sangfroid during visits to the suburban fringes of London Sunday, when Hitler's bombing planes tried to penetrate the Metropolitan air defences.

In a community where the raiders bombed a railway ticket office and a row of houses last Friday people had cleared away the debris from their houses patched up windows with linoleum or boards and had returned calmly to the routine of their lives.

Driving through the countryside over which warplanes had been streaking in one of the greatest aerial battles of the war the people I saw acted no more excited than if it were peacetime.

Sun-tanned youngsters cycled along the road unmindful of the war and giving the sky only an occasional glance. Couples on tandem bicycles pedalled by vigorously carrying hampers of food for a picnic outing in a nearby park.

Ordinary Chat.

I halted for a chat at the home of some friends in another community near an airdrome which had been bombed last week. Most of the conversation was about chicken raising—which the head of the house had taken up, about the garden which had produced nine vegetables for the Sunday dinner, and about the latest musical comedy and the hot weather.

It was mentioned incidentally that two days before a splinter from an anti-aircraft shell had fallen on the roof of the house, hitting the chimney pot.

Back in London there was the usual Sunday calm about town, which an air raid warning at dinner time failed to upset.

Emerging from an underground station later in the evening I found another warning on. As railway attendants shut gates in the tubes passengers walked along without increasing their pace as though shutting the gates were an every day event.

BRITAIN PREPARES WORLD OFFENSIVE

Steadily Mounting Tally of Armed Might and Striking Power Foreseen by British Supply Minister

London, Aug. 19—(CP)—Britain is preparing her armed forces vigorously for a world offensive, Supply Minister Herbert Morrison said in a speech Sunday.

"The ground plan of our future production activity is drawn on the assumption that our task will be a world offensive when the moment comes," he said.

"Once the immediate peril of these next few days or weeks has passed, we shall all of us together be able to look forward to a steadily mounting tally of armed might and striking power."

Mr. Morrison said the equipment of British forces is not yet "fully satisfactory," but added that the army has sufficient weapons to "perform its immediate task successfully even if the call should come tonight."

Three months ago, he explained, Britain was in "great peril," but since then a "transformation" had taken place.

Mr. Morrison said the Supply Ministry's annual turnover in raw materials amounted to well over $800,000,000 and added:

"Within recent months the total has begun to be swelled by very substantial purchases of finished steel made by the ministry from America."

"That steel," he said, "is one more extremely important contribution" which the United States is making to the British war effort.

RUMANIA FIRM ON TRANSYLVANIA

Declares She Will Not Accept Magyar Proposal for Return of Two Thirds of Province

Turnu Severin, Rumania, Aug. 19 (AP)—Rumania told Hungary at a formal conference today that a Magyar proposal for return of about two-thirds of the disrupted border province of Transylvania to Hungary could not even be considered, authoritative sources reported.

Instead, it was said, Rumania representatives presented a counter proposal for a transfer of populations and offered to cede sufficient frontier territory to facilitate the transfer.

Hungary has consistently refused to consider such a plan, and it appeared that efforts to settle the long-standing territorial dispute between the two countries by negotiation would end in a stalemate.

Rumanian government circles said their own plan had the full backing of Germany, which had been pressing for a speedy settlement.

It thus appeared that the question would be thrown back to Berlin.

U.S. FLIER GIVES LIFE IN R.A.F.

World's Ace Bobsledder Killed in Action in Air Raid on Friday

New York, Aug. 19 (AP).—William M. L. Fiske 3rd died Saturday in England of wounds suffered as he flew his Royal Air Force Hurricane Fighter against German bombers on Friday. He was a recognized ace of the world's bobsleddeRs and captain of two victorious United States Olympic teams in that sport.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. William M. L. Fiske and a native of Chicago, the 29-year-old sportsman was a Cambridge University graduate.

Only Friday the father received a cable from his son, in which he said, "Don't believe everything you hear from Berlin. British reports, if anything, understate it. Everything fine."

English Refugee Boys Get Lesson in Baseball

When the Y. Summer Fun Club boys went on their hike on Friday, two small English refugees were in the party. They were Ivor and Archibald Little, and were the guests of Hugh Cameron, son of Judge and Mrs. Chas. Cameron. These lads had visited the "Y" once or twice since arriving from their home in Oxfordshire. Their father is an Imperial Army officer, who is training troops in Scotland. These two lads had played cricket at home, but baseball was new to them when they arrived in Canada. On the hike they got a real chance to learn something about it, however. And they did very well, Ivor playing second for one team and Archibald at third for another. They still cannot figure out some of the basic language of the game, but they have got the idea, and before the day was over that low cricket swing had been changed into a flat baseball swing, and they were both able to pick off a hit or two. It certainly doesn't take youngsters long to become adapted to new conditions. These two little strangers have already lots of pals in Belleville.

Nazis Proclaim Complete Blockade Of the British Is.

Berlin, Aug. 17—(AP via Radio)—The German radio today announced a statement by the government in which it proclaimed "a complete blockade of the British Isles."

The German government, in a note to the government of neutral states which send vessels to Britain asked them to take action similar to that taken by the United States and Argentina by their neutrality legislation forbidding their vessels to sail in the war zone.

The broadcast claimed that a "naval war" was raging around Britain and that "every neutral vessel . . . is therefore running the risk of being destroyed."

It said the German government will decline responsibility for any damage "to vessels or persons in this region."

A communique listed what it called "illegal acts" by Britain on the seas.

"Germany is convinced that with announcement of a total blockade of the British Island she is taking another decisive step toward ending the war and removal of the responsible contemporary British rulers," the statement said.

German forces will "utilize fully" their strategic position from the Bay of Biscay to the north cape of Norway, it was stated.

The German note was sent to all neutral countries except Argentina and the United States, asking them to forbid heir ships to sail into the war zone. The United States and Argentina were excepted because they have already barred their ships from the war zone by neutrality legislation.

The communique said German warplanes will attack "every ship" entering the war zone. "Any neutral ship," it said, "which in future sails these regions is exposed to the danger of destruction."

"Therefore," it continued, "the Reichs Government, in the future and without exception, declines responsibility for any damage inflicted upon ships or persons in these regions."

3,000 Soldiers Arrive in Petawawa

Pembroke, Ont., Aug. 19—(CP) — More than 3,000 soldiers from a dozen non-permanent active militia regiments of the Ottawa and district arrived at nearby Petawawa military camp Sunday for two weeks training.

Mayor C. G. MacOdrum of Brockville, Ont., and George T. Fulford, Liberal member of parliament for Leeds, were among the group which also included several well-known athletes. These included Tony Golab and Orville Burke, of Ottawa Righ Riders football team and Ken Kilrea, Frank Boucher, Gordie Bruce, Bill Cowley and Sandy Ross, professional hockey players.

ALL OF BRITAIN DEFENCE AREA

Step Necessary as "Precautionary Measure" Says Minister of Home Security

London, Aug. 19—(CP)— The Ministry of Home Security today made all of Great Britain a defence area. A communique said the order, "a precautionary measure," "enables any measures which might become urgently necessary through enemy landing by air or sea to be introduced without delay in any part of the country in which they are required.

Regional commissioners for England, Wales and Scotland will have authority, "subject to control and direction of the Ministry of Home Security, to issue directions or orders required for the purposes of defence within their respective area.

"The commissioners will act in close cooperation with the military authorities."

The new order places no fresh restrictions on public freedom.

The Stars Say

For Monday, August 19

MONDAY'S Astralogical forecast is for a day of splendid opportunity for launching and financing practical and sound propositions on which constructive thought, much labor and commonsense have been systematically applied. Large interests will be attracted, but be careful as to what strangers may be anxious to cooperate. Friendship, love, domestic and social life are imoprtant.

Those whose birthday it is have a beckoning year of opportunity for sounding out long-worked-out theories and practical propositions. Capital is ready for promotion for all meritorious projects, but be wise with certain strange interests eager to lend surprising support. A year rich and felicitious for domestic, social and romantic life. Marriage is imminent.

A child born on this day should be practical, industrious, steady and ambitious, attracting support for sound proposals, although subject to dangers from peculiar sources. Its private affairs will be most happy.

WINDSORS ARRIVE AT THE BAHAMAS

Cheering Crowds Welcome New Governor When He Lands at Dock

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 17. — (AP)—The Duke of Windsor landed here today and went to the Legislative Council Chambers for ceremonies which will make the former King the Governor of this picturesque Crown colony in the British West Indies.

A cheering crowd thronged the waterfront and officials and their wives were at the dock as the Duke, in the uniform of a major general, came down the gangplank of the ship that brought him from Bermuda.

The Duchess of Windsor, dressed in dark blue followed. She was presented with a bouquet as the officials were introduced.

Thousands of residents and visitors gave the new Governor and his wife an ovation as the couple walked the short distance down a flag-decked street to the Chambers.

It is the second assignment for the Duke since he returned to Britain at the beginning of the war for the first time since his abdication in December, 1936. He served also as a liaison officer between the British and French armies.

The voyage here brought the Duchess, the former Wallis Warfield, nearer the United States than she has been since she left eight years ago and became a member of fashionable circles at London, where she and the Duke began the friendship that led to their marriage.

The Duke's new domain consists of 20 inhabited islands with a population of about 68,000 persons. Nassau, the capital is a favorite of winter tourists.

WORLD OFFENSIVE AIM OF BRITAIN

Ground Plan of Future Production Activity is Drawn on This Assumption, Says Morrison

London, Aug. 19—(CP)—Britain is preparing her armed forces vigorously for a world offensive, Supply Minister Herbert Morrison said in a speech Sunday.

"The ground plan of our future production activity is drawn on the assumption that our task will be a world offensive when the moment comes," he said.

"Once the immediate peril of these next few days or weeks has passed, we shall all of us together be able to look forward to a steadily mounting tally of armed might and striking power."

Mr. Morrison said the equipment of British forces is not yet "fully satisfactory," but added that the army has sufficient weapons to "perform its immediate task successfully even if the call should come tonight."

Three months ago, he explained, Britain was in "great peril," but since then a "transformation" had taken place.

Mr. Morrison said the Supply Ministry's annual turnover in raw materials amounted to well over $800,000,000 and added:

"Within recent months the total has begun to be swelled by very substantial purchases of finished steel made by the Ministry from America."

That steel, he said, is "one more extremely important contribution" which the United States is making to the British war effort.

LOCAL VETERAN FOUND DROWNED

George Duby, Belleville, Discovered in Water Near C.P.R. Bridge Early Sunday Morning

Believed to have fallen from the Canadian Pacific Railway Bridge George Duby, 56, residing on the Trent Road, was found drowned in the shallow waters of the Moira River about 8.30 Sunday morning.

The body was discovered lying face downward in approximately three feet of water. The deceased was last seen crossing the bridge at 9.30 Saturday night. Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson, wso investigated the circumstances, said that no inquest was necessary.

Duby, is said to have been a war veteran, and served with the 80th batallion, C.E.F. He joined the 72 Regt. Royal Highlanders of Canada.

He is thought by police to have fallen from the bridge to the shallow water directly beneath. Police Constable Horace Wright investigated.

Sidelights of Sunday's Raids

(By J. F. Sanderson Canadian Press Staff Writer).

London, Aug. 19 CP-Cable) — Sidelights on Sunday's air raids in which Germans lost at least 140 planes:

During a dog fight over Kent a Dornier was forced down almost to ground level by two British fighters and crashed in the garden to the rear of a house. A man saw the bomber falling towards him and ran. It hit the ground and burst into flames killing its three-man crew . . .

A second Dornier was shot down in a field. It killed two cows, fired poultry houses, and then exploded, hurling wreckage over seven adjoining fields . . .

The sky over a Sussex town this evening was filled with about 100 German bombers. British fighters swarmed to the attack, sending a twin-engined Messerschmitt crashing into a sandpit, another into the sea. The Germans fled . . .

Crows, ignoring the appeals of wardens, clustered in the doorways of Sussex district to watch the battles and cheered wildly as the first German machine screamed earthward. Five Nazi machines were reported shot down in this area . . .

Forty dive bombers attacked a southeast airdrome during the afternoon. They scored a direct hit on a section bordering the airdrome killing a farm labourer in the passage of his house although his wife and children in the kitchen escaped unhurt .. .. ..

An eye-witness in one section of the southeast watched 50 Nazis battling a smaller force of British planes which nevertheless played havoc with the Germans. Only 22 managed to dive to drop their bombs. Most of these were brought down. . .

Four German planes, apparently in difficulties, flew so low over a southeast village that one struck a chimney, the impact dislodging a bomb which wrecked adjoining shops. An elderly woman was buried under the ruins but was rescued suffering only from slight shock and slight injuries . . .

At least three of 89 raiders attacking the Thames Estuary were downed . . . At the height of the raid authorities had almost to plead with people to take cover . . .

Raiders flying high over one London suburb dropped bombs two of which fell in the suburb's main shopping centre . . .

More than a score of bombs fell in one homlet in the southeast. An eye-witness said the Germans turned away after the fighters went up but left a trail of bombs across the village and adjoining fields. Several persons in a pub overlooking the village green were injured, when a bomb exploded in a road nearby firing six parked cars.

London, Aug. 19—(CP Cable) — The girl was waiting for her boy friend, one of the Royal Air Force men who have a continual rendezvous with death in the skies.

She waited for him near an airdrome in southeast England. Death had a rendezvous with her. A bomb landed nearby killing her.

Somewhere in southeast England, Aug. 19—(CP Cable)—A Canadian soldier refused to take shelter here Sunday and was a thrilled spectator of a dogfight.

"Oh boy this is great," he said when it was all over. "Did they just give the Germans hell. When I get back to my butter-making job in Ontario I'll tell my mates the Royal Air Force here ought to have jam as well as butter. They take the cake."

Little Benny's Note Book

I was downtown with ma and almost every block there was a lady dressed like a nurse standing behind a little table with a sign saying Buy a Feed the Hungry Button, No Payment Too Large and None Too Small, and ma said, Those tables are acting on my conscience, I think I'll buy a button at the next one.

Wich she did, paying a half a doller for it, being a red button saying on it Feed The Hungry, and I said, Do you want me to wear it, ma?

If you want to wear one dont you think it would be more to the point if you bought it yourself? ma said, and I said, Well G, ma, what point?

The point that you have actually earned the right to wear it by giving up something of your own, ma said, and I said, Well jimminy, ma, all I've got to give up is a cent.

That's quite enough, didn't the sign say No Payment Too Small? ma said. I assure you if you give your cent in the proper spirit you'll feel richer instead of poorer, she said, and I said, Did you feel richer after you gave a half a doller?

I most certainly did, ma said, and I said, But do you still feel that way? and she said, I most certainly do, and I said, I'll buy a button with my cent at the next table.

Wich I did, and I pinned it on me, and ma said, How do you feel now? and I said, Well, the button seems to make me feel richer, but not having a cent seems to make me feel poorer.

That's entirely the wrong spirit, ma said. Now what you ought to do is give that button back at the next table to be sold over again, and then you'll really have the feeling of sacrificing something, she said, and I said, Well will that make me feel richer?

In the true sense, yes, ma said, and I said, Well in case it dont will you give me another cent?

Ma claiming she wouldn't, so I decided to keep the button at least till I'm sure how I actually feel.

U.K. OFFERS U.S. DEFENCE BASES ON 99-YR. LEASE

Britain Will Refuse to Lift Blockade of Europe, Churchill Tells Commons

British Airplane Output Exceeds That of Germany

War's Consequences Vast—Casualties Far Less in Modern Type Of War—Churchill Full of Confidence

(By J. F. Sanderson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 20—(CP Cable)—Britain will offer the United States 99-year leases on air and naval defence bases in Newfoundland and the British West Indies, Prime Minister Churchill announced today in the House of Commons.

Transfer of Sovereignty of Colonies

There will be no transfer of sovereignty nor action taken against the wishes of the colonies concerned, but "His Majesty's Government is entirely willing to accord defence facilities to the United States on a 99-year leasehold basis, and we feel sure our interests no less than theirs and the interests of the colonies themselves and of Canada and Newfoundland will be served thereby," the Prime Minister said.

Mr. Churchill made the announcement during an hour's review of the war in which he said Britain must refuse all suggestions to lift the blockade of Europe in order to feed the people of German-occupied countries.

Responsibility is Germany's

The responsibility for feeding the people of such countries is Germany's, he said, because the Nazis claimed to possess sufficient food for themselves and had robbed those countries of their reserves.

But Britain, he emphasized, is ready to arrange in advance for food reserves to be sent to "any part of the enslaved area when this part has been wholly cleared of German forces," and has genuinely regained its freedom.

He added with emphasis that this offer of immediate food, freedom and peace once the Nazis' power has been shattered is open to the people of Germany and Austria.

Britain Infinitely Stronger

Mr. Churchill declared that Britain is infinitely stronger today than ever before. The army is bigger and the navy is bigger.

But we expressed hope that "our friends across the ocean will send us timely reinforcements to bridge the gap between the peace flotillas of 1939 and the war flotillas of 1941."

This was taken as a reference to British requests that the United States sell her 50 overage destroyers which would be useful for convoy work and other operations which have strained the energies of British destroyer fleet.

Touching on the air battle over Britain, Mr. Churchill said:

Able to Continue Struggle in Air Indefinitely

"We hope and believe we shall be able to continue the struggle indefinitely and as long as the enemy pleases, and the longer it continues the more rapid will be our approach first towards that parity and then to that of superiority in the air upon which in a large measure the decision of the war depends."

Britain, the Prime Minister declared, has more fighters more bombers, than ever before and in new production of aircraft is ahead of Germany.

Some months ago, he said, Britain came to the conclusion that the interests of the United States and the British Empire both required that the United States should have facilities for naval and air defence of the western hemisphere against attack by Nazi power.

Britain to Offer Defence Facilities

"We have therefore decided spontaneously and without being asked or offered any inducement to inform the government of the United States that we should be glad to place such defence facilities at their disposal by leasing suitable sites in our transatlantic possessions for their greater security against the unmeasured dangers of the future.

"Presently we learned that anxiety is also felt in the United States about the air and naval defence of their Atlantic seaboard and President Roosevelt has made it clear that he would like to discuss with us and with the Dominion of Canada and with Newfoundland the development of American naval and air facilities in Newfoundland and in the West Indies. . . .

"Undoubtedly this process means that these two great organizations of English-speaking democracies, the British Empire and the United States, will have to be somewhat mixed together in some of their affairs for mutual and general advantage.

"For my part, looking out upon the future, I do not view the process with any misgivings.

"I could not stop it if I wished . . . like the Mississipi it just keeps rolling along. Let it roll. Let it roll fullflood, inexorable, irresistable, benignant, to broader lands and better days."

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

The sun and air movement! If it were not for the sun's heat the earth's atmosphere would rest quietly on its surface simply whirling around with it. There would be no wind, no changing weather, and therefore no seasons. All the atmospheric phenomena with which we are familiar are due entirely to the effect of the sun's heat. Thus the warmed air at the equator rises and flows north and the cold air at the poles flows south. Since air movement depends upon differences in temperature, it should be least in summer and most in winter. In many places, the present month of August is noted as a quiet month

German Escapee From Prison Camp Believed Surrounded In Wooded Area

Somewhere in Ontario, Aug. 20—(CP) The 28-year-old German prisoner-of-war who escaped from an internment camp early Monday was believed this afternoon to have been virtually surrounded in a small wooded area seven miles from the camp.

A force of home guards directed by Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers and Provinial policemen was closing in on the area while an airplane circled overhead seeking some trace of the fugitive.

A Provincial constable patrolling nearby highways reported seeing a man who answered the fugitive's description just before noon. This man dived from the highway into the bush as the constable stopped his car.

The constable, who sent in an immediate call for aid in the search said he was sure that the man was the missing prisoner.

TIMBERED TUNNEL

Three-Foot High Tunnel Took Months to Build Police Assert

Somewhere in Ontario, Aug. 20—(CP)—Search widened throughout Ontario today for an escaped German prisoner of war and extended to border points in the belief that he may attempt to enter the United States. No substantial clue to the prisoner's whereabouts had been reported more than 30 hours after he tunnelled his way to freedom from a closely-guarded prison camp in Northern Ontario.

Meanwhile, military authorities are investigating how a radio set described as a powerful short-wave transmitter was smuggled into the camp where an undisclosed number of Germans are interned. The transmitter was discovered last night, a few hours after W. Koche, a German officer, escaped through a 100-foot tunnel. It was hidden under the eaves of a building in which the prisoners sleep.

Koche, 28 and described as a sullen neurotic, troublesome lieutenant of the German navy, escaped at 3 o'clock Monday morning. He was not missed until Reveille was sounded at 6:30 a.m.

CANADIAN NAVY 6 TIMES STRONGER THAN YEAR AGO

Navy Minister Angus Macdonald Makes Statement in His First Press Conference

PERSONNEL 10,000

Ottawa, Aug 20—(CP)—The Canadian navy has a personnel today of nearly six times the strength it was a year ago, Navy Minister Macdonald said as he inaugurated press conferences for the Canadian navy last night.

"One year ago," he said, "the total Canadian fleet consisted of 15 vessels including a training schooner and two old mine sweepers. Today there are 120 vessels commissioned for active service. Within the coming year the number will be increased by 95, thus making a total of 215."

The navy's seven destroyers will be increased by two new ones building in England, he said, and a "mosquito fleet" consisting of small craft of the latest design, attaining a speed of as often as 48 knots and armed with torpedoes, was in process of construction. At the moment the navy consists of destroyers, armed merchant cruisers, corvettes (anti-submarine craft), mine sweepers and auxiliary craft.

Car is Overturned After Hitting Horses

Bancroft, August 20—(Special)—An accident occurred four miles north of Bancroft on Highway No. 62, Monday evening, Aug. 19th. when a car driven by William Shannick of Bancroft, collided with a horse which was running at large. Mr. Shannick was proceeding south when he overtook two horses owned by Charles Brown of Bird's Creek. The horses were going the same direction as the car, when another car approaching, frightened the horses and they turned and headed back towards the car driven by Mr. Shannick and collided with it. The car was overturned in the ditch. Mrs. Shannick, wife of the driver, received several cuts and a bad shaking up. She was taken to Bancroft by Constable Wells, who investigated the accident. The driver had no chance to avert the collision. Neither the car nor the horse were much injured.

NAZI BLITZ FAILS TO SCARE BRITONS

While Tommies look on nonchalantly, a British woman scrambles around the bottom of a great crater, made by a German bomb, in search of a fragment of the deadly missile to keep for a souvenir. Bomb fragments are much sought after by Britons, who, according to the rules, should be scared to death.

If Germans Try to Shell London With Super-Big Bertha It Would Have 'Only Nuisance Value'

German Artillery Lobbed Shells Across Channel Last Week, Doing Small Damage — It is Believed Shells Were Four-Inchers — Britain Said to Have Weapon Which Nazis Cannot Match, Should They Try to Crack British Morale by Long-Range Artillery Which Would be 'Woefully Inaccurate'

By SAM ROBERTSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 20 (CP).—A duel of long-range guns without parallel in military history, firing devastating if inaccurate barrages into the United Kingdom and the German-held territory on the other side of the narrow spit of water separating them is considered possible.

A high military source suggested today that a new phase of this unpredictable war may open soon with the Germans trying to shell London with a super-Big Bertha, set up on the French coast. It was pointed out that such fire would have "only a nuisance value".

Would Be "Woefully Inaccurate".

Germany may have a gun with a range of 100 miles but it would be "woefully inaccurate", military circles said. London is 90 miles from Calais. These sources said that from the point of view of the enemy bombers were better than long-range guns.

German artillery lobbed shells across the channel last week and did slight damage at three points along the southeast coast. It was believed the shells were four-inchers. Paradoxically no one was seriously injured when a shell penetrated a brick wall and started a fire but a shell fragment struck a man walking 100 yards from the spot. He died instantly.

British Have Matchless Weapon.

If the Germans try to crack British morale by the use of long-range artillery, which it is said would be the main purpose of such inaccurate fire, Britain holds a weapon for this sort of warfare which the Nazis could not match.

The German navy's surface fleet has not shown any desire to venture into the North Sea or the Channel, and large calibre British naval guns bombarding from these waters could pulverize the coastal belt of France and other countries dominated by the Nazis.

Britain's Mastery of the Seas Reaffirmed as Convoy Reaches Canadian Shores in Safety

Editor's note: Paris correspondent for The Canadian Press before the fall of France, Gladys M. Arnold has returned to her native Canada. She writes this story of her trip on an evacuee ship, telling of the protective work of the Royal Navy and of shipboard life.

By GLADYS M. ARNOLD
Canadian Press Correspondent

An east coast Canadian port, Aug. 20—(CP)—Great Britain's mastery of the sea was reaffirmed once again in the way our convoy sailed confidently out of a small port "somewhere in Britain" 11 days ago to arrive safely in this friendly Canadian harbor where we disembarked today.

The voyage was made over the broad expanse of the Atlantic under the vigilant, unsleeping eye of the British navy—and neither submarine, warship nor airplane of the enemy showed a menacing nose.

The convoy gathered quietly in a small seaport, which must remain nameless. The great grey mass to the left with its lifeboats hanging in two orderly rows above a mysterious heavy cord which ran the full length of the ship (protection against magnetic mines) showed darting flashes of color on the decks—the small frocks of some hundreds of British guest children for Canada going abroad under the overseas evacuation scheme. The great vessel itself does not faintly resemble the liner it was in peace time, carrying multitudes of Canadians abroad on vacation.

In front, against a radiant sky, the grey and powerful silhouette of a battleship, whose great guns pointing in all directions promised a hot reception to enemies if they be lurking behind the skyline.

Several destroyers so well camouflaged that they sink into the atmosphere at a mile's distance bustled about like faithful and anxious sheep dogs getting the ships lined up ready to move out in orderly procession while overhead several airplanes scouted about keeping a watchful eye.

Two more sister ships which at this time last year carried back and forth Canadians on holiday, came up silently. Their cargo—men? Children? Points of color suggested the latter. A dozen or so ships in all, we slipped out to sea leaving a war-darkened England, looking particularly green and unwarlike with the blue waves lapping at her shores under the cheerful brilliance of a hot August sun.

On each of the ships the routine is much the same. Strict obedience

INSPECTION MADE OF DEFENCES OF NEWFOUNDLAND

Associate Defence Minister C. G. Power and Canadian Officers Visit Ancient Colony

FIRST-HAND SURVEY

Canadian Troops Have Been in Newfoundland Since Early in War

Newfoundland Airport, Nfld., Aug. 20 (CP Cable)—High officers of Canada's fighting forces, headed by associate Defence Minister C. G. Power, began today an inspection of the defences of ancient Newfoundland, now under the protecting wing of the neighboring Dominion.

In an unprecedented visit, the Minister and key men of the land, sea and air planned a first-hand survey preliminary to a tightening of the defences of this colony, strategically located as a jumping-off spot for any invasion of the North American mainland by way of the North Atlantic.

To begin the inspection Mr. Power and most of the members of his party were to fly to this $16,000,000 airport from Botwood, 45 miles away, where they arrived last evening a day ahead of schedule. One of their first acts will be to meet Canadian air and military forces already on duty in this rugged area about 125 miles from St. John's.

Canadian Troops in Oldest Colony

The Canadians have been in this country since early in the war, manning defences that guard this valuable air development and the transAtlantic seaplane base at Botwood. These defences, Mr. Power announced recently, are to be strengthened shortly through the expenditure of around $1,000,000 by Canada.

Arrival of the Minister and his party in Newfoundland marked the second stage of a general tour of inspection of the newly-created eastern command of the Canadian Defence Department, which includes the Maritime provinces and Newfoundland.

CONSERVATIVES GAIN ONE SEAT IN BY-ELECTIONS

Miss Agnes Macphail Defeated in Saskatoon by Ald. A. H. Bence, Conservative

BREITHAUPT WINS

(By The Canadian Press)

Three by-elections yesterday filled all vacancies in the House of Commons and the only change from results of the March 26 general election was a Conservative gain. In the other contests, Liberals and Conservatives each retained a seat.

A fourth by-election scheduled for yesterday was made unnecessary by the acclamation in Kingston of Hon. Angus Macdonald Minister of National Defence for naval services.

The Conservative gain in Saskatoon where Ald. A. H. Bence won. Saskatoon voters had elected the late Rev. W. G. Brown as a United Reform candidate in a by-election last Dec 18 and also in the general election March 26.

L. O. Breithaupt, Liberal, was elected in Waterloo North yesterday, and G. Russell Boucher, Conservative, was chosen in Carleton.

5 Persons Receive Minor Injuries Near Colborne

Five persons received minor injuries and their car was badly damaged shortly after two o'clock this afternoon when the right rear tire blew out, one-half mile east of Colborne, on the automobile driven by Mrs. Josephine McCann, 8710 Radford Street, Detroit, Mich. The car, going east, rolled over and the occupants, miraculously escaping severe injuries, were only slightly cut. Mrs. McCann was uninjured while a sister and her four children were taken to a local doctor for medical treatment. The case was investigated by Traffic Officer D. W. Wilson of the Provincial Police.

British Plane Seen Close to Berlin Is German Claim

Residents Driven to Underground Shelters For Over Hour

Berlin, Aug. 20 (AP)—A British plane penetrated to within nine miles of Berlin early today, dropping flares which lighted up the surrounding countryside and causing an air raid alarm which drove residents of the capital to underground shelters for an hour and 40 minutes, German authorities said.

(There was on confirmation in London).

A second British raider was said to have reached the far western outskirts of the city.

No bombs were dropped by either plane, informed sources claimed.

It was the fourth time the capital's air raid sirens had sounded since the start of the war last September. Sounds of cannoning were audible in the city.

The point where the flares were dropping was in the vicinity of the suburb of Tegel, about nine miles north of Berlin.

There was no indication that either of the raiders had been struck by shelling.

Tegel is the site of large industrial plants.

Radio Set Found In Prison Camp A Crude Affair

Ottawa, Aug. 20 (CP)—A radio set discovered in a northern Ontario internment camp after the escape of a young German naval officer early yesterday was made chiefly from odds and ends of telephones, wire and other electrical equipment left in the basement of one of the buildings not used to house prisoners, the internment operations office here said today.

Officials surmised that essential tubes might have been smuggled into the camp in some way.

The radio, crudely made with home made batteries, may have been used for reception, an official said, but so far, government technicians have been unable to reach stations as far away as Toronto.

"Immediate objective of the prisoners appears to have been to pick up the evening news from a nearby high-powered station," he stated.

The set discovered at the camp was not yet equipped, even to send such shore-range messages, and the idea that the prisoners had been operating a "powerful transmitter," was "ridiculous," officials said.

The makeshift receiver had nothing whatever to do with the escape of the prisoner, it was stated.

FINE WEATHER AIDS HARVEST

Rain, However, Needed in Several Sections of Western Canada

Toronto, Aug. 20—(CP)—Fine weather aided the harvest generally over Ontario during the past week, but rain is needed in several sections, according to the weekly crop report of the Ontario Agricultural Department today.

Rain is particularly needed in Victoria County and Prince Edward. In Bruce, pastures in the southern part of the county are badly dried up. Recent hot dry weather has also dried up pastures in Prontenac and pastures are poor in Kenora in the north.

Milk production in Eastern Ontario is keeping up well as farmers are using after-grass for pasture, but Sudbury dairies report a slight falling-off in shipments.

In Central Ontario the majority of spring grains have been cut in Durham County, Hastings and Northumberland.

LATE BULLETINS

On England's Southeast Coast, Aug. 20 (CP).—Three waves of German planes attacked inland points in a bombing foray on southeastern England today and then roared back toward France.

Dublin, Aug. 20 (CP)—The torpedo sinking of a 5,000-ton British steamship bound to the Americas with the British war refugees, some of them en route to the United States, was disclosed today.

Seven persons were killed, survivors said, when two torpedoes struck their ship when it was two days out from a British port. The survivors were landed Sunday night at a port of northwestern Ireland by a Yugoslav steamship. The name of the British ship was not disclosed. Her destination was Jamaica.

Canberra, Aug. 20—(CP-Reuters)—W. M. Hughes, Attorney General, today described the announcement of a Canada-United States Defence Board as the first step towards closer union of the English-speaking peoples upon whom the destinies of the world depend.

RUN OVER BY MOTORBOAT

Kenora, Ont., Aug. 20—(CP)—Grace Crawford, 20, of Beaujour, Man., was in hospital here today with multiple cuts and bruises suffered yesterday when she was run over by a motorboat while swimming in the Lake of the Woods near Minaki, 20 miles north of here.

The injured girl was flown to Kenora by an Ontario Forestry branch plane.

LLOYD GEORGE FEELS EXPLOSION OF BOMBS

London, Aug. 20—(CP)—David Lloyd George, Prime Minister during the last war, said today that he was in a house last night when it was shaken by the explosion of five Nazi bombs.

JULY SALES $4,589,380

Ottawa, Aug. 20 — (CP) — July sales of war savings certificates totalled $4,589,380, bringing total sales to date to $17,284,875 it was announced today.

British Columbia again took the lead among the provinces with per capita sales of 64 cents in July, while Ontario was second with 53c.

HUNDREDS GO ASHORE FROM BIG BRITISH LINER

100 CANADIANS ABOARD

By GLADYS M. ARNOLD
Canadian Press Correspondent

An East Coast Canadian Port, Aug. 20—(CP)—Passengers streamed ashore by the hundreds from a big British liner today, but seven-pound Donald John Roney, Jr., stole the spotlight from them all.

He wasn't on the passenger list when the ship sailed from a small British port 11 days ago. He entered it only yesterday, born to Mrs. Donald John Roney, formerly of Ottawa, after the liner was well within Canadian territorial waters.

The 20-year-old mother is the wife of a Canadian soldier who is "somewhere in England" with the 1st division. She is the former Helene Irving, daughter of S. J. Irving, Ottawa.

Hundreds of British guest children came to Canada aboard the ship on which this writer travelled.

FORCED LANDING TIES UP TRAFFIC

A Royal Canadian Air Force plane that made a forced landing in a field adjacent to Highway No. 2, two miles west of the city on Sunday afternoon, put an a one-plane show that tied traffic up for some time.

The plane landed a few feet inside the fence that separates the field from the highway, and curious motorists by the score stopped to get a close-up of one of Canada's fighting machines. The plane was not damaged to any extent.

Long queues of cars lined both sides of the highway, and motorists not sufficiently interested to stop had some difficulty in getting through before police dispersed the curious crowd.

FOLDERS TO HOLD CARDS IN DEMAND

Folders to hold registration cards are in demand at the city department stores with many Front St. business places reporting a complete sell-out after only one day of registration. One manager of a local store said that his place of business sold hundreds of folders yesterday and that an order for a new stock had been made.

TOMATOES AND CORN HEAD MART OFFERINGS

Tomatoes and corn headed a rather slim list on the Belleville market on Tuesday morning with tomatoes declining further in price, selling at 25c to 30c the six-quart basket, 50c the eleven quart basket or $1.00 the hamper. Corn on the cob held steady however, selling readily at 20c the dozen.

Huckleberries in diminished quantities sold at former prices of 15c the quart, 65c the six-quart basket or $1.00 the pail while raspberries continued to be displayed at 15c the box. Shiro plums declined to 40c the basket with apples selling for 25c the six-quart basket.

Potatoes held steady at 25c the peck or at 80c the bushel while summer vegetables were to be had at usual prices.

HUCKLEBERRY SEASON ON THE DECLINE

The huckleberry season is on the decline with berries getting scarcer and scarcer according to huckleberry vendors attending Belleville market this morning. Many of the berry-pickers who make this a summer's work and camp right in the huckleberry areas for the entire season have now pulled up their camps it is reported.

While there are still quantities of berries to be found in areas far distant from the travelled highways, the distance which must be walked discourages the pickers and many have already left for their regular homes.

MAN PAYS FINE FOR HAVING LIQUOR

Appearing before Indian Agent H. M. Jones, in Deseronto yesterday, a Belleville resident was fined ten dollars and costs after being convicted on a charge of being in possession of intoxicants on an Indian Reserve, contrary to the Indian Act.

The accused was said to have been found in possession of intoxicants at Mohawk Beach. Information was laid by R.C.M.P. Constable W. M. Beatty.

$1.69 TAKEN FROM TOP OF CASH REGISTER

At least one light-fingered gentleman has proved that he is an opportunist. Last night, while Mr. W. J. Bean, fish and chip shop proprietor was negotiating a transaction for the sale of a lard-tub in the privacy of his back apartment, a man, believed to be a transient quietly removed the sum of $1.69 which lay on top of the cash-register.

The culprit who fled out the front door was described by Mr. Bean as being about 40 years of age, tall and dark and weighing about 180 pounds. He wore a dark blue suit, cap and his tie was worn loosely.

Plainclothesman Fred Isard is investigating.

Decoration Services Held at Marmora

Marmora, Aug. 20—The annual grave decoration services were held on Sunday afternoon by Marmora Branch No. 237 Canadian Legion. Members of the Legion with Home Defence recruits assembled at the Memorial Hall and led by the Bugle Band with Lieut. P. Gray in charge of the parade, they proceeded to Marmora Public School grounds where a short service was conducted by Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell who also gave an appropriate address. Rev. W. P. Fletcher, who assisted, read the special portion of the Scripture. The Sacred Heart Cemetery was then visited where graves of departed comrades were decorated with flowers and prayers were offered by Rev. Father H. J. Farrell .The Protestant Cemetery was next visited and flowers deposited in graves of departed comrades there. At both cemeteries "The Last Post" was sounded by Comrade George Brooks. The parade returned to the Memorial Hall for dismissal.

Mr. and Mrs. William Lavender and son, Ivan, visited Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Armstrong at Glammire on Sunday.

Mr. Walter Horsby spent the week-end in Peterborough.

Mrs. Douglas Jones and son, Eric, spent the weekend with friends in Peterborough.

Master Gerald Fox is spending holidays in Peterborough with his ount, Mrs. Mary Baker.

COW GIVES BIRTH TO FIVE CALVES

Melville, N.S., Aug. 20 —(CP)— Percy Fauchette's cow Susan gave birth to five calves yesterday—four heifers and a bullock. Farmers of this Cape Breton village thumbed the record books and decided Susan was the first cow on the island to have quintuplets.

One-Half Population Registered on First Day in This City

A comparative lull from Monday when Registrars and Voluntary Deputy Registrars were rushed almost off their feet trying to cope with the numbers of persons seeking registration, was experienced at every polling booth in the city of Belleville this morning, with practically all registration booths reporting "very little doing" on the second day of the National Registration.

According to a canvass of many of the polling places, approximately one half the persons to be registered in the city, visited the polls yesterday, which saw registrars working at top speed in an effort to keep ahead of the lines of persons seeking registration. At Shire Hall, 245 persons were registered, with city hall officials reporting approximately the same number, while at the Y.M.C.A. 345 were registered. Possibly the greatest rush took place at Queen Mary School, where it was reported that nearly 400 persons registered.

Very little, if any, trouble was experienced in any of the local booths with persons answering the many questions on the registration forms. Even at the Y.M.C.A. where transients, guests at local hotels, as well as many persons of foreign birth were required to register, there was no difficulty encountered. Everyone, stated officials, had their papers in order and were able to answer all questions regarding their ancestry with little delay encountered.

At the Registrar's office at Shire Hall, after the flurry of the first day of registration was over, things settled down to routine business. Further supplies were needed at many of the polling places, these being delivered, while the occasional call from volunteers offering their services was received. Calls from sick persons requiring registration at the home were being received and looked after.

Motorists Requested To Use Dim Lights Driving in City

A request to city and other motorists to use their "dim lights" while driving through city streets was sounded by Chief of Police Alex Kidd today.

"It is not necessary to use the brilliant headlights with which the modern cars are equipped while driving in the city," the Chief said, "and they are proving a decided inconvenience to other drivers and pedestrians alike."

The glare of the headlights likewise constitutes a decided accident hazard, Chief Kidd added, and city motorists can do much toward eliminating this danger by using their dim lights while driving in the city.

"If city drivers will give the police this co-operation, there would be less accidents, and potential danger to life and property," he said.

Air-Waves Tribute Paid Reg Hinckey

Air-waves tribute was paid to the ex-members of the famous Belleville Kilties Band, which toured the world over thirty years ago, and played command performances before Royalty, last night by the Toronto Symphony Band, when it played the march "Kybocema" written and decidated to them by E. R. Hinchey of this city who is rapidly gaining Dominion fame as a composer and musician

The air was played over the Mutual Broadcasting System and was heard in Canada over CBL and in a number of station in the United States.

Mr. Hinchey felt the limelight of musical fame the other day when it was announced that he had established record among Canadian composers through having nine of his arrangements and original compositions selected by the Toronto Symphony Band for their weekly radio programs.

His latest effort is a new arrangement of the patriotic song that is sweeping the civilised world. "There'll Always be an England".

$200,000 FIRE AT BRANTFORD

Two Firemen Injured When Factory of National Canned Foods, Ltd., Burns

Brantford, Ont., Aug. 20—(CP)— Damage of $200,000 resulted and two firemen were injured when an early-morning blaze today destroyed the factory of National Canned Foods, Limited, on the highway just outside Brantford.

The factory was aflame when the alarm was received and all available fire-fighting equipment was rushed from Brantford. They found the interior of the plant a mass of flames, and after the roof had burned through the flames leaped high in the air, sending showers of sparks over the neighborhood.

A row of houses nearby was endangered as several small fires started but these were quickly checked by volunteers.

Fireman John Bye of Brantford suffered a back injury in a fall and will be confined to his home for several days. Another fireman, Arthur Suddeby, had a narrow escape when a section of wall collapsed. As he ran for safety a flying brick split his helmet but he was not seriously hurt.

Firemen expected to be at the scene for the rest of the day working over the smouldering ruins. Nothing was saved from the factory and the scene was a huge mound of debris after the walls collapsed.

British Censors Allow News Cables During Air Raids

London, Aug. 20—(CP Cable) — A change in the censorship rules announced today will permit news services to cable reports when an air raid is in progress and sirens have been sounded.

Prior to a conference yesterday, correspondents had been unable to cable the fact that raids were in progress, although the news was being published in British papers.

Editorial protests were levelled against the censorship yesterday because it held up descriptions of Friday's air battles in the London area from transmission to Canada and the United States for nine hours.

IF GERMANS TRY

British sources declared it would be "much better from the point of view of the enemy" to use bombers instead of long-range guns.

One informant expressed personal belief that it also would be "silly" for the British to attempt shelling the French coast with guns from this side of the channel.

He would not say, however, whether Britain had fixed guns with sufficient range.

Cannot Produce Military Result

Declaring that shelling of Paris in the last war had "little moral effect" after the first few rounds, this source added:

"These long-range guns will not produce a military result. The effect of their fire can be observed only from airplanes which would face hostile fighters themselves."

Reports that shells as well as bombs were falling in southeast England began just a week ago, shortly after the Germans started a mass aerial attack on the south coast.

Authorities investigated, but said there was "no confirmation at all."

Householders Convinced

Householders, however, were convinced they were being bombarded by long-range guns because of large shell fragments they reported finding and also because casualties and damage occurred when there were no planes visible overhead.

Unconfirmed reports in Switzerland said the Germans had guns at Calais and Dunkerque capable of firing 40 miles—more than enough to shoot over the channel.

Three German long-range cannon in the first Great War bombarded Paris intermittently from 75 miles away for about two months early in 1918 until they were destroyed by French artillery.

HUNDREDS GO

The ship also carried 370 Newfoundland loggers returning from service in Britain with a forestry unit, 202 soldiers invalided home, 128 members of the naval and air forces, and 536 civilians, most of the latter women and children under the direction of H. J. McLean, formerly of Port Hope, Ont.

100 Canadian Children

More than 100 of the Canadian children coming ashore today were as eager as the small Britishers to see Canada for the first time. They had been born in Scotland, England, France, Belgium and other countries to Canadian globe-trotting parents, and they crowded the rails to catch a first glimpse of the legendary Canada that had lived only in their imaginations.

Life aboard the ship centered about the children. In charge of the Canadian party with Mr. McLean was D. I. Siegel, who has been an exchange teacher in England and comes from Toronto. Both return with foreign-born wives. Mrs. McLean is an Argentine cantaprice who was to sing in the Paris opera this autumn; Mrs. Siegel is English and was a member of intellifence department of the B.B.C.

Special Concerts.

Special concerts were arranged by the children themselves. An early curfew, rest periods, games periods and special attention to the diet was observed so that the cases of seasickness were rare. The crew also arranged special concerts and competitions for the amusement of the children.

Work of the foster mothers was admirably handled so that before many days the children were calling their guardians "auntie" or "mummie".

Among the passengers were personal stories of courage, sacrifice and hardship. There was one soldier with a special badge on his sleeve which means "Dunkerque", and his story needs no more explanation—for as someone in England said, "all those who were there were heroes".

There was the woman returning with her two-year-old baby. Her husband has been missing—a R.A.F. pilot—since July 15. His brother is a prisoner in Germany. "I'm going home because he asked me to and I am sure it is his wish," said the young wife simply, "although it is heart-breaking to leave without news. But I am sure he is alive. I shall hear from him some day."

The children were glad to be back among the lights again. "Where there's lights in the street and you don't have to sit in a shelter all night," said one. "It's good to get home—I'm going to see my home town now,' said 10-year-old Kenneth Kirkley of Winnipeg.

Vatican City, Aug. 20 —(AP)— Batican authorities announced today that Pope Pius XII would broadcast a missionary message to North America Oct. 17, on the eve of a day dedicated to Catholic missions throughout the world.

Police Blotter

Two motor car accidents marred the peace of the city last night and one man will face charges following a breach of the Highway Traffic Act.

Fender and running-board damage was done to two Belleville cars at the Front and Bridge Street intersections, when they partially collided during a change of traffic signals. The damage was settled amicably among the parties involved and both were allowed to proceed by investigating Plainclothesman Fred Isard.

Failure to stop at the Victoria Avenue-John Street intersection shortly after eight o'clock last night not only caused damage to two cars but brought a H.T.A. charge against William Irwin, R.C.A.F., Trenton.

Irwin, according to police, drove out of John Street and failed to stop. A car driven by George Digby, this city, proceeding along the avenue, swerved in an attempt to avoid a collision, but the Irwin car struck it before he could get out of the way. The Irwin car skidded 20 feet before the impact. Police Constable Horace Wright investigated.

Fifty miles an hour through city streets is too fast for even an out-of-town visitor. Consequently a Tweed resident paid the conventional speeding fine after being apprehended by Traffic Officer Douglas Ellis while "doing 50" along West Bridge Street.

Spinners, Weavers on Job

Campbellford, Ont., Aug. 20— (CP)—Spinners and weavers were back on the job at the Campbellford Cloth Company's mill today after a walkout a week ago in their demands for wage increases. They accepted suggestions of a Federal Labor Department concilator who promised that a full investigation would be made of their demands.

The War This Week

By GUY BROADES

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Prime Minister Winston Churchill today told an eager House of Commons Britain's aircraft production now exceeds that of Germany, and almost as he spoke the fleet air arm and the Royal Air Force struck new hammer blows at the Nazis.

In a speech that rang with confidence the prime minister looked toward the day when Britain, no longer having to defend her shores and possessions, will carry the war to the enemy with "heavy and unexpected blows".

Such a blow fell today on the Nazi-held port of Haugesund, midway between Stavanger and Bergen on the Norwegian west coast, where Skua dive bombers of the fleet air arm blasted two 3,000-ton German transports.

Blows On Nazi-Held Channel.

German-held channel ports felt such blows last night and this morning in Royal Air Force raids which lighted the skies with fire. Germans in Berlin crouched in their air raid shelters for an hour and forty minutes while R.A.F. bombers ranged around the city.

Mr. Churchill made it clear that Britain will not ease the blockade which bars food supplies from reaching the German-dominated continent and said that if people in those areas go hungry this winter it will be because Germany has taken their food or has failed to distribute it [illegible].

Bigger Operations Impend in Middle East

The Prime Minister referred to the [illegible] in the Middle East where, he said, "far bigger operations are impending" than have taken place so far in Somaliland, Libya and on the borders of Kenya and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

Meanwhile Italian troops marched into Berbera, British Somaliland capital, after British troops withdrew, firing the town, destroying such supplies as they could not take with them and abandoning the heat-ridden country to the Italians whom they can shell almost at will from the Gulf of Aden and the Straits of Bab El Mandeb.

Defection of France Blow in Africa

The Prime Minister said defection of the French was a severe blow to British efforts in Africa. He declared that had Britain been placed in the position similar to that of France, "it would have been the duty of all war leaders to fight on here (in Britain) to the end; it would have also been their duty to provide as far as possible for the naval security of Canada and our Dominions and to make sure that they had the means to carry on the struggle beyond the oceans."

While Mr. Churchill spoke of the struggle beyond the seas Lord Caldecote told the House of Lords the British government was ready to lease to the United States for long terms naval bases in British possessions of the western hemisphere.

Thus another step in the mutual defence aims of the Americas appeared in the offing, following Canada's agreement Saturday with the United States to appoint a permanent consultative committee of officers from both countries to study defence needs of the northern part of the continent.

BRITISH AIRPLANE

Declines To Speculate About Terms.

Mr. Churchill declined to speculate about what terms Britain would demand from a beaten Germany "to spare mankind the miseries of a third world war".

"We are still toiling up the hill," he declared, "we have not yet reached the crestline."

He explained, even before the start of the war no prolonged defence in Somaliland was contemplated. The British troops in Somaliland, he said, were withdrawn "virtually intact" to fight elsewhere.

He warned that bigger operations are coming in the middle east.

As for Britain, he insisted, "invasion becomes much more difficult week by week."

In a calmly-confident war statement to the House of Commons, his first in more than a month, he placed total British dead, wounded and missing at 92,000 in this war and summoned the empire to prepare for the "campaigns of 1941 and 1942".

The prime minister, jeering at Hitler's proclaimed total blockade of England, declared bluntly that no food would be allowed to reach any country which has fallen to Hitler. He said he regretted that he had to refuse American requests that food be allowed to go to the people of France, Belgium and Holland.

Sure of Ourselves and Our Cause.

"We are sure of ourselves and our cause," said the prime minister, and he declared that, with control of the seas and the friendship of the United States, Britain can "draw resources from the whole world."

Two or three years mean nothing in the life of a nation, he said and, be the road "long or short, rough or smooth, we mean to reach our journey's end."

He based his refusal to allow food to pass the British blockade on the premise it would only "prolong the agony of all Europe".

Then, somberly, he reviewed this summer's "cataract of disaster", warned that "The Puppet Government" of France may be forced to become Britain's foe at any moment and declared that all the ports "for the North Cape to the Spanish frontier" might be used for an invasion of Britain.

Yet, he said, immense amounts of munitions from the United States had been landed in England "without the loss of a gun or a round" of ammunition and he predicted that Britain eventually would get superiority in the air.

Until that time he declared Britain will keep on fighting Germany in the air "indefinitely and as long as the enemy pleases".

Mr. Churchill said about 92,000 Britons have been killed, wounded or missing, including civilians, in this war, as compared with the "prodigious slaughter" of the last war.

Conflict of millions of men against masses of steel has been replaced by combat of strategy, organization of technical apparatus, science, mechanics and morale, he said.

He said British casualties in the first year of the first Great War amounted to 365,000.

"In this war, I am thankful to say, British killed, wounded, prisoners and missing, including civilians, are about 92,000. But of these a large proportion are alive as prisoners of war."

Consequences 'More Deadly'

Despite the diminution in casualties, Mr. Churchill said the "consequences to the belligerents have been even more deadly" than in the last war.

"We have seen great countries with powerful armies dashed out of coherent existence in a few weeks," he said.

"Although up to the present the loss of life has been mercifully diminished, the decisions reached in the course of the struggle are even more profound upon the fate of nations than anything which has happened since barbaric times."

The Prime Minister, in his eighth war review, repeated that "we must prepare for the campaign of 1941 and 1942."

Loud cheers greeted his announcement that Britain will maintain "a strict blockade of Germany, Italy, France and every other country that has fallen into the hands of "Germany.'

"We must refuse to allow food to be passed through the blockade." he said.

Britain and Modern War.

Mr. Churchill said there seemed to be every reason to believe that modern war, involving whole populations, is "well suited to the genius and the resource of the British nation and empire, and that once we get properly equipped and properly started a war of this kind will be more favorable to us than the sombre mass slaughters of the Somme and Paschendaele."

"Our offensive springs are slowly being compressed, and we must resolutely and methodically prepare ourselves for the campaigns of 1941 and 1942," he said.

Command of the sea and "the friendship of the United States", he added, "enables us to draw resources from the whole world."

Two or three years "are nothing in the history of a nation", he said, "and when we have the honor to be the sole champion of the liberties of all Europe we must not grudge these years or weary as we toil and struggle through them.

"The road to victory may not be so long as we expect but we have no right to count upon this. Be it long or short, rough or smooth, we mean to reach our journey's end."

Laughs At Nazi Blockade.

Mr. Churchill laughed at Hitler's blockade of Britain, saying:

"No one can complain of that. I remember the kaiser doing that in the last war."

Allowing food to reach the Nazis would "prolong the agony of all Europe," he said, expressing regret that "we must refuse requests that food should pass the blockade such as Mr. Hoover's plan for relieving France, Belgium and Holland."

Germany found vast stores of food in each country overrun, Mr. Churchill said, "and if all this food is not available now, it can only be because it has been removed to feed the people of Germany.

"The only agencies which could create famine in any part of Europe during the coming winter would be German exactions or German failure to distribute the supplies they command."

"Let Herr Hitler bear his responsibilities to the full and let the peoples of Europe who groan beneath his yoke aid in every way the coming of the day when it will be broken," he said

"We can arrange in advance for the speedy entry of food into any part of the enslaved area when this part has been wholly cleared of German forces and has genuinely regained its freedom.

Encourage Resources of Food

"We shall do our best to encourage the building up of reserves of food all over the world so that there will always be held before the eyes of the peoples of Europe including—I say it deliberately—the German and Austrian peoples the certainty that the shattering of Nazi power will bring to them all immediate food, freedom and peace."

Declaring the people had a right to know there were "solid grounds" for his confidence, Mr. Churchill said:

"The enemy are still far more numerous than we in the air but our new production exceeds his largely."

Reviews Cataract of Disaster

Reviewing "the cataract of disaster" of the last few months, he said the puppet government at Vichy "may at any moment be forced to become our foe" and all the ports from the north cape, in Northern Norway, to the Spanish frontier are 'potential springboards' for a German invasion.

Although "American production is only just beginning to flow in." British "bomber and fighter strength despite the battle is larger than ever."

Able to Continue Fight Indefinitely

"We hope and believe that we shall be able to continue the air struggle indefinitely and as long as the enemy pleases and the longer it continues the more rapid will be our approach, first towards parity and then towards that superiority in the air upon which in a large measure the decision of the war depends," Mr. Churchill continued.

(At the same time, Dominion's Secretary, Lord Caldecote, told the House of Lords, Britain had lost since Aug. 8th, 94 fighter pilots and 153 fighter planes as against Germany's loss of 699 bombers and fighters.

Vast Masses of Munitions Sent Without Loss

Immense masses of munitions ferried across the Atlantic from the United States, Mr. Churchill said, include "cannon, rifles, machine guns, cartridges, and shells, all safely landed without the loss of a gun or a round."

Merchant tonnage under the British flag, he added, "is larger than when we began."

"The whole British army is at home More than 2,000,000 determined men have rifles and bayonets in their hands, and three quarters of them are in regular military formations."

British foods stocks "of all kinds are many times as great as in the days of peace", Mr. Churchill declared.

Lauding Britain's airmen, Mr. Churchill said "never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few."

British bombing squadrons, Mr. Churchill said, are inflicting "shattering blows upon the whole technical and war-making structure of the Nazi power."

"Even if the Nazi legions stood triumphant on the Black Sea or, indeed, upon the Caspian, even if Hitler was at the gates of India it would benefit him nothing if at the same time the entire economic and scientific apparatus of German war power lay shattered and pulverized at home."

Mr. Churchill said "it is quite plain Hitler could not admit defeat in his air attack on Britain without most serious injury".

British 'Air' Increase Astounding.

He said Britain has "overflowing reserves of every type of aircraft and an ever mounting stream of production" because of "the astounding increase" in output and repair under Lord Beaverbrook, the minister of aircraft production.

Turning to Italy's African drive, the Prime Minister said the French defection had been "deeply damaging" in the defence of British Somaliland now in Italian hands.

France Might Have Fought On

France might have fought on. he said.

"If we had been put in the terrible position of France, how happily impossible, it would have been the duty of all war leaders to fight on here to the end: It would have also been their duty to provide as far as possible for the naval security of Canada and our Dominions and to make sure that they had the means to carry on the tsruggle beyond the oceans. . . .

"That France lies prostrate at this moment is the crime not of a great and noble nation. Our old comradeship with France is not at an end

Foresees France Restored

"The day will come as surely as the sun will rise tomorrow when again there will be a France restored in a liberated Europe to its full freedom and ancient fame".

Besides Frenchmen still fighting with Britain, he said, Czechs, Poles, Norwegians Netherlanders and Belgians also "are still in the field, recognized by Great Britain and the United States as the sole representative authorities and lawful governments of their respective States".

Mr. Churchill did not discuss Britain's peace aims further than to say:

"I do not think it would be wise at this moment while the battle rages and the war is still perhaps only in its earlier stages to embark upon elaborate speculation about the future shape which should be given to Europe or the new securities which must be arranged to spare mankind the miseries of a third World War.

Nazi Tyranny Must Be Finally Broken

"Before we can undertake the task of rebuilding we have not only to be convinced ourselves but to convince all other countries that the Nazi tryanny is going to be finally broken.

"The right to guide the course of world history is the noblest prize of victory. We are still toiling up the hill. We have not yet reached the crestline. We cannot survive the landscape or even imagine what its condition will be when that longed for morning comes."

Discounts Loss of Somaliland

Discounting the loss of British Somaliland Mr. Churchill said "it had been decided sometime before the beginning of the war not to defend the protectorate" and the British troops were withdrawn "virtually intact for action elsewhere".

Of the 99-year leases on the naval bases for the United States, he said:

"Undoubtedly this process means that these two great organizations of the English speaking democracies, the British Empire and the United States, will have to be somewhat mixed up together in some of their affairs for mutual and general advantage.

"For my own part looking out upon the future I do not view the process with any misgivings.

"I could not stop it if I wished. No one can stop it. Like the Mississippi it just keeps rolling along. Let it roll (cheers) let it roll on fullflood inexorable irresistible, to broader lands and better days."

Slaughter But Fraction.

Comparing the casualties of the first great war with those of the current conflict, Mr. Churchill said the slaughter is but a fraction, but the consequences to the belligerents have been even more deadly.

"We have seen great countries with powerful armies dashed out of coherent existence in a few weeks," he continued.

"The entire body—it might almost seem at times the soul—of France has succumbed to physical effects incomparably less terrible than those which were sustained with fortitude and undaunted willpower 25 years ago.

"Although up to the present the loss of life has been mercifully diminished the decisions reached in the course of the struggle are even more profound upon the fate of nations than anything which has ever happened since barbaric times.

Modern Warfare.

"Moves are made upon scientific and strategic boards, advantages are gained by mechanical means as the result of which scores of millions of men become incapable of further resistance or judge themselves incapable of further resistance and a fearful game of chess proceeds from check to mate by which the unhappy players seem to be inexorably bound.

"There is another and far more obvious difference from 1914. The whole of the warring nations are involved—not only soldiers, but the entire population; men, women and children.

"The fronts are everywhere. The trenches are dug in the towns and the streets. Every village is fortified. Every road is barred.

Future More Favorable.

"There seems to be every reason to believe that this new kind of war is well suited to the genius and resources of the British nation and empire, and that once we get properly equipped and properly started a war of this kind will be more favorable to us than the sombre mass slaughters of the Somme and Passchendaele.

"If it is a case of whole nations fighting and suffering together, that ought to suit us, too, because we are the most united of all the nations. Because we entered the war upon the national will and with our eyes open, because we have been nursed in freedom and individual responsibility and are the products, not of totalitarian uniformity, but of tolerance and variety.

"Since the Germans drove out the Jews and lowered their technical standards, our science is definitely ahead of theirs."

Britain Determined And Able

Mr. Churchill said one of the ways to bring the war to a speedy end is to convince Germany, not by words but by deeds, that Britain has both the will and the means not only to go on indefinitely but to strike heavy and unexpected blows.

In rejecting proposals, founded on the highest motives, that food should be allowed to pass the blockade for relief of subjugated peoples in Europe, Mr. Churchill said the Nazis have repeatedly stated they possess ample reserves of food to feed their captive peoples.

But there was another aspect, he declared.

"Many of the most valuable foods are essential to the manufacture of vital war materials. Fats are used to make explosives, potatoes to make the alcohol for motor spirit. The plastic materials now so largely used for aircraft construction are made of milk.

"If the Germans use these commodities to help them bomb our women and children, rather than to feed the populations who produce them, we may be sure that any imported food would go the same way, directly or indirectly, or be employed to relieve the enemy of the responsibilities he has assumed."

'Cataract of Disaster'

"Rather more than a quarter of a year has passed since the new government came into power in this country. What a cataract of disaster has poured out upon us since then!

"The trustful Dutch overwhelmed, their beloved and respected sovereign driven into exile, the peaceful city of Rotterdam the scene of a massacre as hideous as anything in the 30 years war, Belgium invaded and beaten down, our own fine expeditionary force, which King Leopold called to his rescue, cut off and almost captured, escaping as it seemed only by a miracle and with the loss of all its equipment; our Ally France out, Italy in against us.

"All France in the power of the enemy all its arsenals and vast masses of military material converted to the enemy's use; a puppet government set up at Vichy which may at any moment be forced to become our foe; the whole western seaboard of Europe from the North Cape to the Spanish frontier, in German hands; all the ports, all the airfields upon this immense front employed against us as potential springboards of invasion.

"If we had been confronted at the beginning of May with such a prospect it would have seemed incredible that at this point of a period of horror and disaster we should stand erect sure of ourselves, masters of our fate and with the conviction of final victory burning unquenchable in our hearts.

"Few would have believed we could survive; none would have believed that we should today not only feel stronger, but should actually be stronger, than we have ever been before.

Britain and Empire Undismayed

"Let us see what has happened on the other side of the scales' The British Nation and the British Empire, finding themselves alone, stood undismayed against disaster. No one flinched or wavered; nay, some who formerly thought of peace now think only of war. Our people are united and resolved as they have never been before.

"Death and ruin have become small things compared with the shame of defeat or failure in duty. We are sure of ourselves and of our cause. Here, then, is the supreme fact.

HISTORY MADE AT OGDENSBURG MEETING OF PRESIDENT AND PREMIER

History was made at Ogdensburg, N.Y., when President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Premier Mackenzie King held a four-hour conference and agreed to form a joint board for mutual defence of Canada and the United States. President Roosevelt, Premier King and U.S. Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, are shown, RIGHT, in the President's car following the conference. Commander-in-Chief of the armies of the United States, President Roosevelt was in New York state to inspect 90,000 troops engaged in the nation's biggest peacetime war manoeuvres. PROTECTION AGAINST AGGRESSION

A sign of the times, evidence of a healthy view throughout the world; is seen in the announcement that Canada and the United States have agreed upon the formation of a defence board to go into all matters of defences of the two nations on land, in the air and on the sea. Time is making vast changes in the world, even faster than those passing changes which were made by Hitlerian aggression. Democracy is freedom. It is not like nazism and fascism with their plotting. It has a note of confidence. Democracy may be weaker in facing the beginning of a crisis but beyond that it has sources of strength that only democracies can know. Hitler will some day find that to his regret. Today the world sees a demonstration of New World nations drawing together—Canada and the United States taking a united stand to repel any threat to the security of the two nations.

What could a Hitler, ignorant of the finer principles which thread their way through democracies, know of such an event to be? He only knows aggression and the sword, the bomb and slavery. He does not know the approach of friends for he has made Germany a nation without a friend. Friends come in time of danger to aid one another. On the other side is the regrettable picture of those partners, Hitler and Mussolini, who seek to grab. They are not true friends.

An outburst from Germany that the defence plan of the United States and Canada means the absorption of Canada in the United States is proof of the density of German mind on matters of this kind. But it is only German aggression speaking for it cannot understand free association of states in mutual protection.. It acts as if every nation were guided by Hun instincts.

That this agreement may lead to a complete plan for the guarantee of all the Americas from outlaw nations' depradations is said to be a possibility.

This plan is one that has the possibilities of lasting. How different from a Hitler plan which is built upon violence, rapine and speed, treachery and guile!

BLITZKRIEGERS BLITZKRIEGED

Hitler's airmen have suffered twelve days of the blitzkrieg as well as giving it and for some reason the Germans let up a bit now and then as they did Saturday and Monday.

But the British airmen let up nothing when they go after enemy military objectives as the flights into Germany and Italy reveal. The most devastating raids by the R.A.F. have been taking place during the recent nights and there is enough to satisfy everyone of the very effective character of these visits by the Britishers to the German and Italian centres of war industry and to the areas held by the nazis. Heavy smashes have been dealt at Italy on a number of occasions and the Germans have to record secretly the most heavy losses and damage to their war factories, their communications, transportation and everything that makes for warfare.

It is believed that so stinging have been the British air attacks that the industrial capacity of the western part of Germany has been reduced as much as thirty per

ALL'S WELL WITHIN FORTRESS OF BRITAIN

Twelve days and more Britons have stood within their castle walls. Their airmen, heroes of the greatest stamp, have flown over the battlements to make the threatener tremble, to drive his vultures back to the land whence they came. Hitler has not put a dint in the armor and defence of Britain.

Britons' strength is as the strength of ten because their heart is pure, but the enemy is only a bandit, a gangster with no ideals but vengeance and selfishness.

What a story of air power Britain has given because her air force is well trained and possesses the skill and courage to achieve.

GREECE IS STEADY

Greece, the friend of Britain, was the object of bitter attack in the Italian press last week. After the Helle, a Greek ship, had been sunk by some unknown submarine, two Greek destroyers were bombed by airmen and the next day Italy delivered an apology telling that the Italian fliers thought they were British ships.

Greece stands by the British guarantee of her independence and she has faith in Britain. She sees beyond the immediate weeks, something Italy did not do when Mussolini hustled her into war to help stab France in the back for Hitler's sake. That Greek wisdom is farseeing has been indicated.

Once upon a time in history, Greece, a land of small city states, wrote a saga of glory in events which have not ceased to stir the world after twenty-four or twenty-five centuries. Greece represented the great light of civilization in a form that could exercise the finest influence upon the mind of the world. Greece threw back the Persian hordes, whose civilization was of a lower order and knew not the freedom of politics and thought and the love of beauty that the Greeks cultivated. Thermopylae and Marathon are deathless names, for they live even beyond the fame of the conquests of Alexander the Great for the Greek battles were victories of civilization and liberty against force and tyranny.

Those were the days when Greece was largely the torch of knowledge, before Rome had reached her zenith.

Rome became an empire and it fell before the barbarians and Rome became a source of greater importance to the world in the days when she was low as a political power. She kept alive the lamp of faith and knowledge and gave birth to the new world of renaissance. Today Italy for the present time and for the past few years has been the victim of fascist tyranny linked with self-seeking so that now she finds herself being used as a weapon by the fascists to try and revive imperialism by methods on which true empires are not founded. Fascist critics and allegations of charges against the Greek people show the extremes to which such a group as the fascists will go. Greece has stood resolute and calm despite the agitation of the fascist press.

THOROUGHNESS AND TRUTH

British thoroughness is evident in everything which the British people do—thoroughness in their education in peace time and in war time in the training of soldiers, thoroughness of their products, shown today in the manufacture of their warplanes as contrasted with the German product. Everything Britain does is thoroughness, exactness, precision, truth.

What is the use of Germany's flimsy claims of British air and sea losses? The world knows they are worthless, just part of nazi propaganda. But British claims of German losses have never been proven to be untrue. Facts have always borne them out.

Today in reporting losses of enemy planes the British Air Ministry takes every care to prove that a foe airplane has been destroyed before it is counted. Everyone has noticed in the British reports of casualties to the nazis, there is no count given in the total losses to stories of the loss of planes which the Air Ministry has not proved. This means that the British reports are of the minimum losses to the enemy. It means the enemy losses are doubtless much greater.

This British exactness is one of the factors in this war. It is a factor which will have much to do with the final story. Exactness goes with truth.

"Rock" Will be Hard to Crack

(By General Sir Alexander Godley)

Gibraltar still remains the key of the Mediterranean.

Conditions have changed very much since I was governor there But there are certain factors which lead me to think that, in spite of all modern developments, the fortress is still a very tough nut to crack, and that there is every chance of our being able to hold it again against siege, as we did from 1779 to 1783.

Then the fortress was attacked by France and Spain. Now it will be attacked by Germany and Italy, possibly with the good will, if not the active collaboration, of non-belligerent Spain.

x x x

The factors in question may be considered from the point of view of the three elements and the three fighting services.

1. The air.—Gibraltar has already been attacked by German, Italian and French aircraft, with little result.

I believe it to be difficult for hostile aircraft to obtain good results. Our anti-aircraft defence is up-to-date and ample. The Rock presents a very small target. It is only three miles long by one mile wide, with its top, 1,400 feet, a knife-edge.

To be sure of hitting the harbor, the town, or Europa Point, the only worthwhile objectives, aeroplanes would have to fly very low.

To do this is particularly difficult and dangerous, owing to the tricky winds and innumerable air pockets which surround it.

Facilities now exist for the Royal Air Force and the Fleet Air Arm to take a hand.

2. The seas and the navy.—Now that the French fleet is practically disposed of, our naval situation in the Mediterranean would seem to be reasonably secure, and I see no reason to believe that our sea communications with the fortress can be severed.

During the great siege an attack from the Spanish coast by sea, across the bay, by "battering ships" and fire ships was repulsed with great slaughter.

3. The army and land attack.—Hitler already has large forces along the Pyrenees, the gateway to Spain, and I have seen it stated that there are large numbers of Germans in Spain posing as civilians.

But it must be remembered that the only approach to Gibraltar by land is by a very narrow isthmus. The flanks of this isthmus rest on the sea, one along the Mediterranean. The isthmus is very strongly defended with every conceivable obstacle to tanks and mechanized forces.

There is no question of turning the flanks of the defence by land. The sea flanks would be closely guarded by the Navy and the Fleet Air Arm, who would also render effective asistance to the direct defences of the fortress.

Consider now the question of the heavy artillery and gun-power of the fortress.

This is absolutely up-to-date, with the most modern armament of heavy guns, so placed as to be able to deal effectively with hostile guns emplaced either on the Spanish mainland or at Ceuta on the African coast.

During the Spanish civil war, General Franco had heavy guns installed northwest of Algeciras, in positions which were well known to the garrison of the Rock. They may be there still. If they are they are well within range of our guns.

Big and long-range hostile guns further inland in Spain, would have a nuisance value, but would not affect the security of the fortress.

This brings me to the point that, both as regards bombing from the air and shelling from the land, Gibraltar has wonderful facilities for shelter.

The Rock is honeycombed with galleries, tunnels and caves and, in the town itself, the old casemates, walls and places of arms are of great strength and solidity.

For the last two years, deep underground shelters have been dug below these, and in the Rock itself I believe there is now ample bomb-proof accommodation for the whole garrison and population of the fortress.

There remains the question of food and ammunition. There are no doubt large stores of both, and as long as we have command of the Mediterranean there is no reason to fear but that further supplies can be ensured.

The water supply is ample, and I believe that any damage done to the water-catchments can be made good by the use of wells.

x x x

The importance of the Rock goes far beyond the question of prestige. Every British child for generations has learned to regard Gibraltar as an impregnable fortress. Its downfall would be a considerable moral blow to us.

But now that Italy is in the war, there is this further point: Capture of Gibraltar by the enemy would enable Italian submarines to pass out to the Atlantic and harry the ships bringing food and supplies to the Motherland.

Now weigh up the considerations I have set down and I think you will agree with me that the Rock, if not impregnable against the modern instruments of warfare, will at least put up a prolonged fight against any attack.

So Mussolini's submarines will be bottled up in the Mediterranean for some time to come.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

August 20th, 1920.

Mr. G. G. Publow, Chief Dairy Instructor for Eastern Ontario, is inspecting a number of cheese factories in this section this week.

Miss Marion Coon of Lindsay, daughter of the Rev. C. H. Coon, President of the Bay of Quinte Methodist Conference, left yesterday for China where she will enter upon her duties as a missionary.

Captain Church has returned to the city from New York City.

Mr. Harry Dulmage of Rochester, N.Y., an old Belleville boy, is visiting friends in the city.

At the Cobourg Horse Show, Model Queen, owned by Mr. Clarence Vermilyea, won first prize in the district runabout class and also first prize in the ladies' district runabout harness or roadster class.

30 YEARS AGO

August 20th, 1910.

Mr. F. W. Lake of Kingston has invented a safety airship which promises to revolutionize aerial navigation.

Mrs. Robert Fanson of Exeter, Ontario, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Massey, Forin Street.

Major D. Barragar is spending a few days in Toronto.

Mr. Douglas Leitch, son of a former pastor of Holloway Street Methodist Church, is visiting friends in the city.

The steamers Brockville, Varuna and Aletha will from now on be a part of the fleet owned by the new company known as the Ontario and Quebec Navigation Company.

40 YEARS AGO

August 20th, 1900.

Mrs. Ed. Dame and two children of Rochester, N.Y., are visiting friends in the city.

Mr. Robert Wilson, Sr., left yesterday for Hamilton where he has accepted a position.

Mr. James Lowrie has returned home after spending the summer at Old Orchard Beach, Maine.

The Rev. T. J. Thompson, pastor of John Street Presbyterian Church, who has been spending some time in the Old Country, sailed for home on Saturday last.

Mr. William Nelson who has been in the employ of Messrs. Wallbridge & Clarke, grocers, for some years, has resigned to accept a position as traveller for a wholesale tea firm.

Mrs. R. Powell and Mrs. J. Powell left last night on the steamer North King for Rochester, enroute to Buffalo, where they will visit friends.

50 YEARS AGO

August 20th, 1890.

The crossings on Front Street are in a wretched condition owing to too much water being put on them by the sprinkler. Surely some way can be devised to avoid this nuisance.

Mr. James White of Madoc was in town today.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. B. Flint have returned home after spending some time at the 1000 Islands.

Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Armistead have returned home after visiting friends in Atwood, Ontario.

Mr. A. T. Russell and family have arrived here from Kingston to reside. Mr. Russell is employed in the G.T.R. shops.

Mr. Alfred Ellis, butcher, who left here some time ago to reside in England, has returned to Belleville.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Salt Free Diet in Diarrhoea

While the majority of people are more or less constipated, there is a large number that have a persistent diarrhoea. In some of these cases the emotions cause an irritation of the lower bowel and it is in a continuous state of slight or severe inflammation. In the slight cases there is a little mucous present and it is called mucous colitis (colon is the name of the large intestine). In the severe cases it is called ulcerative colitis because the surface lining of intestine is ulcerated.

The treatment for colitis is trying to teach the patient to acquire calmness of spirits and avoid rough foods.

However, there are some cases of diarrhoea not due to emotional disturbances. Dr. H. Salomon, Buenos Aires in the Swiss Medical Journal states that the diet treatment in these cases is avoiding foods containing salt. The following foods low in table salt are: sweetened white bread and cakes, rice, groats, prepared with water or a little milk and sugar, eggs in every form, fruits, stewed fruits, nuts almonds, puddings, tarts, sweets, ice cream, fruit juices.

The reason that salt in the food causes diarrhoea is that salt draws water from the tissues and hence the wastes in the bowel become too liquid.

A pure fruit diet, like the apple, banana, or strawberry cure, also acts firstly because it is free from salt.

The skin, containing a large amount of salt, is the principal place for salt storage.

Dr. Salomon advises that table salt should not be given by mouth. This cutting down on foods rich in salt such as crackers, eggs, all corned, pickled or salted foods, is, then, good advice for those with persistent diarrhoea to follow. However table salt is helpful for normal individuals because the body needs a large amount of water and table salt holds seventy times its weight of water in the tissues.

One other group that should avoid or cut down on table salt and salt foods are those who are overweight. Every pound of excess fat in the body holds 3 1-2 pounds of water so that fat individuals in addition to this excess water in their fat tissue, can also hold excess water in other tissues if they eat too much salty food.

No Bed of Roses

London, Aug. 20 (CP)—The crew of the minesweeping trawler Rinovia is pretty cocky. An Admiralty communique reported they shot down a German raider, thereby achieving the highest ambition of the small vessels which patrol the seas to keep Britain's ocean highways clear of mines and her harbors open to the world's commerce.

When the Rinovia's guns brought down the Nazi plane it was sweet revenge for all the strafing and bombing the minesweepers suffered at the hands of German airmen.

(Here, from the log of another minesweeper, is an idea of what a typical day at sea involves:

1 a.m.—Enemy bomber appeared from starboard. Dropped five or six bombs, some of which fell between two ships. Opened fire on the plane and compelled him to withdraw.

11 a.m.—Another enemy aircraft sighted at 4,000 feet. No bombs dropped.

1 p.m.—Enemy bombers circle around at 6,000 feet. Bombers got into position and released five or six bombs which fell fairly close and some splinters damaged our float.

Rural Honesty

There are more than 6,000,000 rural mail boxes in the United States, very few of which have locks. Yet the annual number of robberies from them is about ten. Probably the same ratio of such thefts to the total number of opportunities would prevail in Canada, says the Windsor Star.

This is just another proof of rural honesty. City dwellers are amazed at the manner in which farmers go away from their homes, without even thinking of locking the doors of the houses or other buildings. It is taken for granted that all will be safe when they return. People who live in cities will not dare, if they are wise, leave their homes unlocked.

In recent years, it is true there has been an increase in the number of robberies in farm homes. Usually, however, the culprits are either hired help who have drifted into the district, or men from urban places who use automobiles to raid farms. Very seldom is such a theft committed by a permanent resident.

Having regard for the amount of valuables on farms, in the form of livestock or other produce, it is surprising there are not a great number of robberies. The only explanation is the inherent honesty of rural people. In this respect they set a high standard which urban populations could well use as an objective.

This Madness

A letter in very few lines, which tells it all, appears in The New York Herald Tribune, called to our attention by a reader now abroad. It is written from Montreal and is as follows:

"We Must Kill Them All"

To The New York Herald Tribune:

To Americans, German actions seem impossible and unreal, because torture, robbery and murder are not a part of sane behaviour. To a young German they are.

In Canada there are German prisoners of war Duty puts me in touch with them. One young aviator is personable, well educated and charming. Just before leaving him, I said, "No Canadian can understand how decent boys bring themselves to machine-gun women and children."

In surprise, he replied, "But, why not? We are at war. They are enemies. We must kill them all!"

We must cure German madness or die.

M. C. MAJOR.

Montreal, Canada, Aug. 7, 1940.

There is no alternative to the conclusion reached by the writer. Curing German madness is simply restoring the law of God and Man on this earth. The war is a Christian crusade. There is no other word to fit.

Generous Gift

The British Government have received many generous gifts from Princes and Legislatures within the Empire for the prosecution of the war. The following are some of the contributions recently notified: £250,000 from the Sultan of Johore; £375,000 from the Ceylon State Council; £50,000 from the Nizam of Hyderabad towards the maintenance of the two fighter squadrons of the R.A.F. which bear his name; two lakhs of rupees (£15,000) from Bikaner State and the offer of as many battalions of infantry as possible for the Indian Army; $1,500,000 (£312,500) from the Trinidad Legislature, supplementing a gift of $1,000,000 contributed last November; £40,000 from the Legislature of Bermuda; $100,000 (£12,000) from the Sultan of the Malay State of Kelantan; £10,000 as a first contribution from the people of Basutoland; 180,000 rupees from the Council of the Government of Mauritius; £100,000 each from the Gold Coast, Sierra Leone, and Nigeria; and £50,000 from the Falkland Islands.

A first instalment of £10,000 from the Kenya Central War Fund has just been received by the British Government.—London Daily Mirror.

The End of an Entente

France was a house divided against itself. Her foreign policy was settled by a small group of activists who were responsible to a Government of bluffers, who hoped against hope that a policy of protestation would frighten the Germans. An important section of the Parliament was much under the influence of a powerful group of isolationist ex-Ministers, while the country as a whole was pacifist to the core. The gap between the activists—whose spiritual home was in the Quai d'Orsay—and the masses was extremely wide and proved to be unbridgeable. If successive Cabinets had not believed in the disastrous policy of bluff and had joined either the Activists or the Isolationists, things would have been better. If the Isolationists in Parliament had been more courageous and asserted their authority derived from the pacifism of the country, we should all of us have known better what the military value of the Entente really was. The trouble was that the people were too apathetic to press their pacifism, the bluffers were too stupid to see the folly of their way, and Parliament was too corrupt or too self-seeking to assert itself. The activists, some of whom were inspired by evil motives but many of whom were sincere adherents of their creed, had just enough power to carry France into war, but not enough to steer her through it. The collapse came as a very great surprise to a majority throughout the English-speaking world, and most of all to the people of Great Britain. It was generally believed that the relations between Paris and London had never been closer. The Entente was thought to be indissoluble and the French people enthusiastically determined to go on with the war at all costs until complete victory was achieved.—Empire Review.

What is Truth

A middle-aged German woman has just been sent to jail for three months, as a Berlin dispatch to this newspaper states, because she "questioned the veracity of German High Command communiques." Poor lady! She hadn't read the unexpurgated editions of "Mein Kampf" as faithfully as she should. She should have known that under totalitarian regimes the only persons privileged to question the veracity of the Government's lies are those who concoct them. Now, no doubt, she realizes that the truth is no dreamy abstraction under such regimes, but merely a lie with sufficient brute force behind it. The High Command must have been telling the truth. Isn't she in jail?—New York Times.

"The Needle, Watson"

A fellow who owns a popular-priced car, '37, began to have trouble with it this year. It took to stopping dead right in the midst of traffic, without apparent cause. He sent the car to a garage for an overhauling, but it continued to lie down about once a day. On one such occasion, after lifting the hood and futilely tinkering, the owner was seized with a blind, unreasoning rage. He struck the engine block a blow with a monkey wrench he was holding. The engine immediately started to putter smoothly. After that, he simply struck the engine whenever it died, and it always revived. Finally, he took to beating it every morning, before warming up the motor. He had no more engine trouble, but he began to worry about the situation. Sometimes it seemed to him that the engine had a malevolent personality of its own. It was quite a relief when he learned that cars of that particular model are notorious among service-station men for a faulty needle valve in the carburetor, and that the best cure is to hit the engine block with a stick.—The New Yorker.

Always a Thorn

Germany would have a lot less to worry about if the countries she has conquered were completely under her domination. As it is, enough has been saved from the ruins to be a constant thorn in the side of the Nazi war lords.

Polish destroyers and submarines which escaped Hitler's first thrust into the war did considerable damage to German naval power. Norwegian and Danish ships, which fled into Allied and neutral ports, still carry much of the material used against the Nazis. A large part of the French fleet is under British control and therefore available to bolster the Royal Navy. Recently Dutch consuls all over the world called upon citizens of the Netherlands for military service.

Within the last few days it was reported that several score of Norwegian flyers arrived in Toronto to prepare for continuation of the fight against Hitlerism. They will form the advance guard of a new Norwegian Legion to battle beside British and Allied soldiers against the common enemy.—Kitchener Daily Record.

Only Alertness

It is now disclosed that the Nazis dropped a considerable number of "dud" parachutes over England and Scotland. The celerity with which they were picked up and examined, the alertness of the Home Guard, which includes about every class in civilian life out of military age, must, after all, have been bad news for the Nazis. These "dud" parachutes have now been declared an attempted hoax, but certainly one with good results for the Empire defence. Neither panic nor alarm, but common sense caution and investigation, followed. British phlegm was not penetrated.

Mr. Churchill has held that the menace of the Fifth Column in Britain has been exaggerated, but that necessary steps have been taken. There are several hundred British suspects in confinement. The incident, this week, of the discovered parachutes, shows one thing plainly; it will go mighty hard on these special sacrificial troops who fall from the air and expect to do things. There isn't a parish in the Kingdom not organized day and night for this sort of warfare, and it must be remembered, too, that the defenders doubtless include a large number of poachers. Where a rabbit hasn't a chance, what chance would a Jerry have?—St. Catharines Standard.

Flotillas of Motor Launches Operating on Inland Waterways And Various Rivers in Britain

New Fleet Added to the Royal Navy to Protect Britain from Nazi Invasion

MIDGET WARSHIPS

Written For The Canadian Press

By JULIAN MOCKFORD

Argus South African Newspapers Correspondent

London, Aug. 20—(CP)—The Royal Navy has a brand new fleet.

This was the chief discovery by war correspondents in the latest run around Great Britain's defences which constantly are being both strengthened and extended.

The fleet now is operating on various rivers and other important inland waterways, its units being a series of flotillas of motor launches.

From reedy lairs these armed speedboats dash away at 20 knots along narrow streams and broad reaches in order to guard them against a sudden swoop by the Germans, whether borne by gliders, carrier planes or parachutes.

Many of these waterways which should now be swarming with fishermen and yachtsmen have been swept clean of all holiday craft so that the flotillas, day and night, enjoy exclusive navigation rights with the swans.

While the navy operates these picturesque flotillas, supplying the officers and sailors, the army contributes non-commissioned officers and men who form gun teams aboard each motor launch.

Tommies Enjoy Work

The Tommies thoroughly enjoy acting in the capacity of marines, turning out like lightning from their riverside billets to man the midget warships when the naval commander sounds the alarm.

Even the possibility of Nazi seaplanes coming down certain wide stretches has not been excluded from the calculations of the Admiralty and the War Office whose novel river rovers are fully capable of dealing with the firstcomers while signalling for reinforcements from troops bivouacked about the surrounding countryside.

As guest of the naval commander I was privileged to take a short cruise in a motor launch which was armed to the teeth and sped through the bewildering maze of waterways with a local yachtsman, seconded by a home guard, as pilot.

As in the south, divisions in position along the east coast are all on tiptoe and expectant, with news reaching them of the enemy busy building flat-bottomed boats.

All of August and certainly half of September are regarded as a good weather period for invasion operations. In consequence, elaborate training exercises being carried out daily along the shores have a special meaning for those engaged in them.

Awakened by Nazi Bombers

Every night during the tour of these coastal areas I was awakened by the engines of Nazi bombers seeking their marks, followed soon after by the reassuring music of British fighters.

Once while leaving a town in which we had lunch, I saw a Nazi "lone eagle" dive from a cloud like a racing shadow against the sunfilled sky and landscape. A moment later a salvo of bombs exploded on the outskirts of the town. Then, as the bomber raced towards the clouds again, smoke and flames belched from some warehouses.

In another district where our road skirted a forest a great black scar showed where incendiary bombs the previous week had burned down a belt of trees. Again, in a coastal town, I examined the ruins of a beach restaurant, shattered to fragments by a high explosive bomb, and on the heights several cottages were slightly damaged.

These latter, which were being repaired, forced my attention to the anthill technique which now is necessarily being adopted by dwellers in bombed British towns. Just as ants rush to repair damage caused to their anthill so do good neighbors, whether or not members of organized services, rush to repair damage received by homes during an air-raid.

After the casualties have been taken to hospital and the fires extinguished, repair gangs restore the roofs, walls, windows and ceilings. In some cases it is necessary to replace beds, blankets and tables before such homes are again livable.

Battered Homes Restored

All this work is being done in a generous community spirit and there are remarkable stories being told of how battered homes have been restored within a day or two.

In restoring homes women are playing a large-hearted part—indeed their services generally in the present emergency are magnificent. I found evidence of this everywhere.

In villages dotted among fields where poppies now flame among yellow corn, middle-aged women and young girls muster under self-chosen leaders in order to act as sky watchers. Quite unofficially they post observers at various vantage points to which they go on horseback, bicycle or shankspony.

Between whiles they do musketry practice, smiling good-humoredly when men passing by call them England's amazons. These petticoat commandos, working outside the range of officially-blessed voluntary organizations, form a brightly courageous spectacle in the larger panorama of a countryside dominated by British soldiery which fights sham battles, vigorously keeping trained against Hitler's "der tag."

All Rail Traffic Between Zones in France Suspended

Vichy, France, Aug. 20—(AP)—All railroad traffic between occupied and un-occupied France has been suspended by order of German authorities, it was officially announced today. No reason was given for the action.

Railway and all other forms of traffic between the two zones were forbidden in the German order for the coastal strip of occupied territory between Tours and the Spanish border.

Highway traffic across the zone frontier between Tours and the Swiss border still is permitted.

(Similar sudden interruptions of traffic by German authorities in the past have been interpreted as signs of impending large scale military developments. Passenger traffic on German railways was suspended just before the invasion of the Low Countries.

NAZI RAIDERS OPERATE SINGLY OVER WIDE AREA

Five German Planes Shot Down in Yesterday's Scattered Raids

SOME PROPERTY DAMAGE

Three British Fighting Planes Lost but Pilots of Two Saved

London, Aug. 20—(CP)—German planes were believed to have flown over a southeast inland town after daylight this morning following night raids over a wide area of Britain.

The Air Ministry announced this morning that five German planes had been shot down in yesterday's scattered raids over England and South Wales and three British fighters were lost. The pilots of two of the British craft were saved, however.

A bulletin was issued stating:

"During the night enemy aircraft operated for the most part singly but over widespread areas of England and South Wales and also over a few districts in Scotland.

"Damage was done to houses and other property in some towns in northeastern England and the midlands and in a town in southwestern England.

"The majority of the bombs, however, fell in rural areas, causing very little damage.

Number of Casualties

"A number of casualties were caused, some of which were fatal.

"Reports received of yesterday's operations confirm that another enemy aircraft was destroyed by our fighters, making the total five for the day. Three of our fighters were lost, but the pilots of two are safe."

Last night's raiders used high explosive, screamer, flare and incendiary bombs.

Lone raiders dropped from 15 to 20 bombs in one midlands town. Several houses were demolished and a school and a motion picture theatre were damaged, but townspeople were in shelters and casualties were low.

Six bombs, some of them screamers, were dropped on midlands town, demolishing two houses and causing a few casualties, some fatal.

Three high explosive bombs landed simultaneously in a straight line in a northeast town, demolishing the rear part of a laundry and razing two large houses. Damage was caused over an area of about a square mile in which many had to abandon their homes.

Man Killed Watching Raid

There were few casualties in this town, one of them a man killed by bomb fragments while watching the raid from his door.

A single raider over a southeast town dropped six bombs, one in the playground of the village school, another on a farm and the rest on arable land belonging to the local home guard commander, who said there was "no damage whatsoever."

The night raids, heaviest in the northeast region, followed the second lull in three days in the German mass daylight raids. Yesterday's respite was held here to be due to a need of the German air force to reform squadrons battered in raids Sunday, when the British brought down 145 planes.

Most of the incendiary bombs dropped this morning fell in the northwestern districts. Damage was slight, however. In this area one German bomber was believed brought down.

AT THE CAPITOL

"They Drive by Night."

Warner release of a Mark Hellinger production.

The players: George Raft, Ann Sheridan, Ida Lupino, Humphrey Bogart, Gale Page, Alan Hale, Roscoe Karns, John Litel and George Tobias.

Now at the Capital.

A vigorous yarn, it packs into its 93 minutes running time all the ingredients of swell entertainment. Above all else, it gives Ida Lupino, who up to the present has very little of importance to do, the opportunity for a superlative performance—on which opportunity she cashes in to the fullest extent. Although billed after both George Raft and Ann Sheridan, it will probably be Miss Lupino who will leave the clearest impression with the audience.

Starting out as a treatise on the gents behind the wheels of the big transports on the "long hauls," it branches out half way through, on a side track and becomes a different treatment of ye goode olde triangle. This is when the dramatic abilities of Lupino are brought to the fore. As partners in a one-truck transport business, George Raft and Humphrey Bogart are involved in a series of hairbreadth adventures on the road, the final one of which results in an amputated arm for Bogart. This causes the business to disintegrate and Raft to go to work for Alan Hale. While in his employ he becomes the object of the dishonorable intentions of Hale's wife, Miss Lupino. Determined that she will get that his loyalty to Hale will always George at all costs, but realizing be between them, Ida murders her husband, only to find that George has eyes only for Ann Sheridan. Remorse and hatred begin to creep into her mind, leading up to eventual insanity in which she accuses

A group of select short subjects complete the bill.

AT THE McCARTHY

"An Englishman's Home."

"An Englishman's Home," the epic drama of a war-time England. A heart-touching story of placid home life disrupted by espionage agents, blasted by bombing raids and temporarily overrun by parachute troops, is the current picture attraction at the McCarthy.

It is a picture that is different! Its timeliness with the present European situation makes it realistic drama as well as being powerful entertainment. And when you see that indominitable British spirit triumph over the insidious spy machine, every Canadian will be glad that it was placed on their "must see" list.

The scene opens as the Brown family welcome their father home after a business trip. During his absence, the daughter Peggy, played by Mary Maguire, falls in love with scheming enemy spy agent who obtains the good graces of the family by showing a common interest in radio with the younger brother. Secretly, however, the agent is using the brother as a dupe in order to establish his radio in the Brown home with which he directs enemy planes over England.

The picture is packed with thrills and interest right from end to end, with the arrival of the parachute troops to take over the Brown home being one of its many highlights. The home is wrecked by the insolent troops who barricade it against the arrival of the English soldiers, but members of the family are allowed to escape by the treacherous spy agent before the arrival of a R.A.F. plane which bombs the home and radio station which is leading bombers over London.

The climax shows the power of the British forces, the air force, the army and the navy, as it finally gains control over the raiders and frees England from the "mad men of Europe."

AT THE BELLE

"Forty Little Mothers"

"The Story of Forty Little Mothers," heartwarming comedy starring Eddie Cantor, is now playing at the Belle theatre and registered definitely as one of the big laugh hits of the season. It is a new Eddie Cantor that the audience meets. The Prince of Comedy Gags emerges as a real actor. Minus his wisecracks, he plays a very human timid professor who inherits a baby after he saves its mother from suicide and incidentally annexes a lot of trouble.

Cantor proves definitely that he does not need a chorus of a hundred beautiful girls in scanties as a background for his talents. He has forty of Hollywood's prettiest subdebs in "The Story of Forty Little Mothers" but they are an important part of the story. One of the picture's surprises is the presence of Judith Anderson, Broadway stage star, in the role of the girls' boarding school mistress. As was to be expected, Miss Anderson turns in a brilliant characterization. Rita Johnson is seen as the mother of the baby and gives a deft and sympathetic performance. Nydia Westman supplies some ifne comedy as Miss Anderson's stooge.

Others who add to the enjoyment of the picture are Ralph Morgan, Bonita Granville, Diana Lewis, Margaret Early, Martha O'Driscoll, Charlotte Munier and Louise Seidel, not to mention Baby Quintanilla, the eight-months-old infant of the tale who is without doubt one of the most ingratiating and amusing babies ever to make an appearance before the cameras.

"Phantom Raiders"

Nick Carter, in the person of Walter Pidgeon, again plunges into lurid adventure in "Phantom Raiders" second of the series built about the famous detective of fiction, now playing at the Belle theatre. This time the scene of adventure shifts to the Panama Canal Zone, where Nick exposes the machinations of an espionage ring, aided by pretty Florence Rice and Donald Meek, the eccentric bee keeper who carried the comedy load in the first series.

Joseph Schildkraut, John Carroll, Nat Pendleton and Steffi-Duna are all in supporting roles.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCEMENT

The engagement is announced of Anita Jean, youngest daughter of Mrs. Jessie Badgley, and the late Albert Badgley, Belleville to W. J. G. Wilson, L.A.C., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Wilson, Winnipeg, Man., wedding to take place soon.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Sutherland wish to announce the engagement of their daughter, Georgina Mary, to Mr. James Garfield Evans, only son of Mr. and Mrs. John Evans Foxboro. The marriage will take place early in September.

Miss Mary Julia Graham, Ottawa, was a week end guest of Group Captain and Mrs. J. A. Sully.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bush and family, Napanee, moved Saturday to this city, where Mr. Bush has secured a position.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Maynes, Miss Elsie Maynes, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Black, all of Toronto, visited Mr. Martin's mother, Mrs. Angus Martin, North Park Street, over the week end.

James Clarke, eldest son of Mr. Frank Clarke, of Hazenmore, Sask., formerly of Stirling, spent three days last week with his uncle, J. M. Clarke, Rossmore, before taking up duties in the R.C.A.F., at Regina. James is the third member of his family in his country's service. One brother is with the R.C.A.F. at Trenton where he is taking a special course before leaving for St. Thomas while another brother is on a destroyer in convoy duty at Halifax.

WEDDINGS

McGUIRL—LAVOIE

St. Luke's Church, Ottawa, at seven o'clock on Saturday evening was the setting for the marriage of Pearl Mary Lavoie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Lavoie, to Stanley Alexander McGuirl, R.C.A.F., Trenton, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman McGuirl. Rev. Cecil Steen officiated.

Mr. Leonard Foss presided at the organ, and Miss Ada McGuirl, sister of the bridegroom, as the soloist sang, "Because".

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of ivory suede lace over taffeta fashioned with Peter Pan collar, fitted bodice and long sleeves which came to points over her hands. The full skirt touched the floor. The bride wore a tulle veil which was held in place with a coronet of seed pearls and orange blossoms.

Miss Edith McKay attended the bride as maid-of-honor, and Miss Irene Lavoie attended her sister as bridesmaid. Miss McKay wore a gown of blue sheer over matching taffeta designed with smocked bodice, full skirt and short puffed sleeves. Her headdress in halo effect, was adorned with a matching blue veil and she carried a colonial nosegay. Miss Lavoie wore a similarly designed gown of pink sheer over taffeta. Her headdress, in halo effect, was trimmed with a matching pink veil, and she also carried a Colonial nosegay.

Horace Cross, R.C.A.F., Trenton, attended the bridegroom as best man, and the ushers were Mr. Gordon Rawson and Mr. Harry McGuirl.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, and later Mr. and Mrs. Stanley McGuirl left for Toronto on their wedding trip.

WOOD—WRIGHT

Salem United Church was the scene of a colourful summer wedding Saturday, August 17, at eleven a.m. when Laura Irene Wright, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wright, Harold, became the bride of Mr. George Sarles Wood, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wood, Ivanhoe. Rev. S. Delve, the pastor, officiated. The church was beautifully decorated with gladioli, zinnias, petunias, ferns and other potted plants.

Mr. Fred Porter, Thomasburg, played the wedding music and accompanied Miss Aleita Horton, a cousin of the bride, who sang "All Joy be Thine" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father the bride entered the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March. The bride looked charming attired in sheer white georgette with smocking and white accessories carrying a bouquet of Sweetheart roses.

Her attendant, Miss Jean Donald, a cousin, wore a dress of blue crepe with white accessories and carried Talisman roses.

Mr. Ivan Sarles assisted the groom and Messrs. Percy Sutherland and Donald Bateman were ushers.

After the signing of the register Mr. Wm. Johnston presented the bride with a leather-bound Bible on behalf of the congregation for services rendered.

The wedding party left the church amid showers of confetti and with immediate relatives and a few friends journeyed to the bride's home.

A dainty wedding luncheon was served by Misses Ethel Hagerman, and Norma Sarles. The pink and white colour scheme was artistically carried out in a profusion of gladioli and other flowers with a tiered wedding cake centring the table.

A toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. Delve and well responded to by the groom.

The groom's gift to the bride was a chest of silver to the bridesmaid and soloist, compacts to the best man, tie clip set to the organist and ushers a combination leather key case and billfold.

The bride's mother wore printed navy sheer with navy and white accessories and a corsage of sweetpeas and maiden hair fern. The groom's mother wore blue printed sheer with navy accessories and corsage of sweetpeas and fern.

Mr. and Mrs. Wood left amid good wishes and showers of confetti and streamers for a trip through Western Ontario. The bride travelled in a navy sheer ensemble with white accessories. On their return they will reside on the farm at Ivanhoe.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, August 21

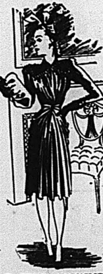
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

WHILE judging by the lunar and mutual aspects this will be a day in which the forces and faculties will be stimulated to aggressive attack in putting over new and important propositions, with things moving at a particularly high tempo yet it is probable that all the stress and tension may not justify the energy and initiative expended. There are several frustrating and delaying factors to be dealt with. There may be some mental confusion or miscarrying of ideas. Also legal entanglements or trouble with papers. However, all constructive and practical work accomplished may have future results. Group action is important and advisable.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a particularly lively year, with much stirring in major projects under highly stimulated forces and energies. Practical constructive work should aim at future fulfillments, even though for the present there are signs of obstacles, postponements and other frutrating circumstances, such as legal entanglements or some mental slant may make revision of plans desirable. Cooperation with groups is lucrative.

A child born on this day although being energetic, aggressive and have much creative ability may yet have less practical inclinations and talents. It's idealism may turn to humane and social activities.

Jersey Drape



By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

FINE DETAIL rather than obtrusive trimming is the characteristic of the good frock. A model like the frock sketched today is likely to be the backbone of a wardrobe and always looks right. This suave affair is made of a deep reddish-brown, fine jersey, the weave that drapes so gracefully.

The fullness of the softly draped skirt is concentrated in front where a bow-like effect at the neck is outlined in a narrow double pleating of the fabric. The high V neck is very smart and can take a jeweled pin with fine effect. The belt, of self-fabric, has a motif of pale blue kidskin.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Should a Visitor Tip a Servant?

Although we hear arguments for and against the propriety of tipping servants after a visit, the fact remains that customarily the departing guest gives tips to the servants.

In a few houses the hostess requests us not to tip the servants. Then of course, we abide by her request.

The amount of the tip, as in the case of all other tips, depends on your circumstances and on your generosity. Specifically, in this case, it depends on the type of household, on the service that has been received, and on the length of your visit.

There are some more or less definite standards that they may be considered as guides.

Let's say for instance that you have spent a week-end in a one-servant (even a part-time servant) home. One dollar is a sufficient tip; two dollars a pleasantly generous one. If the maid has done any laundering or pressing or sewing for you, or has done errands for you, your tip should be increased in accordance with the amount of service.

In a larger household, you give one or two dollars to each servant with whom you have come in contact.

Some people leave their tips in marked envelopes in their bedrooms. I don't like this impersonal way of giving a tip. It is vastly more gracious, I think, to give the tip directly to the servant, with an appreciative, "Thank you, Marie". Make a special point of not giving your tip in the presence of the hostess or host or other guests.

Grocery Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to give a grocery shower for a bride who is to be married in September. The guests will be of various ages.

1.—What decorations and favors would be fitting for such a shower?

2.—What games or entertainment other than cards, would be appropriate?

3.—How could I arrange the gifts attractively on a card table, prior to their being opened?

4.—Is it necessary to send written invitations to the guests, or would it be proper to invite them by word of mouth?

5.—For light refreshments, would it be proper to serve a salad with toasted crackers, followed by ice cream and cake? What would be your suggestion as to the kind of salad?

R.

1.—It would be fun to carry out, in your decorations and favors, the grocery store motif. If there is a handy man about, he might construct a counter and some shelves for the gift display, and you might paint some amusing signs. The favors might be tiny market baskets (you can usually buy these in department store or specialty shops), filled either with motto candies or with jelly beans or mints.

2.—You might get a few of your close friends together and devise a Grocery Quiz. This wouldn't I grant, be especially easy, but it would be especially entertaining!

3.—Why not, if you don't arrange the gifts on grocery store shelves, put the packages in a large handled grocery basket? You might even provide a grocer's white apron for the bride to wear as she is opening the gifts.

4.—If there are to be only a few guests, you might invite them by word of mouth. But it is even easier and more practical to buy at your stationer's the special shower invitations, with lines for the filling in of the information as to kind of shower, date, hour, place and so forth.

5.—Yes, I like your idea of serving a salad and toasted crackers, instead of the usual sandwiches. Chicken salad would be excellent to serve, or salad of alternating slices of grapefruit and orange, or a Waldorf salad, or tomato stuffed with crabmeat. And instead of the toasted crackers, you might prefer to serve hot biscuits or small heated soft rolls, either one to be split and buttered before serving.

Courtesy Tip

When you eat ice cream, take only a small portion on the spoon at a time. Don't such a huge spoonful of the ice cream drawing it in and out of your mouth!

In Suitable Jobs

Many men and women who are square pegs in round holes in respect to their work may find national registration a blessing. They may secure an opportunity to do jobs they have always wanted to do but have never been able to obtain.

One of the main purposes of the registration is to learn what people can do, and from this information get them at the most important tasks in respect to the war effort. There may be, for instance, a man driving a delivery wagon but who is fitted for some special work which he would like better. There is no end to the possibilities.

There will even be some opportunities for men and women to train for skilled jobs. There are many who have had their eyes, in the past, on such vocations, but who never have had a chance to get the proper training. These will be improving themselves and helping their country.

One of the tragedies of so many lives is that men, and women, are employed in some work they don't like and for which they have no aptitude. They have never been able to get out of the rut. Through national registration an avenue of escape may be opened for many of them.—Windsor Star.

Putting Your Foot Down Properly

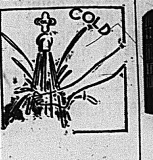
By HELEN FOLLETT

Today we'll talk about the little footies that are likely to be putting up a protest this season of the year. Hoofing over pavements they cry out for rest. And what do you do about that, gentle reader?

The human foot is a fine piece of anatomic engineering structure. Bend your foot, curl your toes under, notice how strong it is, how smoothly it works. We tell you this so you will appreciate your trotters, give them proper care.

These complicated masses of bones, ligaments, muscles, tendons, blood vessels and nerves are perfectly arranged to enable the feet to comfortably bear the weight of the body and to enable us to walk, jump, run with ease and grace. That should be the case. But all too many of us pack our feet into shoes that do not conform to the contour of the steppers, and throw these fine mechanisms out of gear. Then there is trouble. Muscles are under strain, corns beset the pink toes, calloused spots appear to torment one.

If the flesh smarts and burns, bathe with cold water, dry briskly, friction with mineral oil which will soothe the surface of the skin. While the oil remains on, pat in borated talcum powder. Put on fresh hosiery daily, change the shoes frequently. Foot powder sprinkled in the shoes will keep the flesh dry and comfortable.



If feet smart and burn, bathe with cold water.

Hair comes and goes like those visitors whose company you don't care for. Every day some hair must fall; the individual shaft lives from two to seven years. One reason why brushing is necessary is that these deaders should be removed so that the soft fuzzy understudies can appear and carry on.

Do everything possible to stimulate the circulation in the scalp. Finish the shampoo with a cold shower. Every night slip fingers and thumbs under the finger wave, give the scalp a good drubbing, lifting and pinching the flesh, moving it about. Change the parting now and then. Sit in the sunlight, give your hair the air.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Doesn't Keep His Word to Write

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My boy friend lives in another city, and I see him about once a month, when he comes for the week-end. When we're together he promise to write twice a week, but he doesn't keep his word, and then he excuses himself by saying he doesn't like to write letters.

My mother tells me I ought to forget about him and that he does not care for me. But that's easier said than done because I love him dearly. Not hearing from him makes me so restless and unhappy.

Lonesome

I am inclined to agree with your parents, that the better plan would be to try and forget him. However at the same time a case was brought to my attention recently which makes me wonder if this may not be true in yours. This couple even had the date set for the wedding, but he always avoided writing letters but instead called her up long distance.

The reason was that he had never learned to write English, although he spoke the language well. He had left his country when he was a young child, and was ashamed to let his girl know that he couldn't write English.

When Sweet Sixteen Says "No"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a man of 28 and in love with a very lovely girl of 16. You see, Miss Fairfax, she told me lately that she doesn't care for me any more, and I am quite serious about her. I've known her since she was 13, and when I left her city a year ago we corresponded. But when all of a sudden she told me she wanted to break off it just about broke me up.

We promised to see each other every four months, as I am working here. She lives with her stepfather in another city. I'm sure she does love me, but I don't know what has come over her so suddenly. Please help me and I do thank you a great deal.

Jimmy

A sensible girl of 16 is apt to realize that she's too young to make such an important decision as accepting a life partner. Why not give her time? Meanwhile don't try to persuade her to change her mind. If she hasn't fallen for some youngster more nearly her own age, it's likely she may reconsider.

You are twelve years older than she is, and while that is not an insurmountable barrier, she'll probably take her own time to think it out. Don't mope. Go out with other girls and enjoy yourself — that's been known ot work miracles when the fair one is capricious.

Parents Object to Daughter's Reconciliation

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We have been married seven years and have one child, whom we adore. I have left my wife several times, and each time I didn't have the courage to go home because I lost so much gambling. We've been separated now for eight months, but on a recent visit she said we needed each other and she'd consider a reconciliation.

Right now she is working and keeping up the home, while I am not, but expect a position in a couple of weeks. My wife's parents object to her taking me back. They said if she did they wouldn't have any more to do with her, even though they know she is in love with me. But my wife is willing to forgive me provided I get a position and save some money.

I love her more now than ever and do want to make her happy. What do you think of this state of affairs?

A. P. P.

Don't you think it might be a good idea if you got the job you're expecting and were well established in it and had a little margin saved before you presented yourself as a candidate for reconciliation with your wife? At the present time she's "bringing home the bacon". And it's not hard to understand how her parents feel about reinstating you as her husband.

You should prove to all parties concerned—wife and her parents as well—that you absolutely have given up gambling.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD says today—

Some Respects In Which All Men Are Alike

Presumably it was a woman who said, "She who has known one man well, knows all men." Not that each of them hasn't his individuality and his peculiarities but that in the main they all work alike. For instance when a man writes himself up as a dispenser of love and support he honestly believes this entitles him to the best the wife can give. He expects her to look her prettiest and be her pleasantest at all times, to prepare the comfortable place to sit, read and sleep, to provide him with good food and plenty of it, to listen when he talks and asks no questions when he doesn't.

He argues, and rather well, that he works hard at dollar chasing. The competitors are contentious. The customers are critical. The employees are irritating. So when he hies home he expects relaxation, conversation that doesn't require concentration. He expects to swap his perplexities and his problems for entertainment and diversion.

Why, when he has had a sandwich and a glass of milk for lunch, should he not sit down in the evening to a good dinner with a dainty woman presiding over the table? Why should he have to eat his meals to the accompaniment of complaints about the children and a recounting of the wife's aches and pains?

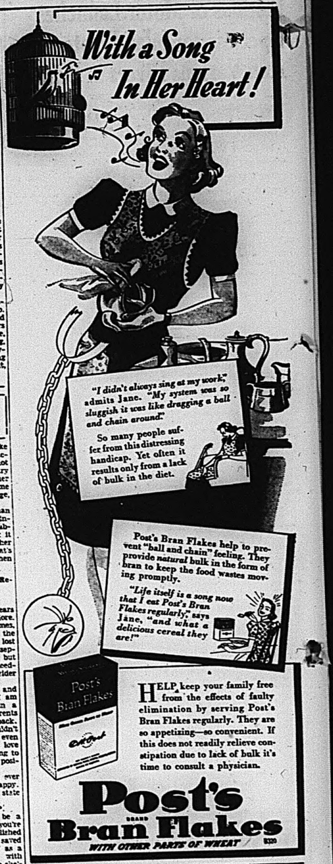
The smaller and less important he is in the world of affairs, the more dependent is he upon his wife's making him feel sizeable, when he arrives at the castle. He's taken the rap during business. His ego has been punctured and deflated. Here's the wife's chance to re-establish his self-esteem and assure him that he is her hero.

These are the "staples", so to speak, that every husband requires for contentment with his wife in his home. Naturally the "fancies" vary with the individual. One man likes to be petted and pampered; another let alone. One likes to spill his business worries in his wife's lap; another prefers to conceal them. One enoys having the children around; another enjoys them out of sight. One is a glutton for guests; another demands family solitude.

There are many men of many kinds but in one respect they are all alike. The last one of them wants pleasant companionship, friendship with his wife or he wouldn't have signed up. Of course, the wife can't be the friend in need, the comfortable companion unless she's studied her husband, knows what he wants and gives it. If she doesn't get on to his crochets and peculiarities, respect them and tip-toe around them, there's a wreck.

You see, the man that doesn't find pleasant companionship at home seeks it elsewhere, sometimes quite innocently, sometimes quite guiltily; but always disastrously. The seekers usually come to grief and when this happens the greater grief is inflicted on the wife.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.



With a Song In Her Heart!

"I didn't always sing at my work," admits Jane. "My system was so sluggish it was like dragging a ball and chain around."

So many people suffer from this distressing handicap. Yet often it results only from a lack of bulk in the diet.

Post's Bran Flakes help to prevent "ball and chain" feeling. They provide natural bulk in the form of bran to keep the food wastes moving promptly.

"Life itself is a song now that I eat Post's Bran Flakes regularly," says Jane, "and what a delicious cereal they are!"

HELP keep your family free from the effects of faulty elimination by serving Post's Bran Flakes regularly. They are so appetizing—so convenient. If this does not readily relieve constipation due to lack of bulk it's time to consult a physician.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Infantile Paralysis

Eventually, polio runs its course, perhaps leaving withered limbs in its wake. Then what?

The after-treatment, the reclamation work, shouldn't be started too soon. We must wait until all traces of soreness and tenderness in the muscles have disappeared. When this condition has been reached, then all the muscles which remain affected by the paralysis should be massaged and exercised. The greatest care must be taken, however to avoid fatigue. This is vitally important, because a too early vigorous massage and exercise of these paralyzed muscles will cause them to waste away so completely that all possibility of their being developed is lost.

I have seen parents, in their eagerness and enthusiasm, actually destroy the child's chances of recovering completely from his paralysis.

In the beginning exerising and massaging should be done once every two or three days. These periods are increased until the exercises are being taken three times a day. Of course the best person for such exercising and massaging is an experienced operator. However many families can't afford such a luxury as a specialist in this line. In these a mother, father, or other relative can learn how to do it. It will not be easy for it calls for a great deal of patient work.

It seems to me that it is in the after-care of children, such as polio calls for, that parents show the highest affection and devotion to their children. Any parent can call in a doctor when a child is sick. But after the sickness, and the doctor is gone leaving his instructions and suggestions and instructions for after-care then it is up to the parent.

Not every parent is ready to sacrifice freedom to give full attention to such a child. I have known mothers and fathers who start off with a rush on this important after-care and then after a few weeks when progress by the child wasn't immediately evident, they began to give the child less and less attention. Naturally and sadly, the child lost all chance of recovery.

When you undertake to give massages and superintend the exercise of a child recovering from infantitle paralysis, you must be prepared to face not only months, but even years of slow, heartbreakingly slow, progress. One mother I know spent three years working on her boy's two paralysed legs. Because of her selfless devotion to that duty, he walks today.

Infections Spread by Finger Tips

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

EXPERIENCE emphasizes over and over again that even small abrasions on the skin should not be neglected. Many a case of blood poisoning has resulted from a blister on the heel from tennis, or a small splinter in the finger tip. Any cut or scratch should be washed gently with cotton dipped in alcohol and when dry painted with iodine or mercurochrome. If there is any bleeding, bandage with sterile gauze.

Yesterday we asked what two places on the body were the most dangerous for skin infections. The answer is finger tip infections and upper lip and nose infections.

Easier Carriers

The fingers are well supplied with lymphatics and these carry infection up the arm into the blood stream—so-called blood poisoning. Its path may be seen in the little red lines under the skin from the point of infection to the arm pit. The lymph glands—kernels—in the armpit or above the elbow may be enlarged—also an indication of spreading infection.

The finger tip is a dangerous site for infection, also because of its anatomy. Along the finger under the skin and above the bone and going into the palm of the hand are closed sacs of fascia—sheaths for the tendons of the muscles which perform the fine movements of the fingers. These are easily infected and leave, after the infection is conquered, considerable crippling and disability.

Other forms of infection of the fingers include felons which are extension of pus to the periosterum of the bone.

Prompt Dressing

To avoid all these dangers treat every injury and abrasion to the skin of the fingers, especially finger tips, with respect which means prompt sterilization and dressing.

The upper lip infections are particularly dangerous because the blood supply of that region leads directly to the great blood sinuses of the brain, and infection may follow this path causing septic sinus thrombosis, an almost always fatal condition. Such infections should be treated by a physician and above all should not be rubbed or touched or handled.

Furuncles of the nose have the same tendency. Some furuncles inside the nose usually come from an infected hair follicle. Lowered vitality or diabetes or some other chronic disease predispose to this sort of infection and the condition is commoner in older people. Erysipelas, also an infection predominantly of older people, may follow from such furuncles or little boils in the noise.

When Daughter Helps to Cook

By BETSY NEWMAN

IF DAUGHTER has asked her boy friend to dinner, let her help prepare the meal. Stuffed breast of lamb is economical and yet is elaborate enough to make the young lady feel she preparing something out of the ordinary and pretty special.

Today's Menu

Stuffed Lamb Breast
Corn on the Cob Peach Salad
Blueberry or Huckleberry Pie
Coffee

Stuffed Lamb Breast

Have a pocket cut into the lamb breast from the large end. Sprinkle inside and out with salt and pepper. Fill with rice stuffing and fasten edges together with skewers. Brown the breast on all sides in hot lard, add 1-2 cup hot water, cover tightly and cook slowly until done, about one and a half hours.

Rice Stuffing

1 1-2 tbsp. onion
1 tbsp. lard
3-4 cup uncooked rice
2 cups soup stock
1 tsp. salt
1-2 tsp. poultry seasoning

Cook onion in lard until tender. Add rice, cook until the rice is a golden tint, then add soup stock, salt and poultry seasoning. Cover and steam for twenty minutes, until rice is tender. Use for stuffing in lamb breast.

Peach Salad

1 whole peach for each person
Lettuce
Cream or cottage cheese
Chopped Nut Meats
Mayonnaise

Make a nest of lettuce leaves on each plate, put peach, peeled, cut in half and stoned on lettuce, fill cavities of peaches with cream or cottage cheese, top with mayonnaise and sprinkling of nut meats.

A SPEAKER at a recent convention talked on "How to Teach Your Wife to Drive." His speech was:

"Don't. Let somebody else do it."

Automobile executives and other husbands—at least those in New York—agree to a man. Anyone can drive a car, they say, and even a child can understand the mechanics of driving, but women are in a class by themselves. Husbands shouldn't teach their own wives for several reasons:

1. Wives don't have sufficient respect for their husbands' knowledge.

2. Husbands know their wives' failings too well to be patient.

3. Husbands come right out with what they think to their wives, who thereupon break down and cry in the midst of a traffic jam.

4. Wives taught by husbands sometimes have accidents, the responsibility for which is a burden on the good man's mind.

The general manager of one of the biggest car agencies in the country goes further and says that nobody else in the family, let alone a husband, should undertake the task. Such an experience makes a woman so nervous she'll never learn to drive.

Women Good Drivers

Despite these discouraging words it's been proved time and again that women are as capable drivers as men. Their stumbling block, which is ignorance of mechanics, is frequently to their advantage. The average man, sure of his car, operates it on the theory that he who hesitates is lost. All a woman does is tie up traffic a bit.

GONE FOR FUN

If women weren't good drivers, they wouldn't be driving ambulances in France or have been trusted to transport carloads of orphans from the war zones. Confidence in yourself is 90 percent in learning to drive, for man or woman, and the biggest problem in driving is trying to decide what the motorist ahead is going to do.

All the driver has to watch besides the road is her dashboard. If the motor's dead, she's out of gas or the ignition system is on the blink. The only thing to do in either case is to look for help. Things like generators need never worry the ladies' pretty heads.

The Sad News

Here's where most women get men down. Men claim they are late for work and late to dinner, and barely miss being killed, all because they haven't the slightest idea what the woman driving in front of them intends to do. "She doesn't either," is the assumption. She doesn't put out her hand when she turns a corner but keeps her secret to herself; or she is so busily talking with her passenger that she forgets where she's headed. Then comes the smash.

The mistake the amateur driver makes most often, say car dealers, is not to make sure they are in low gear before releasing the clutch. This, if it's any comfort, applies as much to men as to women, and it results in stalling.

Brakes are something else, even the new kinds. They require far less pulling strength than the old, but the most women still don't use them often enough.

Dealers, hired instructors and even husbands say the right age to learn to drive is the "age of good sense." It's easier to learn to swim when you're 16 than when you are 60, but it can be done. It's easier for one woman to take an intensive course of two weeks, and easier for others to tackle driving an hour at a time, renewing their learner's permit if necessary over an indefinite period.

Once master of the car, experts repeat, a woman can forget about its valves, batteries, combustion and all else mechanical, and just remember to keep on her side of the road.

It's Often Wise To Spend More

Some things aren't an extravagance for a woman—even if they do seem pretty expensive when set down in a neat column and totalled for a year.

It isn't extravagant for a working woman to have her hair done at a beauty salon at least once a week. Unless she is that rare person who can manage her own hair better than a trained operator can, the weekly session with her hairdresser is essential from the point of view of her career.

It isn't extravagant for any woman to buy the very best fur coat and the very best tailored suits that she can afford, because in the long run she will spend no more on coats and suits than if she had bought cheaper ones more often. And all the while she will look well-dressed.

It isn't extravagant for a woman to wear sheer hose all the time (except when she is wearing oxfords) if thick ankles are the most depressing thing in her life.

Nor is the woman extravagant who finds that an expensive nourishing cream does more to correct her dry complexion than anything she has ever found—and then proceeds to use it, expensive or not.

"I Spy"

By JANET GOFF

WHEN YOU order your Fall hat don't forget to name your pet perfume.... The latest millinery trick is to impregnate headbands and linings with sachet. "Chica," named from the purplish-red South American Indian corn, is one of the loveliest shades in new hats, and brown and black one of the most applauded color combinations.

Three little sisters in flannel skirts and jackets, dotted Swiss blouses, pique hats and stubby white fabric gloves took my eye at the Greentree Fair on the Whitney estate. They were the daughters of Mrs. T. Suffern Tailor.

Mrs. Floyd Odium, who is aviatrix Jacqueline Cochran, made her entrance in awning striped faille long before a number of other smart women began to adopt the same type of stripes in satin...... Her favorite jewelry is a bracelet with airplane etched in diamonds, and a gold propeller pin centred with a solitaire.

A one-man comment on New York women's makeup is that it looks metallic.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD says today—

Got a Problem? "You Ain't By Yourself In That"

Do you ever stop to realize that all the grown people you greet in your home, pass on the street, meet at the market or sit by in a movie, are wrestling with some sort of hard problem that cuts down their joy in life, breaks off their laughter and pierces their consciousness as a needle prick? No, we don't.

We look at the well-dressed, well-groomed man or woman and say, "What it takes to meet life and master it, that person has it." We sit down at the dinner table with a prosperous family, note the good housekeeping, the evidences of easy camaraderie between husband and wife, the jocularity of the conversation in which all the children take part, the comfortable clannishness of the whole crowd and we say: Wonderful! They have everything and nothing to worry about.

We see a couple ride by in a luxurious motor car, chauffeur at the wheel, and we know that's the life—plenty of easement, no problems except where to go, and what to do next for a good time. We look at the woman with the quiet eyes, the hands lying calmly in her lap and we are sure if she ever were worried, she's learned the secret of getting on top of her worries.

We listen to a long, philosophical lecture by a gentleman on the state of the war and the state of the world. We hear him speak of a beneficient Providence that rules and will not permit things to go at sixes and sevens indefinitely. We hear him talk about the ultimate triumph of right that has no relation to physical might. We sigh: Shame on us! He has cultivated the attitude toward life that is a bombproof shelter against the vicissitudes that keep us shivering and shaking.

We note the young business woman tripping out of her office building to meet the boy friend. She's gay, stepping high and looking handsome, because, as Kitty Foyle would say, she's happy. We look enviously at her and wish, Oh! if we could set back the clock to that age: nothing on our minds but love and laughter.

Think again, reader. They are all wrestlers on the mat with problems that vex. They are all fighting something which seems bigger than they. They win a round, lose a round, win a round, lose a round. Sometimes we catch them when they are feeling the exultation of victory, sometimes when they are writhing under the sting of defeat. They are just like us inside, however they may appear outside, having their laughter interrupted, their joy cut down, having their pleasant experiences punctured by the thought of some vexing problem they haven't been able to solve.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Baked Potato Cheese Balls

By BETSY NEWMAN

DOES YOUR husband demand potatoes for dinner every night—or noon, whenever you have dinner? And are you tired of cooking them in the same old ways? Try these cheese potato balls.

Today's Menu

Baked Lamb Steaks
Cheese Potato Balls
Scalloped Onions
Cabbage and Cucumber Salad
Deep Plum Pie Coffee

Baked Lamb Steaks

Trim and remove any extra fat there may be on lamb steaks cut from the shoulder. Rub them with salt and pepper, brown on both sides in lamb fat and put in casserole. Add 1-2 cup water, cover dish tightly and bake in moderate oven (325-400 degrees F.) for 1 1-2 hours. You may add finely chopped vegetables to the meat during the last 1-2 hour of cooking if you wish. Make gravy, using 2 tablespoons flour and extra stock, if necessary.

Cheese Potato Balls

Boil white potatoes in the usual manner. Mash, season well, whip until light, but not too soft, with melted butter and hot milk. Cool until convenient to handle. Shape into balls around a cube of American cheese. Roll in melted butter and then in corn flakes or breadcrumbs. Bake until nicely browned on all sides.

Scalloped Onions

Onions
2 tbsp. butter
3-4 tsp. sale
Dash pepper
Breadcrumbs or corn flakes
1 pt. milk

Peel and slice onions into buttered casserole, sprinkle with salt and pepper. Scald milk, add butter and melt it, pour over onions, top with breadcrumbs or corn flakes and bake 30 minutes, or until onions are tender.

Deep Plum Pie

1 qt. plums
1 cup sugar
Pie crust
1 tbsp. butter

Wash plums and put into baking dish, cover with the sugar, dot with butter. Make rich pie crust, roll out 1-4 inch thick and top plums in baking dish with same, cutting air holes to allow escape of steam. Bake 30 minutes in 400 degrees F. oven. When serving, cut dough in wedges and scoop plums out of dish on top.

Robots Lessen Housework

By ALICE DENHOFF

HOUSEKEEPING was never like this, opines grandma as she surveys the gadgets and robots designed to make household tasks easy and efficient. Old favorites, such as the vacuum cleaner and the iron, have been done over until they carry little resemblance to their earlier prototypes. There are vacuum cleaners which do a job of mothproofing as well as of cleaning. They are made to reach every nook and cranny and every inch of drapes and overstuffed furniture. Various attachments aid in the cleaning task.

There are miniature vacuum cleaners designed especially to handle clothes. Such a little hand machine is a good investment, for it saves many a trip to the cleaner. Good for furs, too.

New Irons

Another time and money saver, especially in the large household, is the electric steam iron that does a mighty efficient, professional looking job of pressing. Anyone can handle it and it is easy to operate. Not so long ago this iron was an expensive proposition but now its cost is way down. The electric irons with speed and current regulators are far less costly than the first electric irons. With one of the new irons, any novice can handle the various fabrics, real and synthetic, with nary a burn or wrinkle. The new irons are light in weight, easy to handle and vastly superior to the expensive iron of but a few years ago.

Kitchen Helps

There are new juicers for fruit juice addicts, easy to handle and to keep clean. One model extracts all the juice from oranges, lemons and grapefruits without taking along oil from the rind or pulp or seeds. All the parts that come in contact with the fruit are plastic and won't corrode. There are electric juicers too, much cheaper than the earlier models and much more efficient.

Even the can opener has gone modern. Now on the market is a gadget that punches holes, is a press-down can lid remover, a screw-driver, a bottle opener, a screw-cap wrench, a hammer, and which has also a sharp cutting edge. Take it home for a quarter, make it a family pet.

Dodger Fans Cheer Giants In Series With Cincinnati; Hubbell Wins First by 9-2

Giant Hurler Allows Only Seven Hits While His Mates Cracked Out 14 Safeties

PIRATES BEATEN

Cleveland Indians Lose Full Game to Detroit by Losing to Boston 16-7

(By Bill White Associated Press Sports Writer).

This is one of those rare occasions—like a total eclipse of the sun. It marks the only time this—or any other—year when loyal Brooklyn fans will yell for, not at, the New York Giants

The Giants are helping their rambunctious rivals from across the East River catch up with the National League leading Cincinnati Reds. If there's anything a Dodger fan would rather see than the Giants being murdered it's his own superbas surpassing the Reds.

Hence the tag line in every Brooklyn prayer, "and please, bless the Giants—just for this series with the Reds."

While the Dodgers were idle yesterday the Giants, with a makeshift lineup that included Mel Ott at third, and Johnny McCarthy at first, hopped on the Reds by a 9-2 count.

King Carl Hubbell screwballed the Reds into submission with a superb seven-hit performance while his mates were bashing out 14 hits off Paul Derringer and three assistants. That left Brooklyn four games back of the Reds—just a short skip for the dashing Dodgers.

While Hubbell was making hay out of the Reds, Dick Errickson of the Bees was doing the same to Pittsburgh Pirates' hopes for a first division berth. He won his ninth game of the season 3-0.

In the American League's only game, Boston Red Sox gained their most decisive triumph of the season over the league-leading Cleveland Indians—smashing out 14 hits for a 16-7 win.

Two other American League games were scheduled—Detroit at New York and Chicago at Philadelphia—but both were rained out.

SHELL 'OILERS' DEFEAT TRENTON IN SECOND GAME

Local Mushballers Will Meet Kingston in the Next Round Starting Monday

SCORE IS 5-3

Oilers Score 5 Runs in Second and Play Fine Defensive Ball to Hold Opposition

The sensational fielding of a trio of Trenton Doughnut Company outfielders was hardly sufficient to pull the second game of the first round of the Intermediate "A" O.A.S.A. playoffs here last night between Bileville Shell Oil and the visitors out of the fire, and their mates failure to back them up with their war-clubs in the pinches cost them the pastime by a 5-3 count. The local yellowshirts cleaned the series in two straight games having won the first tussle in Trenton last week by an 11-1 count. The first game of the second round will be played next Monday night between the Kingston titleholders and the winners of last night's game.

The tussle last night was a regular hit and run affair with the Shell Oil buldgeoneers poling the pill to the far corners of the lot only to have Morin and V. Burtt, starry outer gardeners of the visitors pull off sensational catches. At that, the Shell gang smashed out an even dozen safeties off the offerings of Burtt, one of them a homer by Ronsky, triples by Henn and Reynolds, and two-baggers by Whalen and Henn. Ellis, Trenton shortstop, was the only "Doughnut" to get an extra base off Johnny Bawden's flinging, getting a triple in the first inning.

Bawden Eased Up

Bawden held the visitors to five hits for six innings and eased up in the seventh, when the Trentonians got to him for a trio. A fluke single that precipitated an argument in the ninth, when the visitors staged a dangerous rally, paved the way for another trio of so-called safeties, but with the bases loaded and the tying run on the sacks, the Shell hurler bore down to strike out the third man. Bawden struck out an even dozen, while Burtt whiffed three.

Shell got all their runs in the second inning, when five hits shoved as many runners across the plate. From then on, some clever fielding choked off an rallies they might have staged. Doughnuts went runless until the eighth when they got a single, and again in the ninth a queer decision at the plate, and a timely single got them another brace.

Ellis, Trenton, with four, Henn with three and Ronsky with a homer and single led the hit parade.

SNEAD AND McSPADEN PLAY OFF FOR CANADIAN OPEN GOLF TITLE

Jug McSpaden, LEFT, winner of the Canadian open last year, came through in the finals of the competition to tie "Slammin' Sammy" Snead, RIGHT, for first place with a count of 281 for the 72 holes just as it appeared as if Sammy might walk off with the title after playing a brilliant match. Fans are shown, CENTRE, at the 18th hole of the Scarboro course as McSpaden finished to tie Snead. Snead wins playoff with McSpaden by one stroke in 18 holes on Monday afternoon. Snead carded a par 71 to McSpaden's 72.

SLAMMIN' SAM SNEAD DEFEATS 'JUG' McSPADEN

Loser Misses Two-Foot Putt on 18th Green for Tie in Canadian Open

SNEAD SHOOTS PAR

Winner Went Out in 37 and Came Home in 34 Strokes

Toronto, Aug. 20 (CP)—Slammin' Sam Snead of Shawnee-On-Delaware, Pa., seems to thrive on playoffs in the Canadian open golf championship.

Snead took the title with a par 71 yesterday over the Scarboro Golf and Country Club course to a 72 for Harold (Jug) McSpaden of Winchester, Mass., the 1939 champion, in their 18-hole medal playoff. The extra round was forced when both ended with 281 Saturday in the regular 72-hole competition.

When Snead won the Canadian title in 1938 at Toronto Mississauga he was also forced to go through 27 holes in a playoff with Harry Cooper of Chicago, after both tied at 277 over the regular route.

Over Mississauga, Snead and Cooper fired 67's and were forced to go an extra nine holes with Snead winning by five strokes. It looked for a time as if yesterday's playoff would be extended to 27 holes until McSpaden, a usually-reliable putter, missed a two-foot putt on the home green.

Reached Green in Two

Both players reached the 18th green in two shots, and tied on the round. However, Snead's ball was only five feet from the pin while McSpaden's was 40. McSpaden putted first and his ball stopped 24 inches away.

All Snead needed to do was sink his five-footer to win but he "babbled" the ball and it stopped short. The crowd of 1,500 persons ringing the green were expecting a further nine holes to be played when McSpaden stepped up and missed his short putt to relinquish the title.

As winner, Snead gained $1,000 for first prize and the Seagram Gold Cup, while McSpaden gained $600 in prize money. In addition, the players split half the gate for the day while the other half was turned over to the Canadian Red Cross by the Royal Canadian Golf Association and the Scarboro Club.

Snead was out in 37, one over par, while McSpaden had a 38. Both had par 34's coming home. Although most of the day's drama was packed into the action on the last green there were a few other high spots. One came when Snead pounded out a 300-yard drive on the 394 yard, par-four, 15th hole. His 20-foot putt for an eagle hit the left side of the cup and curled almost the whole way around the cup, hanging on the lip. He had to be satisfied with a birdie.

A Bond that Joins TWO FRIENDLY NATIONS

● Linking up the two neighboring countries of Canada and the United States, the Peace Bridge is a symbol of an international understanding, friendship and goodwill that have lasted for over a century. In that Bridge, indeed, lies the hope of the world for a new order, because its existence testifies to the fact that on this new continent a new ideal of international relationship has been achieved ...an ideal that eliminates fortifications and makes jealousy, friction and enmity obsolete.

The Canadian Open Golf Championship is also a bond between two friendly nations... a bond that brings together on the fairway of international friendship the leading golfing aces of the two neighboring countries...joined in sporting rivalry for the glory of winning the Canadian Open and the Seagram Gold Cup.

As donor of the Cup, The House of Seagram pays tribute to this historic event and its significance as a symbol of the friendship between Canada and the United States.

The House of Seagram joins with all Canadian sportsmen in paying tribute to "Slammin' Sammy" Snead, winner of the 1940 Canadian Open, whose name will be inscribed on the scroll of honour within the Seagram Gold Cup.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

CANNIFTON WINS OVER LATTA 9-2 TO EVEN SERIES

Homesters Stage 'Blitzkrieg' in Sixth to Score Five Runs

PLAY WEDNESDAY

Winners Spot Latta Two Runs but Once in Gear Never Were Headed

It's all even again in the finals of the South Hastings League between Cannifton and Latta, as at Cannifton last evening the homesters staged a "blitzkrieg" in the sixth inning to score five runs and hang up a 9-2 score over the Latta boys with the series now standing at one game each. The series will continue at Latta on Wednesday evening, when the third game of the best-of-five series will be played with the winners standing a good chance to go on and take the Tummon Trophy, emblematic of baseball supremacy in the popular South Hastings League.

After spotting the Latta lads two runs in the initial frame, the Cannifton team, headed by Lorne Jarrell, who was serving them up from the hilltop, played superb ball to hold the losers off the score sheet, while they went on to score two runs in the second and two in the third to end up with five in the sixth as the Latta infield fell to pieces.

Both Jarrell and the Latta hurler, Dunning, were nicked for seven hits, but Jarrell was able to scatter the losers' blows with the exception of the first inning, while Cannifton made their hits count.. Jarrell in limiting the losers to seven hits, walked two and struck out three, while Dunning had difficulty in finding the plate and walked six, hit one batter and struck out five.

Snappy Double Plays

E. Jarrell and Eves for the winners were most consistent with the [illegible] two singles, while Cearley conked one over the right field fence for a triple with the bases loaded in the sixth. Meraw, for the losers, also hit two singles with Marsh blasting out a double in the third which was wasted.

Snappy fielding kept the score down as double plays executed by both teams were instrumental in cutting off scoring rallies. Latta robbed Cannifton of runs in the first, when Gannon hit to the pitcher with the bases loaded with both the runner coming home and the batter being out in a fast double killing, while Cannifton turned the trick in the sixth with a short, to second to first double play. Eves in left for the winners played well defensively as did Gannon at third for Cannifton.

The line-up:

Latta—Parks, 1b.; Meraw, 2b.; Marsh, l.f.; Callaghan, c.; Foster, 3b.; Wagar, s.s.; Goulet, r.f.; Dunning, p. and Harrison, c.f.

Cannifton—E. Jarrell, c.; Empsen, s.s.; L. Jarrell, p.; Bleekman, c.f.; Gannon, 3b.; Cearley, 1b.; Collins, 2b.; Eves, l.f. and Smallhorn.

Score by innings:		r.	h.	e.
Latta	2 0 0 0 0 0 0	2	7	2
Cannifton	0 2 2 0 0 5 x	9	7	2

Umpires: Carson, plate and Houston, bases.

BUFFALO HURLERS DOING FINE JOB IN PAST WEEKS

Earl Cook Has Pitched 26 Scoreless Innings in Last Three Games

CHIEFS BEATEN

By The Associated Press

It may sound like a misguided effort at humor to say that a seventh-place club can play an important role in deciding a pennant race, but that's just what Buffalo Bisons may do in the International League.

During the last couple of weeks Bisons have been getting some of the most remarkable pitching the circuit has seen all year. By that means they've won 14 of their last 18 games, including six from Jersey City, the 1939 champions, and two from Newark Bears, who are making a great bid for the 1940 flag.

Buffalo continued its amazing showing yesterday against Syracuse Chiefs, who are in fifth place and have made themselves strong contenders for a playoff spot with a recent spurt.

A two-hit hurling job by Earl Cook plus a 12-hit assault on Ted Kleinhans that was topped by a five-run ninth inning, gave Bisons a 7-0 decision. It was the only game played in the league yesterday as rain swept the circuit.

That one game doesn't look like very much, but the background lends great possibilities. It was Cook who turned in the amazing feat of shutting out Jersey City in both games of a double-header last Thursday, so he now has a record of 26 consecutive scoreless innings and has allowed only 13 hits in three games.

Teaming with him on the Buffalo mound staff are Hal White, the pitching rookie of the year, and Floyd Giebell. They haven't always been steady, but White has won a dozen games, including three two-hitters, while Giebell has turned in five and six-hit performances in two of his last three starts.

There's still about four weeks to go before the regular season ends. Rochester and Newark are separated by only one percentage point in their race for the lead. And before the season finishes, Bears pay one last visit to Buffalo while Red Wings visit Bisons twice and play them in two series at home. There's plenty of opportunity for that Buffalo mound staff to make trouble.

CHAPTER 20.

Jean Carver

"Yes, Brooke, I loved you," Jim said, "but knowing I'd fail you in many ways helped me get over it. And Jean is my kind of person. We won't worry if dust gets on our new furniture or about keeping up with our neighbors. She doesn't care about clothes. But she does about music."

Jim lighted a cigarette. "I suppose some people will call us failures or cowards. We could stay on here and both work, live in a small apartment, buy a car and save to go to Europe. We've talked it over and we prefer a cottage with roses and mortgages and kiddie cars which you stumble over on the porch. It's too tough for me here—the efficiency, the drive, the strain. And what have you got when you've worn yourself out? My boss has a bad stomach, an annual nervous breakdown and a neurotic wife. We're going to clear out and go back to the simple life."

Brooke smiled. It was good to find some one who wasn't grasping, one person with a small plan for his life and some one to share it.

"It sounds to me like a recipe for happiness, Jim...."

Before they parted he said, "I'll see Jean tonight, of course, and call you tomorrow. Maybe we can have dinner together tomorrow night. Tonight I'm moving into a hotel. When I start cleaning out the apartment, I'm probably going to find a lot of things I thought I'd lost!"

Brooke walked back to the hotel, her own perplexities temporarily forgotten in pleasant thoughts of Jim and Jean's future. She thought, "That's what I wanted. I don't know what I want now. Yes, I do know this—that I don't want to run away and I don't want half measures and don't want to live in a rosy world of my own creating again."

When she reached the hotel, she called Barney Glass.

"Brooke?" he said with characteristic gusto. "Back in town? Good!"

His informality cheered her and put her at ease. But before she spoke Barney said, "I'm sorry but I'm very busy just now. How about lunch tomorrow? Want to hear about your trip. Always thought I'd like to go to Hawaii."

They lunched in a showy expensive place the following day and Barney proved to be not only a gay Humpty Dumpty but also a helpful one. Briefly Brooke had told him of Mrs. Kingsbury's death. But she did mention Rod or Irene or Tony, feeling that repetition was futile and unrelated to the present situation. Simply and frankly she told him that she needed a job.

Lighting a cigar, Barney puffed for some time, his dark little eyes intense with thinking. "I can't do anything for you at my office," he said finally in his blustering voice. "I'll see what I can do on the outside. Seems to me there are too many poor secretaries."

"I'm not sure I'm a good one."

His grin showed small yellow teeth. "I'll bet you're a swell one." The shrewd little eyes appraised her smooth, flushed face and vivid mouth and warm interested dark eyes. "I'll get in touch with you in a day or two...." And when relief softened her expression, he said, "I sold my yacht, by the way. I was a bum fisherman anyway and bought a place in Connecticut. I can get more people in the house than I could on the yacht. Have you up some week-end......"

His next grin held a secret highly amusing to him and which he was obviously unwilling to divulge. "Probably'll see Julian tonight. I'll tell him you're back in town...."

Brooke's heart beat faster but she was not certain she wished to see the enigmatic Julian again. When she began to offer her thanks for his kindness, Barney interrupted by saying that he did not often have the opportunity to lunch with a girl so pretty.

Strangers have been my friends, she thought, walking back to the hotel. At Rockefeller Plaza she did not stop but her eyes were absent with remembrance of a cold March day and Julian Carlton and herself. She had been nearly mad then. She was better now, she told herself, but her thoughts turned to Rod and as she crossed a street she felt suddenly faint. She had come to the end of things and people. Would she ever come to the end of loving Rod? And she felt faint, she knew, because not until this moment and for no apparent reason had she wanted to come to the end of loving him....

Jim had called that morning, saying that he and Jean would call for her that evening at the hotel. With hours to spare, Brooke rested and wrote to Helen and her father and Grace, telling them of Mrs. Kingsbury's death but not mentioning that she had seen Rod. She knew Helen would be relieved when she wrote that she was remaining in New York, determined to find a job, and that Barney had been a friend in need.

Several hours later she stepped from the elevator to see Jim and a small slender dark-haired girl with immense gray eyes set in a frame of thick black lashes. Jean Carver wore a nondescript dark frock and an equally nondescript dark hat, and shoes with low heels. Her white gloves were soiled and her lipstick had been applied hastily. Smartly dressed, Brooke thought, she would have been a stunning girl. And when she smiled and spoke, Brooke knew that much of her appeal for Jim lay in her calm, soothing voice.

They walked to a nearby restaurant, Jean speaking happily of how busy she had been, glancing up at the lanky Jim with quiet adoration in her eyes. She loves him terribly, Brooke thought. The things their eyes said, things not for her, made her lonely.

"We're both accummulators," Jean said when they were seated at a table. "We can't bear to part with anything. I spent two nights packing and throwing away at Jim's and still we have too much stuff."

Brooke looked at Jean's hands, small but strong practical hands, the nails worn down, the pale polish chipped. Yes, Jim was right. They had much in common....

Brooke said, "I talked to Jim so much about myself that I didn't ask him when you were going to be married."

"Next week. On Wednesday," Jean said. Her eyes were excited, her lovely voice musical. "But not here. I'm a minister's daughter and father, of course, must perform the ceremony. He has a small church in a little town in Ohio..."

Jim said, "We're getting married and quitting our jobs. That's the latest. At the office they think we're crazy."

Jean said, "That's all right, darling. At least, you won't think about the office while we're on our honeymoon. Father's lending us his car. We'll take a motor trip somewhere—Canada, probably."

Though she understood, Brooke felt excluded and desperately lonely. Before she left them, she told Jim that Barney had promised to help her: Jim said he would see her again before the wedding. Standing a few moments at the entrance of the hotel, Brooke watched them walk down the crowded street together—a lean man in an old gray hat, and a small slim girl who could have been beautiful—if she cared. Small people content to be small and happy, quietly but terribly happy.

Three days passed before Barney's voice boomed over the telephone.

"Sorry to have been so long about it," he said. "But I think I've got something lined up for you. Go to see Wilson Stone this afternoon. He's an architect who lost his secretary because she was bored stiff. He thinks he wants another one, Lord knows why." He gave her Wilson Stone's address, asked her how she was and rang off abruptly.

At two o'clock Brooke stood in the corridor of an office building looking at the letters on a door which spelled "Wilson T. Stone.... Architect." She knocked once and opened the door, stepping into a newly furnished office. Then the door to a private office opened and a tall and handsome young man came forward.

"Miss Carter? I was expecting you. Come in," he said most cordially and led the way to his office.

Fifteen minutes later Brooke emerged into the June sunlight with a job and the apologies of Wilson Stone who had said that although he actually needed no secretary, since he was just beginning and had no business, he supposed he should have one.

Brooke called Barney and thanked him.

Barney said, laughing, "Don't thank me for a job like that but it was the best I could do."

Within a few days it was evident that the major number of Wilson Stone's telephone calls came from Mrs. Stone, who had a young and breathless voice. They lived in Connecticut, he told Brooke, and their first child was cutting his first teeth. Brooke found him a charming and rather bewildered young man and felt a little sorry for him. She had almost nothing to do.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were starting to eat supper and pop said to ma, Well my deer, I see you've been decorated.

Meaning her red Feed The Hungry button, and ma said, Yes, I made a little contribution to the common cause, And as a matter of fact so did Benny, he has a button too, although I must say it was more or less like pulling teeth get him to make his own contribution to the common cause. And as a matter of fact so did Benny he has a button too, although I must say it was more or less like pulling teeth getting him to make his own contribution so he would be really entitled to wear it, she said.

Well holey smokes, pop, I mean G wizzickers, ma had a lot of money still left in her bag after she gave a half a doller for her button, but all I had altogether was a cent, and after I gave that for my button, I didn't have anything left, I said, and pop said, That's something to be really proud of. It's not everybody that's capable of giving all their worldly wealth to the less fortunate, especially nowadays. But I dont see your button, you must be wearing it in some very humble and inconspicious place, he said.

Meaning it wasn't anywheres in site, and ma said, My goodness, dont tell me you've lost it after all that mental torture in giving up your cent for it? and I said, No mam, Puds Simkins is wearing it. Puds is a button saver, he's got a whole collection, so he'll get more good out of it than I would, I said.

Do you mean you gave it to him? ma said, and pop said, My my, unselfishness is like a snowball, it just grows and grows by its own power of attraction. Did Puds happen to respond by giving you something as a mark of his own unselfish devotion to his fellow beans? he said.

Meaning was the whole thing really a swap, and I said, Well, he gave me a kind of an old keyring that nobody can work but yourself unless you show them how.

O eat your supper, ma said, and pop said, Feed the hungry.

Wich I did.

German Anti-Nazis Are Rounded Up

Chancy, Switzerland, Aug. 20—(AP)— Hundreds of German anti-Nazis who fled their homeland when Adolf Hitler came into power are being rounded up by his agents in conquered France and taken back to Nazi jails, reports from across the border disclosed today.

Armed with long lists of names, Nazi officials were said to be making the rounds of civilian internment camps in the unoccupied zone in France in a widespread search for fugitive German Nationals.

Neutral observers told of seeing large groups of forlorn prisoners herded into trucks under guard of heavily armed Germans in civilian clothes and being driven off to Germany via the occupied zone.

Several hundred German Nationals were said to have been taken from the Gurs Camp in the Pyrenees in this fashion within the last week.

Many of these fought for the Republican army during the Spanish Civil War as members of the International Brigade and later sought refuge in France, where they were interned.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal, Aug. 20—(CP)—Calves were 25 to 50 cents higher, as other classes of livestock held firm, on Montreal markets today, the Dominion Agriculture Department reported.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 20—(CP)—Mining shares were narrowly stronger on the Toronto Stock Exchange today and other groups held practically unchanged. Trading was again on a small scale and only 38,000 shares changed hands up till 1 p.m.

Gold stocks made the best showing, posting an index gain of .36 at noon. In the early afternoon buying of Kerr-Addison and Preston increased and these issues added 7 to 10 cents. Smaller gains came through for Perron, Central Patricia, San Antonio and Little Long Lac. In the base metals, Smelters was stronger and Steep Rock a bit heavy.

Steels and Utilities improved narrowly. Walkers Common firmed 3-4 to 36 3-4 and Imperial Oil was higher. Royalite and Home Oil were up slightly and other Western oils remained unchanged.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 20 (AP)—Mild rallying tendencies crept into the stock market today despite the lack of any really heartening war news.

The list got off to a fairly good recovery start, with steels and motors in front. Gains ran to a point or so at the best but were shaded near the fourth hour. Dealings picked up for a while, then reverted to sluggishness.

Among stocks attracting support were U.S. Steel, General Motors, U.S. Rubber, United Aircraft, International Paper Pfd, American Can, Anaconda, Dupont, American Telephone and Texas Corp.

Canadian issues were sluggish. Canadian Pacific advanced 3-8 of a point while Lake Shore Mines held unchanged.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Aug. 20—(CP)—Sales on dressedweight hogs rose 30c at Hull, early Bacon-Hog Markets shewed today.

Dressedweights: Brantford $11.50 Hull $11.30, Stratford $11.40 to $11.50.

Pierdon Fatality Has Been Adjourned

Port Hope, Ont., Aug. 20 (CP).—A coroner's jury, empanelled to enquire into the death of Mrs. Isobel Pierdon of Toronto, was indefinitely adjourned after viewing the remains last night. Mrs. Pierodn was instantly killed Sunday evening in a head-on collision near Newtonville, eleven miles west of Port Hope.

Mr. Pierdon and his daughter, Isobel, were admitted to Port Hope General Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Johnston of Grafton, occupants of the second car involved in the accident are also in Port Hope Hospital where Mrs. Johnston's condition is said to be serious. She suffered broken arms, nose and knee fractures and a possible fracture of the skull. The body of Mrs. Pierdon was released for burial and taken to Toronto this morning.

Receipts Are Light On Produce Markets

Toronto, Aug. 20 — Trading was featureless on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, with all lines closing at Saturday's price levels.

Demand for butter was spotty, and the market stayed quiet. First-grade Ontario creamery solids, offerings of which were light, held steady at 21 1-2c. Dealers continued to have difficulty in moving under grades, especially 37 score butter.

Egg receipts were light, but appeared sufficient to meet a fair demand during the morning. Trading was dull in the afternoon and quotations remained unchanged.

In its weekly market report, the Dominion Department of Agriculture says there has been a resumption of egg export business, with some grade B eggs of current production due to start moving next week. The Department adds: "This should be more properly regarded as the wind-up of the previous movement rather than the start of a new one, as the present volume will be limited, and will amount only to a cleaning-up of surplus stocks. The shipments under this movement probably will not amount to more than four or five thousand cases, chiefly because the price in Canada is moving above the export level."

Britain's Mastery

to a certain number of vital instructions. Doors and portholes closed sharply at 9:30 and no one on deck after that moment. Indeed at the moment of the setting of the sun the cigarettes must be extinguished—for the dull glow may be seen by a seeking enemy eye in the clouds at a distance quite unbelievable.

Immediately after the ship sailed came the first lifeboat drill—to be held regularly every day afterwards at 11:30. For 10 days the life belt must not be left for an instant. Small children just able to walk, toddle about with the "standard" duly strapped on—a buffer which saves many a bump on the tilting decks. Small boys find them splendid punching bags, but the majority of travellers carry them slung over one shoulder—replacing the gasmask they have been carrying there for nearly a year.

Women are warned to never let their children out of their sight—guardians accompanying those returning alone to Canada asked to know always where their young charges are so that at the first blast of "six shorts and a long, they may be instantly placed in the life line.

At last a slight dot grows on the horizon to the west—grows rapidly and darting across the sun come three flashing bombers—they are the first birds to reach the oncoming convoy—even beating the gulls—they are the welcome to Canada and the proof that watch is kept as vigilantly on this side of the Atlantic as that left 10 days before—and the realization comes that one has not left the war after all.

British Bombers In Three Waves Attack Boulogne

Observers From British Coast Think at Least One Ammunition Dump Blown Up

FOE RAIDS SCATTERED

Naxis Fail to Close Channel in First Phase of Large-Scale War

London, Aug. 20—(CP)—Britain's Royal Air Force carried the war to Germany and German-held France with a torrent of bombs today as the country awaited a full war report from Prime Minister Churchill.

United States aspects of Britain's foreign policy were expected to be among the topics discussed by Mr. Churchill, appearing before the House of Commons this afternoon to review the air war, the military situation in the Mediterranean area and foreign affairs.

Mr. Churchill was expected to talk for at least an hour in his first comprehensive review of foreign affairs since becoming Prime Minister last May 11, touching upon British-American talks regarding acquisition by the United States of naval and air bases in British possessions in the western hemisphere, the question of food getting through the British blockade to the continent and Britain's relations with Japan and the Balkans.

The House planned a general public debate following Churchill's statement. Parliament is to recess on Thursday until Sept. 5.

Heavy Bombardment of Boulogne by R. A. F.

German raiders capped a day of relative inactivity with scattered attacks over widely-scattered sections of the country last night and early today, but these assaults paled before the R.A.F. bombardment of Boulogne, the third in 48 hours.

British bombers attacked the port in three waves, the bursting bombs, German searchlights and fires started on ground providing a brilliant aerial display visible from the English southeast coast, 20-odd miles away. Observers thought at least one ammunition dump was destroyed.

A harvest moon made visibility unusually good for the attack.

Abruptly at 11.15 p.m. and again at 1 a.m. all German radio stations went off the air, indicating widespread British air raids on Germany.

(Berlin dispatches said the city had its fourth air raid alarm of the war, sending residents to cover for an hour and 40 minutes but there was no immediate confirmation in London).

British defences shot down a total of four German raiders in isolated forays which marked yesterday's lull in the air war against Britain.

Scattered Nazi Raids

Last night and early today the Germans raided East Angelia, killing three civilians and injuring a number of others; a southeast region where bombs were dropped in the open country; a south coast beach, where a raider was shot down after dropping four bombs; northwest England, where fires were started by incendiary bombs, and a northeast England town where one person was killed and several injured by a bomb in a residential area. Planes also were heard over Wales.

It was reported today that last Saturday, the day Germany declared its "total blockade" around the British Isles, two Irishmen were killed when a German plane machine-gunned the British passenger ship St. Patrick off the Eire coast. The vessel was carrying Irish passengers from Wales to Eire.

The Admiralty last night listed 1,074 officers and men as missing and 130 killed in the sinking of the aircraft carrier Glorious June 9 — Britain's worst naval disaster of the war.

Nazis Fail to Close Channel

A military source said today the Germans had tried to close the English Channel to Britain in the first phase of their large-scale air war but failed.

"Our shipping is still moving through the channel," he said.

Several London newspapers today praised the agreement of the United States and Canada to set up a permanent defence board.

The News Chronicle said the step was "as welcome as it is important," adding: "We count the defence of American democracy no less important for the future welfare of mankind than our own defence."

The Times said the agreement is "a further step of President Roosevelt's policy of strengthening America's bulwarks and should be read in connection with the resolutions of the Pan-American Conference and with the declared desire of the United States government to secure the use of strategic air bases in the vicinity of the Panama Canal."

The paper added "British opinion has shown every readiness to meet the desire half way."

Companies Extend Factories

London, Aug 20—(CP)— Two American motor car companies have extended certain sections of their factories in order to help the Indian government get an extra 30,000 cars needed for the Indian army the British Broadcasting Corporation reported yesterday.

CANADIAN NAVY

The personnel at present numbering 10,000 would be increased sufficiently to complement vessels as they were produced. At the moment more than 15,000 workmen were engaged in shipyards throughout the Dominion.

The navy's first press conference, attended by some 30 members of the press gallery and newspapermen of Ottawa, was carried off in considerable style.

Departures Kept Secret

Seated about a long green-topped table, the newspapermen were told by the Minister that there never had been an authenticated case of an enemy radio reporting departure of a convoy from Canadian shores. The Germans started such rumors as part of their propaganda.

Questioned as to whether Canada might expect some of the United States destroyers now out of use to be turned over to the Canadian navy in line with co-operation in North America defence, Mr. MacDonald did not comment further than to say the Canadian navy had sufficient reserves of personnel to man several more destroyers if they became available to guard North American shores.

Mr. Macdonald's meeting with the press followed a similar gathering with Minister for Air C. G. Power, the Navy Minister's press conference, it is understood, will hereafter be weekly affairs and there are indications that conferences with the Air Minister and with Defence Minister J. L. Ralston may be frequent if not a fixed times.

CONSERVATIVES

The by elections left the standings in the House of Commons as follows: Liberals, 178; Conservative, 40; New Democracy, 10; Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, 8; Independent-Liberal, 3; Liberal-Progressive, 3; Independent-Conservative, 1; Unity, 1; Independent, 1. Total — 245.

Second Defeat in Five Months

In Saskatoon Miss Agnes Macphail who had been a member of parliament for 18 years until the Jan. 25 dissolution, suffered her second defeat in less than five months. In voting that saw two women candidates contesting for a House of Commons seat for the first time, Miss Macphail ran second to Ald. Bence but well ahead of three men and the other woman, Miss Wilna Moore, Independent, who was a poor sixth.

Miss Macphail, defeated March 26 as a U.F.O.-Labor candidate in Grey-Bruce, was nominated in Saskatoon by the United Reform movement that twice had elected Rev. Brown.

Carleton, the riding that sent Sir John A. Macdonald and Sir Robert Borden to parliament, maintained its record of always electing a Conservative by giving Mr. Boucher an easy victory over Nelson, an Independent New Democracy candidate who had entered the contest in protest against the practice of election by acclamation.

In Waterloo Mr. Breithaupt had a substantial majority over his only opponent, Dr. S. F. Leavine, Conservative.

GERMAN OFFICER

As Ontario and Royal Canadian Mounted Police halted motor cars on highways and searched summer cottages for the escaped man, a high military authority said that an extremely dangerous gang of fifth columnists had planned and aided the escape.

The German officer, a husky man 28 years old, is believed to made his way to freedom at three o'clock yesterday morning while the other prisoners distracted the attention of the guards by singing and shouting.

His disappearance was discovered at reveille at 6:30 a.m. Guards found a timbered tunnel had been dug from the cook-house to a point just beyond a guardhouse on the northern side of the camp.

Took Months to Build

Police say the three-foot high tunnel must have taken two months to dig. This would mean that the escape was planned as soon as the Germans arrived in northern Ontario from England. Its size suggested a mass escape was planned but only one man disappeared. The timber for the tunnel is believed to have been taken from Canadian workmen engaged in erecting camp buildings

The escaped officer dropped the blue trousers and khaki shirt he was wearing 100 yards from the tunnel exit and police believe he was met by someone who provided him with civilian clothes.

Police also believe that the escape was timed for yesterday so that it could be carried out before war veterans who took over guarding of the camp from soldiers last week could become familiar with the camp.

The escape disclosed that another prisoner sought his freedom last Saturday and was captured within seven hours. He was found hiding in a cornfield, dressed in swimming trunks and light shoes, after escaping under barbed wire lining the camp swimming area in the lake on which it is situated.

Officer Described

The officer who escaped yesterday was described in this way by police: Age 28; height 5 feet 11 inches; weight 154 pounds; square shoulders; square head; dark steel-grey hair; medium forehead; brown eyes; straight, well-formed nose; heavy eyebrows; clean shaven; thin lips; dark, sallow complexion; protruding jaw. He speaks English fairly well but with an accent.

Police are attempting to locate a motor car driven by a woman in the belief it may have carried the escaped officer out of the camp district. The car was noticed driving toward Toronto in an erratic manner yesterday and when a motorist crowded the car to the side of the road and rebuked the driver, the man beside her slumped in his seat and hid his face. Police have the licence number of the car.

Officers conducting the search said last night they could not be sure whether a mass escape had been planned. They thought it possible the man who escaped might have been selected from a group of English-speaking prisoners or that the prisoners drew lots to determine which should escape.

The camp doctor described the officer who escaped as highly educated. He is also described by camp authorities, as sullen, neurotic and a troublemaker.

Ottawa, Aug. 20.—(CP)—Brig.-Gen. E. De B. Panet, director of Internment operations is personally conducting an investigation into the escape of German prisoner from a Northern Ontario Internment Camp, an official of the State Department said today.

General Panet will arrive at the camp today.

Absence of the prisoner, who was brought to Canada from England and who escaped early yesterday by tunneling his way out of the camp, was first noted yesterday at reveille. The search is continuing, the official said, with nothing to report as yet.

Following discovery of the escape he said, a radio capable of receiving messages from Germany was discovered in the camp.

First reports last night of the finding of a radio set in the internment camp did not indicate whether it was merely a receiver or both transmitter and receiver. On fuller information today it is stated that the set was only a receiver.

Hospital Dairy Barn Burns at London

Though Flames Did Not Spread Orderlies Ready to Transfer Patients from Hospital Wing Near Barn

London, Ont., Aug. 20—(CP)—A huge dairy barn, part of the Ontario Hospital here, was destroyed early today by fire of unknown origin. Loss was estimated at $25,000 including hay and feed.

The blaze was discovered shortly after midnight and although the flames did not spread, Dr. G. H. Stevenson, hospital superintendent, ordered patients in the west wing near the barn to dress. Orderlies were in readiness to transfer them to another part of the hospital had the wing caught fire.

Flames from the brick building rose 100 feet in the air and attracted a crowd of several thousand persons. A special squad of city police patrolled the hospital grounds during the fire.

Lewis Gunner Shoots Down 3 Nazi Dive Bombers

London, Aug. 20 (CP) — An aircraftsman who witnessed a raid on the southeast coastal area Sunday said today that a Lewis gunner aged 18, shot down three German dive bombers single-handed.

When the attack came, the aircraftman said, "I did not feel too good but when I noticed the 18-year-old lad coolly handle his Lewis gun and bring down three all by himself it thrilled me as nothing had done before."

Two German planes were reported to have collided and crashed in the same engagement.

Superiority of Luftwaffe Not Demonstrated In Recent Battles for Mastery of Skies

New York, Aug. 20—(CP)— The "extraordinary feature" of the battle for mastery of the British skies "is that it has failed to demonstrate the overwhelming superiority of the luftwaffe that everybody took for granted," The New York Times said today in an editorial on the Royal Air Force.

Discussing the latest lull in Nazi raids over Britain, the editorial said whatever the reason, "it is to be noted that there is no let-up in the offensive raids of the Royal Air Force. Night after night it repeats its deadly hammering at important objectives in enemy territory."

The paper added that a German order forbidding letters from the Ruhr district, where the R.A.F. has pounded factories and other military objectives, to other parts of Germany "strongly suggests that grave damage may have been inflicted in that great industrial valley, the forge of the Nazi war machine."

It is too soon for forecasts, too soon to draw one's breath in hope, The Times says, "but not too soon to applaud the brilliant performance of an outnumbered force . . ."

"During these crucial days the quality and spirit of the Royal Air Force have been written into the great legend, this time not in earth or water but in the sky."

Also discussing the lull in German raids, The Herald Tribune said it is "striking" that after a week of intensive pounding the British reports "are all speaking in a tone of confidence, even of 'elation,' while there is an exaggeration and a confusion in the febrile propaganda outgivings of the Nazis which might possibly imply some degree of uncertainty over what to do next."

"In Britain and her geography the Hitler war machine has run for the first time into an opposition that is tough and strong; a citadel not to be taken by treachery, which cannot be overrun by tanks and which can trade blow for blow in the air."

London Papers Welcome Action Of Canada and U. S. to Set up Permanent Joint Defence Board

London, Aug. 20—(CP Cable) — The News Chronicle said today that Canada, because of her dual role, as an individual power in the western hemisphere and as a member of the British Commonwealth of Nations, should serve to link Britain and the United States still closer.

Discussing the Canada-United States joint defence scheme the newspaper said editorially that "agreement by the two countries to set up a permanent joint defence board is as welcome as it is important." It added with reference to the possibility of the transfer of certain British and Canadian naval air bases in the western hemisphere to the United States: "We count the defence of American democracy no less important for the future welfare of mankind than our own defence."

Hannen Swaffer, columnist of The Daily Herald said that "while the battle of Britain rages round our shores destiny is making overseas decisions of glorious promise to the future of mankind."

Declaring that "reciprocity was killed by toryism not long before the last war" the columnist says: "Today something much more —a joint defence scheme with American air bases in the West Indies—is being discussed with hush-hush perhaps, but with Whitehall's complete agreement."

He went on:

"The two great commonwealths are . . . so facing realities that soon both will understand that more and more as the years pass, trans-Atlantic co-operation must grow.

"Faith in the British system has been revitalised . . . so today it is with blessing we say: "Canada, through you new links can be forged between us and our cousins across your unarmed frontier. Make your own decisions. They are ours."

The Times said the agreement is a "further step of President Roosevelt's policy of strengthening America's bulwarks and should be read in connection both with the resolutions of the Pan-American Conference and with the declared desire of the United States government to secure the use of strategic air bases in the vicinity of the Panama Canal."

"British opinion has shown every readiness to meet the desire halfway," it went on. "Defence of the Panama Canal and British interest in the same is real, if in the indirect sense in which the defence of Britain is an American interest."

The Daily Express and The Daily Mail carried front-page dispatches from New York correspondents describing President Roosevelt's desire to speed up the pact and outlining some Canadian and United States opinion on the probable results of the scheme.

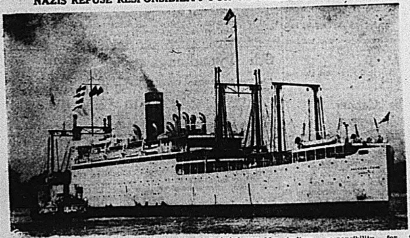
NAZIS REFUSE RESPONSIBILITY FOR REFUGEE SHIP'S SAFETY



Germany formally notified the United States that the Reich could not assume responsibility for the safety of the American army transport, American Legion, which sailed from Petsamo, Finland, with 897 refugees aboard. Included were Mrs. Florence Harriman, U.S. minister to Norway, and the Norwegian Crown Princess Martha and her son, Prince Harold. In a note to the United States embassy in Berlin, the German government declared it declines responsibility for the responsibility for the vessel's security because her scheduled course lay "dangerously near the field of military operations around England." The S.S. American Legion is shown here.

"Old Floppies" Cause Bombers To Miss Countless Targets, Aid R.A.F. Pilots to Bag N. Machines

By ROBERT E. BUNNELLE
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 20—(AP)—Britain's "fat friends," variously known also as "floating elephants" or "old floppies," or just plain barrage balloons, have won a pat on their broad backs from military experts.

Once dismissed with a laugh by many observers, the great, cable-tethered sausages now are credited with causing Nazi bombers to miss countless targets and with aiding Royal Air Force fighters and ground gunners in bagging more than 500 German planes in the past week.

R.A.F. officials point to the persistent attacks by German pilots on the big balloons in answering questions as to whether they are effective.

"They are not doing that just for the fun of it," one air expert pointed out.

"They risk expensive Messerschmitt fighters to bring down a bag of rubberized cloth that can be patched up in a jiffy—unless it burns—and put right back up in the air in a few hours.

"As a matter of fact the balloons with their trailing cables proved well worth their salt in the past week in doing their assigned job—namely, protecting vulnerable points from dive bombers and in making raiders fly at the heights we want them to fly.

Less Sky to Watch

"The latter means that we have just that much less sky to watch. We can have our guns trained and our fighters patrolling at certain levels, thanks to our fat friends, the balloons."

The balloons have done a little damage, too. Several German planes—and some British—have tangled with their dangling cables and crashed.

Late last night for example, a R.A.F. plane crashed in the London area after striking a barrage balloon cable. The pilot descended safely by parachute. A bakery set on fire by the plane was badly damaged.

Barrage balloons were said to have done "fairly well" when hoisted from convoyed ships but at the same time they have disadvantages at sea. They not only mark a convoy for German airmen but slow up the ships with their drag.

Nazi airmen have shot down lots of the balloons which are strung up along the coast but ground crews quickly get out their big needles and paste for the patching job when there is no fire.

Cairo Communique

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 20—(AP) — Royal Air Force bombardments of Derna, western Libyan port, and Italian air bases and gasoline reserves in Africa were reported today by the Royal Air Force Command here.

Its communique said:

"During the night of Aug. 18-19, our bombers attacked Derna, western Libyan port. A salvo of bombs was observed to fall near a harbor jetty and shipping.

"Bombs were dropped on a camp and petrol dump at Bir El Gobbi air base and the El Gubbi Satellite airdrome also was attacked.

"Yesterday three enemy aircraft approached to within 35 miles of Malta, but made off when our fighters went up. Later, another small force was reported but it also turned away when our fighters took off.

"Aircraft of the R.A.F. successfully covered the evacuation from British Somaliland.

"Bombers attacked a petrol dump at Batie, Abyssinia. All bombs dropped in the target area."

DIES FOR BRITAIN

William M. L. "Billy" Fiske, pictured here, famous American bobsled racer and husband of the former Countess of Warwick, died from wounds received as a fighter plane pilot in the Royal Air Force in combat with German bombers. Armored Brigade Authorized for C.A.S.F. Defence Minister Announces

Four Battalions With 200 Tanks To Form Brigade

Armored Canadian Division Foreseen By Col. Ralston—New Type of Tank Being Produced

Ottawa, Aug. 21. — (CP)—An armoured Canadian Division of tanks and other armored vehicles was envisaged today by Defence Minister Ralston as he announced the authorization of an armored brigade.

This brigade will consist of four battalions of the Canadian Active Service Force to be equipped with 200 tanks in addition to other armored vehicles. It will be commanded by Col. F. F. Worthington, up to now Commanding Officer of the Canadian Armored fighting vehicles training centre at Camp Borden.

Major Development

This major development, Col. Ralston emphasized, was taken on the recommendation of the Chief of the General Staff and Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton.

Up to the present there have been no major armored units in Canada such as those used with marked effect in the German lightning thrusts through Poland and France.

While equipment for this new brigade is not complete, the Minister stated there was definite prospect of "fairly rapid" production of a new type of tank suitable both for training and active service. This would be a fast tank with many parts more commercially standardized than the Mark III at present in use by British force.

C.A.S.F. units designated for the brigade are: Ontario Regiment (Tanks) Oshawa; The Three Rivers Regiment (Tanks) Three Rivers; 1st Canadian Cavalry, London, Toronto, Winnipeg and Calgary (now at Borden), Fort Garry Horse, Winnipeg and other Western points.

4 N.P.A.M. Units for Special Training

Four battalions of the non-permanent active militia are designated to do special training and be available in case the armored brigade should be increased.

These are: Essex Regiment (Tanks) Windsor; Calgary Regiment (Tanks) Calgary; Argyll Light Infantry, Belleville, Ont.; the New Brunswick Regiment (Tanks).

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Seasons and the weather! The seasons as known in the middle latitudes and each three months long add are supposed to correspond with certain stages of agriculture. Due to the perversity of the weather, however, unseasonable weather may occur in any season. For instance: August, a summer month, may be cooler on the average than its succeeding month, September, a fall month, March, a spring month, may be colder than its preceding month February a winter month. The highest temperature of the year frequently occurs in August, whereas July is on the average the warmest month of the year. Likewise, the lowest temperature often occurs in February, and not in January right in the dead of winter.

Seaforths and East Surrey Rest Leave Shanghai

Shanghai, Aug. 21—(AP)—A mixed force of Seaforth Highlanders and the East Surrey Regiment today boarded the steamship Taksang for duty elsewhere, probably Hong Kong or Singapore.

The rest of the British forces here planned to leave Aug. 26.

Honors were rendered the departing soldiers by the United States Marines who supplied the band which led them from the International Settlement's racecourse to the foot of Garden Bridge, leading to Japanese-occupied Kongkew.

Regular sentries there saluted but otherwise the Japanese accorded no honors to the soldiers.

PARLEY HELD ON NEWFOUNDLAND DEFENCE MATTERS

Associate Defence Minister, Hon. C.G. Power, Confers With Authorities

INVASION DISCUSSED

St. John's Nfld., Aug. 21—(CP Cable)—Canada's Associate Defence Minister, Hon. C. G. Power, and a group of high-ranking Canadian army, navy and air officials conferred with authorities here today on Newfoundland defence matters.

The Canadian Air Minister met with the island's Governor, Admiral Sir Humphrey Walwyn; Hon. L. E. Emerson, Defence Commissioner; Captain W. R. Schwerdt, Royal Navy, the Governor's Secretary; and Lieut.-Col. W. F. Rendell, Officer Commanding Newfoundland's home defence forces.

They were expected to discuss the degree to which Canada would go to Newfoundland's assistance against any possible Nazi assault either by a hit-and-run raid or a more serious attempt at actual invasion.

It also was considered likely there would be discussion regarding the matter of port and other facilities for United States forces, should the United States government accept the British offer of bases in Newfoundland and the British West Indies, announced by Prime Minister Churchill.

Although the subjects to be discussed might well take a week, officials said only the broader aspects will be considered as the Canadian Air Minister will fly back to Halifax later in the day if the weather is suitable. He is making a tour of defences of Canada's eastern command, which has been extended to include Newfoundland.

People Hasten to Thousands of Booths for Last Day Registration

By The Canadian Press

Canada's "16 and over" age-class citizens hurried to thousands of booths set up across the Dominion today to tell the country's leaders all about themselves. The deadline for registration is 10 o'clock tonight, local time.

General registration of human resources, as part of the Dominion's united efforts to win the war, was almost complete in many centres but officials announced a let-up in others.

The Department of National War Services at Ottawa yesterday said there would be a careful checkup in order to guarantee that the record be as perfect as possible. Penalties will be imposed on those who fail to register.

Registration on Tuesday

Rural areas in the northern part of Saskatchewan reported as high as 90 per cent of the estimated total registered. Edmonton registrars, however, appealed to citizens to register early today to avoid possible jamming of the polls after a light second-day registration.

Montreal district was about 70-per-cent completed while Toronto, with about 600,000 persons registered, has a final-day registration of about 125,000.

'Democracy Can Move in Hurry'

Mr. Justice T. C. Davis, Deputy Minister of War Services in charge of registration, said at Ottawa yesterday that the response Monday and Tuesday had been "magnificent."

"Let us show the world that a democracy can move in a hurry, and is capable of acting unitedly and voluntarily as quickly as any autocracy can do by compulsory regimentation," he said.

The Department issued a final correction which reiterated that members of the Canadian Active Service Force, whether in Canada or overseas, need not register. Members of the non-permanent active militia must do so.

A Kitchener, Ont., woman who said she was born in 1860 stoutly contended she was only 40 years old. It wasn't a case of the woman being a leap-year baby and the patient registrar filled in 80 in answer to the age query and went on to further questions without argument.

Wilfrid Brosseau, 101, of St. Johns, Que., signed his form and commented: "I hope to do the same thing in the next war—25 years from now." He was registered at his home but insisted on reading the questions himself, without glasses.

MASS ESCAPE PLANNED BY NAZIS, OFFICIAL OPINION

Werner Koche Still at Large Early on Wednesday

NATION-WIDE HUNT

Police Say Workmen Discharged for Conversing in German With Prisoners

Somewhere in Ontario, Aug. 21—(CP)—Five German prisoners, blamed as ring-leaders in the escape of Werner Koche, 28, Nazi Naval Lieutenant, from a Federal prison camp in this northern Ontario area, where reported held in detention today while police continued a country-wide search for the fugitive.

One of those detained is reported to be a Colonel in the German army, a holder of the iron cross. Authorities have expressed the opinion the 100-foot tunnel through which Koche escaped was the work of a group of prisoners and not of one man. No official announcement of penalties was made, however.

It was also reported unofficially that a munitions plant 50 miles from the internment camp was under heavy guard as a result of Koche's escape.

Earlier reports said that the fugutive may have made his way to Toronto or headed for the United States border.

Nation-wide Hunt Ordered

(In Toronto last night it was reported that Royal Canadian Mounted Police headquarters ordered a nationwide hunt for Koche.

Reports that the Nazi officer was seen in dense bush country by Provincial Constable A. H. Morrison were spiked in official quarters and it was stated that Morrison was not in the area at the time, but was working on another case. Police, however, maintained an intensive guard in the vicinity of the camp.

POLISH PILOTS VISITED BY KING

Group Captain of Station Awarded Cross of Valor for Kindness to Men

London, Aug. 21—(CP Cable) — The King chatted with Polish pilots during a visit to a Royal Air Force station in the midlands where they are completing training as a bomber squadron.

He learned that Polish airmen attached to British fighter squadrons downed 23 Nazi planes, one pilot having six to his credit.

General Sikorski, Polish Prime Minister and Commander-in-Chief of Polish forces fighting at the side of Britain, decorated the station commander, Group Captain A. P. Davidson of the R.A.F. with the Polish Cross of Valor for personal merit in recognition of his care for Polish forces in his charge.

Canadian Defence Forces Steadily Grow

Ottawa, Aug. 21.—(CP) Swelling numbers of Canadian Defence Forces were announced today by Defence Minister Ralston in a press interview. In addition to the approximately 40,000 troops overseas, The Canadian Active Service Force in Canada as of August 14, totalled 114,003. Of this total 26 companies were Veterans Home Guards.

The non-permanent active militia has 100,731 of which 21,500 are at present in training camps. Considering all branches of military service the number was still considerably below authorized establishment.

The Minister announced the name of the Veteran Home Guards was to be changed to the Veterans Guard of Canada.

CHANGE BREN GUN DESIGN, SPEED OUTPUT 20 P. C., CHANGES IN OTHER ARMS

London, Aug. 21—(CP)—Supply Minister Herbert Morrison announced today that changes in design of the Bren machine gun would shortly speed the output by 20 per cent.

Changes in the Bren gun are only one part of the arms speed-up, Mr. Morrison said, adding that "Modifications have been made in the design or finish of almost every firearm we use, from miniature rifle to heavy artillery."

In some cases, he said, cutting out "all unnecessary refinements" reduced the number of man-hours required to produce weapons by from 10 to 53 per cent.

'U.S. Air-Training Can be Tied in With Canada's'—Chicago News

"We Will Go to War in Instant to Protect Our Neighbor from Aggression," Says Navy Secretary's Newspaper

TRAINING IN SOUTH

Chicago, Aug. 21—(CP) — The Chicago Daily News said in an editorial Tuesday that the United States air training program could be linked with the British Commonwealth Air Training plan.

Approving the decision of Canada and the United States to establish a joint board of defence, the newspaper, whose publisher is Navy Secretary Frank Knox, said:

"There seems no reason why certain essential steps toward defence coordination cannot be taken at once.

"Our air-training program, for instance, could be tied in with that of the Canadians so as to give them the maximum benefits of our constantly expanding plane and engine production. Our southern training sites can be made available to the Canadian students when bad weather sets in this fall.

"Mr. Roosevelt has said that Canada's defence is our defence. The American public has unhesitatingly endorsed this pledge. We will go to war in an instant to protect our neighbor from aggression."

Nazi Bombs Fall In Park in Town In S. W. England

London, Aug. 21—(CP) — The Government announced today a number of persons were injured, some fatally, in a German air attack last night on a southwest England town.

Its communique, issued by the Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security follows:

"Yesterday evening enemy aircraft attacked a town in southwest England. Some bombs fell in a public park and others damaged houses near a railway station. A number of persons were injured, some of them fatally. There was negligible enemy air activity over this country during the night."

Magistrate Holds Judgment After Evidence Given Against Mrs. McFarlane at Trenton

The Preliminary Hearing Against Husband of Woman on Same Charge Will be Heard Friday

13 WITNESSES

Trenton, Ont., Aug. 21—Nine witnesses concluded the crown's evidence in the preliminary hearing into murder charges laid against seventeen year old Alice Archer McFarlane, Frankford bride of a month, here yesterday.

Magistrate E. J. Butler, reserved judgment until the hearing into similar charges laid against Robert McFarlane, husband of the accused woman, has been concluded. This hearing was adjourned until Friday, August 23rd.

Separate charges of murder were laid against the young couple by Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson following the finding of Gordon Archer, infant son of Mrs. McFarlane, in the Trent River on July 25th.

Jacob Goodman, Belleville, appeared for the defence with Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson conducting the hearing.

Mrs. Allan Taylor, Myers St., Trenton, said Mrs. McFarlane came to her house about 6 p.m. July 25th with her husband. "Can you take my baby until we are settled," Mrs. McFarlane asked witness. Witness conferred with her husband, and decided they could not take the baby, she said.

"Did they have the baby with them?" defence counsel J. Goodman asked.

"No."

500 Children Troop off Liner At Eastern Port

An East Coast Canadian Port, Aug. 21 —(CP)— The children kept the gangplanks creaking again today, third day of the disembarkation of the largest group of evacuees to reach Canada under the children's overseas reception scheme.

Almost 500 of them were to leave a liner today after spending a day and two nights aboard their ship in this port while luckier youngsters trooped ashore and sped westward to new homes from coast to coast.

The 494 to go ashore today comprised part of approximately 2,000 children who reached here Monday, 10 days out from England. Most of the young voyagers were travelling under government sponsorship, though hundreds of others were accompanied by parents or relatives.

Today's group, about equally divided between boys and girls, will be scattered through almost every Canadian province. Some were born in Canada and are being sent to their old homes by their parents in Britain for "the duration."

For three days now immigration men and railway officials have been laboring to sort out the little guests, ticket them properly and get them aboard trains for their destination. Volunteer workers who accompanied the children from Britain help in the task.

GERMAN RAIDERS CHANGE TACTICS OVER ENGLAND

Hit-and-Run Method Adopted by Sending Over Single Planes Spread Over Wide Area

R. A. F. ACTIVE

Observers Point Out That Initiative Has Been Away From Nazi Bombers

London, Aug. 21—(CP)—At least 11 German warplanes were brought down over Britain today as the Nazis continued the hit-and-run raids which have succeeded the costly plan of massed air attacks.

These included three Dornier 17's brought down by Spitfires about five miles inland on the northeast coast this afternoon.

One Dornier fell in flames at a southeast village and its crew of three landed by parachute three miles away. Two fliers gave themselves up to farm workers. The third was captured by a farmer's wife and her 14-year-old son who carried his father's home guard rifle.

There was no record of any British planes being lost today or yesterday.

Almost constant patrols of spitfires and Hurricanes were kept in the air as reports indicated a change in German tactics from mass raids to scattered "sneak-in" attacks by individual bombers.

Late today a lone raider attacked a town in the southwest and dropped a bomb which destroyed a house, causing three casualties, in-

'TOTAL' DRAFT DEMAND HEARD

In United States Senate Demand Raised for Wealth Conscription

Washington, Aug. 21—(AP)—Demands that wealth and industry, like manpower, be conscripted for United States defence shifted Senate debate into new channels today on the subject of compulsory military service.

The agitation for a "total" draft of the country's financial, economic and human resources developed after disclosures that the armed services were finding it difficult to obtain defence necessities because of existing tax-profits laws, and the higher bids of Great Britain for war material.

There was a prospect of even further complications on the contentious conscription issue, for House of Representatives Military Committee members indicated that they were ready to give formal final approval to compulsory service legislation covering a much broader manpower bracket than present Senate proposals contemplate.

The Burke-Wadsworth Compulsory Service Bill, as amended by the Senate, would limit registration and possible service to men from 21 years of age through 30. The House version, tentatively approved yesterday by the military committee, follows the original Burke-Wadsworth plan—registration of all men between 18 and 65, with active service limited to those between 21 and 45.

Britain Gives Lease For Fifty Years, Can be Extended

'No Question of Price Or Considerations' In Arrangements

London, Aug. 21.—(CP)—British Foreign Office sources today confirmed reports the United States had leased the islands of Canton and Enderby in the Southern Pacific from Great Britain as air bases. The lease, these sources said, is for 50 years, with a provision that it can be extended indefinitely.

These sources said there was "no question of price or considerations" in the arrangement. Britain and the United States had decided on joint control before the war, following a dispute over ownership in 1938.

Foreign Office sources said the subject was raised to illustrate the statement of Prime Minister Churchill yesterday that "the principle of association of interests for common purposes between Great Britain and the United States had developed even before the war. Various agreements had been reached about certain small islands in the Pacific Ocean which had become important as air re-fueling points".

Under Joint Control

Canton and Enderbury Islands, dots on the map of the Pacific, came under the joint control of the United States and Great Britain April 6, 1939, by virtue of a 50-year agreement, reached after a year's negotiations as to their ownership.

The agreement provided that the Islands, part of the Phoenix group lying midway between Hawaii and Australia, should serve as way stations on the air route between the United States and Australia. It also provided that the Islands be administered by a British official and a United States official.

At the time the agreement was reached it was announced in Washington that:—

An American company or companies may construct and operate on Canton Island an airport available for airplanes of both nations in return for fees to be agreed on.

Only British Commonwealth or American Civil Avaition companies may use the Islands for scheduled air service.

The joint occupation does not prejudice the claims of either government to the Islands.

(Both claims were based on early explorations.)

MRS HILLYARD LANG DIES

Britain's Offer to Lease Air Bases To U.S. Called 'Grand Piece of News'

London, Aug. 21—(CP Cable) — The Daily Herald said Tuesday of Prime Minister Churchill's anouncement of the government's offer to lease to the United States defence bases on Britain's trans-Atlantic territories that it was "a grand piece of news."

"Now those territories become something more than 'possessions' of Great Britain," the newspaper said. "They'll be the strong points of democracy.

The Daily Mail said the nation welcomed the announcement "as the proper development of inevitably increasing co-operation between ourselves and the United States, not only in defence of common liberties of mankind but in that wider sphere of action where we can jointly secure the new world order."

The Daily Telegraph said that the offer will be recognized as a momentous and perhaps historic act. With the good-will of Canada and Newfoundland as well as of the West Indies any insecurity the United States may feel can be eliminated, the newspaper said.

"And good-will cannot be lacking when the self-interest is so direct and so strong," it added. "The re-insurance against aggression, as at may be called, will be mutual. And there can be nothing to fear and much to gain in receiving as tenants a kindred and friendly people who have always been such near neighbors."

The Times described the offer as a practical recognition of the repeated affirmation by United States leaders that the defence of their own hemisphere is bound up with an Allied victory.

"No transfer of sovereignty is involved, said The Times, "and if, as Mr. Churchill remarked, the organizations of the Empire and the Republic become in consequence more closely mixed up together for some purposes than before it is the fruit of a process which he rightly described as inevitable."

PICKAXE ATTACK ON LEON TROTSKY MAY END HIS LIFE

Exiled "Napoleon of the Bolsheviks" in Grave Condition After Sustaining Fracture of Skull

ASSAILANT HELD

Mexico City, Aug. 21 (AP)—Leon Trotsky, exiled "Napoleon of the Bolsheviks" who fled to a haven in Mexico, was near death today—victim of a pickaxe attack by a man who posed as his "great admirer."

Surgeons said Trotsky's condition was "very grave."

The one-time Russian war minister had a wound in the skull which exposed his brain and a fracture at the base of the skull. Two other blows from the axe injured his right shoulder and his right hip.

Surgeons operated on Trotsky last night, a few hours after he was set upon in the office of his home in nearby Coyoacan.

Gen. Jose Manuel Nunez, Federal District Police Chief, said "there are hopes of saving his life." But the Russian, who escaped unharmed as a machine-gun band invaded his residence May 24, was given few chances to live. Oxygen was administered.

ITALIANS MASSED ON GREEK BORDER, BELGRADE SAYS

Greece Issues Third Call to Colors in Week of Growing Tension

FASCIST HINTS

Greek Ships' Officers Say Italians Seized 2,100 Tons Steel and Much Glycerine

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Aug. 21 — (AP)—Italian troops were reported massing along Greece's western frontier today as the Greek government, belabored by the Fascist press for alleged mistreatment of Albanian minorities, strengthened its defences by placing more reserves under arms.

The call to the colors was the third issued in a week of growing tension in relations with Italy.

Usually well-informed sources here said they had information that Italy was massing considerable numbers of troops, including at least one armored division, in Albania, opposite the Greek border.

The Fascist press has been hinting strongly that Italy would make territorial demands on Greece for the Ciamuria frontier region on the ground it is rightfully part of Albania, which Italy annexed in 1939 after her Good Friday invasion of that small country.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

POLICE ACTIVITIES QUIET IN CITY

Police activities were quieter than a country graveyard last night with the arm of the law having no opportunity to stretch out and haul in any statute-breakers. The boys in blue had no trouble either with inebriates, transients, or motor vehicle drivers. The only fly in the ointment of police circle peace was two members of the C.A.S.F. who decided to take French leave. They were apprehended and military authorities notified. They will be taken back to their training centre today.

MR. WILLIAM McFEE MUCH IMPROVED

The condition of Mr. William McFee, Myers Street, seriously injured in a motor accident that claimed the life of Mrs. Jessie Allore and sent four Belleville residents to hospital on Saturday, was said by hospital authorities today to be "much better." Mrs. Marjorie Hammett, Victoria Avenue, who was injured in the same accident, is also improving.

INSPECTORS VISIT SCENE OF FIRE

Federal Inspector A. Johnson, Ottawa, of the Railway Transport Commission, Inspector Mullins, and Investigator R. Ritchie of the Fire Marshal's Department, Toronto, were in the city yesterday investigating circumstances of the disastrous fire of last Friday in which gasoline tanks of the Cities Service Oil Company exploded and burned.

The investigators will forward reports to the Federal and Provincial governments.

BOYS' SUMMER CAMP OFFICIALLY CLOSED

Summer activities at the Belleville Boys' Camp at Moira Lake have been concluded for the season it was learned at the local Y. M. C. A. this morning. The camp was closed for the season on Monday when the Beau Lac Leaders' Training Camp broke up and Mr. J. Shortt, Sec. of the local "Y" returned to the city last evening after supervising the work of shutting up the camp for the winter months.

Should Consult Inspector Ruston Over Children

"There are a large number of British child-guests arriving at Canadian ports and we are informed that a great number of people who are anxiously looking for these children, are telephoning the Public Welfare Branch at the Parliament Buildings, Toronto," stated Supt. T. D. Ruston today.

"We would say that children coming under the Government scheme will in due course be directed to the community through the local Children's Aid Society, and that persons would assist greatly by contacting me, rather than contacting the Department at Toronto, to ascertain if the children they are expecting have arrived.

Further Mr. Ruston stated that if those expecting relatives or friends have not already nominated them, would they kindly call at the Children's Aid office and every assistance and information will be gladly given.

There are about one hundred British children who have been established in homes in this district, the inspector said. There are from twenty-five to thirty of these children now in Belleville.

National Grocers Staff Holds Picnic

Annual Outing Takes Place at Cedardale

Members of the staff of the National Grocers and their friends enjoyed their annual picnic, held this year at Cedardale on Sunday. A well arranged sports program in which all took part with keen enthusiasm was a feature of the afternoon while swimming was also enjoyed by a number of guests. Toffee, peanut and gum scrambles added to the fun of the day, and those present were treated to ice cream, peanuts and candy during the picnic. Picnic lunches were especially enjoyed after the day in the open.

No-Last-Minute Rush Expected In National Registration

'Don't Fail to Register by Ten O'Clock Tonight' (Wednesday), Appeal Made to People

While residents of the city in general have flocked to the various booths set aside for the purpose of national registration during the past two days, there is still a large number who have yet to conform to the Government's regulation.

Deputy Registrars emphasize to these persons that "Today, Wednesday is the last day to register.

Ten o'clock tonight, Wednesday, is the absolute deadline.

Every person in the city eligible for registration must be in possession of his or her card by that time, or become liable to penalties provided by the government.

Register now, if you have not already done so.

Officials, while not able to give accurate figures, were of the opinion that the greater majority of registrants of the city had conformed to the law by last night.

However, deputy registrars said today that no great rush was apparent today.

No Last Minute Rush Expected

No particular rush was expected on Wednesday afternoon and evening at the polling booths throughout the city by persons seeking last minute registration, revealed Registrar Col. W. R. Rierdon, as he expressed the opinion that the National Registration of all persons 16 years and over was well in hand and would be completed by the deadline of 10.00 o'clock Wednesday evening.

"We have no means of definitely determining just how many persons there are yet to register, however," continued Col. Rierdon, "as with so many persons away on their holidays registering elsewhere and even persons in the city registering outside their own polling division it is impossible to determine just where we stand. We are trusting, however, that there will be no last minute crush caused by persons waiting until the last day to register."

Work Believed Well in Hand

The fact that booths throughout the city were remarkably quiet for Wednesday, the last day of registration, led officials to entertain the thought that he work of registration in this city was well in hand. Local booths were being visited by only the odd person in the morning and this condition was general throughout the city.

Col. Rierdon was particularly grateful to the many persons who offered their volunteer help for the speedy completion of the work of registration. "The response in Belleville has been wonderful, and even yet we are receiving calls from persons offering their services in this respect. The only doubtful phase on the question of local registration was that of sick persons possibly not having notified the registry office, and so far we have had plenty of volunteers to look after these persons," concluded Col. Rierdon, as he expressed the opinion that all persons in the city would be registered before the deadline this Wednesday evening.

Robber, Murderer Accumulates Estate While State Prisoner

Lunsing, Mich., Aug. 21—(AP)—The story of how a bank robber and murderer accumulated an estate having an inventory value of $9,000 while a state prisoner developed today into a public issue.

Penal authorities, in answer to a citizen's query, disclosed that Fred (Killer) Burke, a notorious gunman of the prohibition era who died recently, had acquired the estate through his own industriousness.

William C. Fowler of Carlshend, Mich., had complained to Gov. Luren D. Dickinson that it seemed "irregular" a person could acquire that much money behind prison bars when he, a law-abiding citizen, was unable to do so.

Warden Simon R. Anderson of the Marquette branch prison explained that Burke was permitted to set himself up in business as a manufacturer of leather goods. Burke prospered to such an extent that he took in partners and employed other persons to make goods which were sold to tourists through a prison concession stand.

Anderson said that while the inventory showed $9,000 worth of wallets, purses, belts, suspenders, and other articles, Burke left a cash balance of only $111.13.

ROCK FORTRESS BOMBED TWICE

Enemy Aircraft Attack Gibraltar but Little Damage Done — One Plane Downed

Gibraltar, Aug. 21 (CP)—An official announcement today stated that enemy aircraft attacked this British fortress twice during last night but that a small fire set by bombs was quickly extinguished. One plane was shot down.

The statement said:

"During the night enemy aircraft bombed Gibraltar twice. In the first raid bombs were dropped into the sea but an aircraft was brought down into the sea off Europa Point.

"In the second raid bombs dropped on the rock causing a small fire which was quickly brought under control with slight damage and no casualties."

Since the outbreak of the war, bombs have been dropped on or near Gibraltar on four occasions, causing a few casualties and slight damage. This was the first aircraft shot down by Gibraltar's anti-aircraft guns. The last raid was July 27.

The Gibraltar dispatch did not identify the assailants. It was presumed they were Italians.

School to Co-operate With Wishes of Gov't. to Have Pupils Assist Farmers

Belleville Collegiate and Vocational Institute will open on Sept. 3rd for registration of pupils, stated P. C. MacLaurin, in an interview with The Ontario Intelligencer this morning. This was the decision made during a meeting of the members of the Board of Education earlier in the week.

Complete co-operation will be given, however, to the plan of the Ontario Government for school children wherever possible, to assist farmers with the harvest and all pupils will be questioned regarding their willingness to assist in such work. "Any pupils wishing to help with the harvest will be granted a leave of absence from school and regular classes will not be resumed at the Collegiate until Sept. 16th, during which time war work and farm work will be stressed," said Mr. MacLaurin.

Owing to the enlistment in active service of numbers of the older male students, it is expected that the number of pupils registering for classes this autumn will be lessened. Many faces will be missing from the campus, it was revealed, owing to upper school students enlisting in the Air Force, the Army or the Navy.

Two members of the teaching staff have been granted leave of absence for the duration of the war and will be replaced by other teachers for the coming semester, it was revealed. Mr. Dudgeon, B. S. C. A., of Guelph, will succeed Major Jim Howard and Mr. Yerrex, B.A., of Toronto, will succeed Lt. George Laughlin, both of whom have left for active military service.

OBITUARY

LATE MRS. JESSIE ALLORE

The funeral of Mrs. Jessie Allore took place from the residence of her sister, Mrs. William Beare, 113 Lingham Street, on Tuesday afternoon, August 20th. The service in the home and at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. G. G. Wright, Rector of Christ Church.

The bearers were Messrs. Ralph Lorimer, George Carson, Wallace Snell, Percy Hinch, Harry Taylor and William Taylor.

LATE ZEDDOCK HAIGHT

Tuesday afternoon the funeral of Zeddock Haight took place from the Pinkston Funeral Home, 268 Church Street. The Rev. C. T. Olmstead, pastor of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, conducted the service in the chapel and at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery.

LATE MRS. W. J. LAWSON, (Wooler).

Wooler, (Special)—The funeral of Mrs. Wm. J. Lawson took place from the family residence to the United Church on Friday, August 16th and was largely attended. The service was conducted by Rev. W. T. R. Delve, the pastor assisted by Rev. Alfred Poulter of Madoc. The pastor delivered a comforting message to the sorrowing relatives and friends from a portion of the text to Paul in 2 Cor. 12:9—"My Grace is Sufficient."

During the service a duet in keeping with the occasion and requested by the departed, was rendered by Mrs. A. G. Austin and Mr. Clifford Rogers.

The floral tributes were lovely. Among them were those from the Ladies' Aid, and a beautiful wreath of roses and fern as a message of sympathy came from Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Littlewood of Chippawa, cousins of Mr. Lawson.

Relatives and friends were present from Belleville, Trenton, Picton, Havelock, East Lake, Smithfield, Morganston, Stirling and Orland.

Interment took place in the Friends' Cemetery with the following acting as pall-bearers: Messrs. C. R. Terrill, Wm. Gillings, Clarence and Elgin McMasters, Percy Gooding and Robert Walker. The flower bearers were Messrs. Alden Arthur, John Goodfellow, Raymond Richards and Neil Nelson.

MRS. EDMUND R. SPENCER

(Sidney Township)

Tuesday afternoon the funeral of Mrs. Edmund Richard Spencer, late residence, 4th concession of Sidney Township, took place from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, to the Sidney Baptist Church, Holloway, where an impressive service was conducted by the Rev. G. P. Smith.

Interment was made in Guffin's Cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. Everett Hubble, Frank Woods, Percy Westover, Frank Shorey, Jay White and Hilton Shorey.

and claiming the Albanians were awaiting Italian "action to ban the criminals.")

It was announced, meanwhile, that the Greek passenger steamship Attiki, reported last week to have been stopped by Italian warships off Sicily, had arrived yesterday in Piraeus, the port of Athens.

The ship's officer said the Italians had taken the vessel to Palermo, Sicily and had seized 2,100 tons of steel and many barrels of glycerine from the cargo.

Gayda Charges Scheme

Rome, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist Editor, said today that Italy and Albania were ready to defend Albania against "The Greco-British plan of offence", and accused Greece of a double manoeuvre designed to stifle Nationalist sentiment among Albanian residents in Greece.

Writing in Il Gironale D'Italia, Gayda claimed Britain was creating tension in the Balkans, and asserted that British reports of anti-Italian uprisings in Albania were part of a scheme to "create an alibi for Greece's policy of Imperialistic advance into the territory of independent Albania."

"There is no doubt that Italy and Albania are obliged to calculate upon this Greco-British offensive plan," Gayda wrote. "It is necessary to answer it with the firmness of a responsible policy which seeks no adventures, but is ready to defend the National rights of Albania."

Greek Army Cancels Leave

Athens, Greece, Aug. 21.—(AP).—The Greek army cancelled all leaves for officers and men today and a responsible spokesman said "we will not be caught by surprise if Greece should be invaded".

Only yesterday, in the third move to strengthen the army within a wek, the government called to arms several thousand men of a number of military classes.

Greece's precautions have been taken amid growing tension with Italy precipitated by Italian charges Greece was responsible for the assassination of Haut Hoggia, an Albanian. Greece has denied any responsibility.

Denied Armed Bands Formed

Government quarters took cognizance of Italian press attacks on the country, including charges that banks of Greks had invaded Albania and burned ten villages.

An official communique denied an Albanian newspaper report, reprinted in Italy, that Greek authorities were planning an attack on Albania.

"No armed bands", it said, "have ever been formed in Greece for any purpose whatsoever".

PARLEY HELD ON

Last night he conferred here with the island's Governor, Sir Humphrey Walyn, after inspecting Canadian air and military forces at the seaplane base at Botwood and the Newfoundland airport.

He stayed overnight as the Governor's guest at Government House, with high-ranking officers of the three Canadian forces accompanying him.

History was made when the Minister stepped ashore from a rowboat at Bay Bull's big pond, eight miles from here, last night. The plane that had dropped down on the lake a few minutes before had carried the first Canadian Cabinet Minister ever to visit Newfoundland on a mission of such import.

Definitely in Orbit

With Mr. Power's visit the seal was put on a confederation of defence which has been operating in actuality since Canadian land and air forces arrived here with arms and planes to defend Newfoundland. Thus Newfoundland entered definitely the orbit of Canada.

After inspecting the air bases yesterday they flew 125 miles down the east coast, Mr. Power inspecting the coast outline meticulously with the aid of a map. The view of such great fiords as Conception Bay and of the many lesser inlets gave him a fine insight into the possibilities for the sheltering of fleets of submarines.

Mr. Power said that he could not reveal Canada's plans for defending Newfoundland or the degree to which they had been completed, he was satisfied that "the forces we already have there (Newfoundland airport) and the plans being carried out will provide an adequate defence of it and other strategic points of Newfoundland."

JAYWALKER ORDINANCE

(Chicago Daily News)

The City Council has decided to experiment with another anti-jaywalking ordinance. We had one in 1928. It was a flop. Neither pedestrians nor police paid the slightest attention to it for about two years. Then there was an enforcement drive. It had small effect on the number of accidents, but everybody agreed that it put an intolerable drag on pedestrian traffic. People jammed up at every intersection and became infuriated—at the delays, at the police, and at each other. After a month, the crusade was abandoned, and the law repealed. The aldermen said it wasn't popular, and all unpopular laws ought to be repealed. Ald. Bowler, who had fought for such a law, was glad to see it go. "Pedestrian control may work satisfactorily in other cities," he said, "but Chicagoans are in too big a hurry."

'NO PANIC, NO FEAR' IN GREAT BRITAIN SAYS DAVE CROLL

Mayor of Windsor, Now in England With His Battalion, Sends Message to Canada

LIKES ENGLAND

By DOUGLAS AMARON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 21—(CP Cable) —Pte. Dave Croll—Mayor of Windsor, Ont.—today told the people back home that he found in Britain "no panic, no fear, just a solid determination on the part of the people to see this thing through to ultimate victory, and of that we are certain."

The Mayor, spending a few days on leave from the Canadian 2nd Division, made a recorded interview with Gerry Wilmot of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, shortly after attending the House of Commons session yesterday at which Prime Minister Churchill reviewed the war.

Croll described it as a memorable scene.

"It was a scene that will stay a long time with me, particularly the Churchill speech because it was the united voice of Britain, clear, proud, unyielding, and when he depicted the picture where we stood alone fighting the cause of civilization it was a great moment.

"As a Canadian—and I feel that applies to all Canadians—it is a great privilege to be here to fight for our way of life for freedom, for decency, for democracy, to re-establish once again the citadel of freedom here where it belongs, in the British Isles."

Dave described the 'grand day' he put in as a guest of England's Windsor last week but added: "After all for me there is only one Windsor and that's in Ontario, but England's Windsor has been here a long time and it is a grand city."

Asked if what he had seen was the exact opposite of fantastic stories being circulated by the enemy, he said:

"I only hope the people of Canada are able to recognize enemy propaganda whether it is in front of their noses in the newspapers or blasting their ears from the radio.

"And so far it has just been propaganda."

U. S. EDITORS PRAISE ONTARIO

'Most Impressive Tour,' Says One of Group Describing Reaction to Visit

Orillia, Ont., Aug. 21 (CP)— A party of United States newspaper editors who have been touring Ontario are returning home with "new impressions of the kindness of our fine big neighbor," according to Orrin R. Taylor, editor of the Archbold, O., Buckeye.

One of the group of 26 American editors from five states, who visited this town 90 miles north of Toronto yesterday, Taylor said it was "a most impressive tour."

"The members of the party were overwhelmed by the magnificent hospitality and kindness of the Canadians," he said. "Few of us have been in Canada before and this trip has been most educational. We are going back home with new impressions of the grandeur of Canadian scenery and new impressions of the kindness of our fine big neighbor."

Ten representatives of Ontario weekly papers accompanied the group, who toured by bus from Niagara Falls east to Ottawa, north to North Bay and back to Toronto.

SAY VICHY GOV'T FEELS ANXIETY

Reports From Switzerland Say French Fearful Nazis and Fascists May Demand Air Bases

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ, JR.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chancy, Switzerland, Aug. 21 —(AP)—Britain's long-range bombing flights against industrial cities of Northern Italy and Southern German war industries are increasing the Petain government's fears that Germany and Italy will extend their occupation over a wider area of France, border reports said today.

Already the Germans have established airplane bases at the western slope of the Vosges and Jura Mountains in an effort to intercept bombers.

French now are fearful that British flights across the area still unoccupied by German soldiers will lead the Italians to demand air bases at Marseille and in the Rhone valley and the Germans to extend their control to provide air bases south of the Loire river.

France in Two Zones

The Petain government's troubles are mounting because of the division of France into two zones.

Informed sources say the government's daily expenditures are greater than during French belligerency.

While in the north local authorities work in daily contact with the Germans, who are anxious to keep the administration running smoothly, in the south the Petain government is struggling with increasingly serious transportation and supply difficulties.

(The German radio said in a dispatch from Vichy last night that all railroad connections between the two zones have been closed temporarily and transportation of Belgian and French refugees to their homes has been held up.)

Transportation Complications

Transportation troubles cause unusual complications in southern France. Butter and sugar are plentiful in Nice but almost impossible to get in Toulouse.

There are lots of matches and few cigarettes in the Pyrenees, but plenty of cigarettes and no matches in Auvergne.

In Limoges, women can buy magnificent fur coats and delicate perfumes but no lingerie.

There is a plentiful supply of 80-year-old cognac and even Scotch whiskey in Toulouse, but no soap.

DOROTHYS TO GIVE SPITFIRE

London, Aug. 21—(CP) — The Dorothys of Great Britain are getting together to present the Royal Air Force with a fighter to be called the "Dorothy Spitfire." Contributions have been pouring in from all parts of the country. The fund was originated by Mrs. Dorothy A. Clark of Sheffield, wife of an R.A.F. Squadron-Leader.

CAUGHT FISH TWICE

Webster City, Ia., Aug. 21—(AP) —It's things like this that make a husband's life touch: Kermith Branyord hooked a fish at a lake near Hampton, Ia., but his line snagged and it got away. A few minutes later his wife got a nibble, reeled in her catch expertly. It was the same fish. Branyord's broken line dangled from its mouth.

R. C. A. F. Softballers Enter Second Round in Playdowns

Defeat Cobden 6 to 3 and Will Now Meet Winners of Point Anne-Picton Series

Trenton, Aug. 21 (Special) —The Royal Canadian Air Force softballers moved into the second round of the Intermediate O.A.S.A. playdowns by virtue of their win over the Cobden softball team last night, 6 to 3. The Flyers won the first game on Friday night by a score of 6 to 2 in Cobden.

The Flyers will meet the winners of the Point Anne-Picton series, here on Friday night.

The Flyers started in the first frame to take a lead on their opponents, when Stevenson clouted out a double with two on bases. From that time on they were never threatened, except in the seventh, when Farr loosened to allow the visitors four hits The Flyers were consistent throughout notching a couple of hits per innings.

Farr on the mound for the winners limited the visitors to six hits, four being in the seventh. He walked four, while his opponent, Ross, allowed five free trips to first base. The Flyers nicked Ross for 12 hits, four being doubles.

Gibson and Stevenson were the best at bat for the winners, each getting a double and a single. Arnott, with two singles was the best for the visitors.

Squadron Leader Heard

The Royal Air Force is proving an invaluable aid to other branches of the army and navy during this war, according to Squadron Leader Lloyd, of the R.A.F., who was recently brought to Canada to aid in the Empire Training Scheme.

Squadron Leader Lloyd was guest instructor to the recruits of Headquarters Company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, last night, giving the recruits many phases of army and air force cooperation.

"The air force works in full cooperation with the army in the field," he stated. "Sufficient aeroplanes are allotted to the division in the field to assure air superiority. This is very necessary so as to assure the safety of reconnaisance flights, without a great deal of interference from the enemy."

"The pilots in this war play a great importance and must have a wealth of knowledge of the whole situation before going out on a flight. He is responsible for the obtaining of information of the enemy, taking photographs, piloting his plane and of bringing fire of the batteries in the district on certain objectives."

"Balloons are playing a great importance in this war," said the Squadron Leader. "Aircraft patrols from shore and from aircraft carriers are playing an important part in protecting convoys."

The War Today

(By Guy Rhoades)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Britain continued her aerial attack on Germany today reduced the Nazi aerial blitzkrieg to scattered "hit-and-run" raids and turned watchful eyes southeastward where Italy was reported to have massed troops for a possible assault on Greece from Albania.

German radio stations went off the air again last night, indicating the Royal Air Force was paying its usual nightly visit and in the House of Commons at London Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair warned that as the nights grow longer with the approach of winter "we shall strike even deeper into the enemy's vitals".

The Italian press and radio renewed violent attacks on Greece and Virginio Gayda, authoritative Italian commentator who sometimes speaks or flies kites for his boss, Mussolini, accused the Greeks of conspiring with Britain in expansionist plans involving Albania.

Gayda's talk of the "Greco-British plan of offence" came on top of Italian radio claims that Greeks had crossed the frontier and burned ten Albanian villages. All these charges, obviously concocted with the aim of conditioning the Italian public to the idea of war against Greece or conditioning the Greeks of the idea or surrendering some of their territory, were denied in Athens.

Greece Will Not Be Caught

A Greek government spokesman said that Greece, protected on the Italian frontier by the "Metaxas Line" of fortifications, "will not be caught by surprise" if the Italians attempt an invasion.

All army leaves were cancelled in the little kingdom and King George II received Premier John Metaxas in audience.

Italy, having taken Somaliland from a small British force was believed looking anxiously for some new success that might not involve too much risk. The Italian people at home were represented in some quarters as standing up badly under the stress of a war they did not want in the first place.

Travellers reaching New York from the northern manufacturing district of Italy which has had several visits from the R.A.F. report air raid alarms in the northern cities are terrible experiences due to the hysterically panicky disposition of the population.

Diplomatic observers watched closely to see what attitude Turkey would adopt in the event of open hostilities between Greece and Italy. The opinion prevailed in Anakara that Turkey would help promptly, holding up her end of the agreement with Britain which guarantees Greek independence. Turkey has been a friend of Britain since almost the beginning of the late Kemel Ataturk's rule.

Turkish Position

The Turkish position is of the utmost importance as she heads the Balkan entente which includes Greece, Yugoslavia and Rumania.

The possibility was not overlooked that the threats against Greece might be warnings of an Italian move to start general action in the middle east at Hitler's behest in an effort to spread Britain's attention. This might include the long-expected but unfulfilled Italian assault on Egypt.

Only yesterday in his war report Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons: "Far larger operations no doubt impend in the middle east theatre and I shall certainly not attempt to discuss or prophesy about their probable course."

Involvement of Turkey and Greece certainly would create "far larger operations" as the Turks many weeks ago had a trained and renowned army of 600,000 in readiness.

It was noticed also that Mr. Churchill, in speaking of Britain's air power, said: "Even if the Nazi legions stood triumphant on the Black Sea, or indeed upon the Caspian; even if Hitler was at the gates of India, it would profit him nothing if at the same time the entire economic and scientific apparatus of German war power lay shattered and pulverized at home." He was referring to the devastating raids on Germany and German-held territory by the Royal Air Force.

Naval, Air, Economic Power Of U. K. Will Prove Irresistible

Brinley Thomas of London, Says Gamble on Invasion by Hitler Would be 'Colossal Reverse'

SEES NAZI DEFEAT

Geneva Park, Ont., Aug. 21—(CP) —Great Britain's naval, air and economic power will eventually prove irresistible against Nazi Germany, Brinley Thomas, author and lecturer of the London School of Economics, predicted in an address prepared for delivery today before the Canadian Institute on Economics and Politics.

He described Great Britain as "the last outpost of freedom in Europe, a great fortress manned by a people with the determination and the ability to repel whatever form of attack Hitler may choose to bring."

The "Maginot line mentality" had never taken root in England and the significant fact of the war today was that Royal Air Force long-distance bombers had regularly inflicted severe damage on Nazi industrial plants, air bases, gasoline depots and troop concentrations.

"This winter will see another firm stalemate with the long-run odds against the Nazis. It will be a very different sort of stalemate from that of last winter. If Hitler gambles on an invasion now he will sufer a colossal reverse and that will have a tremendous effect on the balance of forces.

Dismal Failure For Hitler

"If he decides on the strangulation method by means of his counter-blockade, he will find that this strategy, though it may increase British mercantile losses, will also prove a dismal failure."

Summarized, Mr. Thomas gave these reasons for his prediction of a Nazi defeat:

The Royal Navy still controls the seas. Dunkerque had proved British sea and air power acting together wrested control from Nazi air might.

British Air Strength Grows

This naval strength is a guarantee of Britain's efficient blockade of the continent and Prime Minister Churchill has given notice no food will be allowed to pass the blockade. "Hitler has robbed his conquered territories of every vestige of independence....but in one respect he still allows his newly-acquired colonies independence; in the matter of feeding their own people."

British plane production has increased tremendously and Britain will soon have numerical parity with the enemy.

Hitler has not tapped one extra oil well through his recent conquests and the Nazis face a gasoline shortage.

"The enormous change in tempo on the economic front in Britain The trade unions are putting all they have into the drive to increase output (of war materials.)"

Finally, the morale in Britain could not be improved. "There is a stern and dogged determination to lick Hitler whatever the cost."

MR. CHURCHILL'S SPEECH INSPIRES

No speech which has been delivered in the British Commons in years has touched the heights achieved by that given by Prime Minister Churchill on Wednesday when he drew a picture of the war and its course, placing into the highlights the great services rendered by the Royal Air Force, the Royal Navy and the army which is entirely in Britain, and encouraging the people of the British Empire not only but the world beyond, the peoples in the abject slavery of Hitler's nazism and the neutral but sympathetic world.

Master of English diction, master of thought, master, it is true, of the destinies of democracy in the world, for it is he who guides a people of more than a quarter of the population in the earth against Hitlerism, Mr. Churchill was at his best.

Yesterday's speech was expansive. It touched on the widening influence of the cause in which Britain fights as it mentioned British williingness to lease air and naval bases in the New Hemisphere to the United States for the purpose of defence which would mean protection against such a menace as now threatens the world. It made clear the stand of Britain that she would not raise the blockade of Europe to allow food to go into the countries that have been overrun by the nazis because that would merely prolong the agony of the enchained states and because there were vast stores of food in the countries overrun and that if this is not available now it is because it has been removed to feed Germany though Germany has declared she had food enough. The Prime Minister made it clear that food sent in would find its way into the nazis' hands.

Britain is stronger now than she has been at any time. That was the encouraging statement. Airplane production is greater than that of Germany and in the course of time her total of airplanes will overtake the total of the German, then greatly surpass them and then will come the time when the air force will be able to perform with so much might that it will be one of the great factors in achieving victory. Mr. Churchill said he believed Britain could carry on indefinitely the war in the air.

It was pleasant news that the casualties in the war so far were not of the mammoth total of the first year of the last war. All casualties are about 92,000 of killed, wounded, missing, including many prisoners. The total includes civilians. In the First Great War the British casualties amounted to 365,000 in a similar period of time. The Prime Minister went into the character of modern war and said that after Britain had proper equipment a war of this kind would prove more favorable to her "than the sombre mass slaughters of the Somme and Paschendaele."

He gave the prospect of an offensive. "Our offensive springs are slowly being compressed and we must resolutely and methodically prepare ourselves for the campaigns of 1941 and 1942."

Command of the sea and the friendship of the United States, he pointed out, make it possible for Britain to draw resources from the whole world.

Hitler's boasted blockade was scorned by Mr. Churchill. The Prime Minister touched the point that the whole British army was at home. It is no wonder the British fight as they defend their country.

"We are the most united of all nations," he said. That is a word of cheer to the people. The whole tenor of the speech was on a high plane. It was perfect inspiration. Its confidence is founded on facts which cannot be denied. Britain and the Empire are undismayed.

It was a graphic picture he painted of the steadiness of the British people when Britain faced the culmination of the "cataract of disaster" in the collapse of France, which had brought new problems to the fore especially in the Middle East. These were his words, "Shielded by overwhelming sea-power, possessed of invaluable strategic bases and of ample funds, France might have remained one of the greatest combatants in the struggle. . . . That France alone should lie prostrate at this moment is the crime, not of a great and noble nation but of what are called the men of Vichy. We have profound sympathy with the French people."

Mr. Churchill did not deem it wise to speculate about the future shape of Europe or the new securities which must be arranged to spare mankind the miseries of a third world war. Before the task of rebuilding "we have not only to be convinced ourselves but convince all other countries that the nazi tyranny is going to be finally broken."

ARMIES NEED MUSIC

(Brantford Expositor)

The First Great War was not a day, not an hour old, before Britains everywhere were singing the familiar heartening songs—"Rule Britannia", "Soldiers of the King", "The British Grenadiers" and all the rest. Then speedily, appeared new melodies—chief among them "Tipperary", the great hit of the entire war period, "Keep the Home Fires Burning" and so forth. Remembering them and the spirit of which they were so essentially a part, people in Britain, in Canada and throughout the Empire wondered vaguely why there was no such initial accompaniment for the maching troops in the early days of this latest Great War.

ENGLISH PREDOMINATES

(Calgary Herald)

But English, with all its peculiarities, its curious lack of logic in spelling and pronunciation, is still the world's language. It is the official language for nearly half the world's population; either the language which they speak or the language in which they are governed. And well over half the world does its trading in English. English is spoken by more people than Russian and German together. People governed in English total more than people governed in Russian, Japanese, Spanish, Portuguese, German, French and Italian.

Our Friends the Americans

(Montreal Star)

No one who reads the American newspapers closely could be misled into the belief that the voice of Col. Lindbergh is the voice of the United States. Even those who may have been misled into believing that he represents a widespread American point of view must have been disillusioned if they read or heard the week-end speeches of Col. Henry Breckinridge, Assistant Secretary of War in President Wilson's Administration, and William C. Bullitt, United States Ambasador to France. Here are two eminent Americans, far more representative of American thought than Lindbergh ever was, and both urge their country to prepare to fight against Nazi domination.

Col. Breckinridge goes further than his compatriot. He would have the United States not only prepare for any eventuality, but "draw its sword for freedom and humanity." His tribute to Canada as the only nation of the West fighting for the world's most priceless heritage, liberty, is heartfelt, and he voices it as an American who feels that his country should be by the Empire's side in this battle of freedom. "The only hope of humanity is the destruction of Hitler, not his appeasement," the former Assistant Secretary for War declared.

Mr. Bullitt is in an even better position than Col. Breckinridge to appreciate the dangers that confront America. He was in France when the Nazis struck; he saw how the Fifth Column works, how politicians, even soldiers, can be misled into a false sense of security. And, knowing all this, he tells the American people that the same fate awaits them if they do not immediately wake up to the presence of Nazi agents in their midst, and he underlines their perilous position should Britain be defeated. It should not be overlooked, either, that Mr. Bullitt is still an Ambassador of the United States, and could not have made these statements without the approval of his own State Department. His view, then, is the view of the Roosevelt Administration, and his words are all the more significant because of that fact.

It is heartening to learn from such authoritative sources that the United States is with us in this struggle, that even though at the moment she may be struggling with the problem of internal preparedness, she realizes that her first line of defence is in Britain.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Free Flowing Bile Prevents Gall Stones

You have heard the saying "life depends upon the liver", "liver" meaning the individual and also liver meaning the largest organ in the body.

Despite the fact that some physicians claim there is no such thing as a sluggish liver or a sluggish gall bladder the health if not the life, of everybody depends to a great extent on a healthy active liver and a gall bladder that empties itself within normal time.

While the liver stores away sugar and helps to make the blood, its manufacture of bile and the moving of that bile from the liver to the small intestine and its surplus bile to the gall bladder for storage is of the utmost importance to digestion, cleansing of poisons from the blood and from the intestine, and to stimulation of bowel movement. And the "movement" of the bile will prevent gall stone formation.

As students we were taught that the reason gall stones were so common in women—4 to 1 in men—was because women wore corsets. Recently I saw some statistics showing that gall stones were not as common in women as in years past, because women, to a great extent have discarded corsets and so can bend the body more easily and breathe more deeply.

That the bile salts in the bile stimulate bile formation and bile flow is known; the fact that bile salts are returned to the liver by the blood stream after they have been used in digestion, shows how Nature tries to save them instead of lettting too much be carried away in the wastes.

Physicians prescribe bile salts to be taken by mouth to increase the amount and flow of bile, and this is good treatment in cases where exercise cannot be taken. As a boy in my teens in the gymnasium I was taught to rock from side to side with knees straight. This exercise was called the liver squeezer even in those days. It was not until a few years ago, however, that McGill University research workers were able to prove that bending exercises by squeezing the liver, increased the rate of the bile flow and thus prevented the formation of gall stones.

While some fat foods should be eaten to help empty the gall bladder, large amounts of fat and starch foods at one time can cause congestion and irritation of the liver and gall bladder. The irritation increases cholesterol in the bile and cholesterol is a forerunner of gall stones.

Freedom And Control

(New York Times)

In the "total defence" program that we are now undertaking it is imperative to secure the utmost efficiency, yet it is no less important that we should prevent our cultural and economic lives from being completely regimented in the process. We do not need slavishly to imitate the authoritarian governments in order to defend ourselves against them. We shall need a large element of government direction and control in our defence program, yet we shall also need to preserve the great advantages of private enterprise and individual liberty.

Freedom and control are not antitheses, where to choose one is to abandon the other. The problem of government is always one of reconciliation between them. Our defence program has shifted the factors in that problem, but has not changed its essential nature.

Government control is to be accepted only to the extent that it is clearly necessary for defence We cannot welcome such control for its own sake: each regulation must justify itself for a specific purpose. And we must insist, further, that the Government control that we do accept is intelligent and well conceived, that it actually promotes industrial efficiency for war production and does not reduce it. Our economy of private enterprise, it is true, is not adapted primarily for war but for peace. It requires Government orders and a degree of Government direction to adapt it to war production. But this does not mean that private enterprise has suddenly lost its great merits and must now be superseded by governmental dictation.

A FUNERAL SO FAR

(Victoria Times)

The question now emphasized is how long can Germany afford, taking last Thursday's "incident" as a fair sample, to lose sixty or more fighting planes and bombers costing between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000, to destroy 5,039 tons of British shipping and only sixteen defending aircraft? The question is pertinent, because Hitler and his army and air force chiefs must realize by this time that, man for man, machine for machine, the Nazi flier is not a good match for the British fighter. It is thus their funeral if they are beginning to wonder also how much longer the Royal Air Force intends to prosecute its nightly raids over the great military objectives in the Reich itself. In the meantime, however, British people everywhere salute the men of the R.A.F. on another great victory.

Empty Parachute Hoax

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review)

As it was in the last war, 'frightfulness' is still one of Germany's favorite weapons. She seeks to strike terror into the hearts of the foe. It may be good tactics with Continental races but it is just a boomerang when tried on Anglo-Saxons. The latter are inclined to laugh when Germans try the devices of loud noises, parachute troops, 'screeching' bombs or published assertions as to dire penalties.

In the current aerial raids against England, the Germans dropped 60 or 70 parachutes. Some of them lodged in the tops of trees. Others, never opened, were found on the ground and contained printed instructions to non-existent occupants. These obviously were intended to reach military authorities. The object of the undertaking was to convey the impression that parachute troops had been landed for the purpose of damaging vital factories, blowing up power installations, disrupting railway traffic, etc.

The British police officers who investigated described the parachute business as "Just a stupid German hoax." It was believed by the German perpetrators that such an incident could not fail to cause panic among the people of England who would believe themselves exposed to a serious menace. It does not seem to have occurred to the hoaxers that even if Germans had come down in the parachutes they would have been nabbed promptly and shot or imprisoned The British are well prepared for any foes who land on their soil and they are not easily scared by phantom alarms. In fact, Hitler and his gangsters ought to be well aware by his time that when they attack Britain they are dealing with a human problem that is vastly different from anything that they encountered in continental Europe. They are confronted by a populace that is stout-hearted and not given to quitting the fight when the Huns make ugly faces or utter loud threats.

British Unity

(Brandon Sun)

The New York Times says that when what was commonly spoken of as "England" was transformed into "The British Commonwealth of Nations," following the World War, there were many who forecast the gradual dissolution of that mighty empire. But today that empire, in a period perhaps more critical than any other in its long history, is, thanks to British character and British statesmanship, more solidly a unit than ever before. What Canada, Australia and New Zealand have done, and are doing, is in no need of the telling. They are Dominions. But there are also Colonies. Within a recent five-week period Hong Kong, Jamaica, the Gold Coast, Malaya, Trinidad, Cyprus, Ceylon, British Guiana have quietly sent nearly eight millions of dollars to what is still the "Mother Country," for the purchase of airplanes. More is steadily following. Not much, perhaps, in these days of billions, yet it illustrates the determination of the Britisher, wherever he is, to fight the monster that Germany is today.

Bombs Over London

At the very hour, even the very minute when these words go to print the turn may come in the greatest crisis in the history of modern civilization. What is directly at stake is the power of the German air force to destroy Britain's ability to resist. What is ultimately at stake is civilization itself, as we have known it. If Britain holds out another hour, another day, another week, another month, we can begin to hope that nazism has reached its flood tide. If Britain falls, many a full moon will round the earth before that tide recedes.

The German tide in the air over Britain is not the result of racial superiority, or of rare intelligence, or of truth embedded in an obscene "new order." It is the result of specialization in the industry called war. Where other nations chose to give a large part of their creative effort to produce the amenities of civilized life, Germany gave all of hers to war. Under Hitler she has produced war — war and war only. All that was gracious, all that was free, all that was clean and honorable in the life of the German people has been swept aside to make way for the war machine.

Now, as the machine rolls, we face two questions. One is technical: can an air force win a war? Time and the experts must answer it. The other is political: if the Nazi air force wins this war, what meaning has that victory for the Western Hemisphere? What of the future? To what extent can we in this country influence what H. G. Wells has called the shape of things to come?

We can consider this second question while still hoping and believing that the birds of plunder will be driven back from the British shores. We must, indeed, consider it, for the possible answer has a bearing on our national policy now, in the midst of the crisis. Can there be any escape from the conclusion that there can be no peace, no security, no safe island of civilization on this earth if the Power that rained indiscriminate death on Britain yesterday is allowed to triumph? Can we make treaties with such a Power? Can we compromise murder and slavery on a territorial basis? Can we buy from a slave Power, sell to it, travel in its territories, welcome its besotted admirers in our own land? If we ourselves propose to keep our freedom and our honor, we cannot.

This is not only Britain's hour of peril. It is our own. It is civilization's. It is humanity's. Put aside for the moment the quibble as to whether we could be invaded, attacked at sea, flanked by Nazi puppets in Latin America, choked economically. What does it matter from what direction, in what manner, the blow would come, the power be exercised? It would come. There can be no lasting peace with this maniacal tide, this loathsome plague.

Yesterday's events shout to us to give Britain, while there is yet time, the aid that both of our national political parties have pledged themselves to give. That aid does not mean war. It involves less danger of war than would a refusal which precipitated a British surrender. Furthermore, yesterday's events summon us to arm with all speed—now, and not five months from now—with resolute indifference to any interest less than the interest of the whole nation. Nazism knows only one argument — force. It cannot be appeased. It must be cowed or beaten down.

Perhaps Britain, first successfully defending herself, will beat it down. She has the will, the magnificent self-discipline, the sublimity of courage that may do it, in spite of her present armed inferiority. But we had better consider, not next January, nor next month, nor next week, nor tomorrow, but today, what we can do to save Britain—and where we shall stand if Britain falls.—N. Y. Times. (Aug. 17th.)

Caring for Wild Life

(Brandon Sun)

During the present century the realization of the importance of conserving wild life has been marked a feature of our domestic policies, and progress in that policy continues, despite the claims of war activities. Many of Canada's valuable fur-bearing animals are subject to marked fluctuations in numbers, according to the department of mines and resources, Ottawa, which, with the assistance of the bureau of animal population, Oxford University, and the Hudson's Bay company, is making a study of wild life populations.

This survey takes the form of an annual questionnaire distributed to resident traders, trappers, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and officers of government departments stationed in the Northwest Territories. The investigation is carried on from year to year because the situation is changing continually and it is hoped that the work will produce data from which a forecast can be made relating to the expected abundance of each important species. The results of the study may also suggest measures to prevent unnecessary depletion of any species of wild life during the periods of scarcity.

Canada's fur trade has undergone great changes since the French regime in Canada. The railway first revolutionized conditions throughout the country, then more recently the advent of the motor car has influenced the extension of highways to the limits of settlement, and beyond. Boats now ply the lakes and rivers, and the airplane is used for the transportation of furs from the more inaccessible districts. The advance of lumbering, mining and agricultural settlement, together with improved methods of capture, have driven the fur-bearing animals farther and farther afield, and caused serious reductions to their numbers.

To guard against further depletion and to ensure the prosperity of Canada's great wild life heritage, the Dominion and provincial governments have adopted strong measures of conservation. With respect to fur-bearing animals, limitations of catch or closed seasons are in effect in districts where natural conditions provide a suitable habitat, and in strategic places sanctuaries have been provided from which the surrounding country may be naturally restocked.

FIGHTER CREWS ALL CONCERNED WITH SPEED-UP

Courses for Observers and Gunners as Well as Pilots Are Put on Faster Schedule in Air Plan

Ottawa, Aug. 21 — (CP) — To keep pace with the accelerated output of bomber pilots, the instruction period for air observers and air gunners has been reduced under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

Early in August, Air Minister Power announced that the time it takes to turn out a pilot has been cut from 28 to 25 weeks. Since the ships these pilots will fly must be manned, it has also been necessary to speed up the training of other air crewmen.

Four weeks has been cut from the training period of air observers — the men who act as navigators, bombers and photographers in big military planes. Two weeks has been cut from the training of air gunners, and another four weeks will be taken off soon.

Under the revised schedule, observers will receive 22 weeks of training before they are ready to go overseas, and air gunners will train for 26 weeks.

The men who are to become observers are selected at the Initial Training Schools for their mathematical precision and sense of responsibility. Then they are sent to one or another of the 10 Air Observers Schools being set up through the Dominion.

The schools are operated by commercial flying companies, under Royal Canadian Air Force supervision. The big British-designed Avro Anson planes in which observers are trained are supplied by the R. C. A. F.

The observers' course emphasizes air navigation, aerial photography and reconnaissance work. The students — training to become the "eyes" of the air force — must learn to describe the movements of enemy troops, make sketch maps and pick out military objectives from the air.

The last phase of the observers' course covers more than a month at one of the 10 bombing and gunnery schools. They are given several weeks of intensive bombing instruction, and some machine-gun practice.

Training in Wireless

The big part of an air gunner's training is received at a wireless school. Ultimately this part of his course will take 18 weeks, at one of four schools of this type. The student learns something of wireless theory and mechanics, as well as how to operate code and voice wireless sets.

The gunner's ability to handle wireless equipment is just as important as his ability to handle guns. Apart from providing an aid to navigation and communication with the home base of a military plane, wireless relays the orders of the commander to other planes in a formation once the aircraft enter action and there is no need for radio silence.

Upon completion of the wireless course, the air gunner moves on to the bombing and gunnery schools for instruction and practice in firing machine-guns.

British Warplanes Bomb 2 German Transports off Norway

London, Aug. 20—(CP)—British warplanes have bombed two German transports in Haugesund, Norway, the Admiralty announced today.

The Admiralty bulletin follows:

"Skua (British bombers) aircraft of the fleet air arm yesterday located and attacked two enemy transports of about 3000 tons in Haugesund, Norway.

"Two direct hits with bombs were obtained on one of the transports.

"Other Skua aircraft of the fleet air arm carried out an attack on oil tanks north of Haugesund.

"All aircraft returned safely."

MAGISTRATE

Allan Taylor, witness husband corroborated statements, and said accused left his home after 6 p.m. He saw her later after 9 p.m. at the east end of the lower C.N.R. bridge in company with her husband and child. Witness was on footbridge when he saw the McFarlanes.

"Was the baby living at the time?" the Crown asked.

"It looked alright to me. Mrs. McFarlane was carrying it," Taylor replied.

Witness spoke to the McFarlanes, he said. He did not see any of the trio again that evening.

Mrs. Fred Johnson, sister of Mrs. McFarlane, said accused had called at their home at 7 p.m. on July 25, night, and told her they were taking the baby to Frankford. The trio had their supper and remained until 9.30 p.m.

Baby in Good Health

"I do not like to go home in the dark. I wish Bob (husband) would hurry up," witness stated Mrs. McFarlane said. The men were down cellar. Later the men came upstairs and the McFarlanes left.

Witness stated the baby was alive and in good health at 9.30 p.m. July 25th.

Witness admitted to Defence Counsel Goodman that she was responsible for bringing accused to Trenton from Ottawa where she and her child were being cared for in a Salvation Army hut.

She had not lived with her sister since accused was a year old. Mrs. McFarlane and herself had been adopted although parents are still living. Witness has not seen them since 1928.

Accused had been placed in a shelter in 1928, when she was adopted.

"Badly Neglected"

Since then she did not know what her sister had been doing, but agreed with counsel that accused had been "badly neglected all her life"

Witness had offered to take the child on condition accused would take it back after she got married.

"I want the baby back for Bob is going to sign up and he will be company for me," accused had answered.

Her sister had gone to work for the Bata Shoe Co. on June 12th when she met her present husband. She and her husband had suggested to accused that she take the baby to the Mounteney home. The baby had stayed with witness until July 11th the day previous to the McFarlane's wedding.

"Do you swear as a positive fact your sister told you she was taking the baby to her mother-in-law?" the defence asked.

"Yes," witness replied.

"Are you aware her mother-in-law did not know your sister had a child?"

"Not until I read the papers."

"Do you still swear she told you about taking Gordon to his grandmother."

"Yes."

Fred Johnson, witness' husband, corroborated statements regarding arrival and departure of the McFarlanes. His opinion was the child was in a healthy condition.

"Bundle In Arms."

Harry Mondeville, bridge-tender of the C.N.R. swing bridge, told the court he had let a boat through at 9:05 D.S.T. and entered the glass watch-tower near the bridge to operate levers. He marked down the time in the log. Through the window he saw two people coming towards the footbridge.

"I went downstairs. They stopped. I walked to them and they walked away. I asked them if they wanted something. The man replied something about 'sister-in-law'. By this time they were stopped at the footbridge. A girl with a bundle in her arms was with the man, but I don't know what it was," witness said

Thinking their actions funny, Mondeville, after going to the watch-tower, went back across the bridge in the rear of the couple.

"I did not see them until a few minutes later coming up the footpath leading down under the bridge. The girl still had the bundle in her arms. They recrossed the footbridge again."

He saw a couple sitting on a track near the river but could not identify them. He could not say how much time the procedure took.

Picked Up Young Couple.

Mrs. George Wickens, Glen Miller, told the court she and her husband had picked up a young couple walking along the highway near the Trent Canal a few minutes after 11 p.m. on July 25. Both rode in the front seat of the car with Mr. Wickens. They rode as far as Glen Miller.

She could not identify the couple in question in the courtroom.

George Wickens, driver of the car did not think he could identify the woman. He did not know the man. He saw them cross the road near his house. Accused and husband had been picked up on the Trenton-Frankford highway near the Glen Miller C.N.R. switch at 11:25 p.m. July 25, by Everett Hall, Bata employee. He had let them out near Batawa (Bata Shoe Co. plant).

The couple were alone and not carrying anything, Hall told the Crown. "No other person was with them," he answered a query.

Returning from Trenton to Frankford, Jack Foster, Bata employee, saw a couple on the highway and stopped to pick them up. "One was my cousin Robert McFarlane, and a young woman. I took them to their home in Frankford."

"How many people got out of the car?" the Crown asked

"Two."

Married on July 12th

Mrs. Martha McFarlane, mother of Robert McFarlane told the court her son had married Alice Archer on July 12th.

She saw her son's wife on July 25th in her Frankford home at 6.30 a.m. and again at dinner time. They returned that night at 11.30 after the clock struck that hour. They had not been home for supper. When they came in they were alone.

"Are you acquainted with Gordon Archer?" asked the Crown.

"No."

Under cross examination, witness admitted up to July 26th, she did not know Alice Archer McFarlane had had an illigitimate child. She denied having made statements to the effect that she would not take the child in her house.

Gave Statements

Chief of Police Wm. Bain, Trenton, related the incidents up to the discovery of the child, as brought out in former evidence.

He told of the apprehension of the McFarlanes at their work in the Bata Shoe Company.

"Mrs. McFarlane looked very pale and surprised to see us," he said. Mrs. McFarlane was questioned by witness in his office in presence of a court reporter. As a result he secured a statement from the accused.

She was perfectly cool when the statement was taken which took approximately 30 minutes.

Witness, Constable Lozo and the accused, Mrs. McFarlane, had following the taking of the statement went over the route taken by accused on July 25th. Witness had held the accused after his questioning regarding the finding of the body, on a nominal charge of vagrancy, he told Defence Counsel Goodman. She was not arrested until July 26th.

The Crown closed its evidence at this point and Magistrate Butler adjourned the hearing until Friday, reserving judgment until both hearings are concluded.

General Election In Australia to Be Held on September 21

Canberra, Aug. 20 (CP)—The Australian general election will be held Sept. 21, the government announced today.

The three-year term of the present House of Representatives expires in October.

The election had been forecast for some time in view of the fact that the Labor party under John Curtin, decided to enter an all-party government.

Had Labor accepted the government's offer, it was planned to ask the British parliament to approve extension of the life of the present Australian parliament for the duration of the war. Such a step would require an amendment to the act of the mother of parliaments which set up the Australian Commonwealth.

But the refusal of the opposition party made such a course inadvisable, in the view of Prime Minister R. G. Menzies and his advisers.

The standing of the dissolved House of Representatives was: Government: United Australia Party, 25, Country Party, 17. Opposition: Federal Labor Party, 23, Lang Labor Party, 9.

The Senate, of 36 members, also is elective. Its members sit for six-year terms with one half of the membership coming up for election every three years.

Japanese Papers Express Alarm Over Defence Pact

Tokyo, Aug. 20—(AP-via Radio)—Japanese newspapers professed alarm today over the United States' new defence accord with Canada, declaring that ultimately it would cause grave disturbances in the Orient, Domei, Japanese News Agency, reported in a broadcast.

One influential paper, Hochi, predicted that the Canadian agreement was forerunner of a similar United States pact with Australia and said it "obliges Japan to be extremely wachful in view of its possible effect on the peace of the Pacific region."

The newspaper Yomiuri claimed the Canadian pact was "proof that the United States intends to take over the remaining influence of Britain in the world and thereby increase her own power in regions west of her (in the Orient) as well as in the east. Japan must balance this by establishing her new order in East Asia."

Nine British Ships Of 32,257 Tons Lost Week Aug. 12

London, Aug. 20 (CP).—Nine British ships of 32,257 tons were lost during the week ending Aug. 12, it was authoritatively stated today.

In addition, the report said, one 942-ton allied ship and two neutral ships totalling 6,708 tons were lost, making the week's total twelve ships with aggregate tonnage of 39,907.

This was only slightly more than half of the losses of 75,124 tons for the week ending Aug. 5 which showed 13 British ships totalling 60,058 tons, an 1,298-ton allied ship and five neutral vessels with a total tonnage of 13,768 sunk.

No additional German shipping losses were reported.

18-Year-Old Canadian Credited With Shooting Down 3 Nazi Planes

(By Douglas Amaron Canadian Press Staff Writer).

London, Aug. 21 (CP Cable) — Eye-witnesses credit Sapper Richard Etchells with shooting down three German dive bombers with machine-gun fire last Sunday but the young Canadian modestly said he was personally only claiming two.

"As for the third, I believe I gave him a good hit just over amidships", he said.

The 18-year-old blond boy came to England several months ago from Reston, Man., and joined the Royal Engineers of the British army. A deadly marksman, he was posted on duty in an exposed part of a costal town.

On Sunday 50 German raiders roared in from the English channel. The Royal Air Force engaged them and turned back 28 but 22 dived down to attack the town.

Etchells and his comrades opened heavy fire.

Describing the attack the Canadian said he thought the raiders were rather high so he gave a burst at the first machine. "I thought it would bring him lower," he explained casually.

"This it did and he tried to get me but I gave him another burst and caught him amidships. A second machine came down to dive bomb us, but I gave him a burst which also caught him amidships.

"They say I brought down a third but I am not claiming all that myself, although I believe I gave him a good hit just over amidships."

R.A.F. Raids Kiel And 30 Nazi Airdromes

London, Aug. 20—(CP)—Royal Air Force bombers last night attacked the German naval base at and German - occupied territory, Kiel and 30 airdromes in Germany while in daylight raids yesterday an airdrome at Flushing and an antiaircraft position near Amsterdam were attacked, the Air Ministry announced tonight.

AIR TRAINING SCHEME AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

Possibility of Moving of Air Training Schools to Other Parts Mentioned

CANADA PRAISED

London, Aug. 20—(CP Cable) — Sir Archibald Sinclair, Air Secretary, told a cheering House of Commons Tuesday that the Empire Air Training scheme is ahead of schedule and said that plans are under way also for training airmen elsewhere.

"I cannot give figures but the fact which shows substantial progress is being made is that whereas we are expecting to reach a certain figure of pilot production from Canada in July or even as late as August next year we are now going to get that figure by April," he announced.

"That will convince the House that substantial progress— more rapid progress than we were entitled to anticipate—is being made with the Empire Air Training scheme.

"Howe grateful we are for the energy, enterprise and drive which the Canadian government and the Canadian air staffs, with the assistance of the Air Vice Marshal who represents us there, have thrown into the scheme."

Sir Archibald said the Air Ministry was planning training elsewhere since the arrangement for training schools in France and North Africa had "gone by the board."

He asked the House not to expect a statement now or later "because if we did decide to move a number of schools overseas it might easily be a move of great magnitude involving the transference of a large amount of material very substantial numbers of men and that would have to be protected by secrecy."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A girl of my acquaintance who expects to be married in the late autumn has written me an amusing letter saying: "Since you're no great hand at getting married yourself, perhaps you can tell me how to be happy though married."

A prime first aid to happy marriage is not to make your husband over. Learn to take him as they say in auction rooms and curio shops "as is".

Remember that his hobbies are very special pets and, pursuing hobbies at home, he'll be less interested in acquiring extra-matrimonial pets outside. Even if they're messy hobbies, such as doing carpentry work around the house, and even knowing that you'll have to get in a professional carpenter to repair the damage, remember that dad is getting a mighty kick out of these things, and he's entitled to it once in a while.

A word of advice to all girls about to enter into the "holy state" is never to marry because you're tired of supporting yourself and you'd like to shift that responsibility to a pair of broader shoulders. Remember what those splendid old high priestesses of Woman Suffrage, Susan B. Anthony, Elizabeth Cady Stanton ond others, warned a generation ago; that marriage no longer furnishes economic security for women.

No matter how bright your prospects are when you start out, in these days of economic upheavals you may have to bring home the bacon before you're many years older. Unless you happen to belong to that "going going gone" millionaire class it's just as well for every girl to take some sort of training for the rainy day or not to lose touch with her old job completely when she marries.

If there are children to be looked after, there will probably be years that a good wife and mother will be entirely occupied in caring for them. After the youngsters are in school and on their own, it's a mighty heartening thing for a wife to know that she has the ability to turn a penny.

Please don't expect marriage to be a "flirtation under the auspices of the church" as a certain writer friend of mine referred to it. In the best of marriages there are unavoidable heartbreaks — sickness, deaths, money losses, disappointments, frustrated hopes, all sorts of misfortunes which must be faced. Good, honest companionship, respect, knowledge of troubles lived through together are the things which make marriake worth while.

There are no soft snaps in this world, not even in marriage, and to make marriage successful you've got to put the same amount of thought, will-power, give-and-take, good humor into the old institution that you would have to put into any other going business.

And firstly, lastly, and at all times, please don't marry for any other reason except that you're so head-over-heels in love with your man that you can't possibly live without him.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Small Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am planning to be married at a very small, simple church wedding, to take place in the morning, and I would like to ask you about the following points in connection with the wedding arrangements.

1.—What procedure is followed when the bride's mother gives the bride away? We are planning to have an organist, and I will go up the aisle in the usual manner.

2.—I am wearing a navy and white printed sheer afternoon dress, with white accessories. Would it be correct for the groom and best man to wear either white or gray flannel trousers, and double-breasted navy-blue coats?

3.—We are having a small wedding breakfast at my home for the members of the immediate families and one or two close friends. If the minister has not previously been known to the bride and groom is he invited to the breakfast also?

Margaret

1.—When the plan is for the bride's mother to give her daughter in marriage, usually the bride walks up the aisle with either a male relative (an uncle, perhaps, or a brother) or a man who has been a close friend of the family for a long time. Occasionally, the bride walks up the aisle alone. Then, at the proper time in the ceremony, the bride's mother steps from her seat in the front pew at the left of the aisle, performs her part in the ceremony, and then takes her place again in the front pew.

2.—If your print dress is very summery-looking, with the white predominating, then it would look consistent for the groom and his best man to wear white flannel trousers and dark blue coats. But if your print dress gives more the impression of a travelling dress, then I think it would give a more harmonizing impression if the groom and best man wear dark blue business suits.

3.—Since you are having only the families and one or two close friends, and since the minister is not a "family friend", I am sure that he will not expect to be invited to the wedding breakfast.

Refreshments

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

What is the correct type of refreshments to serve at an afternoon bridge party?

Bernice

What you serve depends on the kind of party you are giving. The refreshments for a casual table of bridge with three of your intimate friends would be a hot or cold drink (depending on the weather) and perhaps thin sandwiches and small cakes or cookies. For a larger and more formal party, you would naturally wish to have something more elaborate. But it is not necessary to serve what amounts to a "High Tea" as some hostesses seem to believe. Tea or coffee, then sandwiches, or assorted types if you wish, cake or cookies, and perhaps nuts and mints would be ample.

Dispute

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Would you kindly settle a dispute between A and B? A claims that a name after the title of Mrs. B. claims that the husband's first name is never used under any conditions. I would be very grateful to you if you would settle this disagreement.

A.H.

A is right. When a woman uses the Mrs. title, she uses her husband's name after it—Mrs. Robert Smith. It is not correct for a woman to use the form Mrs. Mary Smith. A married woman's formal name is Mrs. Robert Smith. Her informal name is Mary Smith, or Mary Robinson Smith . . . no Mrs. before either of these informal names.

As you state B's claim—that the husband's first name is never used under any conditions—is so preposterous that I am wondering if you may perhaps have either not heard it right or have misquoted it. In any event, it is, of course, incorrect. And I hope that you will be able to persuade B of this!

If you are tired of cooking vegetables by themselves, combine two or more, as in this squash and tomato dish.

Today's Menu

Macaroni and Cheese
Squash and Tomatoes
Cabbage and Apple Salad
Green Apple Pie
Coffee

• • •

Macaroni and Cheese

Macaroni
1 cup cheese
Salt
1 tbsp.flour
1 tbsp. butter
Pepper or paprika
1 cup or more milk

For persons to be served cook enough macaroni in boiling, salted water, drain and blanch with cold water. Melt butter in saucepan, add flour and mix smooth, add milk gradually, stirring constantly until thick and smooth, add finely cut cheese (you need not use so much cheese if you do not care to) season with 1-2 teaspoon salt and 1-2 teaspoon paprika or 1-4 teaspoon pepper, pour over cooked macaroni in buttered baking dish, top with crumbs or corn flakes, and bake until brown, about 15 minutes.

• • •

Squash and Tomatoes

Use either crooked neck summer squash or Italian squash. Wash, cut in slices about 1-2 inch thick. Sprinkle with salt, pepper, dip into beaten egg and coat well with breadcrumbs. Spread out on a platter to dry.

Slice firm tomatoes in half-inch slices or cut in halves. Coat cut sides with flour and season well. Panfry slices of bacon, allowing two to each serving. Remove to a hot platter. Brown squash slices slowly in bacon fat, allowing squash to cook through.

Panfry tomatoes in a separate pan. In serving, top a squash slice with one of tomato and garnish all with bacon.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Bread

A great deal of the bread we eat today is just so much filling for the part of the wheat we popularly call the "heart" or germ has been taken out in the process of milling. Wheat germ is a brown, oily substance, and when left in white flour, soon discolors it and causes it to go rancid.

That was why it began to be the practise to remove the wheat germ when mills commenced turning out white flour for commerce years ago. Before that time, our fathers and grandfathers walked to the nearest mill carrying a bag of wheat, had it ground, and carried it home as flour. All the vitamins were still in it, although they didn't know a thing about them, and the flour was a real food.

It was only comparatively recently that scientists found ordinary white flour lacking in certain vitamins that the wheat proper contains in abundance. This brought a swing to whole wheat flour and whole wheat bread and this, I think, was a good thing. However, whole wheat bread contains a lot of roughage, more, in fact, than is good for some tender stomachs.

Scientists then began experimenting to find how to keep flour white and soft, and yet retain the vitamins ordinarily lost in milling. One man I know, devoted his life and hih fortune to it. He was head of a large milling corporation, and he got himself interested in this fascinating research to the point where he threw up his job and at his own expense equipped his laboratory and went to work full time.

Eventually he decided the wheat germ couldn't be left in the flour when it was milled, but that the germ removed could be prepared so that it could be put back to revitalize the flour. Bread made from such a flour is as rich in vitamins as whole wheat bread. It can be richer if the baker happens to add more of the germ than he needs to. And it doesn't have the roughage that makes whole wheat bread objectionable.

I would like to tell you that this man with his discovery has had honors heaped on him, and that he has made a fortune from his discovery, but unfortunately that isn't the case. As one baker told me, the trade is full of new trick flours, and this man's discovery was looked on as just another one of those.

The man I speak of, has taken the disappointment very well. He knows what he has accomplished, and I know he feels that some day his work will be really recognized. In the meantime I think he gets some comfort from the fact that the Dionne Quintuplets eat bread made from his flour.

Little Benny's Note Book

It was away passed supper time and pop wasn't home yet and neither was ma, and I was hungry as anything and I was sitting on the front steps waiting for them, and they came walking up together looking as if they didn't know there was any special hurry, and I said, G wizzickers, pop, holey smokes, ma, where have you been supper's all ready and it's been ready and I'm as hungry as the dooce.

Well well how intristing, pop said, and ma said, Now you have a little inkling of how your father and I feel when you come strolling in for your meals as though time and tide simply didn't exist as far as you're concerned.

But he's always bubbling over with good excuses, we must admit that, so I think it's only fair for us to give him a few tried and true excuses, pop said. Dont you remember, my deer, we had no idea of the time? he said, and ma said, That's right, you could of knocked us over with a feather when we realized now late it was getting.

Sounding like one of my excuses and being sourcastic, and I said, Well aw G, pop, gosh, ma, come on in before everything gets even colder, Nora's getting mad.

We'd just like you to know it wasn't entirely our fault, pop said. Several other ladies and gentlemen were still out, he said, and ma said, Yes indeed, so how could we be expected to suspect that it was time to go home?

Being what I'm libel to say about the other fellow when I come home late, and I said, Well G roozalem, I'm hungry, and when I'm late you don't have to wait for me, you just go ahead and start to eat, but good night I have to wait for you and I'm hungry.

I believe the boy's got something there, pop said, and ma said, Yes, that's quite a point, I shouldn't be surprised if Nora really is quite excited, let's hurry in and eat.

Wich we did.

We Owe Much To Modern Refrigeration

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

IN OUR climate the invention of the refrigerator was inevitable. It seems astonishing that our grandfathers endured existence in our summers without them. But they went without screens, electric fans, soft shirts, summer clothing of any kind, to say nothing of automobiles and air conditioning units.

The automatic refrigerator makes for a drier atmosphere, because as the air circulates inside it absorbs moisture and deposits it in the coils. Liquids should be covered in the electric type refrigerator and cheese, boiled ham and other foods which dry out easily should be wrapped in wax paper. Berries keep better if placed unwashed on a flat tray without covering. Meats should not be washed before being refrigerated. A good refrigerator not only keeps food preserved with a low bacterial count, but also removes odors.

Vacation Diet for Underweights

With a balanced, full diet, adequate in respect to vitamins, protein and minerals, studies on a group of underweights over a period of eleven weeks showed an average weight gain of 2 pounds per week. The underweight who is trying to gain should slow up on all tiring exercises and learn to relax, sleep more at night, ride rather than walk and eat more food. The groups of foods to emphasize are (1) meats, milk and eggs, (2) fruits and vegetables, some uncooked, (3) fats, cream, butter, salad dressings, gravies, (4) sweets, desserts, candies, cakes.

What is the health value of dark glasses?

All eyes except those that are blind and useless are sensitive to light and especially glare. Oversensitiveness to light usually is dependent on some form of eyestrain.

In bright summer sunlight the eyes are assaulted by glare coming from all directions. It is reflected from the pavement, the water and the sand, and comes towards the retina from below, adding to the direct diffused light from the sky and air. In automobile driving this reflected glare is particularly trying.

We have now an almost perfect sun glass made from polaroid, a film-like material containing countless needle-like minute crystals arranged parallel to each other. A thin sheet of this is laminated between two glasses to make lenses. It is now possible also to obtain sun glasses which can be fitted for a stigmatism and relieve eyestrain. Also fitted with adaptation for strong or weak sunlight.

They should be used by all automobile tourists, as well as fishermen for sailing and boating.

YEAR BOOK OF COLLEGE FASHIONS 1940

UNDERGRADUATES TELL STYLISTS HOW CAMPUS GIRLS PREFER TO DRESS

By PATRICIA MONTCLAIR

THIS is a story about six smart girls who made a place for themselves in business by wishful thinking. The point they pass on to you, however, is that they thought just as hard as they wished; and that's why the fashion merchandising field has welcomed them to the Fall collection season now coming up.

Every June the big shops all over the country are haunted by ambitious girls who want vacation jobs after school closes. Saks Fifth Avenue always gets its share of these girls and this year took a notion to quiz all comers for ideas as well as ambitions. From scores of answers six were chosen which labored the same theme: We want to style clothes which college girls will wear; we know what they should be. Manufacturers do not.

The six were invited to meet each other at the shop, and when the conference was over the girls had the jobs they dreamed up.

The Winners

Martha Kay Lamb, Smith 1942, of Adrian, Mich.; Betty Gentry, Vassar 1942, of Governors Island, N.Y.; Vicky Walker, Wellesley 1911, of Yonkers, N.Y.; Betty Royster, Sarah Lawrence 1940, of Norfolk, Va.; Aldine Baker, Rollins College 1943, of Winter Park, Fla.; and Carol Hill, Smith 1940, of New York City, won the chances. Just now, as busy as bees and vocal as a treeful of magpies, these girls are editing a score of campus fashion items, with proper accessories, and the last month of Summer will find them selling their wares in the college shop, exploiting them at fashions shows, posing for fashion pictures which will scatter all over the country where there are girls going to college for the 1940-41 season.

Smooth and Super

To quote Miss Hill: "There will be nothing gruesome in the collection." Translated, that means that the clothes will be both smooth and super—even nifty. Not for instance, like last year's monster loosed on a scornful student body—the reversible tweed and garbardine coat fitted to the figure and made further gruesome because of its puffed shoulder sleeves.

"We had no sooner taken over the original reversible coat, borrowed from men's campus wear because we loved it, than the manufacturer's leaped on it and changed it all around to something they loved....and it was gruesome. No one wore it!"

Similar sabotage overtook with identical dud results men's shirts of flannel and of frontier check cotton, long tailed and long sleeved, which all campus girls wore last Fall and Winter outside their tweed skirts or slacks. Geared to feminine ideals which existed only in the sabateurs' imaginations, the shirts offered for sale in college shops were shorter, had short

The girls all want long sleeves for sweaters and coats—they like to roll them above the elbow. They hate bright red knee-length knit hose; they hate any sweaters except the masculine Brooks classic, very long in the body. They especially loathe Tyrolean sweaters. Snoods are rarer than pigeon blood rubies on a campus; there is no percentage in peasant kerchiefs tied over the hair. Hair, in fact, is being worn longer and longer, so the need for gadgets to conceal wave-setting combs and twisters is obsolete. A tiny velvet bowknot is universal topknot decor, taking precedence over even hats. But the girls will wear hats if they can be jammed on without aid of a mirror and without mussing hair too much. They intend to design such a hat—a big, flexible felt in black or very dark colors to go with everything. They will also admit a pill box hat if they can get one simple enough to please.

Please Omit Weeds

"No birds, fishes, veils or other weeds wanted," said Miss Gentry. "Also no nasty elastics to make grooves in our back hair. Let a hat stay on because it fits the head."

Martha Lamb says that girls always begin college life with too many one-piece wool frocks bought for class periods. Sweaters and skirts are the only used costume for this. One such dress, for travel purposes, is enough.

Miss Walker thinks one of the silliest fantasies of life on a campus, from the outsider's point of view, is the legend which puts a girl into tea-dancing pretties for after-football gaieties.

Low Heels

More low heels are wanted, even for dancing feet. "The girls today are all giants," Miss Walker observed. "We love low wedges; we hate dizzy shoes, preferring dark colors such as brown, green, black, navy. The saddle shoe is still tops in white numbers, unless you count sneakers as white. English brogues and Swedish moccasins are very popular."

All the girls agree that the decollete gown with a jacket top is the best bet. It can serve for dinners, concerts and such, as well as for dances. An evening gown's "musts" are its packing qualities—will it muss?—and can it be cleaned inexpensively and not require cleaning too often? Intricate pleated gowns are out.

Cotton smocks which are long enough to cover a girl's slip and pretty enough not to scare people who see her wearing one while on the way to the telephone, will be in the new collection for study wear. Fire drill red bathrobes also debut, checking midnight style shows in dormitories which are usually very bad. (Drills occur during sleeping hours, and the girls roll out in the clothes they can grab.)

A "great cape," black ski cloth lined with red flannel, completely covering a girl from neck to heels, is a new item from this group. It will serve for day, evening, sports and inclement weather wear, and last a lifetime. Miss Gentry, whose brain child it is, calls it Dracula.

One bit of styling that ought to defeat the mossgrown guard of professional college clothes designers all these girls endorse with enthusiasm. It is the knee-length kilt of authentic tartan, to be worn with a sweater top and authentic plaid pinned to the shoulder. The Stuart dress tartar, which has a white background, has been selected for this fashion which, bare knees and all, is for the coming Winter. (Wanna bet some "outside" designer will try to add girlish sporrans to the ensemble?)

Get the Cracked Teacup

Very soundly, this group of girls has seen to it that all these fashions they endorse are priced inexpensively, less dear than the mistaken clothes they dislike so much. They want to put it over to freshmen, too, that whereas loose and masculine cuts are in favor, it doesn't mean a girl may be anything but 100 per cent. well groomed in them. The untidy girl with a haystack coiffure and a hanging slip will get the cracked teacup and a timetable from her pals.

Common Traits Of All Women

Some Respects in Which Men Will Find That Women Are All Alike

"You can never tell what a woman is going to do but you can be sure she will do the unexpected." When they are little boys they begin to say it simply mimicking their dads, of course. By the time they get to college they have appropriated the idea, assimilated it and enlarged upon it. When they are old enough to get married they make funny jokes on the subject; middle-aged they repeat ad infinitum, sometimes with amusement but oftener with contempt, "You can never tell what a fool woman will do, etc." For instance, when they sneak up behind a woman in a car, let out a wild toot of the horn and scare her out of her boots.

No? And wouldn't life be dull if we did know in advance exactly what we were going to do, and wouldn't we be deadly bores to the whole male gender if that little element of surprise were taken out of our relationships? However, there are a few respects in which girl children are as much alike as two peas in a pod and if the boy friends, fiances and husbands could get that idea through their noggins we'd all escape some heartaches and they some worries.

First: We are vain and particularly vain where the men are concerned. We would prefer to say we are prideful; but being perfectly fair it is not pride but vanity that makes us skittish. Give us plenty of sop for our vanity and we actually behave like human beings. Deny our vanity the sop and we are fiends.

Second: We are as much interested in having somebody to love as we are interested in being loved. One might think this an easy matter: to find somebody to love. Well it isn't. And the men who present themselves to be loved and are acceptable need never worry about what queer turn we may take. Why we settle right down in the groove and go round and round like a phonograph record.

Third: We've got to be proud of the men we love or we can't sustain our affection. We've got to believe in them. We prefer to be supported by them and we must be assured that the world thinks well of them as men, if not as captains of industry, prime ministers or presidents.

And slightly paraphrasing Mr. Tarkington, we can all be ideal wives to ideal husbands if we can find the ideal husbands.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON (Mme. Qui Vive)

Improving on Nature

When a woman takes her head out of a shampoo bowl, and gazes upon that dripping horror of herself that is reflected in the mirror, she thanks heaven and providence that she doesn't have to stay as nature made her. Blessed be cosmetics. Hooray for the permanent wave. Glory be to the lipstick, the rosy synthetic blush, the fragrant calcimine that comes out of the powder box. Without them life would be a dreary waste. They're props for the soul and they boost morale.

Fancy those dear dead days when beautifying was considered sinful, when it was believed that cosmetics would ruin the complexion. Silly. Complexions are improving every year. Can't you hear the echo of prehistoric yodeling about "natural" beauty? All right if you have it, but what if nature has short changed you?

If Mary Jane has been cursed with an incipient moustache or had witch bristles on her chin she was supposed to bear her affliction with saintlike resignation. Now Mary hustles herself to the electrolysis operator and has the pests electrocuted. When Mary gets older she may have a facelift, which has become respectable. She'll talk about it as casually as she will tell you about her visit to the dentist's office. Why not?

Grandma's grandma didn't dare to even powder her nose. The modern grandma has a cute bob, tints her lips with cherry cream, touches her eyelids with rouge, has her own latch key and comes home at all hours. A much pleasanter life than being a sit-by-the-fire and waiting to die.

We seek corrective measures for our beauty ills because good appearance makes for happier lives. If every woman had a strawberry and vanilla complexion, if every figure conformed to standard weights and measurements, if waists and ankles were slender, hair thick, lustrous and glittering, maybe we wouldn't be elbowing our way through crowds at the doors of beauty shops. But those things just aren't so. Some of us are seconds, like stockings you get on bargain counters. So isn't it grand we know what to do about it?

NO-STOCKINGS HABIT REQUIRES EXTRA CARE, GIRLS FIND

Many girls are going bare-legged as much as possible and that means a great saving on silk stockings. But please don't forget in your delight at freedom and coolness (not to mention economy) that your appearance still matters. Stockings cover a multitude of sins; they conceal skin blemishes, scorch marks, gooseflesh, etc. They give the legs an attractive color-covering. They camouflage flabbiness; for silk is elastic and this, added to the upward pull of your suspenders, provides a sort of two-way-stretch corset for your legs. Stockings also disguise—to some extent—hairiness, and how are your legs going to look without them?

Quite frankly, you must get your legs into thoroughly good condition before you shed your stockings.

Get your legs firm by giving the muscles some regular and constructive exercise. Go for long walks. Do tip-toe exercises, dance, peddle imaginery bicycles in the air; and if you've got a real bicycle—use it.

Blemishes

Scorch-marks can be bleached away by nightly use of a special Clearing-Lotion. The lotion should be painted on thickly and left till morning. Regular friction will get rid of blotchiness and gooseflesh. Use a friction-cloth every time you take a bath. Scrub the legs upwards from ankle to knee, and sleep with a pillow under the foot of your mattress to help your circulation.

Superfluous hair must be removed. And don't be led astray by the old wives' threat that it'll make it worse. It's true that once you've started you'll have to go on, because once you've seen your legs free of bristles you'll never be able to bear to let them grow again. You can take your choice of three methods of removal. 1. Depilatory wax. This, incidentally, actually weakens the growth in time. 2. Friction, i.e., rubbing the hairs off with a fine emery-disc. 3. Depilatory Cream. This takes about three to five minutes to work, and should be sponged off with cold water. No, it doesn't smell nasty, and it doesn't burn the skin

Sunburn

You can, of course, tan your legs any shade you wish. Remember, however, that the skin of the legs is particularly sensitive, so take your time over the business and use a good anti-burn lotion. This lotion forms an invisible protective covering to your skin, which cuts out the burning rays of the sun and promotes the tannng rays. There is still, however, the problem of those whose circumstances do not permit lying around in the sun all day. Listen, there is a special new liquid make-up which is designed to take the place of stockings. This make-up simply will not streak or blotch, and it will not rub off on clothes nor come off in cold water. Warm water and soap or cream should be used for removing it. Believe it or not, this make-up looks exactly like super-fine silk stockings. Use a well-pointed light-brown eyebrow pencil to draw on the "seam" down the back.

Your Figure

Don't forget your figure. It's one thing to go stockingless, but quite another to abandon your corset-girdle. Yet, without stockings to keep it anchored, one's girdle is apt to work upwards most uncomfortably. The solution to this problem is to invest in a pair of elastic pantees. They keep the hips and seat nice and trim, they're very comfortable and they needn't be expensive. If you insist on casting aside all means of figure support in the cause of coolness do an intensive course of figure-training beforehand.

Now's the Time For Berries

By ELEANOR ROSS

IT'S THE berries!—those delightful desserts made with members of the berry family, field fresh right now.

Maine Treats

Raspberry Slump is what they call this heavenly pudding up in Maine. Good Maine housewives make it with a quart of raspberries washed and placed in a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with 1 1-2 cups sugar.

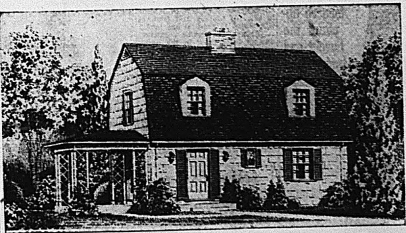
Make a smooth batter of one cup flour, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 1-2 teaspoons baking powder, 1-4 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons melted butter and 1-2 cup milk. Pour over berries. Bake in moderately hot oven for 45 minutes. Up in Maine too, where blueberries bloom at their best, they have several versions of blueberry pudding besides the slump, made as above. The simplest version is made with thick slices of white bread spread with butter and placed in a greased baking dish. Pour stewed blueberries sweetened with sugar over the bread. Add a tablespoon lemon juice and steam for 30 minutes. Serve with a foamy sauce.

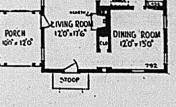
Cool Drink

For a marvellous fruit drink, mash one cup fresh or frozen raspberries through a very fine sieve. Add to one cup grapefruit juice and one cup table water of the vichy type. Sweeten to taste with a little honey. Chill well and serve in a tall goblet with cracked ice. Garnish with a sprig of mint and a fresh raspberry. Grand for calorie counters as it gives energy without too many calories.

Don't forget berries in salads; top your berry salads with mayonnaise mixed with blackberry or raspberry jam—a real fruit salad dressing.

A HOUSE OUT-OF-TOWN





A handsome doorway gives dignity to this two-story Colonial house with its ample roofed terrace at one side at the front.

YOUR OWN back-to-the-soil movement may be hampered by a job in town. The answer to this is of course a house in the suburbs where you can raise your own caterpillars and in other ways enjoy the fuller life al fresco.

This house chosen today as a home maker's suggestion is of Colonial persuasion, a dignified home "to grow to" if you are at present in need of only the smallest house. A lot of young people have found it not such a good plan to lavish their money and love on a tiny cottage, only to abandon it when larger quarters became necessary.

Colored Shutters

The model can be finished with a white painted exterior and shutters of colorful accent. The dark green and Federal blue shutters are traditional; more fun, perhaps, are shutters of "pumpkin" yellow or coral pink. Any color one chooses at any rate should rhyme with the kind of clinging vine you'll raise on the terrace pillars, or on the trellis and picket fence.

Cincinnati and Cleveland Getting Ready to Entertain The World Series Crowds

Both Teams Apparently Have Ability to Win When Victory is Needed

REDS BEAT GIANTS

Brooklyn Bowled Over Twice by St. Louis and Tigers Whipped Twice by Yanks

(By Bill White, Associated Press Sports Writer)

A lot of experting has been done to show how Brooklyn Dodgers and Detroit Tigers can win the big league pennants. But the fact remains that Cincinnati and Cleveland still are getting ready to entertain the world series crowds.

The ability to win when a victory is most imperative seems to be the keynote of both teams—and it was never better demonstrated than yesterday.

The Reds were faced with the red hot (for a day) Giants and the Brooks were willing and anxious to whittle St. Louis Cards down twice and thus get within 2 1-2 games of the Rhinelanders. But today's standings will show the Brooks 5 1-2 games back, thanks to the Reds' stirring finish over the Giants in a 3-2 thriller and the Brooks' double loss to the Cards 3-0 and 4-3.

The Giants' Bill Lohrman had his 10th victory practically in his pocket when the Reds unleashed a four-hit, ninthinning attack and the victory thus went to Junior Thompson—his 12th of the campaign.

Claude Passeau racked up his 15th win of the season by pitching the Cubs to a 4-0 decision over the Phillies. Dick Lanahan hurled the Pirates to a 6-3 decision over Boston Bees to end a six-game losing streak.

If the Indians want to clinch the American League pennant quickly, they ought to play the rest of their games at Boston's Fenway Park where Ken Keltner is usually good for a batting spree. He had one yesterday in leading the leaders to an 11-6 victory over the sox.

The Yanks climbed into a fourth-place tie with Chicago White Sox by earning a doubleheader victory over Detroit Tigers 4-3 and 4-2.

The White Sox had trouble with the Athletics, winning the first game 6-1 with a five-run rally in the ninth but losing the second 4-3 in the 10th when Wally Moses stole home with the winning run.

The Browns' Eldon Auker beat the Senators 6-3.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz Associated Press Sports Writer.)

New York, Aug. 21 (AP)—Bill McKechnie has had scout Jewel Ens soft-shoeing around the American League and Ens has reported Cleveland as the team the Reds had better start scouting....They had to put Bob Smith, veteran trainer, seriously ill at Saratoga, under an oxygen tent the other night.

Names and news.

Mrs. A. C. Critchley (she was Diana Fishwick) the British golf star, is at Ogunquit, Me., and will play a war relief exhibition match there Friday....Lawson Little isn't getting fat on his National Open title—only eight exhibitions so far.

Today's guest star.

Robert E. Hooey, Ohio State Journal: "The first world's series game played at night?....Don't be a bit surprised if it is this year, especially if Cleveland wins the pennant ....Sooner or later a nocturnal series game is bound to come, say those who should know whereof they speak."

When wilder and woolier ball games are dished out, the Canadian-American League will do the dishing....In the Gloversville-Amsterdam game the other night the following things happened and they all look like some sort of records to us....In winning 31-7 Gloversville scored 18 times in one inning ....Palmer, Gloversville catcher, was up three times in the hectic seventh and singled each time .... Cullinane, Gloversville third sacker, also was at bat three times in the same frame and each time drew a pass....Now if any team in organized ball can beat that, we're willing to learn.

Did you know that—

The average big leaguer goes down to first in slightly less than four seconds....The fastest cover the 90 feet in 3 1-2 seconds——The slowest in about 5 3-10 seconds.

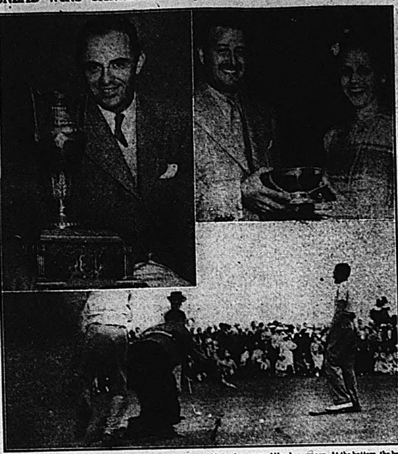
SNEAD WINS CANADIAN OPEN AFTER HECTIC PLAY-OFF



Slammin' Sam Snead, of Shawnee on the Delaware, celebrated his wedding by winning the Canadian Open Golf Tournament at Scarboro Golf Club, Toronto, after one of the most thrilling play-off games in the annals of Canadian golf, late Monday afternoon. Tied with Harold McSpaden, of Winchester, Mass., last Saturday, after 72 holes, when both had scored 281 on the par 71 course, they met in the play-off, over 18 holes, on Monday when Snead won it on the 18th. At one period in the game McSpaden was two up. Snead squared the match and then went two up. McSpaden squared the match. Snead again went one up. McSpaden squared it again. At the 18th they were all square. Snead had a par four against McSpaden's five on the 18th and won the play-off. Top left picture shows Snead hugging the Seagram Gold Cup, which goes to the winner with a gold replica and a $1,000 cash prize. He also won this cup in 1938. At top right Mrs. Sam Snead, a bride of less than a week, is shown receiving a silver rose bowl from J. E. Frowde Seagram, a present from the House of Seagram, in appreciation of her gesture in foregoing her honeymoon. At the bottom, the ball on the left of the arrow (showing the cup) is Snead's after he missed a six-foot putt for a birdie three which would have clinched the match but McSpaden standing on the right, also missed a four-foot putt against the grain for a par four when he took a five. If McSpaden, who won the cup at Saint John, N.B., last year, had sunk his four-footer, after Snead missed his attempt for a birdie, it would have resulted in another nine-hole play-off. McSpaden's missed putt cost him $400, the difference between the first and second cash prizes.

ROCHESTER WINGS WIN DOUBLE BILL FROM BALTIMORE

Team Given Slight Lead Over Newark Bears, Who Beat Montreal

TORONTO DEFEATED

Jersey City Giants Take Two from Leafs by 5-2 and 2-0

(By the Associated Press)

It is no reflection on Rochester Red Wings, International League leaders, to say that there would be little doubt concerning the outcome of this year's race, had Newark Bears played same brand of ball all season that they are playing now.

Bears got away to a poor start and hovered around the .500 mark for the first two months. But since June 15 they have been travelling at a .667 clip and have cut Rochester's lead from nine games to the one percentage point margin that it is today.

Last night Bears proved they were of championship calibre by downing Monreal Royals 5-3 in a 13-inning struggle, after Rochester had completed a sweep of its doubleheader with Baltimore. Norman Branch pitched Newark to a 6-0 victory in the first game at Montreal.

Hank Gornicki and Herschel Lyons hurled Rochester to its double victory over Baltimore by scores of 6-1 and 6-2.

The double setback dropped Baltimore to within three games of the fourth-place Jersey City Giants who beat Toronto 5-2 and 2-0.

Phil Marchildon held the Little Giants to three hits in the second game, but a home run by Ray Blaemire gave Frank Pearce, Jersey hurler, all the margin he needed. Pearce allowed the Leafs only four singles and didn't permit a runner to reach second base. Hi Vandenberg was the victor in the seven-inning opener. He gave up five hits while his mates pounded Pat McLaughlin and Johnny Pezzullo for twice that amount including a homer by Jimmy Vernon.

Buffalo Bisons and Syracuse Chiefs divided a twin-bill. Syracuse won the opener 6-1, but Buffalo came back to take the second game 9-2.

City Championship Softball Series Opens Thursday

Playing for the Bank of Commerce trophy, the Shell "Oilers" will open up the city championship series here on Thursday night versus the Point Anne Cementmen.

The Oilers advanced into this series by virtue of disposing of Corby's A.C., while the Ox Point nine moved into the money picture by removing the Belleville Juniors in straight games.

Seeking to win their second city championship, the Oilers will hurl Johnnie Bawden, their ace-hurler, against "Ding" Luffman, Point Anne's outstanding moundsman.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Red Ruffing and Ernie Bonham, Yankees: Former won 12th game of season and latter second as Yanks beat second place Tigers in both ends of doubleheader.

Ken Koltner, Indians: His homer with bases full beat Red Sox and gave Bobby Feller his 22nd victory of year.

Elden Auker, Browns: Scattered eight Washington hits to beat the Senators 6-3.

Ed Smith, White Sox and Wally Moses, Athletics: Former pitched three-hit ball to beat Athletics in opener and Moses stole home in 10th to give A's even break.

Frank McCormick, Reds: His single in the ninth scored two runs and beat Giants 3-2.

DING LUFFMAN ALLOWS 7 HITS TO BEAT PICTON

Point Anne Will Now Enter Second Round of Int. "C" Playdowns

ALWAYS ON TOP

Seven Runs in the First Frame Materially Helps the Winner

Playing sterling ball behind the seven-hit hurling of "Ding" Luffman, the Point Anne "Cementmen" advanced into the second round of the Intermediate "C" softball playdowns at Ox-Point last evening as they cuffed the offerings of two Picton hurlers for seventeen safeties to win the second game of their best two of three series as they rang up an easy 16-3 score.

A seven-run scoring splurge in the initial canto was all that Point Anne needed to oust the "Dominions" from the O.A.S.A. playdowns last evening as they held the visitors off the score sheet until the fourth, then allowed two runs, with a third and final Picton counter coming in the first half of the seventh when the game was won and lost.

Luffman was only in trouble in one inning, that the fourth when Minaker led off with a double with two runs chasing across the plate on two consecutive following singles. Point Anne collected seven hits in the first inning, including two homers by Bennett and Hutchings, while in the fourth they collected five hits and four runs and added six more runs in the last three innings of the abbreviated seven inning contest.

Struck Out Eight

In limiting Picton to seven hits, Luffman walked only one batter and struck out eight. Minaker, who started on the mound for the visitors, allowed sixteen hits up to the seventh when he was relieved by Tuttle who finished the game. Minaker walked four and struck out three.

Despite the lusty clouting by the winners very few errors cropped into the game as two double plays were counted, one by each team, to cut off scoring rallies. Loft made a nice catch of a low pop fly in the fifth to double a runner off first, while Picton pulled a double killing in the sixth.

Hutchings, with a home run, a double and a single led all the hitters of the night, while Bennett counted a homer and two singles with Green getting a four-base clout and a single. Cole was the only Picton batter to touch Luffman's offerings with any consistency as he connected for three singles. Frederick and Minaker hit doubles for the losers.

Picton: Cavanaugh and Allen cf; Cole 2b; Frederick ss; Harrison rf; Minaker p; Attersby 1b; VanHorne c; Tuttle 3b and Bolten lf.

Point Anne: Loft 3b; Gaulin ss; Bennett rf; Green c; Whalen 2b; Hutchings lf; Scott cf; Luffman p and Twining 1b.

ZELLERS DEFEAT KRESGES GIRLS IN FOURTH GAME

Score is 32-11 but Decision as to Whether it Was Legal Game to be Decided by Executive

SLIGHT ARGUMENT

Zellers Score 21 Runs in Fourth Frame to Definitely Cinch Contest

The Girls' Softball situation in Belleville will be decided in the committee room on Thursday night, after the fourth game of the city championship series had been played at Coleman Flats on Tuesday evening, when the Zeller squad had scored a 32-11 victory over the Kresge team in seven and two thirds innings. The umpires at this point called "no game" and the question now arises, which the executive will have to decide is whether the Zeller team has rightfully won the championship or whether another game will have to be played.

Considerable stalling was in evidence during the sixth and seventh innings according to the umpires, the Zeller team trying to get the full seven innings played and the Kresge squad trying with might and main to reduce the lead. After Kresge had had seven full innings of play, the Zeller team took their turn at bat and when two were out, the umpires held a conference and shortly after, Harold Bawden, the base umpire called "no game". To this writer, Alex Simpson, the plate umpire announced later in the evening, that he called three out in the seventh on the one play. "The girl at the plate struck out," said Mr. Simpson, "the girl between third and home was tagged out by the catcher and the catcher proceeded through to touch the girl coming from second to third." That is the situation fans and the executive will try to untangle the whole picture at their meeting on Thursday evening.

No Intention of Protest

Mr. McVeigh, manager of the Kresge team informed the writer that he had no intention of protesting the game in any way but was taking the decision of the umpires as "no game," meaning there had not been a legal contest. Whatever the outcome of the executive meeting, it was quite sufficiently proved last night, that Zeller had a little more punch and a stronger defence than the Kresge squad. Zellers moved out in front in the first frame and never were headed, cinching the argument with a 21 run outburst in the fourth frame. The team batted around three times with the exception of one player and E. Orr was driven from the hilltop by a shower of singles, doubles and home runs.

Betsy Adams, hurling for Zellers limited the Kresge team to fourteen hits, while her team mates fielded well behind her especially in the pinches. Miss Richardson for Kresges pulled off the stellar catch, when she speared a line drive over short. The lineups:

Kresges: Clarke rf; Richardson ss; Corneal c; H. Thompson 1st; Belnap 3rd; M. Orr cf; E. Orr p; Adams 2nd; Lickfold lf; Thompson catcher.

Zellers: Colden 2b; Garrow ss; Bennett 3rd; Adams p; Emerson 1st; Hunter cf; Donovan c; Cordon rf; Moore lf.

Kresges .. .. 201 035 0—11 14 6
Zellers .. .. 340 2122 x—32 29 5

Batteries: Kresges: E. Orr, Lickfold and Corneal, Thompson; Zellers—Adams and Donovan.

Umpires: Simpson, plate, Bawden, bases.

Won Flying Cross, Is Now Missing

London, Aug. 21—(CP Cable)—The death on active service of Pilot Officer W. O. D. Tweddell of Toronto was announced today.

The gallant officer was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross in May for courage and devotion to duty during the Norwegian campaign.

He was listed as missing in the Air Ministry's 42nd casualty list, issued Aug. 16.

Note on Treatment Of Parachute Troops As Combat Soldiers

London, Aug. 21 —(CP)— A German not concerning the treatment of parachute troops which may be landed in Great Britain has been transmitted through the Swiss government to the British government.

Although its contents will not be made known until later, it was learned in authoritative circles today that the note deals with the treatment of parachute troops as combat soldiers, and not as spies who would be shot immediately upon capture.

MOTHERS IN U.K. TO GIVE SQUADRON

Gift Will be Mothers' Token of Appreciation of Royal Air Force

London, Aug. 21 (CP)—Mothers all over the United Kingdom are responding to the appeal of Mrs. V. F. Gower, mother of two men serving in the forces, who wants to present the Royal Air Force with a squadron of Hurricane fighters as a "mothers' token of appreciation."

The squadron, to cost 56,000 pounds ($249,000) will be purchased through the "Empire Mothers' Hurricane Fund" and will be presented in behalf of mothers of men serving in the R.A.F.

"We women," said Mrs. Gower in launching her appeal, "have provided the men; now we must provide them with planes."

Mothers, grand mothers, godmothers, adopted mothers, stepmothers or mothers-in-law are asked to contribute to the fund which already is off to a good start.

It is hoped to have the first unit of the "Mothers' Squadron" available by Sept. 3, said Mrs. Gower, whose younger son, PO. Desmond Gower, has been missing 13 weeks.

"I'm hoping he is a prisoner but he is only 20 years old, you know, and would hate that," she said.

Hay-Fever Victims Can Try This One

Here is the latest flash from hay-fever headquarters. Victims of the annual "sneezekrieg" should welcome the advice of a seventy-five year old victim of the summer complaint, who swears she has taken this cure and has taken this cure and has not been troubled with a rosy nose, watery eyes, a bad temper, and big laundry bills for the past twenty-five years.

It is simple and inexpensive, if you don't mind exchanging your money for relief and comfort from the ragweed menace.

There are three simple ingredients. First you get a quart of gin, then a pint of pine turpentine and add a quart of strained honey.

Mix well, not omitting the first ingredient, because of a desire for future personal reference, and take one teaspoonful three time a day.

This, according to the informant is a sure cure for hay-fever providing, as the office boy says, you dont mix the last two ingredients, throw them away, and drink the first one.

U.S. NATIONAL CHAMP TUNES UP FOR TITLE DEFENSE

Bobby Riggs, U.S. national singles tennis champion, is caught by the camera in a striking bit of action as he prepares to defend his crown at Forest Hills next month. Riggs passed up the Newport tourney to tune-up for this great test in order to avoid, if possible, a recurrence of the setback handed him by Frank Kovacs at Seabright. Riggs is shown here racing for the ball close to the net. Actually the ball went into the net, but had it gone over he would have been there to take it.

CHAPTER 21

Friend or Foe

On Monday evening Brooke had dined with Jim and Jean again. They were leaving tomorrow for Ohio. When Jean said, rising, "Oh, there's some one I forgot to call, darling. Excuse me, will you?" Brooke knew that it was a courteous gesture to permit her a few minutes alone with Jim.

He smiled, drawling, "Well, you're all set, Brooke. I'm glad."

"I've been a nuisance, I'm afraid. And this sinecure of a job I've been telling you about makes me feel more strongly than ever that you and Jean are right. Wilson Stone isn't working for anything except appearances. Obviously there's a great deal of money behind him. I think he'd like to make an honest living for his wife and child, really work, and go home at night feeling that he was supporting them. Instead he reads magazines, stares out the window and takes three hours for lunch."

"I'll write you, of course," Jim said. "I'll want to know how you are getting along. Somehow I feel you are going to get along very well." He looked straight at her. "When you realize that Rod is nothing but a stuffed shirt, that he's dull and egotistical, you'll be free. It took me a long time to realize that. I used to admire him. I don't any more."

They said good-bye at the door of her hotel and she saw them walk away again, saw Jean slip her arm through Jim's before they were lost in the enveloping crowd....

She bought a wedding present for them the next day, twelve crystal goblets that would grace the table of "a cottage with roses and mortgages and kiddie cars over which you stumbled on the porch." When she returned to the office, she heard voices in Wilson Stone's office, his and the voice of a woman. They were talking and laughing happily. When they came out and Brooke saw a slim red-haired girl in green, she knew before she was introduced that the girl was his wife.

Late that same afternoon the clear deep tones of a voice vaguely familiar asked for her.

Then, "Brooke? This is Julian Carlton. You're having dinner with me tonight."

Not asking her. But telling her again....Irritation pricked at her temples....

He chuckled. "At seven. Your hotel. I know where you're staying."

She did not answer but she knew that she would go.

Julian was curious about her, Brooke thought, curled up in one chair in the little room, waiting for the telephone to ring. Her forefinger, crimson-tipped, played with the folds of her graceful blue frock as she thought of him, trying to classify him and feeling a wave of resentment when she failed. He made her feel as if she were a germ under a microscope, she thought, and she sensed his silent laughter.

Who was he? And other than being disturbingly attractive, what was he? She thought, "But when I'm alone like this, I always go back to Rod and Tony. I understand them. More than that, her feelings for them were clearly defined, her stubborn love for Rod, her tender devotion for Irene's son. She sat up suddenly, thinking that by now Jim and Jean were on their way to Ohio to be married.

The ringing of the telephone startled her out of her thoughts.

Julian said, "I'm downstairs, Brooke, and only ten minutes late."

She wanted to say, being unsure of herself with him, "Then I'll keep you waiting ten minutes." But she said that she would be down at once.

He was not looking toward the elevator when she stepped out, and she had a moment to observe him, the strong, sculptured face, sunburned again, the well-proportioned figure in brown tweeds. She had the distinct and uncomfortable feeling that she would like to slip by him unnoticed and go out to dinner alone. She asked herself frankly, "Why?" And couldn't answer....

When he saw her and came toward her, there was nothing forbidding in his swift smile. Having lived for so long with a dark melancholy man, her father, and having for so long looked lovingly at Rod's dark head, she experienced a small but not unpleasant shock when Julian casually removed his brown hat and she realized again how handsome he was.

"We meet again, Brooke." Then, standing over her, his alert inquisitive blue eyes wholly absorbed in her, he said, "I was eavesdropping on an argument between a girl with red heels and a desk clerk."

"Who won?"

"The red heels made her taller than he is, and I believe she won."

They walked to his car several blocks away, Julian saying indifferently, not looking at her, that Barney had told him she was back and that they would probably find the roof of a certain hotel a cool place to dine.

Theirs was an odd friendship, his and Barney's, she thought. The fat, boisterous little man and the polished Julian. Odd, too, that his speech was so casual when his body and eyes were so vital.

"You're with Wilson Stone, I hear" he said when they were in the car. "Nice chap. You're not overworked, are you?"

"I haven't enough to do. It's worse for him. I don't think it can last."

"He doesn't have to do anything." Julian said. "Denny, his wife, is immensely rich, and they are very happy. He'll get business eventually. In the meantime," he glanced sidewise and smiled, "you can catch up on your reading." A few moments later he said, chuckling, "I was arrested in your Chatham for speeding a few weeks ago. I was wondering if I told the traffic officer that I was a very good friend of Brooke Carter...."

"Our Mr. Ben is adamant," Brooke said. "I was arrested once myself. It makes him feel important."

"Then it wouldn't have helped. But we could have talked about you. We could have blocked traffic on Main street for an hour while he told me that he remembered you as a black-haired little tyke who disobeyed traffic rules and flirted herself out of a reproach."

"But you didn't." She was not certain that he was telling the truth."

"Had I," Julian said, glancing at her again, his eyes amused, "I'd have failed to join my sister in Maine and would have turned around and driven back to New York—to you." He added, "My sister lives in Washington in the winter and Maine in the summer. She has five children on whom she practices the very advanced child psychology she used to teach. They are five little demons."

Brooke smiled. "Uncle to five little demons. It's difficult to imagine."

He laughed "Think what they'll be when they grow up—completely uninhibited, expressing themselves freely...."

"At least there's an attorney in the family."

"You know that I'm an attorney?"

"A corporation lawyer...."

He chuckled but he didn't say anything and presently an elevator was taking them skyward to a cool lovely place and soft music.

Over cocktails his eyes were guarded. "Did you like Hawaii?"

My eyes can be guarded, too, she thought. "I saw only a little but what I saw I loved. I haven't thanked you for sending me flowers the night I sailed." He was one of the two people who had remembered....

There was a sharp, mocking edge to his voice. "Did I send you flowers? I'd forgotten."

Anger pricked at her temples again.... "A standing order with the florist for all the people you know who sail?"

He narrowed his eyes and laughed. "I don't believe this girl likes me very much."

His eyes were very young, very clear, she thought. "This girl thinks you don't let people know you very well."

He sat back, smiling. "I'm a very uncomplicated person. It is you who are complicated. But while I'm not glad the old lady died, I am glad that you were set free. It would have destroyed something in you I like, burned it out." Then he asked, "Would you like to see Barney in the role of country squire? Will you motor up with me Sunday afternoon?"

She said she would. Was Julian Carlton friend or foe? Still she did not know. One moment she detected and extraordinary kindness and broad understanding in him and felt drawn close to him, the next moment his mocking charm angered her and put her on guard.

Julian looked at her rather severely. "Do you wonder why I'm fond of Barney? Because he's real, because he makes no pretenses and he can talk about anything."

"You don't have to defend him to me. I'm fond of him."

"Perhaps I was defending him. I've had to before and I do it vehemently when I have to. There's a balcony over there. Do you like views of cities from balconies?"

CHAPTER 22

A New Julian

They were alone on a balcony, looking down on winking lights in a pit of darkness. The air was cool and fresh and even in the heart of the great city was bringing with it from fields and flowers an early summer essence.

Julian, looking straight ahead, breathed deeply. "Nostalgia? I feel it, too. Nearly all of us here in New York are transplanted. I grew up in Maine. We come here to conquer and get swallowed up."

She had not come to conquer....

He said, "When we go back into the restaurant, shield your eyes. The lights will hurt them."

His unexpected thoughtfulness...

They went back to dance, to dine, to talk, and it was past midnight when he said a rather serious 'good-night, Brooke," and uncovered his fair head a moment before the elevator operator closed the door upon him.

Brooke went into her room slowly and slowly pulled off her blue turban. I like him, she thought, I like him. She was certain now, though she was almost afraid to like him. When they met on Sunday, would she sense his silent laughter again?

The next day was auspicious in that a client came to Wilson Stone's office. And it was the day that Jim and Jean were to be married, Brooke thought many times that day.

There was a letter for her that evening, which had been sent first to New Hampshire. It was from Ellen.

Reading it quickly, she learned that Mrs. Kingsbury's faithful maid was in no hurry to leave the beautiful islands in the Pacific, and that other than gifts of money to old friends and a thousand dollars to Ellen, Mrs. Kingsbury had left her entire estate to Jessica Forbes' little daughters. It was like coming to the end of one of the mystery stories Mrs. Kingsbury had loved, Brooke thought, to know at last the contents of her will. But why should Mrs. Kingsbury have willed her anything?....

Sunday had begun clear and sunny. But in the afternoon when Julian's beige coupe was hurrying over the highway to Connecticut, overcast skies foretold a storm.

"Perhaps we'll make it to Barney's before it breaks," Julian said.

Brooke, who looked her best in a printed frock with a jacket and the becoming blue turban, glanced sidewise and smiled. "I doubt if the traffic officers along here will be as lenient as our Mr. Ben up in Chatham."

"I keep you on the defensive, don't I?"

His face told her nothing. "Yes, you do, Julian."

"Perhaps," he said soberly, "I'll tell you why someday. Perhaps I'll never tell you." and went on from there telling her of an unusual and interesting case that had come to his atention recently of missing heirs and unclaimed wealth. When Brooke asked if Barney knew they were coming, he said, "I called him. I doubt if he has other guests today. As a matter of fact, he doesn't intend to do any large scale entertaining until August. I may miss it. I may be in Maine on my vacation."

Brooke said, "Some one told me you were an inverterate traveler," Rod told her....

Her knowledge of him seemed to amuse him. "Not this year. I've decided to be the playmate of my sister's five little demons for a week and to spend my remaining two weeks with friends in a more remote part of Maine. Incidentally, I'll be driving up and if you'd like a ride...."

She said thoughtfully, "I should be going home for a week and soon."

Glancing up at the sky, she saw the sun disappear behind fretting dark clouds. "It is June," she thought. Six months since I came. Six swift months crowded into thousands of miles....Where is Tony this afternoon? Where is Rod? She closed her eyes and when she opened them again large drops of rain on the windshield obscured the view.

"Put up the window," Julian said.

She ran it up just in time for a torrential downpour accompanied by sharp lightning and crashing thunder followed. When Julian pulled the car to the side of the road and stopped, she knew it was because he could no longer see.

"Not afraid, are you Brooke?"

"My mother always said that people aren't afraid of storms."

"I think our mothers were very much alike," he said, glancing out. "My parents were divorced and we children, four of us, spent our time shuttling back and forth between them. Two years of my boyhood were spent on a farm in Kentucky, which had been left to my mother and which she tried to manage alone. She was quite alone then. Her older children had been sent to various schools, and I, the youngest, went with her. One of my most vivid memories is of her shooting a chicken hawk. She was an excellent shot. Knowing her, knowing what courage she put into that farm to make it pay so that my father, married again and prospering, would not have to pay her alimony, I learned to have a great sympathy as well as admiration for courageous women. She tried to be a farmer when she was educated to be a scientist. She died when I was fourteen."

"You have sympathy only for courageous women?" Brooke asked.

He did not look at her. "Yes. Because courageous women, who asked for nothing because of their sex, fall more frequently than the parasites of their sex. Fall with men, with love...."

"Once you told me that there were two kinds of people—the ones who hurt and the ones who are hurt. I've been both. Have you ever loved?"

He laughed at her and his eyes were very blue, very clear and very young again.

"I've called it that several times. Later I knew it was only a strong attraction and that I couldn't have lived with any of them." His well-cut mouth curved. "You have courage. You've been splendid."

"I don't deserve that," Brooke said. "Alone, you see, I wasn't splendid at all. And now I have progressed to the point of not wanting to love him. Is that a step in the right direction?"

"It's a step off the beaten track anyway." He looked out, put his foot on the accelerator. "It isn't bad now."

They rode a long time without speaking, Julian concentrating with a frown on the wet road, Brooke gazing at the drenched countryside, wondering if she knew him well enough to say no, "I like you, Julian," and deciding not to. She was on the defensive again when silence isolated them.

A huge, handsome old white house, newly painted, with acres of land spread about it, came into view. Julian stopped the car in a driveway, and Brooke saw Barney standing in the doorway, the smoke from his cigar ascending in furious little black clouds.

He boomed, "Hello!" And to Julian said, "Pick her up and bring her in. She'll get soaked to the knees."

"A command from our host," Julian said. "A girl over the threshold but not, unfortunately, a bride. Here, let me guess your weight.."

A few moments later he deposited her in Barney's living-room where a wood fire leaped in an old and picturesque stone fireplace. It glowed cheerfully on chintz covers over many deep chairs and two divans.

"Show you around later," Barney said, putting another log on the fire. "Made this to take the chill off. This house is like a barn, you know. We'll have cocktails and you'll stay to dinner, won't you?" His humorous little eyes shifted from Brooke, lifting the blue turban from her hair, to Julian, lighting a cigarette. "Good! You know, I think I'm going to like this place. Farm boy returns to farm." He laughed. "You can't get away from it. It smells so damn good after a rain...."

Julian said, 'I suppose, too, Barney. I always thought you and the modern stuff in your city apartment jangled a bit."

"Damn woman decorator. You felt sacrilegious when you left a pipe around. Come over and sit by me, Brooke, and tell me why women wear shoes without toes. Crazy style. What would you do if you got a hole in the toe of your stocking.."

She saw the sunset, saw the twilight throw a purple mantle over the countryside while she sat beside Barney and looked from the hospitable fire to Julian, sitting splendidly upright, his face as bronzed as his hair. They talked of many things, including her in their talk, and laughed a good deal. Julian said once, "You see, Brooke, Barney is a sentimentalist. He won't admit it but he is."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 21 (CP).—Stocks registered further gains on Toronto Exchange today. Volume picked up to 61,000 shares.

Steels were about the strongest of the industrials while a margin of gains over losses appeared for the utilities, senior oils, and papers.

Trading bulked in the secondary golds with higher prices ruling for Pickle Crow, Sylvanite, Kerr-Addison, Preston, San Antonio and others. Nickel, Noranda, Smelters, Waite-Amulet and Steep Rock were all gainers in the base metals.

Calgary and Edmonton and Anglo-Canadian ruled narrowly higher and other western oils were firm.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 21 (AP)—Leading shares made a general although mild, rise today in a market cheered by mounting hopes that the blitzkrieg against England would fail.

Although transactions progressed at a moderate rate, advances toward the fourth hour ranged as high as two points.

Among the prime gainers were United Aircraft, Sperry, Glenn Martin, Allied Chemical, Dupont, Westinghouse, U.S. Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, U.S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, Phelps Dodge, International Nickel, International Paper and Loft.

In the Canadian section Dome Mines gained a fraction and McIntyre lost as much. Canadian Pacific held unchanged. Other issues were inactive.

202 INVALIDED OUT OF SERVICE

Arrive at Montreal on Way to Homes and Various Hospitals

Montreal, Aug. 21—(CP)— Invalided out of military service, 202 officers and men of the 1st division C.A.S.F. arrived here today on their way to hospitals or homes in various parts of Canada. They arrived from England yesterday at an east coast Canadian port.

All were confident that Britain will stop the Germans and high in their praise of the British armed forces.

"Don't worry about Hitler invading England," said one. "He'll have a job on his hands if he tries. The Royal Air Force is doing a magnificent job—so is the navy. The rest of us have not had a chance to show what we can do."

The soldiers said there had been "a few casualties" among Canadians—"but the truth is that most of us would not take cover when the air raid sirens sounded.

"We'd go out onto the street and watch the raiders—then if a bomb dropped we'd all be in a mad scramble to pick up fragments for souvenirs."

Sergeant C. H. Freeman of Toronto was one of the arrivals injured in a raid. His left wrist was broken by a bomb fragment.

British and Polish Governments Work In Close Collaboratiion

London, Aug. 21 (CP)—Richard Butler, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, told the House of Commons today the Polish Government in exile regards "the violation by the Soviet Union of the Soviet-Polish non-aggression pact as placing them in a state [illegible] with the Soviet Union since September."

He made this statement after telling Commons there was "the closest collaboration" between the British and Polish governments "on all matters concerning the conduct of the war, including questions of foreign policy."

William Gallacher, sole Communist member suggested that British support "of the Polish government so-called" was hampering British efforts to improve relations with Russia. Mr. Butler replied that he believed Mr. Gallacher "had better leave relations between this country and the Soviet Union to his Majesty's government. He knows the desire of this government to improve relations with the Soviet Union."

Slight Increase in Demand for Eggs

Toronto, Aug. 21—Grade B eggs recorded the only price change on the Toronto open produce market yesterday advancing slightly in wholesale-to-retail trading. Other eggs, along with butter and cheese, held quietly steady.

Volume of sales was small on the egg market during the morning, but in the afternoon demand improved somewhat and the market took a firmer tone. Grade B eggs moved up to a range of 22c to 23c in the wholesale-to-retail section, with other quotations remaining unchanged. A premium of 1-2c was obtainable during the afternoon on Government-inspected shipments.

First-grade Ontario creamery butter was steady at 21 1-2c. in slow trading. Offerings were light, but demand was not very keen. Sales of Western butter were made at 21 3-4c and 22c, with all holders asking 22c at the close.

Exports of cheese from Canada during the week ended Aug. 17 totalled 46,888 boxes, bringing total cheese exports since May 1 to 521,714 boxes, as compared with 389,908 boxes exported in the same period last year. Butter exports for the week totalled 270 packages, bringing the total since May 1 to 2,893 packages, as against 75,678 in the same period of 1939.

Montreal, Aug. 21 (CP).—Produce market prices here yesterday, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 23c to 23 1-4c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 22 1-2c to 22 3-4c; Quebec No. 1 pasteurized, current receipt price, 21 3-8c; Quebec No. 2, 20 3-8c; Quebec No. 1 pasteurized wholesale jobbing price 21 5-8c to 21 3-4c; Quebec No. 2, 21c. Receipts: 392 boxes.

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large 28 1-2c; A-medium, 27c; A-pullets, 21c to 22c; B, 21c to 21 1-2c; C, 15c. Receipts: 371 cases.

MEASURES TAKEN FOR PROTECTION

Precautions Taken After Arrest of Official in Connection With Army Land Buying Scandal

Buenos Aires, Aug. 21 (AP) — Measures to protect army headquarters and barracks against "any attack on public order" were ordered today after a conference of military leaders with War Minister Carlos Marquez.

The precautions were taken after the arrest of Gen. Juan Bautista Molina, a rightist leader of the Argentine army, in conection with an army land buying scandal that has threatened a governmental crisis.

The crisis developed to such proportions last night that bedridden President Roberto M. Ortiz, who retired from active service July 3 because of illness, returned to the helm and called a cabinet meeting at his home early today in an attempt to control developments threatening his regime.

Immediately after the meeting War Minister Geo. Carlos Marquez went to the War Ministry and conferred for half an hour with the Inspector-General of the army. Gen. Guillermo Mohr, ordering precautionary measures in Argentina's six corps areas.

Meanwhile high police authorities held a special meeting at police headquarters at which all police were ordered to their barracks. Special precautions were taken throughout the capital.

The arrested Gen. Molina was mentioned in recent reports of attempts to seize the government by force of arms.

The crisis revolves about the sale to the army on a tract of land for 2,450,303 pesos (about $612,500) or five times the actual value, according to the report of a Senate Committee investigating it.

GERMAN RAIDERS

cluding one fatality.

In a dog fight over the town the Junkers 88 was brought down by an R.A.F. fighter. The bomber crew of five was killed.

British bombers attacked German vital war centres on the continent anew last night and early today while the German air force continued to give Britain a relative respite.

German Stations Fade Out

All German radio stations faded out shortly before midnight, the usual sign of activity of Royal Air Force bombing planes. The stations are shut down so they will not assist British pilots in directing their flights.

Air Secretary Sir Archibald Sinclair told the House of Commons last night R.A.F. attacks were again being made and said that still deeper thrusts into Germany were forthcoming.

"As the nights grow longer," he said, "so will the arm of our bomber squadrons lengthen and we shall strike even deeper into the enemy's vitals. Our arm is reaching out tonight."

On such raids previously the Air Ministry have reported attacking German naval and airplane bases shipping centres and oil depots in German-ruled territory from Norway to France. Raids also have been made on industrial northern Italy.

Germany's abandonment, at least temporarily, of the mass raids was attributed to the effectiveness of British defence. The costliness of sending bombers in waves only to be shot down by R.A.F. fighter planes, said British observers, has been too much for Germany.

The greatest damage was reported from the industrial midlands, where several bombs hit a thickly-populated residential and shopping area, killing one woman and injuring several others. In other sections German bombers did little damage, first reports indicated.

One Junkers Down

One Junkers 88 was reported brought down in the English Channel. British experts pointed out the Germans might have decided on a change of tactics to avoid heavy losses suffered during massed raids with large formations of planes.

They said it was difficult to get the individual German bombers before they had dropped their bombs. They said masses of planes flying in close formation made "perfect" targets for both anti-aircraft guns and fighter planes.

Single dive bombers able to sneak in behind the clouds and come screaming down stood almost as good a chance of hitting military objectives, some observers pointed out, as large formations harried from the moment they crossed the coast.

The growing radius of British bombing attacks on Germany and German-occupied territory, coupled with diminishing Nazi aerial activity, was hailed in London as an indication that the initiative has been taken away from the German Air Force by R.A.F. victories over massed attacking methods.

No Great Air Activity

There was virtually no German air activity over England between midnight and dawn.

One German bomber was reported to have fallen flaming into the sea off the southeast coast after a hit-and-run attack.

Another lone raider crossed the northeast coast of England at great altitude, swooped down and dropped several bombs. Then it sped out to sea amid bursts of anti-aircraft fire. Minor damage and no casualties were reported.

A 70-year-old woman was killed in a raid on a midland town.

Two planes came over the southeast coast, flying just above low clouds. One dropped four bombs, apparently without damage and then raced back toward its base with a Spitfire in pursuit.

The other bomber waited a few moments, apparently searching for a target, and then dropped its bombs into the sea and made off.

A single plane flew over one southeast coast town and dropped 12 bombs in a line along the edge of the sea, doing no damage. The raider headed for home with British fighters in pursuit.

Another southeast coast town was visited by a lone raider, but without incident.

Later German planes were reported over the industrial midlands and over the Welsh coast area.

Ethiopia Bombed by R.A.F.

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 21—(AP) — The Royal Air Force today reported numerous raids on Italian-held African territory, including Ethiopia where hangars and a railway station at Diredawa were bombed.

The comunique follows:

"Squadrons of the South African Air Force on Aug. 19 made simultaneous offensive reconnaissance flights on Italian airdromes in Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland, bombs falling near the wireless station of Mega while buildings were damaged at Neghelli.

"The Caproni aircraft grounds at Yiavello were hit and three direct hits were made on a storehouse at Afmadu.

"Yesterday our bombers attacked hangars and the railway station at Diredawa. All bombs fell in the target area. There was a direct hit on a hangar. One of our aircraft failed to return.

"An attack was made on the Dessie airdrome, bombs hitting buildings in the compound. At Kassala our bombs carried out a low level attack, railway buildings and the track being hit.

"French pilots operating with the R.A.F. made extensive reconnaissance flights over British Somaliland. Places visited included Berbera, Odweina, Hargeisa and Zeila.

"Yesterday 10 enemy bombers escorted by 20 fighters raided Malta. Our fighters went up and dispersed the enemy."

PICKAXE ATTACK

Trotsky blamed the May attack "directly on Josef Stalin and his secret police, the ogpu," and predicted it would be repeated. Twenty Mexicans were arrested a few days later.

Police said the "friend" who attacked Trotsky gave his name as Jacques Mortan Vandenreischd, 36, native of Teheran, Iran. He studied in France and became a subject of Belgium. He said he was a newspaper writer, but so far as could be learned he had no journal connections in Mexico.

He had known Trotsky a year, frequently visited the walled-in, well-fortified Coyoacan estate, and often dined privately with Trotsky while the two discussed political ideas.

Police said Vandenreischd confessed, saying political opinions Trotsky recently expressed so angered him that he decided to kill the Russian. He expressed regret and said he hoped he would be put to death, police said.

Attacker Held in Office

Trotsky and the visitor were alone in Trotsky's office when a bodyguard heard Trotsky scream. He dashed in, set upon the assailant and beat him with a pistol butt. Mrs. Trotsky screamed "don't kill him." The attacker, slightly wounded, was held in the police hospital where surgeons strove to save Trotsky's life.

The assailant carried the pickaxe, of the type used by mountain climbers, and a pistol. Police believed he used the pickaxe to avoid attention of the guards in the attack, and brought the pistol to attempt to shoot his way out if necessary.

Early today the hospital issued this bulletin:

"There was a hemorrhage of the meninges (a covering of the brain) at a point of the lesion (where the pickaxe entered) and a slight destruction of the brain. There was a fracture at the base of the skull. The patient's condition is very grave."

Gen. Munez said the crisis had not been reached but that Trotsky showed some signs of a slight gain in strength.

Stalin's Tools Blamed

San Francisco, Aug. 21—(AP) — Diego Rivera, famed muralist and one-time intimate of Leon Trotsky, said today he believed the attempt to kill the exiled Russian revolutionary in Mexico City was perpetrated by "tools of the Stalin-Hitler front."

"The attempt on Trotsky's life was made by the same gangsters who tried to kill him not long ago, the same gunmen who killed Robert Sheldon Harte, Trotsky's secretary, last May," Rivera said.

"The long hand of the Ogpu (Russian secret police) is holding by the throat the apparatus of the Mexican State. The Communists are the Left Wing of the Fifth Column; the Nazis the Right Wing."

Trotsky, Rivera asserted, was Russia's last hope. Without him, "without the revolution he might have fostered, Russia will be betrayed into Hitler's hands."

MASS ESCAPE

Police said workmen had been discharged from the camp for conversing in the German language with prisoners and pointed out it would be almost impossible to get timber to line the tunnel unless some workmen were implicated in the escape.

An improvised radio set, discovered in a room at the end of a long, disused passageway in the prison barracks, had no connection with the break, Ottawa officials announced.

Discovery of a large, new dry battery which the prisoners could not have constructed led authorities to believe that fifth-columnists had actively aided the Germans in their various under-cover activities.

Litle Doubt of Mass Escape Plans

Brig.-Gen. E. De B. Panet, senior officer in charge of internment camps, conducted a preliminary investigation Tuesday and in a statement said there was little doubt a mass delivery of prisoners was planned. Entrance to the tunnel was by a secret panel in the cookhouse and for this reason the excavation had escaped detection during frequent inspections of the premises.

No shakeup in the personnel of the guards would be made, he said. Brig.-Gen. Paget also denied a rumor, current in the neighborhood, that scantlings, driven through with spikes and to be used in the prisoners' freedom, had been found.

FOUR BATTALIONS

The Minister explained that an armored brigade ordinarily consisted of three battalions with artillery, signals, ordnance and ancillary troops. Four units were designated for the brigade in the possibility of change in the establishment, so there would be one supernumerary battalion.

Training Equipment Not Complete

Training equipment for the new organization, he said, was not complete. It would train with such tanks and wheeled transports as are being used at Camp Borden, using for gunnery practice machine guns and anti-tank guns.

Plans are underway, he said, looking toward the possibility of production of tanks adapted both to training and operations. Designs and models for these are in the hands of British and French experts and Col. Worthington has been in consultation with these men.

The prospect was for fast heavily powered tanks, equipment for which would be more commercially standardized than that of the mark 3 currently building and in use.

"We should have them off the line fairly rapidly if the hopes of munitions and supplies are realized," the minister said. "They represent much more than a hope in the mind of the department."

Noting that some elements for United States, he intimated that tanks were now being built in the producion of the new tank would be a job for railway shops.

Col. Worthingtn, M.C.

Col. F. F. Worthington, M.C., with Bar, before his present appointment, was Officer Commanding the Canadian armored fighting vehicles training centre, at Camp Borden.

Col. Worthington came up from the ranks. He went overseas as a private with the 73rd Battalion, C.E.F., on March 31, 1916, and to France with that unit in August that year. He was wounded and transferred to the 85th Battalion. In November, 1917, he was commissioned in the Canadian Machine Gun Corps and was shortly after promoted Captain.

Upon his return to Canada in 1919 Col. Worthington served with the 1st Canadian Motor Machine Gun Brigade and was appointed to the permanent Machine Gun Brigade as Captain in 1920. He transferred to the Princess Patricia's Light Infantry in 1923 and served with that regiment, attaining the rank of major, until April 1, 1939.

Subsequently Col. Worthington received technical training in England and on assuming command of the Canadian armored fighting vehicles school at Camp Borden on May 1, 1938, was promoted temporary Lieutenant Colonel.

From 1922 to 1923 he served as District Military Intelligence Officer in Toronto. He carried out the same duties as General Staff Officer (3rd grade) at Winnipeg from 1932 to 1934. He was again in Toronto as Deputy Assistant Adjutant and Quartermaster-General, Military District, No. 2, in the following year.

RUMANIA CEDES SOUTH DOBRUJA TO BULGARIA

Frontier of 1912 Again Established by Recent Action, Says Reuters

London, Aug. 21 (CP)—Reuters News Agency reported from Bucharest today that Rumania had agreed definitely to cede southern Dobruja to Bulgaria, returning their frontier to that of 1912.

Rumania cedes to Bulgaria the provinces of Durastor and Caliacra, the provinces to be occupied within three hours after the agreement is signed formally, Reuters said.

Bulgarian troops are near the Dobruja frontier, ready to occupy the new territory.

Bulgaria will get a strip of land slightly more than 40 miles wide, including the cities of Silistra and Balcic, which Rumania had hitherto insisted on retaining. The new frontier would run approximately from Silistra, on the Danube, to south of Mangalia, on the Black Sea.

First Mayor's Home For Sale

Toronto, Aug. 21—(CP)— The one-time home of Toronto's first Mayor, William Lyon Mackenzie, grandfather of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, will be offered for sale in February for $979 arrears in taxes. The Board of Control ruled today that the house, at present unoccupied, should be offered for rent immediately and placed on the tax-sale list. The house is at 83 Bond Street, now in a low-class rooming house district.

GERMAN CIVILIAN ALSO ESCAPES FROMINTERNMENT

Man Answered Roll Call on Monday and Was Gone at Night

INSIDE JOB

Ottawa, Aug. 21—(CP) — Escape of a German civilian from a northwestern Ontario internment camp was announced today by Defence Minister Ralston. The man who could speak no English is believed to be hiding in the wild country which surrounds the camp.

In a Press interview today Col. Ralston described the escape from the northwestern Ontario camp as well as the escape of Werner Koche, a Nazi naval lieutenant, from a northern Ontario camp. Both escapes occurred on Monday.

The minister expressed confidence the civilian would soon be caught because of the nature of the country in which he must be roaming. He said the man answered roll call at 12.30 p.m. Monday and was gone at 8.30 at night.

Before the Press conference, the Defence Minister talked with Brig. Gen. E. De B. Panet, senior officer in charge of internment camps, who is investigating Koche's escape. General Panet was convinced it was an inside job.

Panet Gives Statement

"I do not assume a defensive position in the matter regarding these escapes," Col. Ralston added. "After all, it should be realized that there are 8,000 prisoners, more than half of whom arrived in the last four months and had to be provided for under stress of time."

The Minister said he would inaugurate two changes in the guarding of interned persons. "We intend to take as much precaution to see to it men do not escape from internment camps as is taken in the case of penitentiaries," Col. Ralston said.

One change would be that guards, which are members of the Canadian Active Service Force, would assume more the duties of police than sentries. "There will be more walking around among the internees and less marching along sentry go." He preferred not to announce the other change.

No Outside Assistance

Some of the guards were from companies of the Veteran Home Guards of the C.A.S.F. and others from regular C.A.S.F. units

"My information is there was no outside assistance in the case of the escape of the naval lieutenant. It was an inside job." An investigation was being made on why, although the lieutenant's escape was discovered at 7 a.m., it was not reported until about 5 p.m.

Confirming reports of the finding of a partially completed radio set in the quarters after the naval lieutenant's escape, the Minister said if it had been completed it would have been capable of broadcasting within a radius of 15 miles.

Tribute Paid British Civil Defence Services

By PAT USSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 21—(CP Cable) — Sir John Anderson, Minister of Home Security, today said in a speech that "very serious shortages of both labor and materials" are hampering the extension of air raid shelter provision in Britain.

The necessary adjustments are being made as speedily as possible, he added.

A number of air raid precautions and auxiliary fire service ambulance workers were among the audience at a national defence and public interest committee luncheon which heard the Minister pay tribute to the nation's civil defence services.

BRITISH CHILDREN TO LIVE IN U.S. ARRIVE IN N.Y.

Liner Samaria Docks With Group to Come Under Protection of American Homes

FROM ALL STRATA

New York, Aug. 21.—(AP)—The weather-beaten, black and buff British liner Samaria docked today bringing to safety from England the first group of children transported through the collective efforts of Americans.

The young war refugees crowded the Samaria's rails—210 of them of all sizes, dressed in all kinds of clothing—as the ship came in.

Then, a bit anxiously, their eyes searched the docks for a first glimpse of the people who are giving them homes "for the duration".

From all strata of British society, they had one possession in common: a knapsack containing small belongings. Most of the girls had a doll, and many of the boys had school caps which they swung in wild excitement.

They talked on arriving about air raids they'd been through, and bombs they'd seen fall, and Donald Miller, a six-year-old in Scottish kilts, said, "I'm glad to be here, but I miss my daddy".

One hundred thirty-eight of the children were brought through efforts of the United States committee for the care of European children, and were met down the bay by Marshall Field, head of the committee.

He had made three trips to the battery and waited three days for the arrival of the ship, which left Liverpool, August 9, and traversed the Atlantic, convoyed until last Monday.

All Confident England Will Win

Eighty-four were from homes of workmen in the Hoover Co. Ltd. plant at Perivale, England, a London suburb, travelling to homes of employees of the Hoover Suction Sweeper Co., of North Canton, Ohio.

Fifty were brought under sponsorship of the Boston Transcript.

All seemed confident England would win the war.

"Hitler can't get to England", said David Courtenay, 15, of Sussex, one of the group going to Boston. "You should see our defences".

He had seen a bomb fall 200 yards away from him, killing five persons.

Peter Saundy, 13, on his way to Canton with his two brothers, Barry, nine, and Robert, eight, said, "we're very glad to be here and we know we're going to good homes, but we'll all miss England."

Eleven volunteer "shipboard mothers"—British women who will shuttle across the Atlantic in the coming weeks with groups of children—supervised the 210 with additional volunteer aid of the 477 adult passengers.

U. S. Bomber at Montreal

Montreal, Aug. 21. —(CP) —A twin-engined bomber of United States manufacture bearing Royal Air force markings was at S. Hubert Airport today. The plane arrived late yesterday with a crew of four who gave no information regarding the flight to Montreal or the bomber's destination.

The fact that instructions on instruments were printed in French led to the further belief that the plane had been ordered by France and taken over by British authorities.

Start Deportation Proceedings

Detroit, Aug. 21. — (CP)—United States Immigration officials said today a deportation hearing on the case of Thomas F. Moxon, former Hamilton, Ont., beer salesman, will be held in Jackson Prison next month.

Moxon recently was sentenced to five to fourteen years for forging a cheque in the name of a man who had befriended him.

AT THE BELLE

"One Million B.C."

"One Million B. C." is an outstanding screen achievement, co-starring Lon Chaney, Jr., Carole Landis and Victor Mature. It tells a simple story of two prehistoric tribes — the Shell People and the Rock Tribe — who live their lives under the shadow of attack by huge dinosaurs, wooly mammoths, musk oxen, terrifying reptiles, as well as visitations of earthquakes and seething volcanoes. How a common danger serves to end hostilities between the two clans is told vividly and movingly while animals of monstrous size crawl from their lairs and close in upon the hardy cavemen.

"One Million B. C." is spectacle at its biggest and best. The screen is literally dominated by huge prehistoric beasts, and the earthquake scenes leave one breathless with their force, sweep and power. Other unforgettable scenes show Lon Chaney, Jr., cast as Akhoba, the tribal leader, mauled and gored by a huge beast, his body lacerated and mutilated, one leg broken and shriveled.

Needless to say, "One Million B. C." utilized the newest and most up-to-date technical secrets in achieving such outstanding verisimilitude in the spectacular animal sequences which were filmed on location in Fire Valley, Nevada, described as a fiery gash of grotesque caves, chasms, peaks and pillars.

"Tear Gas Squad"

The added attraction at the Belle Theatre is the thrilling action film, "Tear Gas Squad," starring Dennis Morgan, John Payne and Gloria Dickson.

Dealing with New York's gang-busting, law-enforcing police divisions, it presents the human interest behind-the-scenes stories of the lives of the men who fight crime with tear gas.

The plot deals with the rivalry between a sergeant, played by John Payne and a rookie cop, portrayed by Dennis Morgan, Gloria Dickson, whose family reeks police force tradition, rather favors John than the cocky rookie. It is when Dennis' young brother is murdered that the young cop snaps into action. A thrilling scene picturing the tear gas squad smoking out the desperadoes establishes Dennis as a hero.

The popular Belle News is also shown.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Rancho Grande"

Republic's "Rancho Grande," which comes to the Capitol theatre next with Gene Autry in the top spot, presents an entertaining and thrilling screen story built around the famous song for which it was named.

Gene Autry, foreman of the Rancho Grande, is distressed when he learns that Kay and Tom Dodge, madcap heirs to the ranch, are en route to the rancho with their younger sister, Patsy. The Dodges have a nation-wide reputation as madcaps, and Gene dreads his meeting with them, especially because he already has his hands more than full saving the Rancho Grande from foreclosure.

Old John Dodge, before his death, mortgaged the Rancho in order to secure funds for a vast irrigation system which is to be completed before a certain date. If it is not completed by this date, the Citrus Valley Association, holders of the mortgage, will foreclose on the Rancho Grande and all of the Dodge holdings will be lost.

It is a situation such as this that Gene meets in the current film. The Dodge heirs, portrayed by June Storey, Dick Hogan and little Mary Lee, cause him no end of trouble. One of them, Kay Dodge, adds "heart trouble" to already existing varieties, to Gene's great mental torment.

Smiley Burnette, Gene's omnipresent side-kick, has heart troubles of his own with Effie Tinker, local society news sleuth, but he emerges unscathed, after a series of riotously funny escapades.

"Song of the City"

The second feature is a roaring blast of action, drama and mad love! You'll cheer, these thrills! Here's melodrama from the word "go", fighters, extortionists, bomb-plotters to electrify scene after scene, and romance aplenty, two women after one man, who has his choice between love and love plus a million, it's real entertainment. The Universal News and Chapter 6 "Buck Rogers" closes the show.

AT THE McCARTHY

"An Englishman's Home"

Be sure and do not miss the opportunity of seeing "An Englishman's Home" which is now playing at the McCarthy theatre for in this reviewer's opinion it should be a "must see" for every member of every Canadian home. Heading an excellent cast, Edmund Gwenn, Mary Maguire, Geoffrey Toone and Paul Von Hernried, give exceptional performances that make the drama and suspense of the picture just about as powerful as anyone would actually desire to see, while the story of espinonge and fifth column activities in England, as outlined throughout the entire production is almost as timely and up-to-the-minute as the events of the day, which are published elsewhere in this newspaper. Joe E. Brown in "The Gladiator" also now showing at the McCarthy is a comedy crammed with laughs from beginning to end and makes a swell companion feature. Latest Fox News events is also presented at the beginning of each complete performance.

CONFIDENCE OF CHURCHILL IS 'THRILLING'

'One of Really Great Voices of Western World,' Says N.Y. Herald Tribune

HIS SURE BELIEF

New York, Aug. 21 (CP)—"Yesterday there spoke, from the stuffy, Victorian-Gothic front bench of the House of Commons, one of the really great voices of the western world . . ."

The New York Herald Tribune thus began its leading editorial today, on the speech of Prime Minister Churchill. The speech also was the subject of an editorial in the New York Times which said: "When confidence comes from such a man at such a moment as this, it becomes impressive and thrilling; and it was all the more impressive yesterday because of the array of solid facts...with which he supported his sure belief that Britain will survive."

"Above Babel of Our Times"

The speech "rises above the babel of our times—not because Winston Churchill is in himself a greater man than some others," said the Herald Tribune, "but because he is a strong man brought to a towering height on a great crisis of destiny."

"He spoke to the point because he had no room for anything else. He spoke with a broad and bold statesmanship because he has no time to waste in little manoeuvres of shabby concealments or small-minded and illusory hopes. He spoke with a cold tenacity married to a blazing resolution—the indomitable leader of an indomitable people, who, each drawing strength and support from the other, know themselves to be standing in the breach of history. . . . . .

Nazi World Revolution Meets Its Match

"This world is neither a safe place nor a certain one. We do not know exactly what 50 of our destroyers in British hands could do; we do not know certainly whether Britain, with them or without them, can survive. But we do know that this Britain is a citadel of tremendous strength, there is a real and new hope that in Churchill's Britain the Nazi world revolution has at last met its match, and that if that citadel is supported world history may yet be shaped to tolerable, even to great and creative ends."

The Times said there was "not a breath of complacency in Mr. Churchill's recital, not a trace of the smug belief of former days that Germany could be cracked without terrific effort or sacrifice . . ."

"He is not frightened because he knows and shares the superb fighting spirit which the British airmen and civilians alike have shown in the past few weeks of trial," the Times concluded.

PARLIAMENT NOT TO CONVENE-KING

Joint Defence Board Merely a Body to Study Certain Problems Says Prime Minister

Ottawa, Aug. 21.—(CP)—Conjectures that Parliament might be summoned shortly to implement any defence undertakings made between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King at Ogdensburg last week-end have been set at rest by the Prime Minister.

He told a Press Conference last night that there was "no necessity of parliament being called for this purpose". The joint defence board to be set up by the Canadian and American governments is merely a body to study certain mutual problems, he said. It involved no further commitments than that.

The Prime Minister agreed with a suggestion that the Board might make recommendations but whether such recommendations were acted upon would depend on the two governments.

Personnel Given Thursday

Personnel of the vital new board is expected to be made known on Thursday. Mr. King said the government here was now considering its representatives on the board as well as when and where its first meeting would be held. Announcements of American and Canadian personnel would probably be made simulteously, he added.

The Prime Minister earlier conferred with Conservative Leader Hanson and his desk-mate in the House of Commons, Hon. Grote Stirling (Con. Yale), a former Defence Minister. Mr. King said the meeting had apparently been in the minds of both Mr. Hanson and himself as he found Mr. Hanson had arranged to see him as he moved to make such arrangemnts himself. He said he had given the Opposition Leader about as complete a picture of what had been done regarding joint defence matters with the United States as he had given the Cabinet itself.

NAZIS FIRE AT 20-MILE RANGE, CONVOY SAFE

German Naval Lieutenant, Escapee From Internment Camp, Captured

R.C.M.P. Arrest Escapee on Bridge Near Montreal

Lack of Registration Card Leads Directly to Arrest of Guenther Lorentz

Montreal, Aug. 22—(CP)—Royal Canadian Mounted Police announced today the capture here last night of the German prisoner of war who escaped Monday from an internment camp in Northern Ontario.

An official said that at the moment few details were known about the capture, which previously had been announced by the Department of National Defence at Ottawa.

"But one thing we are sure of," he added. "He won't get away this time. We have him safely — very safely—under lock and key."

He was attempting to cross Victoria Bridge when captured. The bridge links the Island of Montreal with the mainland.

The prisoner, Guenther Lorentz, was brought to the R.C.M.P. headquarters here, where he is being held pending instructions from internment officials at Ottawa.

Escapes Through Tunnel

His escape from the internment camp was made through a carefully contrived tunnel.

It first had been believed the name of the prisoner, a German naval lieutenant, was Werner Koche. It was learned, however, that it actually was Lorentz who escaped, the error in name being caused by another prisoner answering for Lorentz when the roll call was taken.

The capture ended a widespread search through the dense bush country of Northern Ontario. For three days armed police and home guards, aided by an airplane which scouted the countryside, sought the prisoner.

It had been reported that R.C.M.P. headquarters had ordered a nation-wide hunt for Lorentz. Every officer in Canada was said to have been on 24-hour call and every highway was reported to have been watched.

Speaks Perfect English

Lorentz, who speaks almost flawless English, made his escape from the internment camp through a timbered tunnel, which was more than 100 feet long and which police said probably took two months

Cosmic rays! Of all the electrical manifestations in the atmosphere, these mysterious radiations, are the most powerful. Cosmic rays come to earth with energies probably around twelve billion volts, a quantity about four thousand times as great as is used in producing laboratory lightning. Cosmic-ray bullets, since they pierce lead and blast molecules and atoms apart, go readily through the human body. Dr. R. A. Millikan figures that ten of these cosmic bullets, shot from the sky, go through our heads every minute.

Must Change Bank Notes Into Dollars By August 27th

Ottawa, Aug. 22 (CP)—Canadian holders of Bank of England notes will have until Aug. 27 to change those notes into Canadian dollars, under a ruling by the British Treasury announced in London Wednesday.

A ban on the importation of Bank of England notes into the United Kingdom announced there, will not become effective in Canada for six days, to accommodate Canadians. Holders in neutral countries are being given similar consideration.

This ban, designed to prevent Germany realizing on Bank of England notes seized in occupied European territory, will actually have little effect here, it is stated. Bank of England notes do not enter commerce to any degree, drafts being the common medium. They are found only occasionally in trade, as a result of travel. Consequently there 's normally an "extremely small amount" of such notes in Canada.

No increased difficulty will be experienced by persons desiring to transmit funds to sterling countries, as a result of the ban. Under present conditions, a permit from the Foreign Exchange Control Board must be obtained in any case. The transmitter may then send a draft out of this country, which safeguards the funds in transit whereas bank notes might be permanently lost or destroyed en route.

Officials here believe the British treasury ruling is traceable to considerable hoarding of Bank of England notes throughout the European continent in recent years as the threat of war steadily increased. It is possible the German forces have compelled hoarders to disgorge these notes, with the result Germany would realize on them unless Britain cleared Bank of England notes from ordinary channels.

LINDSAY GIRL IS DROWNED

Was Riding Bicycle on Path Unaware it Led to End of Dock

Toronto, Aug. 22—(CP) —Daisy Brooks, 21, of Lindsay, Ont., drowned in Toronto Bay late yesterday when she rode a bicycle off the ferry dock at Ward's Island into 12 feet of water. She had been employed as a domestic in the home of Frank Callaghan, Ward's Island, since Monday and is believed to have been unaware that her path led to the end of the dock.

Attracted by the girl's screams, persons from the nearby Queen City Yacht Club rushed to attempt a rescue but the body was not recovered until half an hour later. There will be no inquest.

State Employees are Removed By Nazis on Grounds of Origin

Those Deemed Not of Pure Alsatian or Lorraine Stock Taken to France

CARRY 250 MARKS

Basel, Switzerland, Aug. 22—(AP)—German authorities in Alsace and Lorraine were reported today to have completed removal of all state employees—from provincial officials to common laborers—not of pure Alsatian or Lorrain origin.

The last group of such state employees left the two provinces yesterday on German order for the parts of German-occupied France, or the zone governed from Vichy, according to advices reaching Switzerland.

They were permitted to take 50 pounds of baggage and 5,000 French francs, or 250 marks (nominally about $100), with them. All their other property was confiscated by the state.

Their jobs had been filled since July 16 by German appointees, or men hired by the Germans, including many Alsatians who moved to Germany after the provinces were taken back by France in the First Great War settlement.

In contrast to the reported disorganization of communications in the area of France not occupied by the Germans and in many parts of the occupied zone, almost all railroads in Alsace and Lorraine are running. War damages to the rail lines have been repaired at least temporarily by German engineers and French labor battalions.

Although food is not plentiful in the two provinces, it is termed sufficient for needs of the present population which is still a fraction of normal. Supplies have been brought from other districts of the occupied zone and some from Baden.

German industrialists from many parts of the Reich have been installed in manufacturing towns of Strasbourg and Mulhouse, where many industries again are functioning. Their total output goes to Germany, which provided raw materials when Alsatian stocks were found to be exhausted.

Thousands of Alsatian and Lorraine farmers are being repatriated from the unoccupied zone, but the process is slow.

LULL CONTINUES, BRITAIN WARNED TO BE ON ALERT

Weather Conditions May Have Caused Lull in Nazi Air War

'NAZI JUNK-ERS YARD'

Aerial Torpedo Dropped by Hun Plane in Southeast Town, Blasting Row of 8 Cottagers' Houses

London, Aug. 22—(CP)—The lull in Germany's intense air warfare against Great Britain continued today, but the Government kept the public alert for a possible immediate renewal with even greater fury than before.

Some Britons declared jubilantly the Royal Air Force had shot the "blitz" out of Hitler's aerial blitzkrieg, and others expressed bewilderment at the sudden halt in the massed German raids. But Air Secretary Sir Archibald Sinclair, warier, warned all against complacency in a broadcast to the nation.

He said it would be a mistake "to think that the danger of invasion, or of massed attacks from the air, is past," and he remarked the Germans as yet have used "only a small fraction of their heavy bomber force."

NAZIS RESUME SPORADIC RAIDS

Single Plane Drops Nine Whistling Bombs in Southeast Coast Area—Damage Slight

London, Aug. 22—(CP)—Sporadic German air raids were resumed early today when three or four bombs were dropped on a thickly-populated, hilly district in southeast England. A number of houses were wrecked but no casualties were reported.

This followed a lull from midnight on. During the night, a bulletin said, Nazi air attacks were "very few and on a small scale." It cited damage to gas and water mains in a southeast coast town and to a railway line further inland and said a soldier was wounded by a bomb dropped in southeast Scotland.

This morning, a single plane dropped nine whistling bombs on a southeast coast town, while many more exploded in the sea. Although five fell on houses and in backyards, little damage was done.

Nazi planes also were reported in the vicinity of a Welsh town.

Drama Flows Day and Night Through Alpine Stronghold; Communication Hub of Europe

Berne, Aug. 22—(AP)— Drama flows day and night through this Alpine stronghold of democracy which is now the last neutral state left in western continental Europe north of the Pyreness and south of the Kattegat.

It comes in the 35,000 letters per day which flow through the offices of the International Red Cross Prisoner's Bureau in Geneva.

It comes in thousands of letters, telegrams and word-of-mouth messages to Swiss and foreigners living in the neutral land.

It reaches hitherto unimportant legations in Berne where wartime staffs have been swollen to many times their peacetime strength and are still swamped with work.

Trains bring it across the Swiss frontiers where some of Europe's crack expresses now pin their western terminus.

It comes by air with special planes winging into the mountainous little state with men aboard who risk a forced landing in countries where certain prison and perhaps worse await them.

It cracks out in coded radio messages across oceans to continents from which war-weary Europe draws both strength and life.

For Switzerland has become the communications centre of Europe, the letterbox, telegraph office, roundhouse, airport and radio centre through which millions seek to exchange news.

Some of their messages are of world-wide importance; some are only pathetic messages from a single human being seeking word from one other in the maelstrom of Europe.

The United States Ambassador to France, William C. Bullitt telephoned the message that Paris would surrender without a fight to the American Legation in Berne for forwarding to Berlin. That message affected millions.

A Frenchwoman wrote to the Prisoners' Bureau, begging them to find out whether her husband and their two sons were alive or dead. "They wrote last from Flanders—I beg you tell me quickly if I have even one left to live for!"

Radio Stations Work at Capacity

Swiss commercial radio stations have been working at capacity day and night ever since the battle of France first cut cables between England and France on the channel.

Rail Traffic Heavy

For thousands of Englishmen on the continent radio was for weeks the only link with home. All the vast flow of commerce and business, of diplomacy and news from the Balkans had to use radio to cross those few miles of channel and the battlefield of France.

Englishmen who simply had to take that chance to get back home, Americans confident in the "open sesame" of their passports, Europeans with desperate reasons to reach Lisbon and the sea, Lisbon and the Atlantic clippers, travelled for days from Geneva in "locked" Swiss buses to the Spanish frontier on the Pyrenees.

Back in Switzerland rail traffic was still breaking records. The Swiss national railroads were turning in big profits for the first time in years. Italy and Germany used the efficient Swiss lines and the big Swiss Alpine tunnels, still marvels of engineering, to exchange raw materials and foodstuffs and manufactured goods. Arms stayed on the single-line Brenner line through old Austria.

SAYS M'NAUGHTON PRAISES PACT ON JOINT DEFENCE

New York Herald Tribune Quotes Him as Saying 'Most Heartening Thing in Decades'

QUIET CONFIDENCE

New York, Aug. 22 (CP)—The New York Herald Tribune in a copyright cable from London today quoted Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton Canadian scientist-soldier and commander of a British Army Corps which includes the Canadian 1st Division, as praising the joint defence agreement between Canada and the United States.

The newspaper quoted Gen. McNaughton as saying:-

"It is the most heartening thing that has happened in decades. It brings a quiet confidence which does your heart good to find two nations, which for 100 years and more have settled their differences by arbitration, taking an equally practical point of view about defence. It marks the culmination of a trend, while maintaining

MANY DIPLOMATS ARE RECALLED IN JAP SHAKEUP

Minister to Canada and Ambassador to United States Are Included

SWEEPING CHANGES

Tokyo, Aug. 22 (AP)—Domei, Japanese News Agency, reported today that Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka has recalled five Ambassadors and 19 Ministers, including the Minister to Canada, Baron Shuh Tomii, in a sweeping shakeup of the diplomatic service.

Domei said one of the Ambassadors affected was Kensuke Horinouchi at Washington.

Yoshisuke Aikawa, one of Japan's outstanding industrialists and head of the great Manchuria industrial development corporation was said in informed quarters to be a likely choice as Horinouchi's successor.

Domei said 19 ministers and 16 holders of important consular posts, including those at New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Honolulu and Manila, also were being recalled in the shakeup, which affects the foreign service in the Americas more than any other part of the world.

Lord Strickland of Malta Dies After Long Career

Former Prime Minister of Malta and Ex-Governor of Other Possessions Ill Only Three Days

PICTURESQUE CAREER

Valletta, Malta, Aug. 22 (CP-Reuters)—Lord Strickland, 79, former Prime Minister of Malta, died today. He was the first Baron Strickland and the Maltese Count Della Catena. He had been ill three days.

The picturesque nobleman once was involved in a personal quarrel with the Pope over whether the Catholic Church had authority to order a priest who was a British subject to leave the island as a disciplinary measure.

After an investigation by a British Royal Commission, Lord Strickland finally apologized to the Pope for "words that should be withdrawn."

Lord Strickland was born in Malta May 24, 1861, and held his first government position here in 1886, when he was elected a member of the council of government.

Subsequently, he was Governor of the Leeward Islands, Tasmania, Western Australia, Norfolk Island and New South Wales, returning to Malta as a member of the legislative assembly in 1921.

He was Prime Minister from 1927 to 1932

Now Do You Wish To Buy a Bomber?

London, Aug. 22 (CP)—For the information of anyone with the money to spare or the urge to collect it, a fighter plane for the Royal Air Force can be bought with £5,000 ($22,250) and a bomber costs £20,000 ($89,000). The figures were given by Lord Beaverbrook, Canadian-born minister of aircraft production, in reply to numerous inquiries. People wishing to start funds thought it would be a good idea to be told how much was aimed at and how many planes that would buy.

One suggestion is that the Air Ministry list prices of airplane parts so that patriotic folk who can't contribute a fighting plane might buy some instrument or a bolt or two for the war effort.

DUNCAN M'ARTHUR SWORN IN AS EDUCATION HEAD

Deputy Minister of Education is Appointed to Succeed Late Dr. L. J. Simpson

CABINET WELCOME

Was Former Member of Archives Staff and Head of History Department at Queen's University

Toronto, Aug. 22—(CP)— Dr. Duncan McArthur, Deputy Minister of Education since 1934, was sworn in as Ontario Education Minister today. He fills the post left vacant by the sudden death Sunday of Dr. L. J. Simpson.

The new minister was sworn into office by Hon. Albert Matthews, Lieutenant Governor, in the presence of several of his new 'colleagues. The ceremony took place after he had formally resigned as Deputy Minister under the ruling that civil servants cannot enter the cabinet.

After the oath had been administered to him, Dr. McArthur was welcomed to the cabinet by Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, Hon. Gordon Conant, Hon. Paul Leduc, Hon. Peter Heenan, Hon. P. M. Dewan and Hon. Harry Nixon.

Native of Elgin County

Dr. McArthur is a native of Dutton, Elgin County, Ontario. He was graduated from Queen's University, Kingston, with a B.A. in 1907 and M.A. in 1908. He received the honorary degree, LL.D., from Queens in 1935, the University of Western Ontario in 1936 and the University of Toronto in 1937.

He was in the Dominion Archives Branch from 1907 to 1912 and served as head of the History Department of Queens University from 1922 to 1934.

ACCUSE 'HERMIT' OF SHOOTING BOY

Police Say Boy, Who Bled to Death, Swam to 'Humbug' Island to Play

Detroit, Aug. 22—(AP)— John Hadju, 59-year-old "hermit of Humbug Island," was jailed on a murder charge today, accused of fatally shooting a boy who swam to his tiny Detroit river island to play.

The boy, Lloyd Harwood, 15, bled to death from a bullet wound police say Badju inflicted yesterday when he tried to frighten away Harwood and his companion, 12-year-old Delone Smith.

Hadju, caretaker of Humbug Island, lived alone, trapping and fishing, except for the few weeks each season when the island is rented to duck hunters. He told police Chief Clayton Williams of nearby Trenton he had shot in the air when he saw the boys at one of his fish boxes.

Young Smith said Hadju had come after the boys with a rifle. They jumped from the box, anchored in the river and swam for shore.

"When I got to shore," Williams quoted the boy as saying, "I looked up and saw Lloyd climbing out of the water. Then I heard three bangs and Lloyd yelled and began to cry and then everything was still. I hid in the swamp for a long time."

Police found young Harwood's body where he had crawled beneath a tree at the island's edge.

'Children's Specials' Speed Evacuees to Wartime Homes

712 Boys and Girls from Britain Part of Greatest Movement in History

FACILITIES TAXED

An East Coast Canadian Port, Aug. 22—(CP) — Two "children's specials" slid past the New Brunswick countryside today, rolling towards points all the way to the Pacific coast with a freight of young evacuees from Britain destined to find homes in Canada for the war's duration.

Their dangerous sea voyage now only a memory, the 712 boys and girls looked forward to joining relatives or foster-parents in the Dominion under the Children's Overseas Reception Scheme that brought them here this week with 1,300 others in the greatest movement of its kind in history.

After waiting two days in this port while the others were disembarked and entrained, the group finally were herded aboard two special trains late last night and early today.

With their going, shipping, immigration and railway officials heaved a collective sigh of relief. Since the youngsters came into port in a British convoy and started streaming ashore in a steady torrent of humanity Monday, facilities for handling them had been taxed to the utmost.

Only by working day and night did the weary officials manage to clear the mass of passengers in the time they did. Even soldiers and sailors lent a hand, carrying tots from ship to registration point to train, directing adults and providing help in a dozen different ways.

Royal Navy Foils Gunners on Shore Across Channel

Nazi Dive Bombers Fail to Cause Damage —Mile-Long Convoy Passes Dover Safely

A Southeast Coast Town, England, Aug. 22—(CP)— German artillery on the French shore shelled a mile-long British convoy threading the English Channel today, but after 80 minutes the ships passed through Dover Straits without apparent casualty.

Observers estimated that 100 shells were fired, at a 20-mile range, and that at times the German batteries were sending them over at the rate of one a minute.

The bombardment diminished after the convoy passed Dover.

Then German dive bombers roared out of the east and began a new attack on the ships. British guns brought one of the bombers down, and the convoy apparently escaped damage.

The German guns fired in batteries of four. Guns along the coast from Calais to Boulogne appeared to be taking part.

Nazi Positions Exposed

Every time they fired their positions were betrayed to observers who noted the blotches of bright flame from their cordite charges.

Most of the shells, aimed at the group of small merchant ships and its escort of war vessels, fell into the sea.

They came from a battery of four German guns established just east of Boulogne, France. Their brilliant flashes could be seen by observers on the cliffs here.

A few seconds after the flashes were seen, the shells burst near the ships. The German gunners changed the range and the shells fell closer to the convoy. But subsequent shells dropped between the ships and the English shore.

The explosions shook the ground on this side of the channel.

Crowds began gathering on the shore to watch.

British Warships Lay Smokescreen

Shortly after it started, two of the British warships laid a smokescreen to keep the Germans from spotting their targets and noting where their shells fell.

It was believed here that the gunners were getting firing range from a Nazi plane flying high in the skies.

The convoy stretched out more than a mile, sailing in close to the towering English cliffs, 20 miles from the gun emplacements.

While the warships weaved in and out in the smoke screen, Royal Air Force fighters suddenly appeared overhead. There were no German bombers on hand.

After a while police cleared the waterfront of all save soldiers, sailors and newspapermen.

British Are Using Mass Production In Training Planes

London, Aug. 22 (CP)—Britain now is using mass production methods in turning out training planes.

A track assembly line introduced in a British aircraft factory, it was disclosed today, is being used for final stages of construction of the fast Miles-Master single-motored training plane, with top speed of 250 M.P.H.

PROBE IS OPENED

Police of Opinion Assassination 'Has All the Aspects of an International Plot'

Mexico City, Aug. 22—(AP)—Police Commander Jesus Galindo said today the pickaxe assassination of Leon Trotsky "has the aspects of an international plot." He did not elaborate.

Trotsky, genius of the Bolshevist revolution, died last night in police hospital. The former Russian War Commissar had been exiled from Russia in 1929, and a refugee in Mexico since Jan. 9, 1937.

Trotsky's brain was pierced by a pickaxe wielded by Frank Jackson, who for months posed as a "great admirer" of the chieftain of the fourth international.

Jackson, beaten by guards, was taken to the same hospital where Trotsky died.

Trotsky's associates, and Trotsky himself, charged Josef Stalin, head of the Soviet Union and long-time political foe of Trotsky and the Ogpu, Russian secret police, with responsibility for the second assault on Trotsky within three months. May 24 he escaped harm in a machine gun attack for which more than 20 Mexicans were arrested.

NINE MONTHS GIVEN BANCROFT RESIDENT

Albert Richer, charged with the theft of goods merchandise and clothing from parked automobiles near northern holiday resorts was found guilty in a Bancroft police court yesterday and sentenced to nine months determinate and six months indeterminate in jail. Found guilty of a second charge of theft of groceries to the value of $1.40 from a car, the accused was sentenced to an additional two months in jail, the sentences to run concurrently.

Charges were laid by Provincial Police Constable S. Palmateer, who arrested Richer after close investigation.

David Woodcock, charged with receiving stolen goods, when police discovered a stolen bicycle on his property was found not guilty and acquitted.

Conviction Registered Against Garage-Owner

Following a trial that lasted upwards of two hours, Robert Robinson, Bancroft garage-owner, was found guilty by Magistrate Lloyd of Northbrook, of being in possession of illicit liquor and fined one hundred dollars and costs. Charges were preferred by R.C.M.P. Constable William Beatty of the Belleville detachment.

Long argument between the crown and defence counsel Robert Pringle and Frank Baalim of Madoc, featured the hearing. Seven bottles of illicit liquor analysed as 72.4 proof spirits, is said to have been found in the Robinson basement. The bench ruled, that the Robinson property, which houses a well used by a large percentage of the village population, was a public place, and found the accused guilty.

"The fact that this man did not complain when police officers questioned him regarding his possession of the liquor convinces me, he is guilty", the magistrate said in summing up the evidence. Three months in jail was the option in default of payment.

Grudge Series All Tied up

An exhibition softball game played at the Coleman Flats last evening between the Orphans of the Neighborhood League and the "Bughouse" nine, representing the local Entomological Bureau on Dundas Street, resulted in a 16-10 win for the "Bughouse" nine. This was the fourth game of the series, each team having two apiece in the private feud between the two nines. The fifth and deciding contest will be run off next week. The lineups:

Bughouse Nine: Burnett, Ashmore, Bucker, Follwell, Atyeo, Wilkes, Hewson, Baldwin and Cameron.

Orphans: Fox, Duffield, Darvell, Stewart, Saunders, Follwell, Barriage, Warren and Ross.

Score by innings:
Bughouse .. .. 513 210 203—16
Orphans .. .. 150 120 100—10
Umpires: Hammet and Doran.

OBITUARY

PATRICK McAVOY

Patrick McAvoy passed away suddenly this Thursday morning at the residence of his brother, Mr. James McAvoy, 14 Octavia Street. He was in failing health for some time, but his death was unexpected.

The late Patrick McAvoy was born 62 years ago in the 5th. concession of Huntingdon Township, being a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James McAvoy. For many years he was engaged in farming in Huntingdon and Thurlow townships. For the past fourteen years he made his home in Belleville and was well respected. In religion he was a faithful member of St. Michael's Church and was a member of the Altar Society.

Surviving him are two sisters, Mrs. Frank O'Carroll, Thurlow Township, and Miss Margaret McAvoy, Belleville; two brothers, Mr. Owen McAvoy, Trenton, and Mr. James McAvoy, Belleville.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

ONCE 'OBJECTOR' WHO CAPTURED 132 MEN IN GREAT WAR, FAVORS CONSCRIPTION

Albuquerque, N.M., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Sgt. Alvin C. York, conscientious objector in the last war who was drafted and became a hero for the single handed capture of 132 German officers and men, favors conscription. York, en route to Los Angeles for the National Encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, said conscription would "remove the morass of disgrace" which separated volunteers and drafted man.

Rusty Hull of Palatial Yacht Sold

Burlington, Vt., Aug. 22 —(AP)— The rusty, iron hull of the Oneida, once the palatial yacht of William Randolph Hearst, was sold yesterday, presumably for conversion into munitions in Canada.

Moe Zinman of St. Johns, Que., informed the office of Mayor John J. Burns he had purchased the boat from N. Goodsell. He signed an agreement that the hull would be towed out of the harbor tomorrow.

PEMBROKE MAN FOUND DYING

W. G. Demers, Pembroke, Dies Shortly After Being Found in C. N. Roundhouse at Trenton

A coroner's jury will probe the circumstances surrounding the death of Wilbert John Demers, 24, of 233 Patterson Avenue, Pembroke, Ont., who was found in a dying condition on the floor of the C.N.R. roundhouse in Trenton early today.

A preliminary inquest was ordered by Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson, Belleville, and adjourned until Friday, August 23rd.

According to investigating Police Chief William Bain, Demers, with a brother, Henry Demers and Walter Venkus, had climbed into the tender of a locomotive in the roundhouse, apparently to rest.

Charles Hood, railway employee, entered the cab and told the men to leave as he had work to do. Henry Demers and Venkus sat in the cab, while the deceased left unnoticed by the three men. After Hood had finished his work, he dismounted from the cab and saw Wilbert Demers lying on the cement floor beneath the cab-door. The floor was slightly over six feet below that of the cab.

He called to the other two men and fellow employees, who took Demers, who was breathing faintly, to the roundhouse office. Dr. Reid was called, but Demers died approximately five minutes after his arrival.

Investigation of the body by Coroner Dr. J. Farley revealed no marks or anything to indicate the cause of death. Demers' brother told police that the deceased had complained of pains in the heart a few days previously.

Pilot From Ottawa Killed in Action Known Here

Friends in Belleville of Bruce Andrew Power, for the past two years a pilot in the Royal Air Force, and stationed at Trenton just before being sent overseas, will learn with regret of his death. His father Mr. Hugh Power of Ottawa has been notified that he was killed in action having been listed as missing since July 23rd.

The young airman was born in Ottawa and attended school there. He completed his education at Jasper Park where his father was stationed with the National Parks Branch of the Mines and Resources Department. After leaving school he joined the Royal Canadian Air Force and later was transferred to the R.A.F. where he took a short term course and received his wings in April, 1939.

He was married to the former Jean Myles of Ottawa last September. He went overseas in November following a period of training at the Trenton base of the R.C.A.F. His wife joined him in England at a later date. He leaves to mourn him in addition to his widow and his father, Miss Della Power, and Mrs. Grave Saunders, Ottawa, sisters.

Motorist Emerges From House to Find His Car in Flames

A Windsor motorist today ruefully gaze at the damage wrought in his fine new automobile by cigar ash on Wednesday night. Coming up from Kingston last evening the motorist was enjoying his cigar and as he drove along flicking the ash out the open window had not a care in the world.

Parking his automobile near the intersection of Bleecker and Bridge, he entered a near-by house and after a stay of an hour and a half, emerged to his his car aflame. A hurry-up call to the fire department soon resulted in extinguishing the flames but the entire inside of the car, including upholstery, cushions and glass was a total wreck.

The unfortunate motorist revealed to firemen that he rather sensed there was something amiss before he left the car, but a search of the cushions failed to show any smoldering ash, although he still could smell a peculiar odor. Satisfied that everything was alright, he parked his car only to discover later that some live ash must have eluded his search.

Fair Grounds Scene Of Track, Field Meet For Local Playgrounds

Potential athletic champions of the Belleville playgrounds will vie for track and field honors at the Fair Grounds tomorrow (Friday), when the annual Field Day will be held. Three classes of boys' events will be held—seniors, 18 and under; juniors, 14 years and under and midgets, 12 and under. The events will be run under the point system of 5 for first place, 3 for second and 1 for third. In the girls' division seniors will be 15 and under and juniors 14 and under.

The events will start at 11 a.m. Friday and will include high jump, broad jump, discuss throws, dashes, relay races, shot puts, ball-throw, and many other tests of skill and ability.

The championships are being staged under the supervision of Mr. W. A. Bowerman, and a competent staff, and a large crowd of spectators is expected to turn out to watch the youthful participants in their quest for titular honors.

Cyclist Uses Large Trailer

The advice of "Join the Navy and See the World" is wasted on an Oshawa resident who has rather uniquely dubbed himself as "Oshawa's Rambling Trailer Cyclist." Not content with the all too frequent hit and miss method of thumbing his way along the highway, this traveller has devised an unique and inexpensive way of seeing the country and at the same time asserts his independence.

Equipped with a bicycle to provide his transportation, the traveller totes his personal belongings and other equipment in a two-wheeled trailer attached in conventional manner to his bike. Much be-daubed with the usual lettering the trailer has the names of many Canadian centres printed on it, while across the rear are the words —"Oshawa's Rambling Trailer Cyclist." He was seen as he passed through the city last evening on his way to eastern points.

Cannifton "Sluggers" One up on Latta

"Doc" Empson's Cannifton "sluggers" are one up on the Latta aggregation in the South Hastings League finals today as the result of their win at the northern village Wednesday evening when they took the third game of the best three-out-of-five series by a score 6-2.

By the win, Cannifton are well on their way towards taking their second straight championship in South Hastings baseball circles, having won the coveted honor last year for the first time, when they defeated Shannonville in the finals. They need only one more win to repeat this year and the series will continue at Cannifton on Friday evening when a win for the homesters will decide the series at three games to one, while a win for the Latta nine will even the series at two games each.

SMUGGLING MONEY TO U.S. IS CHARGED

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 22 —(CP)— Royal Canadian Mounted Police late yesterday arrested Robert G. Germer, 31, Detroit salesman, charged under the War Measures Act with smuggling money from Canada to the United States.

Germer, allegedly of German descent, is well known to American police. He is the first person arrested here for unlawfully taking money over the border. His arrest was ordered by the Foreign Exchange Control Board.

REGISTRARS TAKE BREATHING SPELL

All Registration Cards Must be Sorted According to Age Groups

Registrar officials for South Hastings, Col. W. R. Rierdon and Mr. Fred Wiggins, took a well-deserved breathing spell from a strenuous three-day period of National Registration completed Wednesday night, as they awaited final returns from outlying registration booths in rural polling sub-divisions this morning. All registration cards for this district will be tabulated at the local office before sending them on to Ottawa it was learned.

Polling booths in the city as well as throughout the country were exceptionally quiet for the last day and evening, of registration with only the scattered few persons coming in to register as the deadline of 10.00 o'clock Wednesday night was reached. Deputy Registrars of the city and also those coming in from the country with their registration forms were quite well satisfied however that everyone had been registered.

With the completion of the actual registration however, the work of the Registrars is not finished as all registration forms of male registrants between the ages of 16 and 45 years have to be sorted according to age groups, and the whole must be tabulated. It will take a day or so before exact number of persons registered in this district is known, it was revealed.

R. A. F. Nothing Less Than Centre of World Says N. Y. Tribune

New York, Aug. 22—(CP)—The New York Herald Tribune, paying tribute to the Royal Air Force, said editorially today: "The airmen of England fighting man to man in the skies, are nothing less than the centre of the world today."

"They are few in numbers . . . the whole cause of British survival —the fate, indeed, of the western world—may rest upon the heart, the genius, of a few score of fliers," The Herald Tribune said.

"Their battle turns one's mind back to the great warriors of old who fought single-handed for their armies and their peoples—to the homeric champions, to David, who slew his Goliath, to the knights of the round table,'" it continued. "There never was such jousting as has filled the skies over England and the channel in the last few weeks."

MOBILE DIVISION OF EGYPT'S ARMY NOW IN POSITION

Country Prepared to Resist Any Invasion but Will Not Attack, Says War Minister

NOW UP TO ITALY

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 22—(AP) — War Minister Keissy Pasha disclosed today that an Egyptian mobile division already has taken up strategic positions to resist any invasion, presumably from Libya in the west, where large Italian troop concentrations have been reported.

"We will not attack," he said, "but if we are attacked we will fight alongside our Ally, Britain, for the protection of our country.

His statement reflected Egypt's determination to keep out of war unless she should be invaded or attacked—a decision which leaves her entry into the conflict or her continued neutrality squarely up to Italy.

The government headed by Premier Hassan Sabry Pasha, after weathering a torrent of demands for entering the war alongside Britain, made it clear the nation will not do so unless her territory or army is attacked

Britain Warned

Britain, meanwhile, was warned by Lt.-Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, Commander of Britain's middle eastern forces, who said Hitler, finding his way to invasion of Britain blocked, may, like Napoleon, "turn east in search of easier success."

"We've had a long period of watching and waiting out here," he said in a broadcast yesterday to Britain, "and some of you have grown weary of it. But I can assure you that the importance of our position is fully realized."

Egypt's Premier, after a five-hour debate on Egyptian war policy in the crowded Chamber of Deputies, declared Egypt "harbors no ill feeling toward any nation" and only direct attack could swerve her from determination to avoid war.

The Premier's statement was given after Ahmed Maher Pasha, President of the Chamber, and other political leaders had demanded immediate entry into the war to protect the country's territorial integrity in the face of continued massing of Italian troops at Bardia, Libya, some 30 miles from the Egyptian frontier.

SHORTER COURSES FASTER TRAINERS SPEED AIR PLANS

Canada's Higher Needs Forces Quickly Air Schools in Gear to Meet of British Air for More Pilots

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada is speeding up the training of bomber and fighter pilots to man the parade of new planes which is strengthening Britain's air armada.

New flying fields and buildings are being constructed all over the Dominion for the British Commonwealth Air Training plan. The beginning of intensive air warfare over Britain has resulted in acceleration of the scheme, and many flying schools are being opened ahead of schedule.

Already the training plan is taking on Imperial outlines. One small group of student airmen has arrived from Britain for instruction at service flying schools in Canada. Air Minister Power has announced that others will soon come from the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand.

The latest move to speed up the output of pilots is the shortening of the time it takes to make an airman from a civilian. Under the new schedule, pilots will be ready for active service in 25 weeks, instead of the 28 weeks originally allotted.

Thousands of young men between 18 and 28 years of age have now been enrolled for training. Their first four weeks are spent in initial training schools, where they study air force law, the theory of flight, mechanics and related subjects.

Then those who are training to be pilots are promoted to one of 26 elementary flying training schools being established through the Dominion. These schools are operated by private companies set up by units of the Canadian Flying Clubs Association, under Royal Canadian Air Force supervision.

Fly Training Planes

Here the student airmen get their first flying instruction. After seven weeks they are able to fly slow training planes—the De Havilland Moth or the Fleet Finch. In addition, they have received more ground instruction, and training in the use of machine guns.

The next step is seven weeks of intermediate training at a service flying training school operated directly by the R.C.A.F. Eight of these schools will be open by the end of the year. This is half the number which will be operating when the Commonwealth plan has reached its peak.

The airmen learn to fly fast, low-wing monoplanes, either the North American Harvard or the Fleet 60—both of which fly about 200 miles an hour, double the speed of the primary trainers.

They then move on to their final seven weeks of advanced training. Pilots being trained to handle bombers fly the Avro Anson, a twin engined British aircraft. Fighting pilots use speedy little pursuit ships.

For their first time their training planes are equipped with bomb racks and machine-guns. The airmen practice aerobatics, formation flying and navigation. They learn how to fly by instruments alone through darkness, fog or rain. Finally they are given a polishing up in aerial marksmanship with machine-guns and bombs at one of ten bombing and gunnery schools.

Then their training is complete. They will be ready to proceed overseas for actual operations against the enemy. They will join hundreds of Canadian airmen who are already in the United Kingdom, to fly Spitfire and Hurricane fighters in the defence of Britain, or heavy bombers like the ones which have been smashing at German objectives on the continent.

WOMEN TO FORM DRIVING CORPS

Women's Voluntary Service Corps of Canadian Red Cross to Help War Effort

Toronto, Aug. 22 —(CP)— Registration of Canada's woman power to aid the nation's war effort as ambulance and truck drivers was underway today.

Establishment of the Women's Voluntary Service Corps Committee of the Canadian Red Cross Society was announced Wednesday by Mrs. H. P. Plumptre, Toronto, Chairman of War Activities. Drivers will supply their own full-dress uniforms, serve without salary and after a training period will be able to handle "anything on four wheels."

The Driving Corps, open to women over 18 years of age, is commanded by Mrs. W. D. Chambers of Montreal, the first Canadian woman to receive the Military Medal in the First Great War.

The youthful-looking commandant went overseas in 1916 and drove an ambulance and staff car in London for the Canadian Army Medical Corps. She became a member of the First Aid Nursing Yeomanry a year later and drove an ambulance in France, winning the Military Medal for her work in removing soldiers to safety under a heavy air bombardment.

Members of the W.V.S.C. will be trained to handle trucks transporting food and comforts, as well as personnel, to training camps in Canada. They will also be trained to handle ambulances in anticipation of a demand for such service in Canada in the future.

Applicants accepted for the course will be enrolled as probationers. A St. John Ambulance first aid certificate and a course of approved Motor Mechanics are required before the applicant is accepted as a probationer.

The full-dress uniform consists of khaki serge tunic and skirt, peaked cap, khaki shirt and tie, cotton hose, brown, low-heeled oxford shoes, gauntlet gloves and belted khaki trench coat with detachable fleece lining.

INDIAN CONGRESS REJECTS OFFER

Passes Resolution Rejecting British Offer of Ultimate Self-Rule for India

Wardha, India, Aug. 22.—(CP-Reuters)—The working committee of the All-India Nationalist Congress, ending a five-day session, passed a resolution today rejecting the latest British offer of ultimate self-rule for India.

It urged Indians to condemn the attitude of the British government in public protests meetings.

The resolution, as yet unratified by the Congress as a whole, said Britain's proposal was opposed to the principle of democracy set by Britain as one of her war aims as well as to the best interests of India.

Britain, in an offer Aug. 8, promised India "free and equal partnership" in the British Commonwealth after the war. It said "a moment when the Commonwealth is engaged in a struggle for existence" is not one for devising a new constitution for India.

Police Blotter

All was quiet on the city police station front last night for the second evening in succession. A wave of law observance has apparently swept over the city with no arrests being made during the past forty-eight hours.

EIGHT MILLION MEN AND WOMEN ARE REGISTERED

Tribute Paid to "Whole-Hearted" Response of Canadian People by Justice T. C. Davis

POLICE START DRIVE

Ottawa, Aug. 22—(CP)—National registration of Canada's human resources was over today, except in a few isolated cases, and National War services Department officials expressed belief that some 8,000,000 men and women, age 16 and more, had complied.

Mr. Justice T. C. Davis, Associate Deputy Minister of the Department, said that with the end of registration the first part of the task of discovering the nature and extent of Canada's human resources was complete. He paid tribute to the "whole-hearted" response the Canadian people had given to registration.

The response "is a very heartening spectacle to a nation which is putting every ounce of its effort in support of the war effort," he said. "There hasn't been the slightest difficulty anywhere with people refusing to register."

Although polls generally closed last night, Mr. Davis said in certain isolated cases polls will be kept open today. There had been only nine requests from all Canada for a one-day extension for completion of registration, and these came from three ridings, one on the west coast and two in eastern Canada. The names were not announced.

Police Drive to Start

With registration over, a drive will start at once all across Canada through police forces to check persons who have failed to register and thus have no registration certificates, and also to check whether persons who have registration cards, and purporting to have been legally issued, have actually registered.

Any person having a certificate in his possession who has not actually registered, is guilty of an offence, the penalty for which is a minimum term of three years. There is no option of a fine.

"The Department of National War Services is going to ask for all Provincial and Municipal Police Forces to aid in running down those who have failed to register and those in illegal possession of registration certificates," Mr. Davis said.

Mr. Davis also warned all persons who have been absent from Canada during registration or have been in an inaccessible place within Canada at the time, must register at the nearest post office within 30 days after they are within access of such post office.

Registration Cards Checked

Thousands of registrars throughout Canada checked registration cards of 8,000,000 citizens today following completion of a three-day stock taking of human resources which was without parallel in the history of the Dominion. Following a final collocation, the cards will be forwarded to Federal officials at Ottawa for filing by chief registrar.

Designed to unit Canadians even more closely in prosecution of the war, the registration of every person 16 years and over began Monday and ended on schedule last night except for nine isolated points which asked for more time and will stay open today to complete their work.

Some government depots throughout the country were crowded in the closing hours, while others reported that the final day was their lightest. Thousands of persons also registered at their places of employment before the start of the three-day drive.

In the Maritimes, registrars said that they believed virtually all men, women and children and over, had answered the questions and received their slips.

Oldest man in the Maritimes to register was 105-year-old Roderick McDonald of Campbellton, N.B. He walked to the depot and answered all questions readily. Not so fortunate was 104-year-old James Ingram of Brockville, Ont. He was visited at his home by a deputy registrar because he is ill.

100 per cent Register in Montreal

Montreal estimated that close to 100 per cent of its citizens were registered. A few polls in the district represented by Mayor Camillien Houde in the Provincial House, reported a low of 60 per cent. Mayor Houde is now interned because he urged people not to register.

Numerous last-minute rushes were reported at Toronto and brought in an extra corps of volunteers. The city's total registration was expected to be about 700,000.

Western Canada had registration all but completed. In one thickly-populated area a check was made and showed that but three people had not filled out cards.

Some deputy-registrars, as in Gananoque, Ontario, have requested that their cheques be returned to the government to aid in the purchase of war materials. In the Gananoque case, $144 will return to the treasury as each registrar receives $9 for the three-day services.

From scattered populations in remote wilderness to the centre of busy cities, more than 200,000 volunteers gave their services free to aid in the registrations.

GUARD METHODS OVER INTERNEES WILL BE CHANGED

Guards Will Walk Among Prisoners to More Closely Observe Their Actions

2 STILL AT LARGE

Ottawa, Aug. 22—(CP)—As a consequence of the escape of two prisoners from internment camps, the method of guarding Canada's 8,000 war prisoners and internees will be changed.

Rather than do sentry-go, leaving prisoners much to themselves in camp compounds, guards hereafter will walk among the prisoners thus more closely to observe their actions.

The announcement was included in the statement of Defence Minister Ralston at a press conference that he favored this "police work" method of dealing with prisoners as well as fifth columnists, as against having guards march up and down on a regular beat.

The two escaped prisoners, Lt. Werner Koche, 28, who tunnelled his way out of Northern Ontario internment camp, and and unidentified internee who escaped from a camp in a remote area in northwestern Ontario, were still at large last night.

Both prisoners had been interned in Britain and were brought to Canada for the duration of the war.

Satisfied Job Inside One

Col. Ralston said he was satisfied that Koche's escape was an inside job and that he was not aided by fifth columnists. There was no suggestion he had aid from any one in the camp.

The Minister Said: "I am not at all on the defensive but I do think having regard to the number in our camps, about 8,000 and the great pressure under which they were brought out and accommodated, too much importance should not be attached to these escapes. This does not mean that the most extreme vigilance will not be exercised."

The Minister said the unidentified prisoner, a civilian who could speak no English, is believed to be hiding in the wild country which surrounds the camp. He expressed confidence that this prisoner would soon be caught owing to the nature of the country in which he must be roaming.

Escapes Occur Monday

Col. Ralston said the escape of both prisoners occurred Monday. The civilian had answered roll call at 12.30 p.m. but was gone at 8.30 that night.

The escape of Koche is being investigated by Brig. Gen. De B. Panet, senior officer in charge of internment camps, who is convinced it was an inside job and there was no indication of outside help.

The Minister confirmed reports of the finding of a partially completed radio in the camp from which Koche escaped. He said if the radio had been completed it would have been capable of broadcasting within a radium of 15 miles.

12th Casualty List

NATIONAL REGISTRATION

During the first three days of this week Canadians gave a demonstration of what democracy means in time of a national emergency. Millions registered as was their duty and were pleased to place before those in authority information so that the nation might have a definiite record of the people and whatever service they can render their country.

The work was made as light as was possible with the co-operation of citizens of all walks of life so that the great registration or enrolment of the people might be carried out without hitch, inconvenience or delay. Those in charge of the registration have expressed themselves as greatly helped and greatly pleased with the assistance which has been rendered by this public service.

The registration will be an index of the many-sided life of a nation such as the people of Canada, from the girl and boy of sixteen to the oldest man and woman in the land. From sixteen onward it is a record of essential facts about the people.

This registration will prove of great benefit in making the war effort as effective as it possibly can be made.

RIGHT TO GUIDE COURSE OF HISTORY

A great thought is summed up in these words of Mr. Churchill, "The right to guide the course of history is the noblest prize of victory."

How would Hitler interpret that? one may ask. How would he guide the course of history if by some black magic he could beguile all the finer principle of life and justice and become victor, which cannot be? Tyranny and oppression and a dark age would come upon the world.

Not a nation on the globe would want to see Hitler and his nazis guiding the destiny of man. As the stars in their courses fought against Sisera, so will all that is worth while fight against Hitler and nazism, so that it will not be he who will guide the course of history.

In the British Premier's words there is a solemn appreciation of the responsibility of victory, and in the justice of the world, only men and nations who feel responsibility in victory can be victors.

NOT EVEN IF . . .

One of the phrases which stands out in the speech of Mr. Churchill in the British Commons was this: "Even if the Nazi legions stood triumphant on the Black Sea or indeed, upon the Caspian; even if Hitler was at the gates of India, it would profit him nothing if at the time the entire economic and scientific apparatus of German war power lay shattered and pulverized at home."—That shows the insurmountable problems which the German Fuehrer has to face.

LATE DR. SIMPSON, MINISTER OF EDUCATION

The province was bereaved by the death of the Hon. L. J. Simpson, Minister of Education for Ontario, which took place suddenly at Picton where he was visiting. He had taught in a village school at Mount Pleasant, then taken a course in medicine and then followed the practice of his profession in Sudbury with the Mond Nickel Company and a year later settled in Barrie. He was first elected to the Legislature in 1929 and had been a popular figure in public life. His career in the department of education was such as to leave its mark on the courses of study in fitting pupils and scholars for their years of maturity. He was an outstanding member of the Provincial Cabinet.

BRITAIN PROUD OF PRIME MINISTER

What a manly speech to the people of Britain and the British Empire through the British Commons was that of Prime Minister Churchill, presenting statements which cannot be refuted and forecasts built upon a solid foundation of facts! How different had sounded Hitler's rantings and ravings in the days before the war and since the war started as contrasted with the calm presentation of the facts of the war nearly a year after its beginning! Hitler has always tried to foment the worst passions in the hearts of the German people, he has tried to terrify the world, he has held up as ideal the example of a looting nation, the German Reich, which would steal from the poorest and richest nation on earth everything she could, the worst example mankind could be shown for Hitler's Reich offered no love, no kindness to the world.

Mr. Churchill spoke quietly and with confidence. For all Hitler's mad oratory and his raucous tongue and his frenzied whipping up of the greed and lust of the nazis, Germany has not crushed the world. She has loaded herself up with gigantic problems by conquest which she will never be able to solve for the ball she started rolling is growing too large for Hitler to handle.

Britain, led by Mr. Churchill, has passed successfully through the most severe shock and blow, the collapse of France, and yet she has become stronger until she is more powerful than she ever was in her history. With her there has been no appeal to the lowest passion of looting of nations and no appeal to the lust for power. Britain's appeal has been for justice.

In the quiet way of the British, Mr. Churchill showed on Tuesday that Britain has come from the rear in the present production of airplanes to surpass Germany in this regard. Nazi Germany degraded the times of peace with her preparations for war on the world. By guile and violence and threats the nazis aimed to conquer.

Mr. Churchill as he stood before the British Commons on Tuesday was the representative of not only a great nation and Empire but also one of the great figures of the world as he dealt in world issues even as are Britain's problems today. He faced them from a world standpoint not from the angle of self or narrow nationalism. He stood forth a world champion of right. On the other hand Adolf Hitler stands the exponent of a bitterly narrow nationalism, mad revolution, vengeance, selfishness and tyranny. Mr. Churchill offers the world liberty and truth, Hitler has nothing to offer but threats of blood, destruction and distortion of the truth. Mr. Churchill looks towards the future and sees victory. Hitler, if he were not a victim of nazi blindness and stupidity, would see disaster staring him in the face, a disaster which is to mean the end of all that he has stood for in his distorted, twisted and wrenched views of the relations of nations.

Humanity and civilization are more than wars. Hitler can think and act only in terms of wars. In that he is like Attila and other despots whose sway was brief. The mad decision of a Hitler plunged the world into war. A sense of world understanding represented in Mr. Churchill will bring it back to peace via victory.

Churchill has shown himself the leader of men, one of the greatest of world leaders, while the figure that represents Germany represents only the mad emotions and impulses of a mob leader, the violence of revolution and discontent of a fanatic.

Well might Britain be proud of her Prime Minister, the one man to whom the world looks today for guidance to victory and peace.

Is She Convinced?

A middle-aged German woman, says a Berlin despatch, has been sent to jail for three months because she presumed to question "the veracity of German High Command communiques". That will teach her—or will it?—to accept without question the lies put out by the German government, or at least to keep her doubts to herself.

Most Germans are docile, at least outwardly. They know the Gestapo will get them if they don't watch out. And, of course, they can read and hear no more than the Nazi lords want them to read and hear. They read, for instance, and if they are good Germans accept it as true, that in one of last week's air raids on England the Germans lost only 32 machines. If they knew that on that day 49 German airplanes were brought down on English soil alone, to be listed and counted, they might ask awkward questions, knowing as they must that the main losses occur over the Channel where the heaviest air battles have been fought. But Hitler and his man Goebbels do not think the German people should be trusted with too many facts. Feed them on lies, the bigger the better; send them to jail if they listen to a British broadcast; send them to jail if they dare to question the imaginative reports of the High Command—that's the way this Nazi Germany is made strong and united!

Germany has two blackouts. One is against the Royal Air Force, the other is against truth. The latter is the more effective of the two, but there must be many others than this woman now in jail who question the veracity of the official communiques.—Ottawa Journal.

The Super Spy

Spying, as we said recently, is no longer a matter of taking pictures of fortifications, hunting out secret treaties or stealing plans. The Super-Spy presents our Government with a new problem, just as he did in Norway, Denmark, Belgium, Luxembourg and France. They failed to meet the challenge with new remedies in time. It is up to us to be just as resourceful in protecting ourselves against attempts to undermine our democracy as its enemies are cunning in attack. Our first step should be to turn our backs on the notion that mere observation of foreign agents, by keeping our own agents informed of their plans and activities, is protection enough. We are no longer concerned simply with intercepting messages or catching the spy as he is about to leave the country with the secret formula of fiction. Our problem now is to scotch foreign agents who seek to corrupt our own people.—N.Y. Post.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

August 22nd, 1920.

Fire destroyed the office, sheds, planing mills and kiln owned by the Pearce Lumber Company, Limited, at Marmora.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Clarke who are leaving here shortly to reside in Peterboro, were presented with a handsome gift by the members of the John Street Church choir. Mr. and Mrs. Clarke have been valued members of the choir, the former being the choir leader, and much regret is felt at their departure from Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. James Lee of St. Catharines are visiting Mr. and Mrs. George Lee, Cedar Street.

Mr. James Wallbridge, barrister, and Mr. Joseph Wallbridge, Edmonton, are visiting their father, Mr. George Wallbridge, Bridge Street East.

30 YEARS AGO

August 22nd, 1910.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Boring of Clarksburg, West Virginia are visiting her mother, Mrs. M. J. Wilson, Everett Street.

Mrs. H. Mouck, Murney Street, is visiting Mrs. (Rev.) Alex Potts in Stirling.

The T.A.S. baseball team of this city went to Peterboro yesterday and played the T.A.S. team of that town, the result being a score of 6 to 0 in favor of Peterboro. The following composed the Belleville team: Champagne, Goyer, Ross, Hogan, Fahey, Minorgan, Whalen, Hopkins and St. Charles. Two Belleville players missed the train from here and "Cam" St. Charles had to fill one vacancy and he secured a Peterboro player named Minorgan to fill the other vacancy on the team.

Mrs. W. D. Fuller is the guest of Mrs. Morden Bird at Stanley Camp, Oak Hills.

Mr. G. H. Miller, who has been engaged as a clerk in Mr. J. W. Dunnett's drygoods store here for some time, will leave tomorrow for Rochester, N.Y. where he has acepted a position.

Mr. Miller of Chicago, is visiting his father-in-law, Mr. S. A. Moore.

Mr. A. G. Northrup and Mrs. Northrup of this city were guests at the large 1000 Islands' Park Hotel which was destroyed by fire yesterday morning early, and in which no lives were lost. Mr. Northrup, however, lost considerable clothing and valuables amounting to $150 in value. One of the cottages destroyed was occupied by Mr. Frank Lewis and Mr. Silas Lennox of this city.

The weather is very cool and like fall.

Algonquin Arrow Shop Of 1690 is Unearthed

Bear Mountain, N.Y., Aug. 22.—A group of archaeologists attempted today to solve the mystery of a lone Algonquin maker of arrowheads, who apparently set up shop about 250 years ago on the shore of Lake Cohasset in what is now Bear Mountain Park.

The evidence they had to work with was not great—a pile of 100 flint arrowheads in various stages of completion, some bits of charcoal, a few fire-blackened stones and about twenty pounds of flint. All these items were found in an undisturbed rock shelter, formed by two glacial boulders that had dropped in the shape of a V. The shelter is 8 feet high, 18 feet wide and 25 feet long.

The investigators determined that the Indian who had left the pile of arrowheads was an Algonquin because his workmanship was peculiar to that tribe. But no arrowheads exactly like these ever were found in this immediate vicinity, leading to the conclusion that the maker had come from elsewhere, probably from an area 100 miles or so to the northwest.

In the shelter was a stone pit in which the Algonquin had done his cooking as testified by the blackened stones and a pile of animal bones, most of them from deer. The bones were well preserved, having been covered with limestone dust through the years. There were no human bones.

From the position of the arrowheads, the investigators speculated that the Indian either had been interrupted in his work or had gone forth from the cave intending to return and had been prevented from doing so. That part of the mystery probably will never be solved.

Three feet below the level on which the find was made the archaeologists came across another store of arrowheads, dating back perhaps 400 years. The whole area is to be thoroughly searched.

Dr. Mary Butler of the University of Pennsylvania and Vassar College led the investigators. With her were five women graduate students from Vassar and seven men headed by Dr. Carlton Smith of Columbia. They had intended to work on a cave near Goshen, in which a 400-year-old green slate bannerstone, shaped like a butterfly, was unearthed two weeks ago. But the lair of the arrowhead maker seemed more promising.

The arrowheads and other finds will be taken to Vassar for detailed examination. Then they will become part of the exhibit of the Bear Mountain Trailside Museum, a branch of the American Museum of Natural History in New York. William H. Carr, director of Trailside, called the discovery the most valuable made in recent years in the southern Hudson Valley. The work is being financed by the Carnegie Foundation.

The shelter is only about fifty feet from a highway and several hundred motorists interrupted their Sunday drives to watch the excavators. A guard was placed at the site.—N. Y. Times.

"Hi, There, Pansy"

Canadian citizens are expressing their disapproval of the Dominion Government's policy of naming the new coastal defence ships and mine sweepers after native wild flowers.

They would like to see names more in keeping with the traditions of the navy, with a robust, virile flavor.

It is to be presumed the crews manning the ships would also prefer names which did not smack so strongly of rural tranquility.

Just try and imagine the feelings of a husky 200-pound seaman walking down the street with a moniker of "H.M.C.S. Pansy" or "H.M.C.S. Crocus" on his cap band. A greeting of "Hi, there, Pansy" from a civilian wishing to be friendly would probably start a free-for-all.—Calgary Albertan.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Rise in Temperature Burns up Valuable Tissues

Whenever there is a rise in temperature—fever—it would be well to remember that the body is burning up some of itself to maintain this fever. The fever shows that a battle is going on in the system and if the battle is not too severe, the temperature not too high, it is believed best not to reduce the temperature by drugs. Temperature reducing drugs are used more to "control" the temperature than to reduce it. When temperature gets at or near 105 degrees Fahrenheit, physicians use drugs or other measures to reduce it.

What we sometimes forget is that when the temperature rises and heat is created, some of the tissues of the body, some of the sugar stored in the liver, in muscles, or under the skin, some of the minerals and some of the vitamins are, of course burned, all of which the body needs to maintain its structure and keep the body processes working properly.

It is for this reason that when a fever or rise in temperature occurs, physicians advise their patients to remain in bed. The energy that is used when we are on our feet and moving around is three times that used when we are lying in bed. If, when we have a temperature which is using up our energy, we further use up our energy by being on our feet, the tissues including the valuable minerals and vitamins will be burned up just that much more rapidly.

We were taught years ago that when an illness occurred or an operation was to be performed, we should eat very little food so that the digestive system should not become tired. Today it is recognized that plenty of food, particularly fruits, vegetables and dairy products should be given in small quantities several times a day to maintain the tissues and enrich the blood, thus enabling it to put up a stronger fight against the illness.

The point then is that whenever a rise in temperature has occurred, for some days or even weeks afterwards it would be well to eat more of the foods containing minerals and vitamins to make up the loss due to the fever. It is for this reason also that physicians advise their patients after temperature returns to normal, to rest one day more in bed for each degree of temperature above normal present during the illness.

Style Shift to Names

Modern parents are turning away from Biblical names for their children. In Brooklyn, anyway. Such is the discovery of the chief librarian of the Brooklyn Public Library, following a survey of the juvenile registration files and a comparison of the names recently put down with those registered in the Brooklyn Directory six years ago.

Six years ago John was No. 1 name for boys, but now it is in second place, with Joseph as "tops." William, the good old stand-by has dropped from third to seventh slot among the first 10 favorites. On the other hand, Charles has climbed from sixth to fourth notch, and George from tenth to fifth. James alone has proved static, being still in eighth place. Here's the interesting comparison:

1934	1940
John	Joseph
Harry	John
William	Edward
Samuel	Charles
Joseph	George
Charles	Robert
Louis	William
James	James
Thomas	Anthony
George	Bernard

For girls, Mary remains at the top of the list, and Anna clings to the second rung. Helen has risen fifth to third since 1934, and Ruth has advanced from tenth to eighth. The comparison follows:

1934	1940
Mary	Mary
Anna	Anna
Rose	Helen
Margaret	Rose
Helen	Dorothy
Sarah	Shirley
Lillian	Florence
Catherine	Ruth
Elizabeth	Marie
Ruth	Margaret

—Stratford Beacon Herald.

The Lies Rebound

Germany's exaggerated claims of successful bombings in Great Britain are becoming a boomerang. Propaganda which makes impossible and easily-refuted claims is bound to rebound on the issuer and neutral public opinion will one day refuse to accept even those reports which sound plausible.

British claims of victories, however, are not exaggerated and neutral public opinion is rapidly learning this fact. If anything, the British err on the side of caution since they refuse to make claims of victory without the most careful checking and will not deal with probable victories at all. It is by far the wiser course, both for home consumption and for the information of those abroad. The British people would rise in their wrath if they thought their government was hiding the true facts from them. They are, too, prepared and capable of taking the good news with the bad.—Lindsay Post.

Lose Skilled Pilots

(Windsor Star)

The aerial battles over Britain are not yet ended. But, they have been decisive in showing that the defenders are waging a victorious combat in one particular aspect. The toll of German pilots, to say nothing of their machines, has been out of all proportion to that of British pilots lost.

As the Germans are losing more planes than the British, it naturally follows they are also losing more air crews. But, there is more to it than that. Some of the German aircraft are downed by anti-aircraft fire, a few by the balloon barrages, and some even by infantry fire. No British pilots lose their lives in the crashing of such Nazi planes.

Then, also, when an aircraft is mortally damaged, the pilot and crew, if unwounded, and bail out. Such British airmen as have to do that fall on their own ground, or off their own shores. A large number of them escape to fight again. Not so the Germans. Their days of fighting are ended. If they do not die by gunfire or crashes, they become prisoners.

While it is stated that many of the Nazi pilots over Britain are green, and more experienced men are used as bellweathers to lure the young ones on, it takes some considerable training even to make any kind of a pilot, experienced or inexperienced. The drain on Nazi airmen is a heavy one, much heavier than on the British pilots and crews and the longer the aerial blitzkrieg continues, the greater this effect on the Nazi air force.

The Lighter Side

Even such tragic events as the German air raids on England have their lighter side—the British people refuse to let Hitler get them down, and they welcome the opportunity to laugh.

They laugh at such things as this:

A man who prided himself on his garden went into his own private shelter when the air raid warning was sounded. Emerging a little later, he found a German pilot sitting at the back door—he had come down by parachute from a machine the British had destroyed. "How," said the Englishman, "did you get in?" "Over the back fence," said the German, who knew English. The owner, knowing his garden, feared the worst. He struck a match to investigate, found to his great wrath that the heavy-footed Hun had broken down some of his prize hollyhocks. And then an air-raid warden happened along, and the householder was fined ten shillings for showing a light!

A falling German airplane on Sunday struck and destroyed a farm-house in England, and the farmer was duly interviewed. All he had saved, he said, was his wife, his mother-in-law and a bottle of champagne. Safe outside, he opened the bottle and they all had a drink.

Frightful, tragic things occur in these raids. But they serve to display as well the shining courage of the common people of Britain and their invincible humor.—Ottawa Journal.

Food For Golf

(Windsor Star)

Golfers, especially poor players, who get tired and begin to pile up a high score between the ninth and fifteenth holes in a foursome or between the eleventh and the fifteenth in a twosome, are advised to eat more fat foods for lunch and take some sugar or candy near the seventh or ninth hole.

The advice comes from Dr. Paul Michael of Oakland, Cal., in a report to the Journal of the American Medical Association, says Science Service.

The idea comes from previous findings that marathon runners who are sustained by sugar come through a race with less fatigue.

Comparatively few persons run in marathons or other races, but more than 2,000,000 golfers play on 3,000 courses in the United States, so Dr. Michael decided to investigate the possibilities of helping this large group of sportsmen and women through diet studies.

Blood tests showed that following usual luncheons and playing under ordinary conditions the sugar in the golfers' blood dropped below normal between the ninth and fifteenth holes in a foursome and between the eleventh and fifteenth holes in a twosome.

This corresponds to the periods when the golfers made the greatest number of poor shots, felt most tired and had the highest scores.

The poor golfers had even less sugar in their blood in many cases "because of the fact that they expended more energy in playing the game and showed greater signs of exhaustion." Getting upset over their poor shots at this period made the condition worse. The more composed and accomplished players did not have as low a level of sugar in their blood.

When the golfers ate more fat foods for lunch and took candy or sugar at the seventh or ninth hole they did not feel so tired or nervous and, on the whole, had better scores.

The Nazi Ethics

The Nazis are nothing if not inconsistent. They admit that their creed is based on force and lies. In "Mein Kampf," Hitler himself says so over and over again. And in private conversation he has repeatedly expressed himself in the same terms. "Smaller weaker nations have no right to exist. They must be ruthlessly suppressed." "The bigger the lie, the more chance it has of succeeding." "I am prepared to commit perjury half a dozen times a day." "I am willing to say anything. I am prepared to guarantee all frontiers and make non-aggression pacts and friendly alliances with anybody. These things mean nothing." "One is either a German or a Christian. You cannot be both." "Yes, we are barbarians. Brutality is respected." "Intelligence and loyalty are never very closely associated." Hundreds of other examples of Hitler's real sentiments in a similar inhuman strain could be quoted. And these "dictates are faithfully echoed and carried out by his associates. Yet, in his public utterances Hitler has the effrontery to commend himself and his cause, with calm confidence, to "the protection of Almighty God." — Johannesburg Times.

JUST IN CASE

London (CP) — Hundreds of buildings have been taken over in the London area for use as food and rest shelters by people who might be left homeless by air raids.

'London's Still London'

Writing to a friend in Ottawa, J. R. Owen, O.B.E., for five years Ministry Representative, British Ministry of Pensions, located in Ottawa, who returned to England prior to the outbreak of the war and who now heads a staff of 800 in the Department of British Pensions in the Midlands area, makes this reference to conditions in London and the spirit of the English people at the moment:

"My daughter has a job at the Ministry of Information and is right in London. She wouldn't leave it for the world. Neither would I if I could help it. London is still London, despite air-raid shelters, the black-out, machine-gun posts in Parliament Square, and barbed wire in rolls and on trestles, ready for the Hun, in Trafalgar Square and elsewhere. There's nothing but confidence all around and no evidence of wind up. As one old Cockney said after the French debacle: "Well, well, that's that. Now we're on our own, and there's nobody left to let us down." "Well, that's that for this time. Don't think we are starving, or feeling sorry for ourselves. Most of us have the tails well up."

5.—Describe the presidential flag.

6.—The baseball season is drawing into its crucial stage. What is the fastest speed recorded for a regularly pitched ball?

7.—Who succeeded Jim Jeffries as world's heavyweight boxing champion?

Answers

1.—Industrial diamonds are invaluable in armament manufacture. With a harness many times superior to steel, it is used in drill-tips and gun-barrel turning.

2.—Louis XVI. The people of France would have no part of the potato when Louis offered them gratis; yet when the king fenced off the fields and labeled them crown property, within a short period illicit crops were growing throughout France.

3.—Red hair is coarser than hair of other colors.

4.—How to make air currents flow evenly over the wings of planes. Once this is accomplished a plane will need only one-fifth of the power now required to drive it 250 m.p.h.

5.—The president's seal appears in bronze upon a blue background, with a large white star in each corner.

6.—Atlee Donald, a member of the New York Yankees, threw a ball at a speed of 94.7 miles an hour, or 139 feet per second. The figure was checked on a speed meter.

7.—Tommy Burns.

BRITISH ARTIST SEES AIRMAN AS EMPIRE'S SYMBOL

Canadian Flier Has Place of Honor in Portrait Painter's Studio — Some Well Known Works

By GLADYS ARNOLD
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

London, Aug. 22 (CP)—Flt. Lt. Robert Niven, D.F.C., a Canadian whose parents live in Calgary, Alta., was the subject for one of the most recent pictures painted by England's celebrated portrait artist, Frank S. Beresford, R.A.

"I am only sorry I cannot show it to you," said the artist, as I examined other portraits in his St. John's Wood studio. "You see I gave it to his young wife as a wedding present."

In a Toronto gallery are two more of his pictures—life-size portraits of King George and Queen Elizabeth, copies of which hang in many Canadian homes. The pictures were painted just after the Coronation in 1937.

"The sweetness and simplicity of the Queen cannot be exaggerated," said the artist. "I shall never forget her kindness and patience during the sittings."

One corner of the large, canvas-filled studio was taken up by a picture which has been the comment of London since its appearance not long ago in the United Artists' Exhibition at the Suffolk Galleries. It is "The Morning Ride" showing two little girls on ponies cantering on either side of a smiling horseman. Even without Windsor Castle in the background visitors would have easily recognized King George and the little princesses.

Proud of Canada

"I'm a traditionalist," the artist explained. "I can't help having the old-fashioned idea that an artist should know how to draw and the public should be allowed an even chance of recognizing the subject he intended portraying.

"That's one of the reasons I painted the Canadian boy. Somehow to me he symbolizes the magnificent effort of the Empire—and I'm an Empire man to the core. I'm so proud of the wonderful things Canada is doing in this war. What a proof that the ties of love are stronger than the power of force."

Probably the finest picture painted by Mr. Beresford was his Academy award, "The Princes' Vigil" painted in 1936. The four sons of the late King George V share the vigil in Westminster Hall during the Lying-in-State of His Majesty. The simple dignity of the scene was indescribably moving to the artist who put his whole soul into the picture which was purchased by Queen Mary.

FRENCH LEGION DEMANDS FIGHT

Hardy Scrappers, Some of Many Campaigns, Would Whack Hitler in England

Somewhere in Southern England, Aug. 22 (CP)—Restless for action again after years of service throughout the world, many hundreds of the French Foreign Legion, the toughest fighters in Europe, have taken up quarters here as part of the army of all Free Frenchmen under General de Gaulle.

As representative of typical French fighting spirit these men were chosen to be the first soldiers of General de Gaulle's army to be put publicly on parade since Petain capitulated.

All the legionnaires who paraded here recently helped in the storming of Narvik and were the first troops to enter that port in the Norwegian campaign. Later some of them returned to France and fought in Belgium when Hitler invaded the Low Countries. When France collapsed they escaped to Britain to continue the struggle.

One tall, wiry legionnaire, speaking between mouthsful of an English-made currant bun in a canteen told a reporter that the month he spent in England was the longest period he experienced without fighting. This man, who could have stepped from the pages of a P.C. Wren book, had 17 years' service with the legion. He fought in Morocco, Algiers, China, Norway and France. At Narvik his section captured a huge swastika flag which now hangs on the commanding officer's desk.

Germans Out

The ranks are smaller than when they arrived. Some of the Frenchmen in the legions asked to be repatriated while men of German nationality have not been accepted for service under General de Gaulle.

In addition to Frenchmen in the rnaks there are Poles, Swiss, Greeks, Spaniards, Russians, Armenians and three or four men with British blood.

One of the men with British blood in his veins received the Croix de Guerre with palm for bravery in rescuing his superior officer as he lay seriously wounded outside the French lines in Norway. Another man, an Anglo-Norwegian, fought on the Republican side in the Spanish Civil War.

The men have two grouses—insufficient French wine and lack of a French newspaper.

TOOK DOLPHIN AS PERISCOPE OF SUBMARINE

Watchful Canadian on Troopship More Alert Than Discriminating — Lighter Side of Journey Overseas

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 22 (CP)—Dots and dashes from the diary of a correspondent with a Second Canadian Division troop convoy:—

The thrill of sailing night with the long parade of transports moving slowly from an East Coast port amid cheers and singing by the soldiers—they climbed high in the riggings.... they sat in lifeboats and waved at the handful of persons on the docks.... there were a few naval officers, a couple of women and a number of longshoremen.... the public was unaware of the departure.

No excitement until the last night out when escorting warships accounted for at least one lurking submarine....the next night, in port, an air-raid warning sounded ....it was after "lights out" and most of the men were below decks ......they had to stay there...... beams from powerful searchlights pierced the clear night sky but no shots were heard either from the ships' or shore batteries.

Moonlit nights when officers slept on deck in their bedrolls.... the fad was started by an officer who couldn't sleep because companions were playing cards in his cabin....one sleeper was awakened rudely when a deck guard making his rounds tumbled over him at 4.30 a.m..... he used his cabin for the rest of the voyage......another retired after a sailor washing the decks accidentally turned the hose on him....

Submarine Watch

The submarine guard who sounded a warning whistle when he mistook the fin of a dolphin for a periscope...... another private on submarine guard who forgot himself and turned his back to the ship's rail for several minutes....

The roar of the guns on mighty warships as they dropped shells in each other's wake during target practice....shells fell several hundred yards behind the ships......a shell in the wash considered a "direct" hit....the firing warships were about five miles apart.

The accuracy of Canadians manning Lewis machine-guns set up on upper decks as anti-aircraft defence....they popped six-inch balloons in mid-air with uncanny regularity....the machine-gun nest in one of the biggest transports...... another on the roof of a gymnasium in which officers tossed the medicine ball and rode mechanical horses besides boxes of ammunition ....the "flying box cars" of the Coastal Command which maintained an aerial vigil over the convoy near the end of the crossing....

In a lighter mood....the officer who walked into a reception by officers of another unit and found he had not been invited......threw his own party and invited fellow officers from his unit.

WEDDINGS

RANSON—DONALDSON

A very quiet wedding was solemnized at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church manse on Wednesday, August 21, when Pheobe Arissa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Donaldson, 182 Foster Ave., Belleville, became the bride of Charles Harry, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Ranson, Belleville. Rev. W. J. Walker performed the ceremony.

The bride was smartly attired in an imported figured silk gown in shades of navy and chartreuse green with navy accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses.

Mrs. Walter Harden attended the bride wearing a gown of chartreuse green crepe with black accessories and wearing a corsage of Sunset roses.

Mr. Walter Harden attended the groom.

After the ceremony the bridal party motored to Firhurst Manse, Trenton.

Mr. and Mrs. Ranson will reside at 297 John Street, Belleville, Ontario.

TAYLOR—GRAY

Smith's Falls, Aug. 22—The manse of Westminster Presbyterian Church here was Saturday afternoon the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding, when Rev. J. McB. Miller united in marriage Anna Elizabeth Gray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Gray, Smith's Falls, and Curzon Walter Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Taylor, Smith's Falls. The young couple were supported by Miss Ialeen Gray, nurse-in-training, Ottawa Civic Hospital, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid, and Charles Hart, Smith's Falls, as best man.

The bride was gowned in a dress of navy blue lace, with navy accessories and corsage of red roses and navy felt hat. Miss Gray was gowned in a rose crepe dress, with white accessories and matching hat and corsage bouquet of gladioli and forget-me-nots.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor left on a wedding trip to Belleville and other Ontario cities, and on their return will take up their residence in Smith's Falls.

BRYANT—ELLIOTT

The marriage took place quietly at the home of the officiating minister, yesterday afternoon at four o'clock, of Lenore Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Elliott and Clarence Wright Bryant, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bryant. The ceremony was performed by Rev. L. S. Wight, 183 William St.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a navy ensemble with corsage of Sweetheart roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Willa Elliott, wearing blue and white with matching accessories. Mr. Albert Elliott, brother of the bride was groomsman.

A reception was held at Dickens' Tea Room, after which Mr. and Mrs. Bryant left on a wedding trip and upon their return will reside in Belleville.

What to do When Invited if You Would be Invited Again

1.—Answer your hostess' invitation at once. Don't leave her in doubt. She may wish to make other plans if you can't come.

2.—Arrive when you are expected to arrive.

3.—Be as well-groomed as you possibly can be when you arrive. The first impression is important. When you (or a maid) open your traveling-bags, be proud of the condition of your clothes and travelling accessories. They may need pressing, but that's all they should need.

4.—Bring sufficient clothes. Try not to bring too many. And try especially hard to bring the right clothes. (We hope your hostess will, in her invitation, give you helpful hints about this.)

5.—Bring all necessary equipment for any sport in which you plan to indulge. The "borrowing guest" is a pest.

6.—Be on time for meals and for engagements with your hostess or with other guests.

7.—Be amiable, be amiable, be amiable! Be eagerly ready to fall in with youd hostess' plans, even if you don't particularly enjoy some of the plans that she has made. If your hostess asks you what you'd like to do, help her out by making some suggestions.

8.—Be responsive. The success of a visit depends almost as much on the guest as on the hostess. It's the guest's responsibility to do his or her best to be entertaining, to make things easy for the hostess, to be pleasant to other guests.

9.—Be alert to find out the customary routine of the family, their convenience about serving breakfast (whether they prefer to send a tray to a guest's room or have breakfast served in the dining-room), the hours of meals, the usual hour for going to bed. Don't hesitate to suggest when you wish to go to bed . . . your hosts will probably expect you to do this especially on the evening of your arrival.

10.—Don't expert to be "entertained" every minute of your visit. Naturally your hostess will want some time to herself.

11.—Don't have "food notions".

12.—Be "neat and tidy". Keep your bedroom in order. Keep your bath-room or your part of the family bathroom in perfect order too.

13.—Respect your hostess' property. Don't use the family car without permission. Don't leave your cigarettes about carelessly, to burn spots on the tables, or chair-arms, holes in the linen, and don't leave them smoldering in the ash-trays. Don't place a damp glass on the furniture, to leave a ring. Don't wipe cleansing cream on the towels . . . tissues are made for this. Don't monopolize the telephone, either with outgoing or incoming calls. And if you have to make a long-distance call indeed insist on paying the charges.

14.—Be well-groomed, immaculate. And, no matter how simply dressed, be well and appropriately dressed. Don't loll around in negligees or pajamas. . . .you may think you look "cute", but your hostess wil not be proud of his doubtless inappropriate informality.

15.—Leave when you are supposed to leave. Even if your hostes urges you to extend wour visit, you'l probably be wise not to.

16.—Take all your belongings with you when you leave. It's a bore and a chore to a hostess to have to send to careless guests the belongings they have left behind.

17.—Write an appreciative and spirited bread-and-butter letter, and write it promptly.

Re-Opens House Built in 1817

Cobourg, Aug. 22.— Barnum House, one of the finest houses of the Georgian type in North America was officially opened yesterday by Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews. The 123-year-old structure, six miles east of here, was restored to its original state by the Architectural Conservancy of Ontario.

"It is fortunate that this fine old house has passed into the hands of the Architectural Conservancy", said Lieutenant-Governor Matthews "otherwise we might see a big electric sign outside".

Other organization which aided in the reconstruction of Barnum House were the Canadian Handicraft Guild, the Society of Interior Decorators of Ontario and the Canadian Society of Landscape Architects. Officials of these various organizations said they intended making it a "mecca of architectural interest" as well as a centre where Canadian handicraft may be seen at their best.

Architectural Conservancy officials said they intended working on other old homes which they consider worth preserving. Two years ago they restored St. Andrew's Church at Niagara-on-the-Lake.

Barnum House was completed by Colonel Barnum in 1817. Hundreds of visitors from various parts of the Province attended the restoration ceremonies.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Love Works More Miracles Than Beauty Parlors

Being in love is Nature's great miracle worker. It has a way of beautifying one's appearance to a greater degree than all the tricks of the beauty parlor.

Who hasn't noticed the transformation of the homely girl into a radiant creature by the simple act of falling in love? Her eyes shine her mouth develops a Cupid's bow, her skin is flower-like —and all because she has fallen in love.

Take Case No. 1 Sally, 29, had been so busy ever since she graduated from high school and business college, where she was turned out an expert stenographer, that she hardly ever stopped to think about her appearance. And Sally "had the makings" of a mighty good-looking girl, well-groomed, dainty. She was one of those persons who wouldn't have been happy unless she was tubbed, scrubbed, brushed and well-dressed. But she was no patron of the beauty parlor felt she hadn't time.

Then one day Sally was jolted off her peaceful trolley-wire. The jolt occurred when one of her older sister's children called her "Auntie". Gosh, she'd never thought of herself as an Auntie before. But with thirty staring her in the face she felt like an Auntie all of a heap. Where was she drifting? What was she doing with her life? Was her destiny never going to be anything more interesting than being an Auntie to her sister's children?

With that same deliberation with which she had always bought her symphony season tickets the first day they were put on sale, Sally began to look about her. Her acquaintances numbered two or three "Willin' Barkiss" to whom she had been pretty snippy in the past.

With the favored one her talk became more than "yea, yea", and "nay, nay" next time she saw him. Actually she seemed interested in what he said. She accepted invitations for motor rides, movies, shore dinners, and finally found herself in love. No Auntie, she.

The effect of love on Sally was miraculous. She became lovely to look at. Everyone in the big skyscraper office building noticed it, even the elevator man, the charwoman and the giant who presided at the revolving doors of her apartment house.

Curiously enough, Sally didn't speed up her trips to the beauty parlor. Apparently it wasn't necessary. She didn't add any more curlicues to her hair, nor a brighter hue to her lipstick or fingernails. (She'd never gone in for slaughter-house nails) Sally had found her man and love had discovered Sally, and there, presto chango! was a lovely woman. And all because the term "Auntie" had scared her into being human, natural and feeling she hadn't any more time to lose.

Salads, Cocktails Of Ginger Ale

GINGER ALE is one of the faithful Summer standbys. Many of us however, don't make enough use of its sparkling qualities and pleasing flavor.

One of the best drinks ever can be made by combining sweet apricot nectar with tangy ginger ale. Add 2 12 oz. cans of apricot nectar to 1-4 cup lemon juice and a cup of orange juice. Pour over ice and add a quart of ginger ale just before serving. Makes 3 quarts. Decorate each serving with a maraschino cherry, and await compliments.

Cool Fizzes

Pineapple Fizz will delight the hostess who wants to serve that elusive "something different." Place in a shaker 1 1-2 cups unsweetened pineapple juice, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, one egg white, 3 drops Worcestershire sauce and crushed ice, leaving sufficient room for a thorough shaking. Add 2 12-oz. bottles chilled pale dry ginger ale and serve in tall thin glasses. If summer hostesses (and guests) are weary of facing a glass of lemonade, even if it is healthful and refreshing, try titivating up this familiar drink. To make six servings, boil together 2 cups sugar and 3 cups water for ten minutes. Cool. Add juice of 3 lemons and 2 limes and 2 cups ginger ale.

Frozen Fruit Cocktail is a swell refresher. Add 1-4 cup powdered sugar to 1-2 cup crushed pineapple, 2 cups orange pulp, 3-4 cup grapefruit pulp, and stir gently until sugar is dissolved. Add one cup ginger ale. Set into freezing tray of automatic refrigerator. Ginger Ale Fruit Salad is made this way: Soak 2 tablespoons gelatine in 1-4 cup cold water for five minutes and dissolve in 1-2 cup boiling water. Add 1-4 cup lemon juice, 2 tablespoons sugar and one cup ginger ale. Cut in halves one cup grapes and remove seeds. Slice one banana. Peel and chop one apple. Separate 2 oranges into sections and remove membranes. When ginger ale mixture begins to thicken, fold in fruit and 1-4 cup chopped nut meats. Turn into molds and chill. Serve on crisp lettuce with fruit salad dressing.

GOING TO THE "EXHIBITION"?

You will be wanting a new Fall hat if you are going to the "Exhibition." Woodley's carries one of the largest selections of smart hats to be found in any small city in Ontario. Come in and see them.

FASHION FLASHES

TREAT YOURSELF to a new dinner dress. A beauty is in two shades of rust red, the bodice lighter than the skirt. Blistered gold nail heads stud the belt and hip pockets of this crepe frock.

SOON ENOUGH fur hats will be sitting atop the prettiest heads. A recently shown model is of sheared beaver made to ride high on the head in front and deep down in back and at the sides. On the sides are clipped gilt gypsy earrings.

PLANS ARE ADVANCED for a gala autumn with plenty of important social events. For smart afternoons one designer is showing a deep navy blue velveteen suit, the flared skirt plain, the jacket with all-over shirring in straight lines and elaborately shirred peplum pockets. Shown with an enormous silver fox muff.

EVERY GAL wants a fur jacket. Easy and pretty is a new model in stonemarten made with slanting revers that roll into capacious pockets.

A GOOD WAY to keep from too much smoking is to carry one of those new small cigarette cases that hold no more than four cigarettes. We saw one that was fitted into a bag of black anelope with a gilt metal frame. The case matched the bag.

Guide Camp at Consecon Lake Is Outstanding Success

Camp Hillcrest at Consecon Lake for the past three weeks has reechoed with laughter and song as the voices of Belleville Girl Guides were heard at work and at play. Over one hundred Guides from this city had the privilege of attending camp this year and have returned to the city, tanned and healthy, their eyes shining with the remembered joys of camp life.

Companies Two and Three, including 67 Guides, opened first camp for ten days, returning on August 7th. The Camp officers, who were the same for the next period, were Camp Commandant, Mary Roberts; Quartermasters, Dorothy Douglas and Jean Dickens; Camp Nurse, Dorothy Osborne; Swimming Instructor, Nan Gardner; Cook, Mrs. D. Shore; Senior officers, Mary and Margaret Aman, Mickey Forster, Junior Officers, Dorothy and Helen Douglas, Isabel Sharpe, Joyce Watson, Rita Webster, Bernice Boyle and Pat Holland.

Those who were successful in winning swimmers' badges during their stay at camp were Mary Lyall, Barbara Bews, Norma Correll, Dorothy Douglas, Helen Douglas, Gwen McBrien, Margaret Ann McGuire and Elinor Finkle.

Miss Maida Woodley was judged the senior best camper, and Barbara Cook the junior best camper, while the winning patrol included Norma Correll, J. Hamilton, M. Woodley, A. Stewart, B. Bews, M. Lyall, M. McGuire, and J. Price.

On August 7th, Companies One and Seven had their turn at camp for ten days, under the same leaders. The same interesting program was carried out with splendid progress in Girl Guide work and in the Red Cross projects of the members. The health of the camp was fine, and the weather ideal, every meal for three weeks being eaten outdoors a record for the camp.

Thirty-nine Guides attended camp for the second ten-day period. The best camper was Norma Coleman and the winning patrol was that of Joyce Coleman, Rita Coleman, Ruth Peddar, Effie Way and Dorothy Lucas.

Donations were made to the camp by Mrs. C. A. Cameron, Mrs. Leo B. Riggs, Mickey Forster, Joyce Watson, Mrs. T. Holland. The Guides are also grateful to the Houston Company for the use of a truck to take the girls' luggage to camp.

The following poem, composed at camp by Dorothy Little, aged 14, a member of Company One:

COURAGE

Our boys have gone to the east afar
To fight beneath the flaming star
And win for their country so renowned
A glorious victory and a crown,
That is welcomed here and everywhere—
Where people know that over there
Our boys are fighting with might and main
And trying so hard that something to gain.

Fight, boys, fight, with all your might,
The war cannot be long.
So fight, boys, fight, while yet there's light
To keep our Empire strong.

And we'll be proud as you'll be proud
When all is over and peace again
Is ringing throughout a merry crowd
Who know that wrong has found no gain
And in Our Sovereign's struggling life
We'll know that we've won through so much strife,
A victory that will give us fame
And guarantee our British name.

GO AWAY into the country and take along a comfy tweed coat. A new beauty is of fine tweed in forest green with bias and straight line plaids in brown, grape purple and tan.

THE NEW WHOLE WHEAT CEREAL

● If you would have plenty of zip and energy and keep in the pink of health, you must have your vitamins. So start the day with a bowl of Cubs.

Cubs are whole wheat—the bran, the minerals, the protein, and the precious wheat germ with its supply of Vitamin B1. Cubs are delicious too. Mellow malt blends its goodness with the nut-like flavor of the wheat. Cubs come to your table crisp, crunchy, toasted a golden brown. Get a package of Cubs from your grocer today.

Wheat germ is recognized as a useful source of Vitamin B1. A total lack of this vitamin in the diet causes polyneuritis. Cubs are made from the whole wheat in which the wheat germ is retained in its entirety.

Dr. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Maternity Instruction

I am an advocate of definite courses of instruction in high schools and corresponding schools, that will prepare girls for future motherhood. I think the courses should be made compulsory. Such instruction, properly organized and conducted, would be by far the most important study in the school girl's curriculum.

The need for such courses has grown in recent years. A generation ago, when families were larger with six or more children the rule, a great many girl got practical courses in child care and the mechanics of maternity in their own homes. In fact, if the oldest child happened to be a girl, she often did more actual handling of the younger babies than the mother.

But these days, families of one or two or three are the rule, and one result is that our girls are growing up with no practical knowledge of babies and how to look after them. I know of girls having babies before they knew how to "change" a baby let alone bathe and generally care for one.

The trend in modern schools has been toward fitting studies more closely to the needs and lives of young people. They are taught trades, they are taught economics, politics and sociology, and their social senses are cultivated, but unfortunatey most girls aren't taught motherhood. Modern mothers can't get along very well equipped with just love and fond hopes. They need practical training and advanced information. The best time for them to acquire these, I think, is at the high school age.

What is really needed is for us to put the whole business of motherhood on a definite, professional basis. It is a profession. It is the finest, noblest and most vital of the professions. Nearly every girl must look forward to being a mother. Obviously we can make her a better and happier mother if we give her the opportunity to have training in the profession.

I know, if I am still around when the Quintuplets are old enough for it, they will certainly get an exact training in looking after babies. What is more natural than to expect that they will become wives and mothers.

The Stars Say

A DAY of stirring events with much of importance in both business and private life, judging by the interesting planetary operations. There is excellent promise of promotion honors, tokens of preferment and esteem from those in high places. Also this recognition may come from some really constructive and practical efforts in launching new enterprises, betraying skill, ingenuity and originality. Initiative and aggressiveness are bound to attract supporting capital for development. There is need of precaution in dealing with large organizations or groups. Friendship of elders and females is desirable.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a year of great progress with substantial evidence of esteem and preferment from those in places of authority. It would be well to cultivate these for the purpose of promoting very practical and meritorious propositions, which will bear the test of sound performance. New ideas and innovations are assured welcome support from employers, superiors and working capital, but be a bit wary with unproved co-operators who may be imbued with self-interest rather than honest collaboration. Friendship in both business and sentimentality plays an important role during the year.

A child born on this day will be enterprising, original, skillful and have much ingenuity in untried channels. This attracting the solid support of those in prestige and financial standing. Progress and happiness are the rewards of industry and ability.

STORY OF MALTA TOLD KIWANIANS

History of Fascinating Island Now Held by Britain Recounted by Neil Bisonnette

The congratulations of the members of the Kiwanis Club were extended to general chairman, Jack Trudeau, chairman of games, Frank Domenico, and other officials in the efficient handling of the successful Carnival at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club on Tuesday at the Country Club. The chairmen in turn thanked the members for their loyal co-operation in making the event so successful and especially thanked the Municipal Band and the Kiwanis ladies for their co-operation. Frank Domenico in his address personally thanked Ed Willing for the use of his truck and the time the member gave to the Carnival. President Bill Anderson, who presided, added his word of praise and congratulated the whole club on the wonderful effort. The happiness of the members was fully realized when Ross Stiver, chairman of finance, stated that nearly $1,000 net would be raised with which the war work projects of the club could be carried to a successful conclusion.

Delightful Piano Solo

In the absence of Leo B. Riggs, enjoying a well-earned holiday, Jimmy Carradi presided at the piano and delighted with a piano solo as well as accompanying the community singing which was in charge of Fred Rawson. Reg. Anderson collected the fines. A number of the members paid fines for their part of the Carnival and a real enjoyable luncheon was held. Jack McVeigh, who introduced the speaker, was greeted with a peculiar piece of music but the speaker told the assembly he was not as good a dancer as they thought him to be. Neil Bisonnette, a member of the Lions' Club of Stratford, and who vacations in this district each year, and incidentally, who assisted with great vigor in the Carnival, gave a most interesting talk on Malta, which he stated, "next to England was the most interesting place on earth." The speaker stated that we should not be alarmed about this fight or fearful of the result for Britain at other periods of her history had faced the same situation and came out victorious. Mr. Bisonnette explained the crusades, which were organized to capture sacred ground from the Islams because it was contrary to what they believed. He traced the founding of the Order of the Temple in 1118 through to the Order of St. John, which captured Cyprus in 1287 and held it till 1310.

Eight Different Languages

"The Island of Rhodes was held from 1310 to 1522 and it was wonderful to note that eight different languages were spoken in this order and yet it held together for so many years," said the speaker. Practically all the time these Knights were fighting they were fighting a losing battle but yet they continued for many years. At Dunkirk there is no use denying the British took a terrible licking but they prevented a world disaster by that licking and they have these same men to fight again to give Hitler the licking that is surely coming to him. In 1530 Malta was acquired by the Knights of Malta and held until 1798, but in 1814 the British captured the island and it has remained British since that time. Mr. Bisonnette stated there was a normal population of 265,000 and that in the underground places there was a wheat supply sufficient to last for three years. The island also provides safe anchorage for the navy, especially the submarines and the Air arm fleet. In conclusion the speaker asked the members to search the library and read about this fascinating island which has had such a varied history.

The thanks of the club was expressed by Frank Pollwell.

TWEED

Deputy Registrars Of Tweed Village Donate Their Services

Tweed — The National Registration of all persons of sixteen years and older residing in Tweed, was begun on Monday, August 19th. Mr. C. D. Wiggins, associate registrar, accompanied by Mr. Geo. H. Stokes, M.P., for Hastings South, resident in Belleville, met the deputy registrars and the voluntary assistant deputy-registrars at the Council Chambers on Friday night to explain their duties and any matters with which they were not familiar.

Registration in Tweed is carried on in the three polling subdivisions. Poll No. 1 in the Township Hall with Mr. S. H. Connor and Miss Bessie Gordon as deputy registrars; Poll No. 2, in the Council Chambers, deputy registrars, Mr. T. E. Moffat and Miss Mavis McGuire; Poll No. 3, The Veterans' Hall, deputy registrars, Mr. T. J. Calnan and Mrs. Wilfred LeSage.

The deputy registrars are performing their duties without cost to the country. A provision has been made by statute to pay each deputy registrar an allowance of $3.00 per day; this means a saving of $54.00 in the village of Tweed. These men and women are to be congratulated on their patriotic gesture. Mr. George H. Stokes, is particularly proud of Tweed, which is his home town, for this expression of its loyalty to Canada at this time.

No difficulty has been experienced in securing the help of voluntary assistant deputy registrars to register the eight or nine hundred residents of Tweed. No provision by law has been made for any allowance for these assistants but none of them has asked for payment of services, being only too glad to serve their country in this manner.

These volunteers are: Miss Marjorie Frost, Miss Myrtle Foster, Miss A. M. Rayburn, Miss Ruth Foster, Mr. W. A. Stewart, Miss Amy Newton, Mrs. C. R. Porritt, Mr. Bob Watson, Mrs. W. A. Beatty, Mrs. H. Wagar, Mr. D. H. Morrison, Mr. F. W. Clark, Mr. Lee Morrison, Mr. Frank Kinlin, Mr. L. Marriott, Miss Marion Varty, Mrs. F. Kinlin, Mr. Wm. ALL CANADA GOES TO WAR..

BIGGEST WAR-TIME EXHIBITION IN HISTORY!

● Everyone wants to know what's being done to help the war effort. The 1940 Canadian National Exhibition will show you! You will see the armoured vehicles that are being turned out by thousands for the troops of the Empire. The Royal Canadian Air Force Manning Depot will remain at its quarters in the Park. There will also be an absorbing R.C.A.F. Ground Show — and the colourful ceremonial of the "changing of the guard".

The Red Cross will have a huge exhibit, all phases of industry will demonstrate their war work. The Pageant this year, "Cradle of Empire", will be of brilliant historic significance. Agriculture and livestock, spurred by war-time needs, will have a more vital show than ever. There will be dozens of other features—sports, dancing to the world's leading dance bands, music from the famous Goldman Band playing nightly from the outdoor band shell.

Come and see how Canada is working, fighting, and playing harder than ever before!

PIRATES COMING

Cincinnati Reds and Brooklyn Dodgers Both Lose to Giants and Cards

By BILL WHITE
Associated Press Sports Writer

Rated strictly off the dramatic happenings unfolded in the eight major league parks yesterday, this baseball roundup could very well be turned over to the department that handles the theatre reviews.

Take the National League, for example. In three of the four games a generally unsung hero came through with a crashing blow to win the game in its dying stages for his alma mammy. Or take the junior circuit, where top dramatic achievements were turned in by two winning pitchers, and where a villain of deepest dye was uncovered.

Piece by piece, the National League's most exciting moments were these:

In Cincinnati, the New York Giants, still functioning well with that patch-work lineup had Mickey Witek to thank for their 5-4 victory over the league leading Bees. In the 11th inning with Capt. Mel Ott on base, Witek drove out a sharp single to win the game.

In Chicago, Charley Frey, by trade a righthanded pitcher, stepped up as a pinch hitter and slapped out a 10th inning homerum with a mate on base to give the Phillies a 7-5 win over Chicago Cubs.

Doubles Home Winning Run

At Pittsburgh Vince Dimaggio doubled in the eighth inning to send teammate Arky Vaughan home from first base and that gave Pittsburgh Pirates a 3-2 victory over Boston Bees.

There was plenty of action — if not much drama—in the 7-5 victory St. Louis Cards managed over Brooklyn Dodgers. The Cards bunched five of their six hits with three walks and a stolen base to score six times in the fifth inning.

Dutch Leonard headed the American League's parade of leading men with a smartly-pitched eight-hitter and snapped Washington Senators losing streak at five straight. His victims were St. Louis Browns and the score was 3-0.

Bill Beckman did a nice pitching job for the Athletics, limiting the White Sox to five hits and blanking them 3-0.

The "villain"—as all Detroit will tell you—was Al Benton, fourth Tiger hurler to face New York Yankees. In the ninth with one out and three on Benton walked Bill Dickey on four pitched balls that gave the Yanks a 6-5 win.

Boston's tattered Red Sox lost to the league leading Cleveland Indians 4-2.

FAVORED TEAMS IN TENNIS WIN

Pair of Youngsters Eliminate Wilmer Allison and Johnny Van Ryn

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Having removed the deadwood in easy fashion, the favored teams in the United States doubles tennis tournament were called upon to use lusty strokes to clear their paths in today's quarter-final matches at Longwood.

During the two days' play only one of the ranking teams in the men's and women's divisions have been extended. Third-seeded Jack Kramer, of Montabello, Cal., and Ted Schroeder, of Los Angeles, both youngsters, had to do grown men's work yesterday to get by a pair of two-time winners, Wilmer Allison and Johnny Van Ryn of Austin Tex. The California kids gained a 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 9-7 victory.

Kramer and Schroeder moved into the quarter-finals against Charles Mattmann of Los Angeles, and Bobby Harman, Berkeley, Cal. The other third-rounders resulted in the pairings of top-seeded Frank Parker, Beverly Hills, and Don McNeill, Oklahoma City, against such promising youngsters as Bill Reedy and Ken Bartlet, Los Angeles; second-seeded Bobby Riggs, Chicago, and Welby Van Horn, Los Angeles, against Russell Robbitt, Atlanta, and Frank Guernsey, Orlando, Fla.

Six seeded teams, including the two on the foreign list, gained the round of eight in the women's division. Defending champions Alice Marble and Sarah Palfrey paced yesterday's victors and will face Emily Lincoln, Brookline, and Catherine Malcolm, Los Angeles.

SHIPPED WHEAT TO SPAIN

London, Aug. 22 (CP)—A spokesman of the Economic War Committee Wednesday declared that Britain has supplied wheat to Spain to help her in her difficulties, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported.

"Britain, between March and July, shipped at least 382,000 tons of wheat to Spain," the official continued, "and the wheat situation there should now be more satisfactory."

WILL PROVIDE PASSAGE

London, Aug. 21—(CP)—Richard Butler, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, told the House of Commons today that Britain would provide passage to England for British subjects in the United States between the ages of 18 and 55 with certain specific qualifications.

He added that Britons in key commercial and financial positions should not be encouraged to leave the United States.

NEWARK BEARS LOSE TWIN BILL TO THE ROYALS

GIANTS WIN AGAIN

Jersey City Sweeps Three-Game Series With Toronto Leafs

(By The Associated Press)

Rochester Red Wings once again are in undisputed possession of first place in the International League but they owe an assist to Montreal Royals.

Wings have been battling for the lead with Newark's Bears the past five days, separated by only one percentage point. Last night, the "break" came, and Rochester made the most of it, beating Baltimore, 2-0, while Bears were losing a doubleheader to Montreal.

Old Mike Ryba played the hero's role against Baltimore, winning his 19th game of the year to send Wings 1 1-2 games in front.

Sparkling pitching performances by Montreal's Bobby Porter and Newt Kimball not only tripped Newark, but boosted Royals into a fifth place tie with Syracuse, when the Chiefs lost to Buffalo.

Porter won a 2-1 duel from Hank Borowy and John Johnson in the seventh-inning twilight affair, holding the Bears to four safeties to chalk up his eighth triumph. Kimball yielded only three hits to take the nightcap 3-1.

Buffalo Bisons took the hom run route in beating Syracuse, 12-8 for the odd game of three.

Jersey City Giants swept their three-game series with Toronto's Maple Leafs, handing the Canadians their seventh straight defeat 8-2. Hugh East went the distance for Jersey, scattering seven hits to register his sixth win.

DEADLY PUNCHING ZALE IS BEATEN

Billy Soose Has Now Defeated Two Claimants to Middleweight Title

(By Charles Dunkley Associated Press Sports Writer)

Chicago, Aug. 22 (AP)—Billy Soose, the shifty and sharp boxing master from Farrell, Pa., has created an unprecedented situation in middleweight history.

This 23-year-old former Penn State College boxer holds the distinction of having conquered both claimants to the title within a month, yet he does not possess the most important thing—the title itself.

Last night on Chicago's west side, Soose surprisingly defeated the deadly punching Tony Zale, Gary, Ind., recognized by the National Boxing Association as middleweight champion, in 10 rounds.

A month ago Soose whipped Ken Overlin, recognized as champion by the States of New York and California. Both bouts were fought over the middleweight limit of 160 pounds, the significant bar which prevented the championship from passing into the eastern youngster's hands. Soose scalled 162 and Zale 161.

The verdict of the two judges and referee Joe McNamara was unaniously in favor of Soose over the Gary puncher. The verdict met with the approval of 7,000 fans.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer.)

New York, Aug. 22—(AP)—Pennant talk is strictly taboo on Cleveland Indians' bench. . . .Mike Jacobs promises all five champions under contract to him—Joe Louis, Billy Conn, Ken Overlin, Henry Armstrong and Lew Jenkins—will fight in the Garden next winter, but what has the main stem guessing is who he's going to feed to Louis.

Selected shorts—

The Indians are so hot, three extra newspaper scribes are making the eastern swing. . . . Young Al Vanderbilt flew down from Saratoga to meet the famous stallion Bahram, which he and a group of friends imported from abroad for $220,000. . . . Jersey Jones, the New York Rangers' former demon Press agent, is arranging a barnstorming tour for his young heavy. Charley Ketchuk, who in a year has jumped from nothing to where he'll soon begin annoying the heavyweight big shots.

What they say:

Ed Barrow: Stan Bordagary has settled down at Kansas City and don't be surprised if you see him on the Yanks next season. . . . Frankie Frisch: The Dodgers will never catch the Reds with Pee Wee Reese gone. . . . Jim Farley: I'll talk about the Yanks very soon—and very frankly. . . Connie Mack: I picked the Yanks to crack this year and now I think they may bounce back next year. . . . Col. E. R. Bradley: Despite his three losses, Bimelech is still the greatest horse I ever owned.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was almost late for supper but not quite, and I quick sat down at my place trying to look naturel, pop saying, For Peet sake, dont tell me that's a bump.

Meaning on the top of my forehead, and I said, O, that dont hurt much, pop, not as much as it did at first, anyways

Why how gassly, it's as big as an egg, ma said, and I said, Not a very big egg, ma, good night I dont hardly feel it any more.

Well, nobody can say we haven't got a Spartan in the family, pop said. If I had a bump like that I wouldn't be taking it so lightly, believe me, he said, and ma said, I should say you wouldn't, you'd be more trouble than a whole hospittle ward. How ever did you do it, Benny, are you sure it doesn't hurt? she said.

O, I can stand it, what's a bump once in a while, I said, and ma said, Now it's all very well and highly to your credit not to make a fuss, but a thing like that might be very serious, how did you get it? and pop said, Your mother and I admire your spirit, but if only for our sakes please try to be a little careful in the future. What the dooce happened to you? he said.

Yes, for land sakes you haven't even told us about it yet, ma said, and I said, Something bumped into me.

Yee gods, pop said, and ma said. Did you have an encounter with an automobile, tell me immeeditly, she said, and I said, No mam, ma, G wizzickers. Puds Simkins and I started to pretend to have a fight just with our heads like the Okkipu tribe in the book Paul Peppy In Dorkest Africa, and Puds's head must be harder than mine, I said.

The result being they both lost all their simpathy and claimed I deserved to have a bump.

No Bren Gun Change Planned in Canada

Ottawa, Aug. 22.—(CP)—Officials of the Munitions and Supply Department today said that no changes in design of the Bren gun made in Canada are contemplated here.

British Supply Minister Herbert Morrison announced at London yesterday that production of the Bren gun in Britain would soon be speeded 20 per cent by changes in design.

Thirty Hamiltonians Already Lose Cards

Hamilton, Aug. 22 —(CP— Hamilton citizens made rather a doubtful start upon their task of carrying about their registration cards today. At an early hour, W. W. Cooper, registrar for Hamilton West, said he had been advised by 30 persons that they had already lost their registration cards.

In addition, Mr. Cooper received a few calls from persons who said they had forgotten to register. One employer notified the registrar that he had discharged a member of his staff who had neglected to comply with the law. This was done in accordance with government regulations.

Canadian Ground Crews Account For 3 Nazi Bombers in Recent Raids

Canadians Playing Prominent Role in Beating Back Assault of Goering's Air Raiders

3 CANADIANS KILLED

By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Aug. 22—(CP Cable)—Three German bombers with a combined complement of 12 men fell prey in a recent attack to the unerring marksmanship of Canadian ground crews who are playing a prominent role in beating back the assault of Goering's air raiders.

Caught in a withering barrage of fire from the ground, the Germans jettisoned their cargo in an effort to escape. Several of the bombs dropped at random over a wide area failed to explode but two that crashed on a square and nearby roadway killed three Canadians.

The victims were:

Lt. Leslie Wheeler, Moncton, N. B.; Sgt. F. J. E. Jennings, Verdun, Que., and Cpl. F. C. Shaw, Toronto.

(These casualties were announced at Ottawa Aug. 18. The date of the German attack was not given but it was understood it took place during last week's mass aerial onslaught.)

Deaths Speedily Avenged

The death of the three men was speedily avenged; within a few minutes three raiders came toppling to earth, their wreckage strewn over the countryside. Two remaining machines of the squadron limped away badly disabled

Lieut. Wheeler lost his life in attempting to rescue a British soldier who was hit in the leg by a splinter. As Lieut. Wheeler was running towards the prostrate soldier a high-explosive bomb burst nearby, killing the Canadian officer instantly.

Jennings and Shaw were struck down by fragments of a bomb which landed in a square. Sgt. F. T. McAuley, Toronto, suffered superficial neck wounds from the same blast. Two others, Pte. E. T. Johnstone and Pte. N. W. Morrit, both of Montreal, sought shelter behind a sand-bagged parapet 10 yards away and escaped unscathed.

Obliged to Change Plans

Lieut. A. A. Burne, Hamilton, who had been preparing to fulfill an appointment when the raiders appeared, was obliged to change his plans when he discovered his office had been wrecked by an explosion.

He sent the following note to the party he had arranged to meet: "I am afraid my office is a bit upset and I may be a trifle late for the appointment."

Later he established himself in temporary quarters and hung up a sign reading "business as usual."

Sgt. W. H. Dunn and Sgt. H. Harper, both of London, Ont., paid high tribute to the marksmanship and morale of their machine-gun crews. They told of seeing tracer bullets drilling through the enemy planes but neither sought positive credit for bagging the Huns.

"There were altogether too many firing at them," Dunn said. "The main thing is we got them and I really think all should share in the credit."

NEWFOUNDLAND TREATS ROYALLY CANADIAN FORCES

Men Billeted in Homes at Weekends and Feted With Movies and Dances at Grand Falls

COMRADESHIP SHOWN

St. John's Nfld., Aug. 22 (CP Cable)—Canadian air and land forces guarding vital spots in Newfoundland are being treated royally by Newfoundlanders, who have welcomed them to this colony with a sense of brotherhood.

Since the island's defences were integrated with those of Canada, its people have been striving to outdo each other in extending hospitality to the blue and khaki-clad guardians from the neighboring Dominion. This capital hasn't had the opportunity of receiving them personally yet, but the people of the smaller centres near their bases have taken them to their hearts.

The forces guarding the great $16,000,000 Newfoundland airport, 125 miles from here, are the special protegees of the residents of Grand Falls, a pulpmill town on the railroad west of the airport.

Feting Canadians

No sooner had the first contingent arrived on their Newfoundland job than a deputation of Grand Falls citizens arrived to issue an invitation to 100 soldiers to visit the town as its guests every weekend. As a result every Saturday 100 men leave camp for Grand Falls by train.

There they are billeted in homes—adopted would be a better word—that range from those of company executives to the humblest workers. They are entertained, taken to the movies and to the Grand dance Saturday night and returned to their duties Sunday after the friendliest kind of interlude.

Many of the men of Newfoundland themselves have expressed a wish to join Canadian units and help them defend their country as well as provide a defence outpost for Canada and the rest of North America. This question was understood to have been taken up yesterday at a conference here of Canadian and Newfoundland officials.

JOINT DEFENCE PLANS ARE NOW IN FINAL STAGES

President Roosevelt Expects to Make Public Names of U.S. Members of Board

Washington, Aug. 22—(AP)—New hemisphere defence plans for the organization of a joint Canada-United States Defence Board and the acquisition of military bases in British possessions were reported all but complete today.

President Roosevelt, returning to the capital from New York where he reached a broad defence agreement with Prime Minister Mackenzie King, said he hoped to make public today the names of the United States members of the strategy board and set them to work immediately on plans for improving defence.

At the capital, howevre, Senator R. M. LaFollett, (Prog.-Wisconsin) demanded that the public be informed of current negotiations with the British Empire. His demand followed unofficial reports from London that Britain might seek a military alliance with the United States.

LaFollett's View

LaFollett told reports that he recognized the necessity of secrecy in negotiations such as those in progress with Canada, but he thought that any plans for military commitments should be revealed.

The negotiations with Great Britain for naval and air bases were reported in their final stage after a meeting of military, legal and state department officials here yesterday to consider procedure.

The sites, were mainly, in southern waters which would give added protection to the Panama Canal and neighboring Latin American countries.

The defence board will be assigned the job of working out details of joint American and Canadian plans to insure against any attack from Europe along the northern stretches of the continent.

Military Alliance Aim Denied

London, Aug. 22—(CP)—A foreign office spokesman emphatically denied today that Britain is seeking a military alliance with the United States.

He laughed off the question of a reporter who asked if Britain would refuse an alliance if it were offered.

The Associated Press reported usually well-informed quarters yesterday said Britain is seeking an alliance.

AMNESIA VICTIM FOUND IN COACH

Girl Under Observation in Hospital Leaves Institution for Whole Day

Cochrane, Ont., Aug. 22 (CP)—Police found the pretty 18-year-old amnesia victim, who has provided a major mystery here during the last week and who disappeared late yesterday from the hospital where she was under observation, in a car in the railway yards here today.

The girl, who cannot remember her surname and believes her first name is Vivien, had made a number of inquiries about her clothes and late yesterday unobserved by the hospital staff, she made her way to the hospital laundry and took a shirt and coat.

Donning the articles over her hospital bed gown and wearing a pair of bedroom slippers she left the hospital during a heavy donwpour of rain.

A general search was started and after several hours the girl was found in a railway coach.

Canadian Praises British Spitfires

Toronto, Aug. 22.—(CP)—The speed and manoeuvrability of British Spitfire fighting planes are remembered with gratitude by Private Robert Gray of Toronto.

The 25-year old member of the Canadian Active Service Corps, who arrived here yesterday with a group of soldiers invalided home, was enthusiastic in his praise of Spitfires.

"They handle like a child's toy," he said. "And dart like a swallow. I've seen a Messerschmitt poised above a Spitfire and the next instant the situation is reversed, with the British plane atop the Jerry. The Germans can't beat 'em—and they know it."

Bob's occasion for gratitude came during the short-lived Canadian expedition to France. Shortly after they landed on French soil they were attacked by Nazi planes.

"There were 30 to 50 of them—we didn't bother to count," he said. "We weren't long there before five British Spitfires appeared from nowhere and in a minute there was a fierce dogfight. Three German planes went down in flames and the whole bunch of Jerrys turned and high-tailed for home, some of them dropping their bombs to lighten the planes as they went.

"That was one occasion I blessed the Spitfires".

High-Powered Shortwave Station Is Considered

Ottawa, Aug. 22—(CP) — Construction of a high powered Canadian shortwave broadcasting station, for carrying Canadian news and views to the far corners of the earth, is under consideration by the government, it was learned today.

Such a station has been periodically urged in the last two or three years in the House of Commons Radio Committee and elsewhere as a means of promoting Canadian trade and good will. Most recently it was urged by the Senate War Cooperation Committee during the recent session and again this week by Robert England, director of Overseas Educational Services for the Canadian Legion War Services Committee.

The question has been reported on by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporations on several occasions, always with a recommendation of the desirability of such a station. Canada is the only important nation lacking such facilities at present.

The obstacle has been the money. Since such a station would be primarily a service to people outside of Canada, its financing out of funds obtained from radio licence sales in Canada has been considered somewhat objectionable. It is felt the funds should be provided by a special appropriation from general government funds, just as the recent tourist advertising campaign in United States publications was financed.

Polish Prince, Wife Allowed in U. S.

New York, Aug. 22 (AP)—Prince Wladyslaw Sephiena of Poland, and his wife, Princess Mathylda, the former Matilda Price of Philadelphia today were admitted to the United States as visitors for six months after a hearing before a special board of inquiry at Ellis Island.

Upon their arrival yesterday aboard the Yankee Clipper, immigration authorities classed them as "doubtful visitors." They are travelling on a Polish passport.

SIGHTLESS ENJOY PICNIC AT TWEED

Hastings County Advisory Board Hosts to a Happy Throng

Tweed Community Park on the banks of Lake Stoco was the scene of a happy gathering Wednesday afternoon, when the Hastings County Advisory Board for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind were hosts at an outing to approximately 80 sightless and near sightless persons, twenty-four of whom were registered blind.

Refreshments served during the course of a very enjoyable afternoon were provided by the ladies of the Tweed United Church Women's Auxiliary. A fine program of sports was provided by Dr. W. A. Paul, Tweed physician, who had charge of arrangements, and who acted as master-of-ceremonies. Winners of the various contests were—kicking the football, Mr. Brennan; throwing the baseball, Mrs. Woods; guessing contest, ladies, Mrs. Clarke, Miss Brown; men, Mr. Smith and Mr. Randall.

Reeve Charles Kerr of Tweed, extended an official welcome to the guests, while Harvey Lynes, of the headquarters of the Institute, Toronto, and Mr. Wm. Milton, Field Secretary, expressed the appreciation of the Institute to the people of Hastings County for their thoughtfulness and generosity. The Rev. D. T. McClintock, minister of Tabernacle United Church, Belleville, reminded the people that such outings as these were made possible only through their generosity. He also announced that the annual Tag Day would be held on September 21.

DEFENCE MINISTER ON WAY HOME

Canadian Officials Leave Newfoundland for Halifax After Inspection

St. John's Nfld., Aug. 22 —(CP-Cable)— Associate Defence Minister Power and his group of high Canadian military, naval and air officials took off for Canada by plane today. They were in Newfoundland on an inspection tour of Canadian fighting forces and also to discuss defence plans with authorities here.

The Canadian Air Minister left Halifax three days ago for his visit to this island. Here, he inspected the great seaplane base at Botwood and Newfoundland airport and conferred with Governor Sir Humphrey Walwayn and other authorities.

On his return to Halifax Mr. Power will conduct a tour of inspection of centres in the newly-established eastern command, which includes the Canadian Atlantic seaboard and Newfoundland. The party is expected to reach Halifax early this afternoon.

BRITISH POLICY ON INTERNMENTS

Number of Modifications in Policy Announced by Sir John Anderson

London, Aug. 22 (C.P. Cable)—Sir John Anderson, Minister of Home Security, told the House of Commons today that "in principle" the government accepted the view that the policy of releasing aliens "who ought not to have been interned at all" should be applicable to internees sent to Canada and Australia as well as to those in Great Britain.

He said it might be difficult to extend to the Dominions the process of review of cases of category "B"—friendly—aliens.

The minister was replying to Col. J. C. Wedgwood, Independent, during a debate on internment policy. Col. Wedgwood contended there was no prospect of releasing friendly aliens sent to Canada and Australia.

A number of modifications in internment policy was announced by Sir John, including lowering of the upper age limit from 70 to 65 and releasing scientists, research workers and persons of academic distinction.

Agencies will be set up to review cases of interned aliens known to be anti-Nazi or anti-Fascist. There has been frequent criticism of the internment of such aliens.

WAR DEMANDS BOOST EXPORTS

British Empire is Outlet for 37.2 Per Cent of All U.S. Goods Sent Abroad

Washingon, Aug. 22—(AP)—War demands for airplanes, steel, machinery and other vital military supplies boosted United States exports 35 per cent. to a $3,273,000,000 total in the first ten months of the second Great War.

The Commerce Department reported today that shipments from Sept. 1, 1939 to June 30, 1940, went in larger quantities to the major parts of the British Empire, Latin America and the Far East. Gains in these territories overbalanced lost markets in the countries occupied by Germany and blockaded by Great Britain.

American imports increased 19 per cent. over the 1939 figures for the same period, and totalled $2,097,000,000.

While war products were sold in greater volume, foreign customers cut down on tobacco, fruit, automobiles and other non-essentials. Cotton exports picked up early in the war only to slump again.

British Purchases Higher

Although France, Italy, Scandinavia and the Mediterranean countries were open to American goods for substantial parts of the 10-month period, the gain in British purchasing made the empire the outlet for 37.2 per cent. of all the goods sent abroad. This proportion was growing steadily, moreover and in June reached 46.2 per cent.

For the ten months, other European countries took 36.5 per cent. of the exports, Latin America 20.2 per cent. and the Far East 9 per cent. The remainder was scattered over Africa, the South Seas and the Near East.

The period saw the export of $183,100,000 worth of airplanes, mostly all to Britain and France, or three times the amount of the corresponding months last year. While shipments of firearms and ammunition did not get under way seriously until the end of the period, they totalled $26,600,000 or more than five times as much as last year.

Below Freezing Weather Experienced In Western Canada

Winnipeg, Aug. 22 (CP)—Temperatures dropped as much as eight degrees below freezing in parts of the prairie wheat belt last night but damage to crops was not expected to be great as harvesting is well advanced in the areas affected.

At Kamsack, Sask., 225 miles northwest of Saskatoon, and at Swan River, Man., 233 miles northeast of Winnipeg, the official reading during the night was 24. Other low readings were reported in parts of central Saskatchewan around Saskatoon. The night's low at Winnipeg was 35.

British Communique

London, Aug. 21—(CP)— The Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security issued the following communique today:

"Enemy attacks during the night were very few and on a small scale.

"High explosive bombs were dropped at two points in southeast England, where some damage was caused to gas and water mains in a town on the coast and where a railway line further inland was temporarily obstructed.

"In southeast Scotland, a bomb fell on a hillside, slightly wounding one soldier. So far as is known at present, this was the only casualty during the night."

Agriculture Theme Of Interesting W. I. Meeting at Madoc

Madoc — The August meeting of the local Women's Institute was held at the summer home of Mrs. Roy Tayler, Moira Lake. After the business was completed the meeting was under the Agricultural Department of the government program and the Roll Call, "My Agricultural Problem" was well answered, the main grievances being garden weeds, blights, etc. The War Work Committee decided to hold a lawn tea and sale of Home Cooking, proceeds to buy yarn.

The "Young Maids" of Cottage Cove delighted the audience with group singing and Barbara and Patsy Nicol presented two dance numbers which were very much appreciated. A reading "Agricultural Problems" was read by Miss Mary Bronson, giving some hints on vegetable gardening.

Mrs. Fred Rutherford of Bonarlaw, District President, was the guest speaker and addressed the meeting on agricultural lines, dealing with high standards of produce, grading, marketing and health pertaining to agriculture. A vote of thanks was extended Mrs. Rutherford for her educational and instructive address. The meeting closed with the National Anthem and afternoon tea was served by the hostess and her assistants.

Mrs. M. Caverly and little Miss Doris Caverly motored to Parry Sound to visit Mrs. Swartman.

Mrs. Robert McGhee is visiting her daughter at Parry Sound.

Miss Edna Salisbury left on Sunday for Toronto where she has accepted a position.

Mr. W. H. Brooks of Belleville, spent Sunday in Madoc.

No-Interest Loan Reaches $2,422,436

Ottawa, Aug. 22—(CP)—Subscriptions to Canada's non-interest bearing war loan totalled $2,422,436 on August 15, Finance Minister Ilsley announced today.

Subscriptions have been received from 169 individuals, firms and organizations.

Largest subscriptions received were from Bralorne Mines, Lt., Vancouver, B.C., $1,000,000 and Molson's Brewery, Lt., Montreal, $500,000.

Among largest subscriptions from individuals are those of J. W. McConnell of Montreal, $250,000 and Olaf Hanson, M.P., Skeena, B.C., $40,000.

Mr. Hanson was one of the first to suggest to the minister the inauguration of the non-interest bearing loan.

The minister's announcement today mentioned a campaign put on in the small fishing village of Black's Harbor, N.B. The campaign was sponsored by the Fundy fishermen. Twelve hundred inhabitants contributed $51,000.

Standard Shoe Only Ordered in France By Vichy Regime

Vichy, France, ug. 22.—(AP) — The first supply of the French "National" Shoe will go on sale at the end of this month.

It will be a standard shoe, manufactured in eight styles, and will be the only one permitted on the market. The purpose is to cut down manufacturing costs, reduce retail prices and speed up production.

A huge supply of shoes and civilian clothes is needed urgently for soldiers being demobilized by the millions.

CORN-BORER CAUSES ANXIETY IN E. ONTARIO

Ottawa, Aug. 22.—(CP)— Infestation of the European corn-borer in crops of Eastern Ontario has caused anxiety among farmers, Dr. J. M. Swaine of the Entomological branch, Department of Agriculture, said last night.

Dr. Swaine added the damage has been wide-spread in corn growing sections and steps will have to be taken to cope with the menace.

CHINESE GUERRILLA FORCES REPULSED

Peiping, China, Aug. 22 (AP) — Concerted attacks by Chinese guerrilla forces, believed to belong to the Communist eight route army, were repulsed Tuesday night by Japanese garrisons along north China's main railways, a Japanese army spokesman said today.

The attacks, on the Peiping-Hankow and Alentain-Pukow trunk Hankow and Tientain-Pukow trunk into Shanghai province, were "remarkably well organized," the spokesman said.

Impossible Say Nazis to Assure Safe Conduct for Children

Authoritative German Spokesmen Claim Nazi Mines Cannot be Moved

BLOCKADE WATER

Berlin, Aug. 22—(AP)—Authoritative German spokesmen declared today it was impossible for the Reich to give assurance of safe conduct to any United States ships which might try to remove children from Britain.

Supporting a similar statement issued earlier by D.N.B., the German news and propaganda agency, they said Germany understands the humanitarian impulse underlying United States proposals to amend the neutrality law so British children might be brought across the Atlantic.

But these spokesmen pointed out mines form an essential part of the German attempt to blockade Britain, and mines which have been laid cannot be moved. Therefore, they argued, the children conceivably would be exposed to greater danger on an ocean crossing than if they were kept at home.

(In Washington, Chairman Bloom (Dem.-New York) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee said he felt the D.N.B. statement could not be "taken officially because we haven't asked them (the Germans) for anything yet. When they find out what we are asking the reply might be different. In asking 'safe conduct' for these vessels we will merely request their guarantee that their warships and planes will not molest these craft.")

Call it 'Fool's Luck'

As to the United States army transport American Legion, which sailed through part of the blockade zone on her way from Petsamo, Finland, to New York, Nazi spokesmen expressed relief at reports indicating the ship probably was out of the danger zone. But far from regarding this as any potential argument for the possibility of other United States vessels getting through the blockade waters safely, they asserted the American Legion fortunately had "fool's luck."

(The American Legion actually followed a course recommended by the British Admiralty, sailing close to shore over the northern tip of Scotland so as to avoid a British minefield extending from the Orkney Islands to Iceland.)

SIR OLIVER LODGE DIES AT AGE 89

Famous Scientist and Spiritualist Passes Away at Wiltshire Home

London, Aug. 22 (CP)—Sir Oliver Lodge, 89, scientist and spiritualist, died at his home in Wiltshire, in southwest England today.

Sir Oliver had given friends to understand he was unafraid of death.

"Death is but a new adventure," he wrote once. "In the life beyond we go up or down according to how we made use of our opportunities in life."

Greek Chrome Ore Issue With 'Axis'

Athens, Aug 22 (AP)—Greece's $1,000,000 annual production of chrome ore, important in the manufacture of gun barrels and other war goods, is reported to be a new issue in her relations with the axis powers. A trade delegation left today for Berlin.

Neutral observers predicted that Germany would try to divert Greece's yearly output of more than 80,000 tons of the ore from Britain to Germany.

Although Britain herself was overstocked with chrome ore, at the start of the war she bought the entire Greek supply as part of the economic blockade against the Reich.

Trotsky's Death Dictated by Stalin Says Alex Kerensky

New York, Aug. 22—(AP)—Alexander Kerensky, Russian leader whose revolution overthrew the Czarist government, said at a press conference today that Leon Trotsky, "most merciless of all Bolshevist Terrorists, died by the same means he sponsored."

He agreed, however, that Trotsky's death was "dictated by Stalin."

"He was the victim of the system of secret police instituted by him and Lenin against all opponents," Kerensky continued, describing Trotsky as an "admirer of the terroristic system of government."

CANOE SAVES FAMILY

Williamstown, N.C., Aug. 22 (AP)—As floodwaters of the Roanoke River rose to their cabin, a Negro couple and their four children climbed into a flimsy canoe and floated about in the house until Coast Guardsmen arrived.

"If it hadn't been for that little canoe, we all would have drowned," the mother said.

The 7,403-ton Booth Line steamer usually trades between Europe and South America. This was her first voyage to the United States since the outbreak of war.

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 22 —(AP)— The Royal Air Force announced today it had scored direct hits on Italian naval oil tanks and a jetty at Tobruk, Italian Libya.

It issued the following bulletin:

"On the night of Aug. 19-20, bombing aircraft of the R.A.F. raided Tobruk harbor, Libya. Naval oil tanks and a foreshore jetty were the main objectives, and these suffered direct hits. Other bombers attacked with success landing grounds at Tobruk and El Aden."

Alexandria, Egypt, Aug. 22 —(AP) —Alexandria underwent a 35-minute air raid alarm today. Low flying planes were seen in the distance and explosions were heard, but details were lacking.

On the English Northeast Coast, Aug. 22 —(CP)— Fishermen reported that three German planes attacked a British convoy off the northeast coast today, dropping several bombs but without apparent success. Spitfire fighter planes pursued the attackers out to sea.

FIVE-YEAR-OLD SAVES LIVESTOCK

Rushes Into Burning Barn and Releases Three Small Calves

Meaford, Ont., Aug. 22.—(CP)—Five-year-old Douglas Robertson, who in the past was terrified by fire, entered a burning barn on his father's farm west of here yesterday and saved livestock which had been trapped. His father, Merle Robertson, aided by a volunteer bucket brigade, managed to save the barn. Most of the hay crop was destroyed.

The child's fear of fire arose from the fact he had seen livestock burned to death in a barn blaze three weeks ago. However, when yesterday's fire broke out, he raced toward the livestock stalls, removed two calves and was pulling a third one out when volunteers came on the scene and took over the job.

Rumania Arranging For a Solution of Territorial Argument

Turnu-Severin, Rumania, Aug. 22—(AP)—Fresh indications that Rumania is arranging for some solution of her territorial argument with Hungary appeared today.

The fact that negotiators are expected back here Friday or Saturday with fresh instructions from their governments encouraged reports a compromise was in the making.

King Carol's appointment yesterday of two Bishops of the disputed Province of Transylvania to his crown council was followed by reports he may take Transylvanian leaders into his council of Ministers.

These steps were interpreted as an attempt to have the disputed area well represented in the governmental bodies which must approve any agreement that is reached.

One of the biggest points of discussion at Craiova with Bulgaria on cession of Southern Dobruja will be handed over before or after the harvest. Each side has an eye on the crops.

ONLY ONE CASE IN COUNTY COURT

Only one case featured the regular weekly session of the Hastings County Court on Thursday held before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C. This case, an assault charge was laid over for another week.

Motorcycle Patrol Officers Jack Hatch, Harry Caldwell and J. Morden laid informations against several city and county motorists for minor infractions of the Highway Traffic Act. The majority of those charged settled their cases out of court after paying the conventional fines.

Goering's 'Plan' Printed on Paper From Potato Vines

Berlin, Aug. 22 (AP)—Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering's fortnightly magazine Vierjahresplan (four year plan) appears currently on Ersatz paper made from potato vines. Germans hail the development as a noteworthy industrial achievement and predict potato vine cellulose soon will be used for manufacture of yarns and a great variety of fabrics.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Aug. 22—(CP) — An increase of 15 cents over its last reporting price on Tuesday was shown today for sales on liveweight hogs in Brantford. Brantford, Chatham, Hull, Peterborough and Stratford dressedweights held steady.

Liveweight: Brantford $8.50, Chatham $8.35.

Dressedweight: Brantford $11.50 Chatham $11.40, Hull $11.30, Stratford $11.50 plus transportation, Peterborough $11.40 plus transportation.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 22—(AP)—The stock market recovery continued on a selective basis today as further improvement was noted in war and business sentiment.

The list tilted upward fractions to more than a point at the start in fairly fast dealings. There were subsequent slow-downs and extreeme gains were shaded here and there near the fourth hour.

Canadian stocks such as International Nickel, Canadian Pacific, Dome Mines and McIntyre Porcupine exhibited strength. Other Canadian issues were also steady. Hiram Walker advanced 1 1-2 points and Lake Shore Mines 2 1-8. Distillers gained a fraction while Canada 4s, among bonds, rose 2 points.

Attracting support were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Du Pont, Westinghouse, Eastman Kodak, Union Carbide, American Telephone, Douglas Aircraft, Anaconda, American Smelting and Southern Railway.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Aug. 22—(CP) — The few killer sales made in dull cattle trading brought steady prices up to mid-session on the Toronto Livestock Market today. The calf and hog sections held steady and no receipts were offered on sheep and lambs. Cattle holdover from Wednesday was 800 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 430; calves 40; hogs 360.

Stockers were 25 cents lower at $4.50 to $6.75. Butcher cows sold at $4.25 to $5.60 and a few common bulls ranged from $4.25 to $4.50.

Veal calves ranged from $8.50 to $11.50 and grassers $5.75 to $6.

Hogs sold at $9 off truck for bacons and $12 dressedweight.

GARRETT VINCENT SERIOUSLY HURT

Riding in Car Which Allegedly Sideswiped Military Truck Near Actinolite

Mrs. Florence Reeves, Tweed will face reckless driving charges following a motor accident at the junction of Nos. 7 and 37 highways near Actinolite, late last night that sent Garey Vincent, Marmora, to Belleville General Hospital critically injured and caused severe head injuries to Robert Bristol of Madoc.

Vincent suffered severe chest injuries and multiple deep lacerations. Bristol was allowed to return to his home after treatment by Dr. M. B. George of Tweed.

The accident occurred when the car driven by Mrs. Reeves, is said to have sideswiped a military truck driven by Marella Douren. The force of the impact was such that the entire side of the automobile was carried away by the heavy truck. Vincent and Bristol were passengers in the Reeves car. The car was almost completely demolished.

Chief of Police Clare Hayes of Tweed, investigated the accident and today preferred charges of reckless driving against Mrs. Reeves.

Cooper Promises Quicker Reports On German Raids

London, Aug. 22.—(CP) —Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information, promised the House of Commons today there would be less delay in the future in allowing news accounts of German air raids to reach North America.

The Minister was criticized after Nazi raids on the outskirts of London last week when there was a nine-hour holdup in allowing the news to be sent from Britain.

He said the delays were due to "rules which were made at a time when it was expected that official communiques would be issued more promptly than has so far been the case". That situation is being remedied, he added.

DRIVER SHOWS PRESENCE OF MIND

Presence of mind and skilful driving on the part of Miss Evelyn Goodier, 21 Yeomans Street yesterday averted what might have been a serious accident. She was driving her car, when a young child suddenly dashed into the roadway directly in its path. Swerving the machine sharply towards the curb, Miss Goodier missed the child whose momentum carried it into the fender of the car. The child was uninjured.

Small Advance in Price of Eggs

Toronto, Aug. 22—Light receipts and improved demand caused a fractional upturn in top-quality egg prices yesterday on the Toronto open produce market. Butter and cheese were unchanged.

The egg market developed a firmer undertone during the morning, but quotations did not advance until the afternoon. Then, as the improvement in demand became more evident, A-large eggs moved to 27 1-2c, A-medium to 26 1-2c and A-pullet stock to a range of 22c to 22 12c. A premium of 1-2c to 1c per dozen was obtainable on Government-inspected shipments. In the wholesale-to-retail section, however, Grade B eggs lost the 1c gained on Tuesday.

Butter was steady to firm in tone. Offerings of first - grade Ontario creamery solids were light and moved easily. Undergrades were more plentiful and not as easy to move.

Montreal Produce

Newest Gadget Electric Calf-Weaner

Washington, Aug. 22—(AP)—United States inventors burst forth with a batch of new gadgets today, designed to make the world an easier place in which to live—but you'll have to use your own judgment about that.

Most "shocking" of the latest patents granted is the electric calf-weiner, aimed at making things more pleasant for mamma cow plus giving the calf a quicker start in life.

The brain child of Patrick Kelly of Anatone, Wash., it consists of a neat little battery carrier that fits around the calf's neck and a metal contraption that rests lightly on its nose. An unobtrusive wire connects the two.

It works this way:

When the calf gets ready to go to lunch the metal contraption touches the cow, and closes an electric circuit, thus shocking the dickens out of the calf.

Mr. Kelly doesn't say what it does to the cow, but from the look of things, it appears that she is grounded.

A patent was granted Martin Plantis of the Bronx, N.Y., for an arm support for a fishing rod which should just about make things perfect for the angler who wants to take it easy.

General Warnings Instead of Local

London, Aug. 22—(CP Cable) — The government will not substitute general air raid warnings in place of the present policy of local warnings where raids are delivered or expected, Sir John Anderson announced today.

The Minister of Home Security in a statement said that "wars cannot be won without taking risks" and contended that giving warnings in all towns in the course followed by raiders would interfere with war production.

He said that where large formations of raiders are reported, public warnings will be given more freely, but "there can be no absolute guarantee of warnings, even in cases of heavy raids."

SAY VICHY GOV'T

thorough mutual independence and respect for one another's rights and privileges."

The Herald Tribune reporter said the General laughed at the German assertion that the joint defence agreement meant the first step toward absorption of Canada by the United States.

Objective Point of View

"Canada and the United States do not have to rationalize; as long as both believe in democracy political matters come easy," he said. "I like Lord Haldane's dictum, 'the secret of Britain's success in organizing governments in diverse countries and diverse climes has been to think much of convenience and little of symmetry.'

"We meet the practical problem of the moment. It is the practical things for the service of the people that we are after. The fundamental things like freedom of thought and expression are already taken care of.

"Canada and the United States have both taken the objective point of view. The moral value of the move is excellent, and in the long view will be increasingly important."

LULL CONTINUES,

Weather May Have Caused Lull

(Although publication of weather reports in Britain is prohibited as a war measure, it was believed unfavorable atmospheric conditions may have contributed to the slackening of German assaults. British authorities said the R.A.F. had been forced to slacken its assaults on German-controlled military objectives because of bad weather on the continent.)

Those contending Germany had been checked by British defences pointed out the R.A.F. and ground defences had brought down nearly 1,000 German aircraf since June 18, when Germany began intensified daily raids on England. More than 700 of these were downed in the past two weeks alone in massed daylight raids, a period in which Britain lost fewer than 200 planes.

"Hitler's Junk-ers Yard"

Pictures of scrap heaps of German bombers brought down bolstered the people's confidence. The Mirror captioned one of these pictures: "Hitler's Junk-ers Yard," with the letters "Junk" in capitals.

"It is possible," The News Chronicle cautioned, "that Goering is using this lull to plan some new form of attack—perhaps on a still larger scale—which may break over us in the next few hours, or days."

Aerial Torpedo Used

The usual night forays continued last night and were notable for the dropping of an aerial torpedo on a row of houses in a southeast coast town. The torpedo apparently was jettisoned from a plane which could find no more suitable target and had to return home without it to conserve fuel.

It fell into a row of eight workers' cottages and made a shambles of them, burying many and causing an unannounced number of casualties.

It made a crater more than 30 feet wide.

From midnight until this morning, there were no reports of aerial activity over England, then sporadic raids were resumed.

Meanwhile, all German radio stations closed down at 10 p.m., the usual time British bombers fly over Germany. The fading out of stations, however, has become more regular than announcements of bombing trips, and it was not learned at once whether attacks were being made.

FORMER RUSSIAN

Jackson —confessed immediately after the assault Tuesday night, but police resumed their questioning a few hours after Trotsky died.

Tell Why He Killed Trotsky

In his first statement Jackson said he decided to kill Trotsky after being "disillusioned" by the Russian's recently expressed political views. Police said they would publish his latest statement, perhaps tomorrow. They added that Jackson was not a Belgian, as he claimed, but a United States citizen formerly of New York City.

Police also detained a woman listed as Sylvia Agaloff of Brooklyn, N.Y., whom they said was Jackson's sweetheart, but whom Trotsky's associates said they thought was Jackson's wife.

She said she was unaware of any assassination plot and wept as she recalled she had introduced Jackson to Trotsky. She said she was a sister of a former secretary of the exiled Russian.

Mrs. Trotsky and surgeons were in Trotsky's tiny hospital room when he coughed, gasped feebly and died. Mrs. Trotsky wept softly and said "that is life."

Body Lies in State

At first the hospital said the body would be kept there over night for an autopsy but early today—after a death mask had been made by the noted Mexican sculptor Ignacio Asunsulo—it was removed to the chapel of a private funeral home to lie in state.

President Lazaro Cardenas, who gave Trotsky refuge after Norway expelled him at Russia's behest, sent Gen. Hernandez Lamont, a member of his official staff, and three aides to the chapel to pay Mexico's respects. The officers took a turn at standing guard of honor.

Funeral plans were uncertain. Some of Trotsky's aides said burial "very likely" would be in Mexico City, but definite plans had not been made.

May Hold Funeral in N.Y.

(In New York, James Cannon, Secretary of the Socialist Workers party in the United States — and mentioned by certain Trotsky followers as likely new head of the Fourth International—said:

("We plan to hold the funeral here to give the working people of New York an opportunity to show their reverence for the memory of this great leader and their hatred and contempt for Stalinism.")

In the chapel, Trotsky's face showed through a glass cover of the casket. A satin coverlet extended to the chest, over which his hands lay folded. The bandage still remained on his head, but a deep gash showed over the right ear where the assassin drove the pick into his brain.

On the casket was a card in Spanish saying: "I am sure of the final victory of the fourth international. Go forward." An explanatory note said these were "the last words of Trotsky."

Only Short Article

Moscow, Aug. 22—(AP)— The attack on Leon Trotsky in Mexico City was disclosed to the Russian public today by a seven-line dispatch in the newspapers, but up to noon his death had not been announced.

A Tass (Soviet news agency) dispatch from New York merely quoted United States newspapers as reporting an attempt on the exiled Communist leader's life, and added:

"The person who made the attempt belong to the followers most closely associated with Trotsky."

EX-OFFICER V. C. NOW SCRUBS DECK

Gallant Sailor of Last War Goes "AB" to Re-enter Service

London, Aug. 22 (CP)—Lieutenant-Commander Geoffrey Drummond, V.C., one of England's heroes of the First Great War, has joined up again as an able seaman in the Thames River patrol service.

Lieutenant-Commander Drummond was awarded the Victoria Cross in 1918 for rescuing all the survivors of H.M.S. Vindictive when she was sunk as a block ship in Ostend harbor. Although wounded in three places he took his motor launch into the harbor under terrific fire from short batteries. During part of the action he carried a kitten on his shoulder and for that reason became known as the "Whittington V.C."

At the outbreak of the present war he tried to join up again as an officer but as he is 54 was turned down. Determined to serve in some capacity, he signed on as an A.B. (able-bodied seaman) in the river patrol service and works as an ordinary deckhand, scrubbing decks and washing dishes.

R.C.M.P. ARREST

to build. The tunnel carried him beyond the heavily-guarded area around the camp.

After an investigation Brig.-Gen. E. De B. Panet, senior officer in charge of internment camps, said in a statement that there was little doubt a mass delivery of prisoners had been planned through the camp tunnel.

Entrance to the tunnel had been covered by a secret panel in the cookhouse and thus the excavation had escaped detection during frequent inspections of the premises.

Misunderstanding Deliberate

It is believed that the first misunderstanding over the identity of the prisoner who escaped was deliberately created as part of a plan to facilitate Lorentz' flight. Someone answered to Lorentz name at morning roll call in the internment camp last Monday. Officials here are confident Koche did not answer when his name was called at the same time. This obviously would create the impression, that it was Koche was the missing prisoner.

It is believed this was done deliberately because Lorentz spoke perfect English while Koche spoke fairly good English but with a distinct accent. As long as it was believed Koche had escaped, police would seek a man with an accent.

Treatment of prisoners of war who escape and are recaptured is covered in the Geneva convention in which escape is not regarded as a criminal offence. He may be given disciplinary punishment such as being confined to cells at the internment camp for a maximum of 28 days.

This applies only to prisoners of war. Other internees who escape are liable to criminal conviction and imprisonment in a penitentiary.

Did Not Have Registration Card

Ottawa, Aug. 22—(CP)—Lack of a national registration card was directly responsible for the recapture at Montreal last night of Guenther Lorentz, escaped German war prisoner, it is learned here.

Lorentz, who escaped Monday from a Northern Ontario internment camp, was apprehended last night as he attempted to cross the Victoria Bridge over the St. Lawrence River at Montreal.

As the fugitive approached the bridge he hesitated when he saw the armed veteran guards at the bridge head, then continued forward. He was stopped by the guard. Lorentz said he merely wanted to cross the bridge to look at the water.

The guard asked his name. Lorentz gave a name. The guard then asked where his registration card was. Lorentz said he did not have one, having been away from his home in Toronto.

The suspicious guard then took the man aside for further investigation. He was definitely identified by Royal Canadian Mounted Police through his handwriting.

100 SAFE IN BOMB SHELTER AS BUILDING ABOVE BLAZES

The earth rumbled and some of the 100 refugees in the bomb shelter moved uneasily, but the rumbling stopped and no one was hurt in the shelter itself at Southhampton, England. Immediately above the shelter, however, this furniture depository caught fire from Nazi - dropped incendiary bombs and the local firemen are shown quelling the flames.

22 AMBULANCES ALREADY ON DUTY

Gift of Canadian Red Cross Serving at Work of Mercy in Britain

(By at Ussher, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 22—(CP Cable)—Twenty - two ambulances donated by the Canadian Red Cross already are busy on their work of mercy with the Canadian Active Service Force in the United Kingdom.

They are the first flight of a number of ambulances the Canadian Red Cross is sending to Britain and were handed over without ceremony, to the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps immediately they arrived.

Col. R. M. Luton, Director General of Canadian Medical Services, said he was most grateful to get them. "They are of very great assistance, and are thoroughly well equipped," he said.

Emergency Operating Lamps

Four emergency operating lamps given by Col. George Nasmith of Toronto, adviser on Public Health to the Canadian Red Cross Society, were handed over to No. 15 Canadian General Hospital Nursing unit today at the Canadian Military Hospital somewhere in Surrey.

These batteryless lamps were given with $1,000 donated by the Heliconian Club of Toronto in memory of Col. Nasmith's wife, who died a few years ago. The president of the club is a sister in the hospital unit, Matron Agnes Neil of Toronto.

Col. C. A. Rae, commandant of the hospital, accepted the lamps and said they will be most useful in the near future because of the possibility that "enemy activity might interrupt electric current."

Col. Rae said that more than half of the money for the hospital came from the Canadian Red Cross in Toronto. He added that more than 300 major operations have been performed in the hospital since it opened two months ago.

Ottawa, Aug. 22 (CP)—While not aware that other ministers were effected the Japanese legation here today admitted that Baron Shuh Tomii, Minister here since May 1938, had been called home to Tokyo.

The date of Baron Tomii's departure has not been announced nor his successor mentioned.

Baron Tomii was Consul General here in 1927 and after the opening of the legation in the following year became First Secretary. Afterwards he served in Tokyo and San Francisco and in 1936 was appointed Counsellor of the Embassy in London leaving that post to come here.

Baron Tomii comes of one of the most distinguished families in Japan. His father compiled the civil code now in use in that country.

For the past two years Canada has been without a minister at Tokyo, being represented by the First Secretary of the legation, D'Arcy McGreer. The post became vacant when former Minister Randolph Bruce became ill and returned to Canada.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Germany sought unsuccessfully today to blockade the English Channel coast, using artillery and dive bombers in an effort to halt a mile-long convoy which proceeded to its destination unhit.

While this action was in progress Egypt took a hint from Lt.-Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, British mid-east commander-in-chief, who warned in a radio address last night that Hitler may imitate Napoleon and, finding Britain's defence at home too tough, "turn east in search of easier success."

The Egyptian government refused to heed a demand by some Egyptian parliamentary leaders that it go to war against Italy at once in view of Italian troop concentration near the border in Libya, but announced it has placed troops at strategic points and is ready to defend the land in cooperation with Britain should an actual attack come.

Position of Egyptian Gov't.

The position of the Egyptian government was not absolutely clear because in a sense the country has been attacked already in bombing raids on British military bases in such places as Alexandria, raids in which civilians have been hurt.

Those who argued that Egypt should go to war at once contended that the British and Egyptian forces now available should strike across the Libyan border and smother the Italian army before it can complete organization for what appears to be an impending attack on Egypt.

Germany said today that it will not offer safe conduct to United States vessels going to Britain to carry British children away from the danger of bombing.

Excuse For Refusal

The excuse offered for the refusal—offered even before the United States Congress had passed necessary amendments to the Neutrality Act permitting vessels to go to combat zones for such purposes—was that Germany could not control newly placed mines which are part of the "blockade" of Britain.

Germans said the United States army transport American Legion which passed through an area where the Germans claimed they had laid mines north of Scotland had "fool's luck" in escaping destruction.

Actually there was no reason to fear that the ship was in danger. She followed a course recommended by the British Admiralty and avoided the British minefield extending from the Orkney Islands to Iceland.

There never has been any suggestion from responsible sources that the Germans have mined those northern waters. If they had the Royal Navy would have known about it, set a new course for the American ship and sent its tough reservists in the little fishing trawlers and drifters to sweep the mines clear.

Nazi Invention of Stories

It is quite natural that Germany should invent such stories, though, as they form part of the propaganda "war of nerves" and help to hearten the Nazi home front which must be a little troubled about the lack of effect the blitzkrieg has had on Britain.

Most disheartening must be the increasing power of Royal Air Force raids on Germany. The German Propaganda Ministry can always issue lies to the German press about successes on the military front or suppress news of reverses.

No one, however, can suppress the sound of exploding bombs or the wail of air raid sirens.

CHAPTER 23
Holiday

Barney took Brooke's hand and held it. If Julian were not here, she would like to go to sleep on Barney's well-padded shoulder, she thought.

But Julian was here and his quick vital glance kept her alert in the dim twilight when their eyes met and held. Some of what was said was lost to her in her wonderment of him and the thoughts that lay behind his penetrating glance. There were moment when there was still much about him of a small boy who had lost a courageous mother. And there were other moments when she felt that she was nothing to him but a specimen for experimentation.

A delectable dinner was served by a smiling negro whom Barney affectionately called Jake. Brooke poured the coffee in the living-room—quantities for Barney. Again as they sat about the fire she was not conscious of time passing but only of a warm inner glow from the friendly conversation of the two men which was frequently directed to her.

Once Barney said, "You hear a lot of talk about 'families' these days. My grandfather was a pioneer. He didn't know his own name when he saw it written. I'm proud of him. It makes you ashamed when you think of the things they had to battle for and the things that get us down. We've all gone soft."

It was Brooke who said at last that they must be going. Barney followed them to the car, urging them to come soon again.

Driving back, Julian asked, "Sleepy? I refuse to be a shoulder for you to go to sleep on. We could sing. I sing badly but my singing is guaranteed not to act as a sedative."

It was two weeks before he telephoned again to tell her the precise day when he was motoring north to his sister's home. His voice was cool and, feeling that they were strangers again, Brooke thanked him and thought it unnecessary to tell him that Wilson Stone had thoughtfully given her a week's holiday when it seemed there was no end in sight from the intense heat. And though New Hampshire would tend to intensify dormant memories it was, she thought, her only escape from hot sidewalks and sleepless nights.

They stopped in Boston for a belated lunch, both looked tired and disheveled. Julian knew now that she had a week's holiday, for when he remarked upon the size of her bag for a week end visit to Chatham, she had told him early that morning as they stood outside her hotel. Engrossed in summer scenes and their own thoughts, they had spoken little for several hours, Julian keeping his eyes ahead on a road crowded with the usual summer motorists lured north.

Over a green tablecloth in a cool dim place he folded his hands and looked at her.

"If you aren't going to be busy the whole week, we might manage a swim together."

"It cools me to think about it."

He smiled. "Your first summer in New York. Pretty trying. I know. I remember mine. I was just out of Harvard and looking for a job and too proud to ask my father for help. He's retired now and living in California with his third wife, a musician."

"Little by little I put you together," Brooke said.

He chuckled. "Jigsaw puzzle of a human being? Have you assembled all of me?"

"Not quite."

He glanced away quickly across the room to a waiter hurrying toward them with their lunch.

It was midafternoon when he turned the car down the familiar street shaded by tall trees and stopped at the big old house which Brooke indicated.

"Are you expected?" he asked.

The windows were closed, the blinds drawn.

"It doesn't look as if I am. I wired but I didn't receive an answer. But I still have a key."

He turned to her. "If they aren't there, why stay? Come up to Maine and swim with me every day."

"I'll go in. Perhaps there's a message. My father usually doesn't take his vacation until October and then never goes anywhere."

"I'll go in with you."

She noticed that the porch, with a new coat of grey paint, was dusty. Taking her key, opening the door, she stepped into the gloomy hall. She saw her name instantly on a white envelope on the hall table. Opening it quickly she read her step-mother note that she and 'your father' had motored to Canada for a few days, taking her sisters. She had left food for Brooke in the icebox, she wrote, and would see her on Monday and regretted that their plans for the brief holiday had been made far in advance of Brooke's telegram.

Rather than explain, she passed the note to Julian.

"Then you are coming with me," he said.

She followed him out of the house.

"There's a small hotel not far from my sister's house," he said, starting the car. "All available space there is needed for the five children. Otherwise, she'd be delighted to have you." He glanced at her closely. "You're angry, aren't you?"

"I shouldn't be but I am." She wanted to say, "I can't afford a week end at a hotel but I'll go anyway."

"May I remind you that I've had two stepmothers? But the last has proved to me that they can be very unselfish people. If we hurry, we can get a swim in before dinner. That is, if you can take it cold and have a bathing suit with you."

"I have mine with me."

But Helen's snub and her father's neglect still burned in her for many miles to come. Why did she bother to come home at all? Loyalty, of course, and the feeling of being a part of the taciturn man who was dominated by his second wife. Emotional conflicts....She had been in the midst of so many recently....

CHAPTER 23 GAL TWO !-::T(

Several thickly peopled resorts were passed before Julian brought the car to a standstill before a huge white cottage. A bridge game was in session on the veranda, a tennis game on the court beside the cottage. Sunburned children in bathing suits played on the wide lawn.

Julian left her at the desk, saying. "I'll be back in twenty minutes. Be ready."

Hurrying, she took scant notice of the room other than to revel in the cool sea air. Adjusting the strap of the slim blue satin suit, she thought, "This is much better than home. I'm glad it happened this way."

They swam out beyond the breaking surf and timid bathers, Brooke feeling that even in sport Julian challenged her. Coming back, they lay on the beach in the sun.

"You're having dinner with us, with Wilma and me," he said, closing his eyes against the glare. Then, opening them, looking up at the clear sky, "'Thou out of Heaven's benediction comest to the warm sun...'"

"Shakespeare has many meanings," Brooke said "What does that mean to you."

"The quotation is from 'King Lear." I think. But need you be so severe with me? I shall be delighted to have dinner with you."

Closing his eyes again, shutting her out, "The five little demons will be in bed by then. Wilma is quite concerned that she can't put you up. I'm glad."

The unexpected again. "Why?"

"You and I shouldn't get to know each other too well."

CHAPTER 24
A New Love

Why? Why had Julian just said they should not get to know each other too well?

Brooke looked at him, splendid physically, stretched full length upon the sand, his body still tanned from his winter holiday in Nassau. The first time she saw him Rod had said he was just back from Nassau. She thought, I'd like to see him in court, arguing a case. He'd be ruthless if he were certain he was right . . .

Her eyes travelled to his face, to the lean jaw, the straight nose, the full-lipped mouth and to the thick fair lashes that shielded the clear blue eyes.

"Brooke . . ."

The sound of her name by his voice shook her. And she seemed to wait a long time before he asked "Do you play tennis?"

I used to a long time ago with Rod—"Yes. Have you racquets?"

"I think I can dig up a couple if the children haven't used them for toys. Tomorrow morning?"

"You've had a long drive and you must be very tired."

She did not know whether he slept but he lay with his eyes closed until nursemaids called the sunburned children from the water, dried them and took them away, and the other bathers had gone. She sat upright, hugging her knees, loving the touch of the sun, the vast expanse of sea and sky, the vital air, achieving a height of happiness that exceeded any she had felt for months. It had been such a long way back to a beach in Maine to which her mother had brought her as a child—New Hampshire, New York, California, Honolulu and three men. A long way back to find herself beside Julian Carlton on a warm July day.

Against her will, as if she had no command of it, her heart stirred relentlessly when she looked at him again, wondering still if he were sleeping. Against her will, too, she thought, "I want him to open his eyes and look at me and speak to me . . I want him to touch me. He has never touched me.

Julian sat upright presently and picked up his robe.

"Sorry to be so dull," he said. "I am tired and I think I'll get in a nap before dinner. I'll call for you about seven. And don't bother about dressing very much. When you have five children and one servant, informality just must be the rule."

She left him and walked back to the cottage, unmindful of the interest she, a newcomer, aroused, conscious only of the clamoring of her heart, of a song long silenced and begun again, a new song, stirring and demanding, and yet infinitely tender . . .

His name echoed in her mind as she dressed, putting on a green overall linen frock and a short-sleeved peasant blouse and multicolored sandals. She touched her warm face. By Monday it would be brown. Her thoughts wandered . . Monday at home, her stepmother apologetic and falsely glad to see her, her father only mildly interested in her . . . New York and Wilson Stone, the small hotel room. Those things and those people were her life! They were real, tangible. There was nothing tangible in the clamoring of her heart and the echoing of a man's name in her thoughts . . .

But when, standing by the window, she saw Julian wearing white trousers, a brown coat and a brown sport shirt, she knew suddenly that of all things and of all people he was the most real . . "Julian, I'm falling in love with you." She knew not whence the words came nor why. All at once it was enough to know that she was happy and that the few moments that separated them were too long . . .

He looked up and saw her and lifted his hand in greeting.

She went down to him slowly, and they walked to a small white house, and were met by Wilma Sterling, his sister, a tall young woman with auburn hair and delicately chiseled features and animated brown eyes. She wore a dark linen frock and low-heeled straw sandals.

Holding out a sunburned hand to Brooke, Wilma Sterling said in clear deep tones not unlike her brother's voice, "Hello, dear. How nice that you could come. I wish I could have you here but five children are a houseful. And I'll have to issue a quiet warning because young David will never go to sleep if he suspecsts I'm having a guest. We'll have drinks on the verandah—if you will mix them, Julian."

Luckily Brooke found conversation with her easy for it was difficult to concentrate because the message of her heart was telegraphing to her mind. Like a warm tide the new song, demanding but sweet, rushed over her.

Paul, Wilma's husband, would join them in two weeks, Wilma said. In the meantime, she said to Julian who appeared with drinks, it would be convenient to have a man around. Between brother and sister Brooke sensed respect and understanding and admiration while they drank tart, delicious drinks before a neat little maid announced dinner. Even at dinner they spoke low lest the vigilant David suspect the presence of a guest and demand loudly to see her.

Beneath the casual talk that passed the hours before midnight, Brooke felt as if an intense flame burned within her. This man opposite her with his keen knowing eyes and a clean swift smile . . Julian. Today about six when your eyes were closed, Julian. Her thoughts were in chaos again but they were happily chaotic. Happy? Yes, intensely, richly so. Her face was touched with radiance by Julian who had never touched her.

They walked back together along a street warm and bright and thickly peopled by day, cool and dim and deserted by night.

"Wilma is not unlike you, Julian." She felt that her voice betrayed her.

"You'd like Paul," he said. "The atmosphere of their home is one of informality and children and laughter. Paul is a teacher and happily oblivious to the temptations of money."

"That's refreshing."

On the veranda she turned and looked up. She knew now. She couldn't explain it . . but she knew. Nor did she wish to explain it or analyse it or fight against it . .

"Are you going to sleep as long as you like and as long as I hope to?" he asked. "Though I'll probably be awakened by the baby who is cutting a tooth or the blast of horns."

"And I by the ghost of an alarm clock . . ."

"Slaves to routine." He looked at her, her face flushed, her eyes luminous, her hair still damp but shining . . "Good night, Brooke."

In her room she opened the window wide, filling the room with the pounding of the sea. What had happened to her old love, her stubborn love for Rod, a love which had admired him and excused him? She tried to recall him but only Julian was vivid and close and real tonight. A passing thing, this, which would explode to bits by morning, leaving her with the familiar ache she had come to recognise as longing for Rod? Would she ever know? Would the old continue to clash with the new, reducing her to an emotional seesaw?

She slept more soundly than she had slept for weeks. Awakened at seven by the ghost of the little white clock on the table beside her bed in New York, she sat up for a moment and then went back to sleep again gratefully. It was nearly eleven o'clock when she went to the beach and dropped on her knees beside Julian.

"Didn't we say something about tennis this morning?" he asked. I forgot, too. We'll get a court this afternoon. Put on your cap . . ."

Tomorrow will come too soon . .

The day was quickly spent— to the small white house for luncheon where she met five scantily-clad, sunburned children before they went protestingly to their naps; an hour on the court opposite Julian who played as ruthlessly as she believed he would argue a case in court; a second swim; cool drinks on the veranda again; dinner served by the trim little maid. Then she and Julian walked back not through the deserted street but over the sand.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Rancho Grande"

Who is this man Autry, whose name is on the tongue of every movie fan? What does he have that Robert Taylor, Clark Gable and Tyrone Power don't have; why do his fans write him more frequently and consistenly than those of any other star?"

The answer lies in Gene's simple, unaffected naturalness, which dominates his screen roles. In spite of the fame and fortune that has come his way, fans who see him in "Rancho Grande," his latest film on his Republic contract, now playing at the Capitol Theatre, will see the same down-to-earth, casual, easy-going Gene they first admired in "The Phantom Empire," the serial in which he made his screen debut.

Gene is a native Texas boy. They've recently changed the name of his birthplace, Tioga, Texas, to "Autry Springs," in honor of the town's most illustrious son.

He learned to ride range when he was a youngster, and while still in his teens joined a travelling medicine show in which he sang as he dispensed patent medicines.

When he was eighteen, Gene went to Sapulpe, Oklahoma, where he worked as telegraph operator for the Frisco railroad. Here he met Jimmy Long, another singing railroad man, and the two wrote many western ballads together. Their "Silver Haired Daddy of Mine" has since become one of the best known songs of its kind ever written.

In 1930 Gene began singing over radio station KVOO in Tulsa. He was billed as "Oklahoma's Yodelling Cowboy," and was received with great enthusiasm. He made a few records for the Victor company, and was then offered a job over WLS, a Chicago station, which featured him on the National Barn Dance program. He became so popular on this program that a Hollywood contract was inevitable. He came to the Republic lot in 1934, where he has remained ever since, making eight pictures a year, each one of them better than the one before.

"Song of the City"

The added special attraction M. G. M. gives you a screaming bombardment of rapid-fire entertainment, packed with adventure, intrigue and danger. It's no "sit-back - and - relax" romance. It's melodrama from the word "go." There are fighters, extortionists, bomb plotters, terrorists, to electrify scene after scene, as the action mounts to the sensational climax. Two women after one man, he had his choice. One girl had love and a million dollars; the other just plain love. Everybody needs excitement. You'll applaud this unusual entertainment. Don't miss it.

The 6th chapter of the thrilling serial "Buck Rogers" and the Universal News of the World complete this fine entertaining bill that the whole family will enjoy.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Hitler-Beast of Berlin"

What America faces should it ever fall under the merciless lash of a dictator is graphically described in "Hitler-Beast of Berlin" the startling screen drama of life under the swastika of Nazi Germany, which will soon be presented at the McCarthy theatre.

With frankness seldom portrayed on today's motion picture screen shorn of all propaganda and without prejudice, this great picture tells the engrossing story of a fearless young German, a married man whose wife is soon to give birth to a child, who risks everything to effect the downfall of the Nazi regime in order that his unborn offspring shall not feel the iron heel of despotism.

Among the high spots of "Hitler-Beast of Berlin" are scenes showing how the illegal under-ground printing presses operate and how the determined anti-Nazi disseminate literature which, they hope, will put an end to the infamous dictatorship under which the German nation is staggering to its doom. Also shown in the dread Gestapo (Nazi secret service) holding its inquisitions and how the bullet-headed operatives drag the truth from between the clenched teeth of its helpless victims.

Other exposes included in "Hitler-Beast of Berlin" include infiltration of anti-Nazi into Nazi's elite corps of guards, to act as spies for their freedom-loving colleagues; the orgies of the S. S. troopers and how concentration camp guards "sell" their unfortunate prisoners as virtual slaves to rich farmers and unscrupulous industrialists.

It has been said that "it can't happen here." "But, next to keeping constantly on guard less liberty die in America, everyone should see "Hitler-Beast of Berlin". It is a realistic object lesson of what happens when a great nation lets itself be lulled into captivity by demagogues and spurious patriots. The Ontario Censor Board after passing this picture put this recommendation on their report "Every loyal Canadian should see this picture."

"Hitler-Beast of Berlin" features an immense cast of internationally famous players, many of them fugitives from Hitler's Gestapo. The leading roles are portrayed by Roland Drew, Steffi Duna, Greta Garnstedt, Allan Ladd and Lucien Prival.

Next week when the above is shown at the McCarthy theatre, in addition will be presented an all-star comedy, an amusing cartoon entitled "Millionaire Hobo" and also "Tomorrow's Stars" a baseball sports-subject, which packs real interest.

"Panama Patrol"
"West of the Santa Fe"

Starring Leon Ames, Charlotte Wynters and Donald 'Red' Barry, and with a story that is filled with thrills, action and adventure, "Panama Patrol" now playing at the McCarthy theatre is topnotch entertainment and with Charles Starrett in "West of the Santa Fe" on the same program, no lover of exciting and thrill-a-minute screen fare, can afford missing this show. It is ideal two-feature entertainment for everyone.

AT THE BELLE

"One Million B. C."

"One Million B. C." is an outstanding screen achievement co-starring Carole Landis, Lon Chaney and Victor Mature. It tells a simple story of two prehistoric tribes—the Shell People and the Rock Tribe—who live their lives under the shadow of attack by huge dinosaurs, woolly mammoths, musk oxen, terrifying reptiles, as well as visitations of earthquakes and seething volcanoes. How a common danger serves to end hostilities between the two clans is told vividly and movingly while animals of monstrous size crawl from their lairs and close in upon the hardy cavemen.

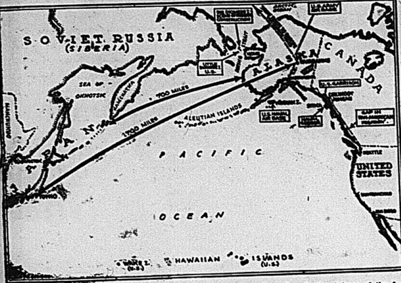
"One Million B. C." is spectacle at its biggest and best. The screen is literally dominated by huge prehistoric beasts, and the earthquake scenes leave one breathless with their force, sweep and power. Other unforgettable scenes show Lon Chaney, Jr., cast as Akhoba, the tribal leader, mauled and gored by a huge beast, his body lacerated and mutilated, one leg broken and shriveled.

Needless to say, "One Million B.C." utilized the newest and most up-to-date technical secrets in achieving such outstanding verisimilitude in the spectacular animal sequences which were filmed on location in Fire Valley, Nevada, described as a fiery gash of grotesque caves, chasms, peaks and pillars.

The added feature brings together three of Hollywood's younger players, John Payne, Dennis Morgan and Gloria Dickson in "Tear Gas Squad," a thrilling action-packed film dealing with New York's gang-busting law enforcing police divisions.

Also shown on the same program is the latest "March of Time" entitled "Spoils of Conquest" showing up-to-the-minute pictures of the Dutch East Indies.

ALASKA BECOMES KEY POINT OF AMERICAN DEFENCE PLAN AS NORTHERN U.S. GIBRALTAR



Only two miles from the nearest Soviet Russian territory and a three-hour airplane hop from Japan, Alaska assumes an important place in the defence of the American continent.

(By Harry Levin, Central Press Canadian Writer)

Washington, Aug. 20—Two miles to Soviet Russia. A 700-mile hop by fast bombing plane to the territory of menacing Japan.

Such is the new geography of United States defence, shunted off the front pages by the more dramatic war news from Europe. And thus, almost 77 years after Secretary of State Seward negotiated its purchase from Czarist Russia, America's most northern territory, Alaska, assumes its important place in the defence of the U.S.

Alaska, with its 590,000 square miles of icy peaks and fertile valleys, a permanent population exceeding 60,000, and a production of economic wealth surpassing $100,-000,000 annually, long has been the "no man's land" of recent American history.

It's partly the map's fault—for the flat Mercator atlas distorts both Alaska's size and position on the earth's surface. But a glance at a globe may reveal these starting facts. Alaska is nearer continental Europe than most of the eastern United States. Airplanes can fly across the North Pole as Soviet aviators proved in 1936. Mainland Alaska is a short 56 miles from the Siberian peninsula, and a mere 700 miles from the nearest northern Japanese possession. Alaska is on a regular seven-hour commercial airline run from Seattle. And only a 100-mile highway gap prevents the renowned Pan-American roadway from furnishing a safe land route for military supplies and troops from Seattle northward to the Alaskan border.

Few Soldiers

According to Dr. Ernest Gruening, governor of Alaska, "a scant 20 parachutists could take over the territory." It's rather an exaggeration, but until recently there were less han 300 U.S. soldiers stationed on the peninsula, in addition to a handful of navy planes and coast guard vessels. A large portion of Alaska is virgin wilderness, and there are long stretches of its 16,-000 coastline uninhabited, and many a superb natural harbor ideal for secret foreign submarine bases.

Last year Congress appropriated $25,000,000 for initial defence works in Alaska. On Kodiak island, a huge naval air base is building, at Sitka, an anchorage for warships, at Fairbanks, northern terminus of the Alaskan railway, the army is constructing two enormous airplane runways. Dimensions are secret, naturally, but they are termed the longest in the world.

From here, the most modern huge bombing planes (still a-building) could take off for, say Japan, and return with plenty of fuel to spare after a flight of 3,400 miles to vulnerable Tokio. That's a good deal shorter than the distance from the Pearl Harbor base in Hawaii. Work on the Fairbanks air base has been pushed along on a 24-hour day, despite the recent bitter winter and the frozen ground. Old-time Alaskan residents scratched their heads when the army proudly boasted that construction was six months ahead of schedule.

Needs Stronger Defence

Alaska, of course, is just getting started as a new defence cog in American strategy. There are, as yet, few if any first-class coastal guns. The nearest garrison to Bering Strait points, looking across to Russian Siberia, is based 1,000 miles away at Chilkoot. The handful of soldiers stationed in the territory has been increased to 1,000, but in an emergency Alaska's civil population could barely furnish another 1,000 conscripts to meet army requirements.

Communications still remain Alaska's No. 1 problem, although more than 2,000 miles of highway have been laid in the past 20 years. There are commercial airlines linking up remote regions and towns. In terms of populations, Alaska has one plane for every 100 inhabitants, a ratio exceeding continental United States.

From a human standpoint, Alaskans lament popular misconceptions prevalent among most Americans about their homeland. It's still "Seward's Folly" to millions, although the territory has returned its purchase price of $7,200,000 some thousand-fold in the passing years. More than a billion dollars worth of gold alone was mined in the historic Klondike region. And though the New Deal pioneer settlement at Matanuska received much unfavorable publicity. Alaskans insist the territory is aching to be settled.

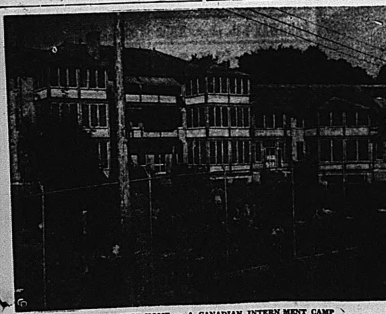
Summer temperatures are often 97 degrees Farhenheit. Wheat and many other food crops are grown in the fertile valleys. Alaska is immensely rich in furs, timber, lead, coal, tin, platinum, gold and many of these products are essential to U.S. expanding war industries. And Alaska does a $125,000,000 annual business with the mother country, larger than U.S. trade with China, and twice that with Soviet Russia.

Secret U.S.S.R. Construction

Most curious fact in the Alaskan defence setup concerns the Big and Little Diomede Islands. Big Diomede belongs to Russia, is about six miles long, rocky, harborless, and apparently inhabited by an unknown number of Russians busy erecting something very secret—airports, or bases, or merely a fish cannery. However, a scant two miles away, jumping over the romantic international dateline, lies Little Diomede Island, American owned, and inhabited by some three dozen Eskimos.

United States military strategists pooh-pooh enormous Russian military activity on craggy Big Diomede, pointing out that Cape Dejanoff on the Siberian mainland is more feasible from a defensive or offensive angle. Congressional Alaska Delegate Anthony Dimond had raised a rumpus about the Soviet activity.

That Japan is probably the focal point of the new Alaska defence plans is suggested by competent observers who have followed the recent American fleet manoeuvres. They have been concentrated in the North Pacific in triangular shape, with the Bering Strait and Alaskan waters as the apex of the triangle.



NOT A REST HOME — A CANADIAN INTERNMENT CAMP

No, this isn't a rest home, it is one of the Canadian internment camps in which are confined German prisoners of war. Formerly a hospital, it was idle for some years before being pressed into service to receive the new "guests" from across the sea. Prisoners spend most of their day lounging about in shorts. Officer prisoners are not made to work, in compliance with international regulations. A 10-foot wire mesh fence surmounted by barbed wire surrounds the buildings of the camp A second entanglement of barbed wire is constructed outside of this again. The corridor between the fences is flood-lit at night and patrolled by armed sentries.

BLAZING BRITISH GUNS SHOOT DOWN NAZI RAIDERS IN PAIRS

Two German planes, flying in close formation over England, were potted together by the missles of an English Spitfire plane from a British anti-aircraft gun. At any rate, like two dead ducks, they fell to the beach within 10 feet of each other.

RESERVED FOR HITLER
RESERVED FOR MUSSOLINI

BUT THE CHAIRS WERE NOT TAKEN

Special chairs were reserved for Hitler and Mussolini at the empire tea party, held by the Overseas League in London, to celebrate the "non-arrival of Hitler and Mussolini." Highlight of the evening was receiving of a telegram by the Marquess of Willingdon, former governor-general of Canada, purporting to have come from Hitler and Mussolini, apologizing for their reticence on this day of days, which incidentally was "Victory Day," the day which Hitler said he would be in London. The marquess is pictured receiving the message.

OBJECTIVE ATTAINED

Royal navy air arm Skua planes scored direct hits on a Nazi gasoline line supply base at Dorvik, not far from Bergen, Norway. The Germans have established many air and supply bases on conquered territory to back their attempted destruction of England. The British air force, however, is doing marvellous work in ferreting out these bases, within and outside of Germany, and smashing them in daring raids.

FACES "UNMITIGATED LIAR"

In a dramatic locked-door session, before the Dies Committee, Frederic March, motion picture star, was confronted by John L. Leech, former county organizer for the Communist party; and the man who accused him before the grand jury of communistic activity. March has branded Leech as "an unmitigated liar," and had expressed a strong desire to see Leech. March is shown here with Martin Dies at the hearing.

SIR NEVILLE TRAINS WITH HOME GUARD

Sir Neville Henderson, the former British ambassador to Germany, recently joined the home guards. He is receiving his military training at a private tactical school as how to deal with possible invaders if and when they come. Instructors are men who have served through the last world war and the Spanish civil war. Sir Neville is pictured ABOVE crawling on hands and knees supposedly to sight an enemy position.

SUSPENSION UPHELD

The executive committee of the National Association of Professional Baseball leagues has upheld the one-year suspension of Burleigh Grimes from organized baseball on the charge that he spat in an umpire's face. Manager of the Grand Rapids team, Grimes formerly managed the Brooklyn Dodgers and Montreal Royals

FOUR ITALIAN WARSHIPS SUNK AT LIBYA

Nazi Night Raiders Visit London Outskirts, Do Little Damage

First Night Attack On Capital Area Made in 3 Suburbs

Few Persons Injured, None Killed, Though Buildings Damaged—Foe Operating in Small Numbers

London, Aug. 23—(CP)—Germany again stepped up the pace of the battle of Britain today with an early morning bombing attack on three thickly-populated London suburbs, blasting homes and public buildings, but causing comparatively few casualties.

Although several private houses and apartment buildings were damaged, the police, after a mid-morning checkup, reported only a few people were injured and none were killed.

However, two children, one three years old and the other seven, were killed about dawn when a German plane dropped six bombs in the residential area of a northeast coast English town. Other German planes were reported in the southeast in what appeared to be the fag-end of night operations.

A direct hit demolished an empty motion picture theatre and an adjoining hall in a London area in this morning's German air raid.

A pub and a number of dwellings were damaged badly, and flying glass caused a few casualties.

Communique Issued

The Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security issued an early Friday communique which said:

"During last night there was some activity over this country by enemy aircraft operating singly or in small numbers.

TRY TO DESTROY CROPS

London, Aug. 23—(CP)— Two waves of German air attacks today in Southwestern England were regarded as aimed at destroying crops. Officials said there was little damage although about 200 bombs fell. One farmer said most hits on his land were near meadows and orchards and another said a hail of incendiary bombs lit up the countryside but fell harmlessly on pastureland.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 23—(CP)— Synopsis: The weather has been mostly fair in the Western Provinces, warm in Southern Alberta and cool elsewhere. Fair, cool weather now prevails in Ontario.

Lake Superior—Moderate variable winds; fair and cool today and Saturday.

Manitoba—East and southeast winds; partly cloudy tonight and Saturday; light showers in southern districts with a little higher temperature.

Saskatchewan— Southeast and east winds; partly cloudy today and Saturday with light scattered showers; stationary or slightly higher temperature.

Alberta—Partly cloudy today and Saturday with light scattered showers; not much change in temperature.

Why The Weather?

Rainfall and climate! Rainfall, next to temperature, is the most important climatic factor. The effect that rainfall has on climate, making it beneficial or otherwise, depends not only on how much falls, but also on how distributed through the year and on the form in which it falls, rain or snow. In some parts of the world 10 inches of rain is all that is needed for good wheat crops because it comes at just the right time of the year. In other parts heavier rains, while amply sufficient to raise crops make harvesting a hazard. One scheme of climatic classification is based upon a combination of temperature and rainfall, high temperature and abundant rainfall, high temperature and dryness, being two of the subdivisions

No Damage Seen As Italian Planes Raid Alexandria

Alexandria, Egypt, Aug. 23 (AP)—Italian aircraft early this morning bombed the Alexandria area.

A succession of planes heard in the cloudy sky dived down to unload their explosives.

An air raid warning lasted 2 1-2 hours except for a brief all-clear signals.

A British naval communique issued early Friday said:

"There was an air raid over Alexandria about 1 a.m. A few planes took part. No damage appears to have been done."

DECLARES RUSSIA HELPING NAZIS BEAT BLOCKADE

Soviet Government Newspaper States Russia Supplies Raw Material to Germany

RELATIONS REVIEWED

Moscow, Aug. 23—(AP)—The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia said today Russia is helping Germany beat the British blockade by supplying her with raw materials and in return is receiving German industrial products, including armaments.

Reviewing relations of the two powers since the signing Aug. 24, 1939, of their non-aggression pact, Izvestia claimed the treaty is still "the most important factor for peace" and that under a trade accord commerce between the two nations is the greatest since the last war.

The newspaper said the non-aggression pact "has proved its unshakeable firmness despite the fact that enemies of the Soviet Union up to this day tirelessly pursue provocational attempts to sow discord and mutual distrust."

Treaty of 1939

"I'm signing the treaty," it added, "both parties realizing that ideological differences and a difference in state systems must not constitute an insurmountable obstacle for establishment of good-neighborly, friendly relations."

"During many months previous to the conclusion of the Soviet-German treaty," it asserted, "Britain and France made constant attempts to harness the Soviet Union to their chariot and use the Soviet Union for their imperialist schemes. Above all they strove to provoke armed conflict between the U.S.S.R. and Germany."

The nonagression pact was put in official form under date of Aug. 23 last year in Moscow and signed early the following day by Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff and German Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop.

It is a 10-year treaty under which each country undertakes to refrain from any act of force against the other and also not to support warlike acts against either.

JOINT DEFENCE BOARD FORMED BY CANADA, U.S.

Mayor Laguardia of New York Heads List of American Members and O. M. Biggar, Canadian List

THE MEMBERSHIP

First Meeting Will be Held in Ottawa on Monday of Next Week

Ottawa, Aug. 23.—(CP)—Suiting the action to the word, the governments of the United States and Canada are moving swiftly to review the common defence of this continent.

Creation of a joint defence board was agreed upon by the heads of the two nations only last week-end. Personnel of the Board was announced last night. The Board will hold its first meeting here in the Canadian capital next Monday, just eight days after the history-making announcement that such a body would be formed.

The importance attached by the governments to this Defence Board is suggested by the personnel each has selected. First names on the lists of the two governments are Fiorella H. Laguardia, New York City's hard-hitting mayor, and O. M. Biggar, Ottawa Constitutional and Corporation lawyer with an international reputation.

PAPER CHARGES GREEK-ALBANIAN FRONTIER CLOSED

Italian Paper Says Greek Authorities Preventing Albanians from Working Lands Located in Greece

ITALY RESENTFUL

Rome, Aug. 23—(AP)—The newspaper Tomori in Tirana, capital of Italian-annexed Albania, claimed today Greek authorities had "virtually closed" the Greek-Albanian frontier.

The newspaper said the motive was to prevent Albanians with property in Greece from crossing the frontier to work their land.

As a result, it said, the anti-Greek feeling is mounting among inhabitants of border villages.

While diplomatic circles expressed a belief any Italian action against Greece would be held in abeyance for some time, Tomori continued to report other grievances.

It alleged a former Albanian official, Shevaket Osman Taka, was "assassinated" last May, although Greek authorities had reported Taka committed suicide.

Italy Ready to Act

Rome, Aug. 23 —(AP)— A high Fascist source said today Italy would invade Greece if the British occupied any Greek islands.

"Italy is not going to let the British occupy any Greek islands," the source said. "If the British move into Greece, we will do the same."

Five-Year-Old Girl Displays Physical Development of Adult

By WILLIAM T. RIVES
Associated Press Staff Writer

Houston, Tex., Aug. 23—(AP)—A five-year-old Houston girl, transformed by an accident of nature into a fully-developed adult, is testing the ingenuity of medical specialists.

The case recalled that of the little Peruvian child who became a mother at the same age last year.

The Houston girl's rare development was discovered Feb. 5 after she was taken as a private patient to Dr. Karl Karnaky here.

Dr. Karnaky diagnosed the trouble as arising from an ovarian tumor, of which there are only 10 recorded cases in children under 10 years old.

Removal of the tumor in such cases usually arrests the development and the child's condition gradually reverts to normal.

The operation was performed and specimens were sent to Duke University.

After more than 600 laboratory tests were made, and 12 other medical schools had participated in consultation and research, a new diagnosis was made.

It was discovered that all the girl's glands were overdeveloped; that she had reached full organic development when she was only two years old.

So far as Dr. Karnaky knows, there is no known cure for the case, but he said "we are still studying it and treatment has not been decided upon."

The girl's mind remains that of a normal five year old.

"However," said Dr. Karnaky, "she is more alert than children of her age. She is cleverer, her memory is better and she thinks faster than her playmates."

The child's physical development, while not that of a grown woman, also is abnormal. She is as tall as her 10 year old sister—4 1-2 feet—and weighs 79 pounds.

Her father is a laborer residing about 20 miles from Houston.

Dr. W. R. Thompson to Carry on Work in Dominion 'Lab' Here For All Parts of British Empire

Assistant Director, Imperial Institute of Entomology and Sup't. of Insect Parasite Laboratory at Farnham Royal, Buckinghamshire, England, Transferred to Belleville as War Has Interfered With Collection of Insect Parasites for Propagation—He Will Use Facilities of Dominion Insect Parasite Laboratory Here for His Work

Dr. W. R. Thompson, assistant director, Imperial Institute of Entomology and Superintendent of the Insect Parasite Laboratory, Farnham Royal, Buckinghamshire, England, has been transferred to Belleville, Ontario, to continue the work of the laboratory. He will have at his disposal in Belleville the facilities of the Dominion Insect Parasite Laboratory which incidentally is the largest and best equipped institution of its kind in the world.

The reason for Dr. Thompson's transfer is that since the occupation of several European countries by Germany, it has become impossible to collect insect parasites for propagation and distribution to Empire countries. Canada and the United States offer opportunities for the collection of new species of parasites, which will enable him to continue work similar to that which he has been doing for many years at Farnham Royal. His work at Belleville will be carried on for the benefit of all parts of the British Empire, as it was at Farnham Royal.

Dr. Thompson was born at Belmont, Ontario, and is a graduate of the Ontario Agricultural College. For several years he was on the staff of the Bureau of Entomology, United States Department of Agriculture. In 1912 he went to Italy for the U.S. Bureau of Entomology and for many years worked for the Bureau in Europe. In 1928 he accepted the position he now holds in the Imperial Service.

WILL BACK GREECE AGAINST ANY THREAT SAYS FOREIGN OFFICE

London, Aug. 23—(CP) — The government will stand by its guarantee to support Greece against any threat to her independence, Foreign Office circles said today.

The Foreign Office said it was awaiting a report of a conversation between the British Minister, Sir Michael Palairet, and Prime Minister Gen. John Metaxes yesterday.

The British guarantee was made April 13, 1939. It said:

"In the event of any action being taken which clearly threatens the independence of Greece and which the Greek government consider it vital to resist with their national forces, His Majesty's Government would feel bound to lend to the Greek Government all the strength in its power."

German Bombers Hit Movie Theatre, Which Was Empty and Miss Apartment Building Nearby Filled to Capacity

London, Aug. 23 (CP)—One bomb dropped in this morning's raid on three London suburbs scored a direct hit on a movie theatre, which was empty, and barely missed an apartment building, which was full.

This seems to typify the result of the raid, in which houses and apartment buildings were damaged in thickly-populated sections but only a relatively few persons were hurt. Police said none was killed.

A daylight survey after the London area's first night raid of the war showed that in addition to a number of private houses and apartment buildings, two movie theatres, a dance hall, a saloon and a bank were damaged.

There were 200 persons still asleep in the apartment building which was just missed, but none was hurt. Two women, awakened by the blast which wrecked the neighboring movie threatre found themselves blanketed by sharp fragments of splintered glass from a window above their bed.

The bomb had struck the boiler house in the movie, demolishing the theatre and an adjoining dance hall. The front entrance and the balcony of the theatre alone were left standing. The boiler was draped in grosteque shapes over the orchestra seats, while the silvered screen, which had reflected many newsreel images of war scenes around the world, swayed in tattered strips.

Suburban Streets Closed

Some suburban streets were closed off this morning as the debris was being cleared away, and the ruins were searched for possible additional casualties.

In one suburb, where three bombs fell between a movie theatre and a bank across the street, the windows of stores and houses were shattered for 100 yards.

A housewife, Mrs. J. Jackson, who lives in the heart of the thickly-populated district, said, "the force of the explosion blew me out of bed."

Another woman who lives across the street from the movie theatre said she was on the way to awaken her 13-year-old son after she saw the searchlights in the sky outside her window when "suddenly there was a whistling sound as if a bomb were dropping."

"I flung myself over my boy," she said, "and suddenly there was a huge flare from across the road and a terrific rending sound which seemed to leave us both deaf.

"Glass crashed in from every window in the house, but we were not hurt."

Published 'Casey at the Bat', Ernest Thayer Dies of Stroke

Daniel L. Casey Who Claims to be 'Mighty Casey' Was Never Mad at Thayer Over Poem

CASEY'S STRIKEOUT

Silver Spring, Md., Aug. 23.—(AP)—There was sadness in Silver Spring today, for he "mighty Casey" had just learned that Ernest L. Thayer was dead.

"I think that Mr. Thayer always thought I was mad at him for writing that poem", said 77-year-old Daniel M. Casey. "I want everybody to know I wasn't".

Thayer, who died of a cerebral hemorrhage in Santa Barbara, California, yesterday, published the famous "Casey at the Bat"—which became an American classic— in 1888.

He never admitted he had any particular ball player in mind when he penned his account of the strikeout that plunged Mudville into despair, but Dan Casey believes an incident in his career was the inspiration.

"I did my strikeout the year before," Casey said. "Mr Thayer, who saw it, moved to California and wrote his poem, or at least he published it out there. I always thought he held it back because he thought it would hurt my feelings"

FRANCE HAD 'VAST STOCKS' OF FOOD

London, Aug. 23 (CP)—An authoritative British source, commenting on French Foreign Minister Paul Baudoin's charge that the British blockade is a hostile act, said today there is no reason why France should be short of food this winter since she is virtually a self-supporting agricultural nation.

This source added there were "vast stocks" of food stored in France and, if there were any interference with their distribution to the French people, the responsibility was not Britain's, but "of the power with which the French government rushed to come to terms."

NINE ARE KILLED EAST OF DENVER IN PLANE CRASH

Nine Occupants Blown to Bits by Explosion — Believe Plane Crashed in Storm

PLANE BOMB-LADEN

Plane Found Early Today After Failure of Machine With Crew to Return to Airport

Denver, Aug. 23.— (AP)— Two officers and seven enlisted men were killed in the crash of a bomb-laden army plane (a two-motored B 18 Douglas) on a bombing range 43 miles east of Denver last night.

Flares dropped early today from a searching ship located the wreckage after the bomber, from Denver's Lowry Field, had failed to return from a routine bombing practice assignment.

The dead: 2nd Lieut. Wilbur A. Champaigne, Denver, pilot; 2nd Lieut. Robert P. Schmidtchen, Air Corps Reserve, Valley Stream, Long Island, N.Y., co- pilot; Staff Sergeants William McDearman Lebanon, Tenn., and Clarence L. Jobbs, Irving, Tex.; Sergeants Truman Fraser, McRory, Ark.; Ivy C. Adkins, Swits City, Ind.; Privates Claud E. Hutchinson, Denver, Charles E. Kelly, Texarkana, Ark., radio operator, and Weldon Bryson, Deport, Tex.

All the occupants had been blown to bits by the explosion. Parts of the bodies were found hundreds of feet from wreckage of the bomber.

Investigating officers theorized the accident occurred during a severe hail and electrical storm. They had not determined whether a lightning bolt struck the plane in mid-air, or whether its bombs exploded after it crashed.

Expect Laguardia War Secretary Within One Year

Associates of New York's Mayor Said to be Predicting Entry Into Cabinet if Roosevelt Wins

New York, Aug. 23.—(CP)—The World-Telegram said in a front page story today that associates of Mayor Laguardia of New York, said privately today that the Mayor will be appointed United States Secretary of War within a year if President Roosevelt is elected for a third term.

The Mayor's appointment to the joint Canada-United States Defence Board was seen as the first step towards his entry into the United States Cabinet, the newspaper said.

MYRON C. TAYLOR LEAVES ROME TO PAY VISIT TO U.S.

Rome, Aug. 22—(AP)—Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's personal representative at the Vatican, left by plane today for a visit to the United States during which his associates said, he would confer with the president on whether he should return to his post.

Taylor was accompanied by his wife and a nurse. He has been convalescing from an operation, and friends have said his health might prevent his return.

Japan's Program of Expansion Awaits "Go" Signal from Europe

By CHARLES H. KLINE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Hanoi, French Indo-China, Aug. 22—(AP)—Japan's avowed program of expansion in the south seas is seen here as awaiting a "go" signal from Europe.

Businessmen and diplomats in the Netherlands East Indies and French Indo-China voice repeatedly their belief Japan will take no direct action unless Germany's assault upon Britain shows more success.

These sources contend Japan and Germany may arrange a partitioning in the Orient which would have to wait for pre-occupation elsewhere of the western nations.

In contrast to the unanimity of this opinion regarding European prerequisites to Japanese action is the varying appraisal of the United States' role in the Orient.

Secretly, Indo-China has been trying to persuade United States airplane builders to turn over about 200 planes originally ordered for France, but most sources admit small hope of any American military intervention

Nevertheless, the Indies particularly have taken comfort in the continued presence of the United States fleet in Hawaii.

Of the two areas, Indo-China is acknowledged to be far more susceptible to Japanese absorption because of her scanty troops, little equipment and a shortage of ammunition

One of the most persistent reports in Hanoi is that before Marshal Petain's French government at Vichy obtains a formad treaty with Germany, a Nazi delegation, travelling by way of Soviet Russia and China, will inspect Indo-China to determine its worth.

Informed Hanoi sources reason that if such is the case, the Envoys would advise Hitler Indo-China is too valuable to give to Japan.

Two Italian Subs, Destroyer, Depot Ship, Sunk by RAF

Low-Flying Attack Made on Warships Anchored in Roadstead at Libya

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 23 (AP)—The Royal Air Force announced today British bombers destroyed two Italian submarines, one destroyer and one submarine depot ship yesterday in a low-flying attack on warships anchored in the Bomba roadstead, Libya.

The communique added that all British airplanes returned safely.

Bomba is about 100 miles from the Egyptian frontier.

The text of the Friday noon communique:-

"Our aircraft made a low-flying attack on enemy warships anchored in Bomba roadstead, obtaining direct hits which destroyed two submarines one destroyer and a submarine depot ship.

"All our aircraft returned safely.

"The attacking aircraft were fired on by heavy anti-aircraft guns, pom-poms and multiple machine guns."

"Our bombers also attacked the landing ground at Derna as well as motor transport concentrations, a repair depot and shipping.

"Many bombs exploded among aircraft and motor transport vehicles, causing considerable damage.

"In Italian Somaliland Magodiscio airdrome was subjected to a series of raids by bombers of the South African air force. Direct hits were scored on transports concentrated in the vicinity of administrative buildings, which subsequently were seen burning.

"Direct hits were also scored on buildings, hangars, wireless transmitting station and barracks.

"Three enemy aircraft were believed to have been badly damaged. All our aircraft returned safely."

"Numerous reconnaissances were carried out over the Kenya-Italian Somaliland frontier. In the course of a raid on Assab, Eritrea, naval barracks were bombed."

British Guns Fire 'Few Rounds Across Channel'

Whether British Guns Fired from Land or From Monitors, is Not Stated

London, Aug. 23—(CP)—Military sources said today British guns had fired " a few rounds across the channel" at the German guns bombarding Dover from the French coast.

These sources said the German bombardment would not make Dover untenable from a military point of view. They declined to say whether the British had fired from land or from the type of gunboat known as a monitor.

Naval sources said it would be extremely hard for battleships to silence German guns which offered comparatively small targets.

Military informants declared the German bombardment was "practice."

EARL OF ATHLONE OPENS THE C.N.E.

62nd Consecutive Fair Will Pay Tribute to Canada's War Effort

Toronto, Aug. 23—(CP) — The Canadian National Exhibition opens its gates today for the 52nd consecutive year.

Exhibits demonstrating Canada's war effort and performances and parades paying tribute to the fighting men of the Empire will headline the 1940 fair, which ends Sept. 7.

The Earl of Athlone, Governor-General of Canada, will declare the exhibition officially open this afternoon at the main band shell, following a luncheon tendered him by C.N.E. officials.

Main pageant of the fair, shown each night before the grandstand, starting Aug. 26, will pay tribute to British naval power from Drake to Dunkerque. Honor also will be paid to men of the Empire's armies and air forces.

Tomorrow, 20,000 veterans will march in the Warriors' Day parade, largest number ever to take part. A record representation of United States veterans will be included.

With agriculture and industry assuming a new significance in wartime, additional interest centres about the farming exhibits and displays of manufacturing processes.

Among new events this year will be a beauty contest to select "Miss Canada from among Provincial contest winners. Mary Ellen Battan, 17-year-old Thorold girl, will be Ontario's entry.

French Aircraft Used In Nazi Raids on U. K.

London, Aug. 23—(CP)—Indications that Germany was using French planes in raids over England were seen in the statement of experts that a raider shot down yesterday was of French origin.

Earlier, General Charles de Gaulle, head of the French commission pledged to continue resistance against Germany, had declared in a radio broadcast that 800 French airplanes had left French colonial Africa for France, there to be "put at the disposal of the enemy (Germany)."

LONDON SOLDIER KILLED

Ottawa, Aug. 23 (CP)—Cpl. Harold Vousden of London, Ont., was reported killed, in a casualty list issued by the Defence Department today.

Sigmn. Russell George Lambie and Private Jack Thorpe, both of London, Ont., were listed as wounded.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

RED CROSS RICHER BY FRIEND'S AID

The coffers of the local branch of the Red Cross Society were swelled today by the sum of $8.50 through the enterprise and foresight of Mrs. Stanley Lennox, 74 Dundas Street.

Mrs. Lennox embroidered a handsome linen runner and sold tickets among her friends. Today, Mrs. Charles Dalyrmple, Pinnacle St., was announced as being the holder of the lucky ticket, the number of which was 62.

No Provincial Aid For Employable Persons on Relief

The Ontario Government's new regulation discontinuing its contribution toward the relief of employable persons went into effect on Thursday, August 22, but will have little effect on the relief rolls of this city, it was revealed by local relief authorities at the city hall this morning.

The significance of this change is simply that if the city's relief department supplies relief to any employable person it will have to bear the entire cost itself. No rebate will be received from the government.

Any person now applying for relief must produce medical certificate claring that they are not physically able to work.

"We have been anticipating this movement on the part of the government for some time now", stated relief officials. "Our rolls have received a thorough check, and we have acted accordingly. At the present time there are very few on our rolls who are employable, therefore the new ruling does not affect us as much as some other centres."

Miss Florence Kerrigan Completely Exonerated On Charge Preferred

Miss Florence Kerrigan, resident of this city, was completely exonerated of a charge of vagrancy in city police court today when Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson offered no evidence in support of the charge.

Miss Kerrigan, Charles A. Payne who appeared for her, told the court, had been arrested by police on the charge while in the company of her mother and a lady companion, and kept in custody over night.

The accused girl pleaded not guilty to the charge when arraigned today. Mr. Payne told the court there was no evidence of vagrancy in the circumstances and moved, that the case be dismissed. The crown offered no evidence and Miss Kerrigan was honorably discharged by Magistrate E. J. Butler.

Police Blotter

"I am not guilty of taking one dollar, but I did take fifty cents", a young lady resident of this city, told Magistrate Butler in city police court today when arraigned on a charge of theft from a member of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

A ghost of a smile flitted over the Magistrate's face as he sentenced the lady in question to one month's suspended sentence.

John Bowman, who appeared on a charge of drunkenness in a public place will spend the next three months in the common jail.

This sentence followed the evidence that it was Bowman's fourth offence, and the production by the crown of a lengthy police record.

Four inebriates pleaded guilty and paid the conventional fine and costs.

BERMUDA ASSEMBLY TO MEET SATURDAY

Hamilton, Bermuda, Aug. 23—(CP Cable)—The House of Assembly has been summoned specially to meet tomorrow afternoon. There have been three secret meetings already this week, subjects of which have been closely guarded.

Political observers feel the sessions were linked closely with proposals to provide the United States with air bases in British possessions on the Atlantic coast.

12 Persons Report Registration Cards Have Been Lost

At least twelve persons in the South Hastings Electoral district have already lost their registration cards it was revealed at the Registrar's office at Shire Hall this morning. Col. W. R. Rierdon stated that this many persons had communicated the loss of their cards with his office, asking for information as to how to get another.

Registrars are not empowered to issue duplicate registration cards to such persons as have lost theirs, however, revealed Col. Rierdon. Under present rulings persons losing their cards must apply to Bureau of Statistics at Ottawa, stating polling division in which they were registered, also the city or town and polling subdivision. Col. Rierdon considered that it was possible that authorities would change the present ruling governing the procuring of duplicate cards when the original has been lost, but at present they must be procured through Ottawa.

WRIGLEY SWIMS WILL BE HELD AT C.N.E., AUG. 31

Prizes Will be Presented to All Who Will Finish—Women's Mile Swim to Start at 2.30 p.m. and Men's Swim at 3.15 p.m.

The Ontario Section of the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association, and the Canadian National Exhibition, announce that the Senior One Mile Men's and Women's Championship Races for the beautiful Wrigley Trophies, will be swum at the Canadian National Exhibition waterfront course on August 31st. The women's mile swim is scheduled to start at 2:30 p.m. and the men's swim is scheduled to start at 3:15 p.m.

Wm. Wrigley Jr. Company Limited who have sponsored these amateur swims for years, have added a prize feature that will be appreciated by every club, coach and amateur swimmer in the Province of Ontario. The two champions, as in the past, will receive beautiful replicas of the large Wrigley Trophies, for their permanent possession. The second and third place winners will receive the standard Canadian Amateur Swimming Association championship medals. The new and added feature this year means that the next six swimmers to finish will receive miniature silver cups, and further, all other swimmers finishing the mile under thirty-two minutes for the women, and thirty minutes for the men, will receive appropriate souvenir medals. This feature of additional prizes for all who finish, will inspire all contestants to greater efforts to complete the mile within the time specified.

This information has been in the hands of all swimming clubs for some weeks, and hundreds of amateurs are in training for the Wrigley Mile swims.

"Throughout the summer the Ontario Section of the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association has held important swim meets throughout Ontario, and at Montreal and Buffalo, and the climax is the Mile Championship Swims at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Mr. Ernest Hobson, President of the Ontario Section of the C.A.S.A. is confident that the Association will this year produce a very large entry list for the Wrigley Swims. Mr. Hobson attended many of the meets throughout Ontario and reports coaches and swimmers in Ontario are enthusiastically preparing for this major event at the Canadian National Exhibition on Saturday, August 31st.

The Wrigley Swims are open only to Ontario swimmers, and Mr. George N. Duthie, Director of Sports of the Canadian National Exhibition, has already received many entries from Swimming Clubs throughout the Province of Ontario.

U. S. Army Has Weapon Supply For 3,000,000 Men

Chief of Staff Acknowledges Adequate Supplies of Newer Lightning-War Weapons Lacking

Washington, Aug. 23—(AP)—An official inventory showed today, officers said, that the army has an ample supply, not only of rifles, but of all basic weapons for a force of 3,000,000 men—more than twice the number that would be under arms in the first year of a compulsory military training program.

Replying directly to critics who have said that the War Department could not equip a conscript army, Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, declared flatly yesterday: "We have plenty of material to train all these men."

Although he derided fears that the United States would have a "wooden gun" or "broomstick" army, Gen. Marshall acknowledged without hesitation that adequate supplies of newer, lightning-war weapons were lacking. He referred especially to anti-tank guns, 60-millimetre mortars and 90-millimetre anti-aircraft guns.

Taking issue with the argument that conscripts should not be drafted until modern weapons were available, he declared that soldier's basic training could be given with existing equipment.

Letter to the Editor

THANKS FOR AID

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:
Dear Sir,—

Registration under the National War Service Department having been completed, the officials in charge of registration wish to thank all those who so freely gave of their services during the three days of the work, and thereby lightened the work of the registrars throughout the district.

To the various boards of management of church halls, schools, private citizens who donated premises, the Utilities Commission, Boy Scouts, Girl Guides, county officials and the local Press, we wish to extend our appreciation of the generous response to assist in a public service.

The great number of offers of assistance reaching our office during the last three weeks is a glowing tribute to our Canadian people.

Again thanking one and all for your welcome aid in this time of stress,

Yours truly,
(Signed) George H. Stokes, M.P.,
on behalf of the Registration Officials.

REGISTRAR VOICES HIS SATISFACTION

Great Care Taken With Registrations, Is His Comment

That there were very few local delinquents, if any, who failed to register during the period of National Registration which closed on Wenesday evening, was the opinion of Registrar Col. W. R. Rierdon, this morning as his staff went about the work of tabulation of returns from the outlying electoral sub-divisions. Some of these returns have not yet been received, it was disclosed, and it will be some days before the work is entirely cleaned up.

All duplicate registration cards of male registrants between the ages of 19 and 45 inclusive, must be tabulated and listed separately, and these cards shipped to military headquarters for this military district. All other cards including originals of males between aged of 19 and 45, are shipped to Ottawa for filing on government records.

Col. Rierdon was particularly pleased with the work which was done by the rural registrars in his electoral district. "Almost without exception cards from the rural districts were filled in exactly according to regulations and the returns made by these deputy registrants were in perfect order. In many cases, the duplicate cards which had been filled out for males of military ages, as well as women's and other male cards were forwarded to this office already sorted and in separate envelopes". This thoughtfulness greatly reduces the work amount of work necessary at this office", said Mr. Rierdon.

CHILD FALLS AND FRACTURES ARM

While playing tag with some other young lads near the railroad yards yesterday afternoon, nine-year-old Teddy Musgrave, son of Mrs. Isabella Musgrave, of 93 Moira Street East, had the misfortune to fall off a box car, striking the ground with sufficient force to fracture his right arm. The young lad was taken to a surgeon who reduced the fracture and Teddy is around today much the same as usual with the exception that his arm is carried in a sling.

OBITUARY

REV. JOSEPH OGDEN
(Glenora)

Picton, Aug. 23. —(Special)— News of the death in Kingston hospital yesterday of Rev. Joseph Ogden was received with regret by a host of friends here. He had been a patient in the hospital there for two weeks but previously had been in apparent good health. Mr. Ogden had been retired from the ministry for the past four years and resided at Glenora but continued to supply at times in district churches.

For many years he was engaged in missionary work in the north and assisted in establishing Red Cross hospitals. He served on the Demorestville and Cressy Circuits of the United Church. He was a member of the Prince Edward County Children's Aid Society for some years and a member of the Prince Edward Ministerial Association. His friendly smile and his willingness to help in a practical way won him a host of friends. A fine, Christian gentleman has passed on.

Surviving are his wife, a son in North Bay and a daughter, Mrs. Gordon Dainard of Glenora.

MRS. SARAH CROOKS

After an illness of three months' duration Mrs. Sarah Crooks, widow of Isaiah Crooks, passed away at her residence, 281 Albert Street, on Thursday, August 22nd.

The late Mrs. Crooks, who was in her 81st year, was born in County Antrim, Ireland, being a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Hall. For many years she was a resident of Belleville and was well known and held a high place in the regard of all who knew her. In religion she was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Surviving her are one son, Mr. Clifford R. Crooks, and one daughter, Mrs. George S. Wallbridge, both of Belleville; one sister, Mrs. Andrew Stirling of Denver, Colorado.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

JOHN WOOD
(Bass Lake)

John Wood, a hardware merchant of Greenfield, Ohio, died at his summer home at Bass Lake on Thursday, August 22nd., at the age of 68 years. The body was forwarded this Friday morning from the Thompson Funeral Home, to Greenfield, Ohio, where the funeral will be held.

WOMEN OF MOOSE HOLD MEETING

The Women of the Moose, Belleville Chapter, 435, met in the Moose Auditorium on Tuesday evening with Graduate Regent J. Chapman presiding in the absence of Senior Regent C. St. Louis. An announcement was read from Grand Recorder Miss Katherine Smith, Washington, D.C., that a Pilgrim Governor's meeting and conferring of the Friendship Degree will take place in Kitchener, Ont., early in October. A letter of appreciation was also read by Recorder Mary Doran acknowledging a donation that had been sent to Mooseheart.

Point Anne

Point Anne—Mrs. May Yates, Belleville, spent the week end with her sister, Mrs. E. Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Loyst of Rochester, N.Y., spent a few days with his sister, Mrs. John Fleming.

Mr. Felix Genereux received word on Friday of last week of the death of his son-in-law, Mr. George Desbiens, R.C.A.F., who with several others was killed in an airplane crash on the western coast of Canada. Mr. Desbiens is survived by his widow, who before her marriage was Miss Jean Genereux and two children. The sympathy of the community is extended to the bereaved family.

Mrs. Catherine Huck entertained at a family party on Sunday. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Bennett and son, James of Montreal, Dr. B. A. and Mrs. Brown and family of Oshawa, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Simmons and daughters and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Huck and family, Miss Anna Huck and Messrs. William and Alex. Huck, who are living at home, were also present.

Mr. and Mrs. Elford Ross of North Bay, who were recently married, spent part of their honeymoon with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Whitehead.

Mr. J. A. Gordon and Mr. Sydney Davies of Toronto, spent a few days at the home of Mrs. J. Haines.

Mr. and Mrs. Clorth Sedore of Toronto, spent a few days at the home of Mr. Charles Sedore.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Bennett and family have moved into the house recently vacated by Mr. Dan Gannon.

Miss Violet Hill spent a few days in Montreal visiting friends.

Registration of the citizens of Point Anne was completed on Wednesday. There was no undue rush and everything was efficiently finished. The deputy registrars were Mrs. Thos. Bowler and Mr. Robert Howard. They were assisted by Mrs. W. Insley and the Misses Gertrude and Hazel Simmons, Lillian Insley, Ruth MacDonald, Martha Stewart and Lois Huck.

LIVED IN CALGAGRY

Calgary, Aug. 23—(CP)— Lance-Corporal Harry Nicholls of the Grenadier Guards posthumously awarded one of the first two Victoria Crosses won by British army men during the second Great War, lived in Calgary for about four years prior to 1932, friends said here last night. He was killed in action after performing his feat of "conspicuous gallantry" during the evacuation from Dunkerque.

His Majesty King George makes a close scrutiny of anti-aircraft shells during his visit to anti-aircraft posts in Kent recently. These shells are largely responsible for the driving off of German attacking planes.

GERMAN BOMBS SCARE COWS

London, Aug. 23—(CP)— Farmer Charles James, of Barry, Wales, who argued that his cows gave thin milk because German bombs scared them, was acquitted today of selling milk deficient in butterfat.

When James was arrested he declared he wasn't responsible for the milk. A commission checked up on his claim.

VETERAN GUARD WANTS NO CREDIT FOR THE CAPTURE

A. W. Drum, Supervisor of Guard, who Apprehended Escaped Internee, Says "It Was My Duty"

HELD FOR POLICE

Montreal, Aug. 23—(CP)—A 56-year-old veteran of the South African and first Great Wars frowns at the idea that he should get any special credit for the capture of Guenther Lorentz, Nazi prisoner who tunnelled his way out of a Northern Ontario internment camp.

The veteran, A. W. Drum, supervisor of the veterans' guard detail at Victoria Bridge, where Guenther was detained last night, was the man, who become suspicious of the hatless German fugitive and held him for Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Back on duty Thursday night, all supervisor Drum would say of the German's detention and arrest was:

"He didn't give satisfaction when he was questioned so I ordered him to be held as it was my duty to do"

The short, husky-looking supervisor would say little more, but there was more to it than just that.

Wearing a dark-gray suit, and carrying chocolate and road maps wrapped in a newspaper, the escaped prisoner reached Victoria Bridge stretching from Montreal Island to the southern mainland, some time before sundown.

Bundle Attracted Attention

He looked weary and unwashed but it was the bundle which attracted first attention. Supervisor Drum stepped into his path to ask about the contents of the bundle.

Guenther held it out as he was asked who he was and where he was from.

The Nazi, a naval lieutenant, gave his name as Harm Nielsen and an address in Oslo, the Norwegian capital. He said he had been in Canada only a short while.

His guttural accent, though his English was perfect otherwise, betrayed him.

Without making any attempt at resistance, he went along with the guard supervisor to the toll station at the head of the bridge.

A telephone call brought an R. C. M. P. patrol car and he was taken to headquarters where further questioning finally brought an admission of his identity.

War Risk Rates On Average Lower Than in Last War

London, Aug. 23 (CP)—War risk shipping insurance rates, increased Monday to 20 per cent of valuation in certain sea areas, still are lower on the whole than those during the last war, London insurance circles said Thursday.

Even in Germany's unrestricted submarine campaign of 1917 rates never rose above 20 per cent, one informant said, adding that the present rates generally are lower than in 1914-18 "because Germany has no navy to speak of and her attempts to blockade Britain by bombs have failed."

It was learned the maximum rate announced Monday, applies to cargoes travelling between one small area of England and Eire, northern Ireland and parts of America, West Africa north of the Equator, and the Canary Islands, and on voyages to Australasia and the Orient, not via the Mediteranean.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma said to pop, Maud Hews lent me a splendid book about world conditions, and tonight's a perfect opportunity for me to stay home and start it.

So you're considering the idea of going to a movie, pop said, and ma said, Well not definitely, I mean of course if there happened to be a picture that we both want to see. Family troubles is at the Mawsoleum. Prunella Grace is in it, she said.

That's the picture all the critics have been knocking, isn't it? pop said, and ma said, Well yes, in a generel way. It seems to be one of those plots where everything could be peacefully settled in the first 5 minutes if she'd only speak up like a man to her new husband and break the news that her divorce from her old husband hasn't gone through yet after all, but instead she keeps dodging and ducking and wont tell him the simple fact that's already known to everybody elts in the picture and out of the picture, ma said.

Nothing doing, I've been a stooge for that weak kneed situation to often, pop said. Anyway I alway thought you couldn't stand Prunella Grace, he said, and ma said, It's true, I believe I'd send her a box of poisoned candy if I didn't begrudge her the thrill of anticipation she'd get unwrapping it. She reminds me of al: the women I've never been able to stay in the same room with, without exception. But the point is, Willyum, she's making a personal appearance at the Mawsoleum tonight, so it's a golden chance to see with my own eyes whether she really wears such gassly hats or whether it's really just an optical delusion of the screen, ma said.

The result being they went to see a picture called Murder On The Range.

ENJOY this fascinating flavor daily —millions do!

Cheese Board Members Endorse Resolution for Readjustment in Price Of Canadian Cheese

A resolution requesting the Dominion Government to endeavor to make "some readjustment in the price of Canadian cheese; a reasonable advance commensurate with the cost of production" was unanimously endorsed by the Belleville Cheese Board here last night.

The board went on record as being 100 per cent. behind the Dominion and Empire in its efforts to furnish ample food for its fighting forces in every way possible. This, however, due to the draft on labor by the military authorities and increased industry, was becoming a difficult problem for cheese makers.

Members felt some readjustment in prices should be made to ensure the continuation of the desired supplies. They also urged that consideration to this request be given by Canadian authorities and the British Ministry of Foods.

The Dominion Government will also be asked by the board to grant representation in the Dairy Products Board to Ontario manufacturers of cheese, insofar as this province supplies 75 percent of the cheese exported to Great Britain.

Copies of the resolution will be forwarded to the Hon. the Prime Minister, the Federal Minister of Agriculture and the Ontario Cheese Patrons' Association.

THREE OF CREW REPORTED MISSING

Melbourne, Aug. 23—(AP)— A petty officer and two seamen of H.M.A.S. Hobart are reported missing and believed to have been killed during the evacuation of British Somaliland, it was announced here today.

In response to a British request for artillery assistance, the Hobart landed a gun volunteer crew which rushed the front line and fought gallantly, contributing to the successful British withdrawal.

The Hobart's walrus plane successfully bombed an Italian concentration at Zeila and the Hobart also assisted British land forces by bombarding Italian positions and destroying all places of military value at Berbera.

TRIBUTE PAID TO ROOSEVELT BY REPUBLICAN

W. A. White Says President's Leadership in Foreign Affairs Has Been Been Magnificent

WANTS AID FOR ALLIES

New York, Aug. 23—(AP)—William Allen White, chairman of the committee to defend America by aiding the Allies and a frequent Republican critic of the Roosevelt administration, appealed Thursday night for "the patient confidence of a united people" for President Roosevelt.

"He has earned it," said White in a broadcast. "I, as a Partisan Republican who has oppo■ him for eight years, want to pause to pay tribute to the President of the United States.

"From the beginning of this war against democracy he has known that our first line trench lay across the Rhine. His vision, more than that of any other ruler of the world, has seen from the start the meaning of this ancient conflict.

"We may agree or disagree with him on domestic policies; but I think no American statesman of the first order has risen to deny that his leadership in foreign affairs has pointed the only direction of safety for the American people.

"Mr. Willkie's acceptance speech revealed his anxiety for British victory. This is a national cause. It calls for national unity."

White, publisher of the Emporia (Kas.) Gazette, said his committee had expanded to 600 locals throughout the United States, and that between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 signatures to petitions had been obtained in behalf of the British cause.

He said "perhaps many thousands" of planes, as well as "considerable quantities" of guns and munitions, had been shipped to Britain and, formerly, to France.

He urged the sale of 50 over-age destroyers to Britain in return for naval bases in the western hemisphere, and other help for the British cause.

CAPTAIN, CREW OF 12 RESCUED FROM L. MICHIGAN

Tug Earneida Swamped and Captain and Crew Take to Lifeboat—Radio Appeal Sent Out

TECHNICIAN SAVED

Chicago, Aug. 23—(AP)—Coastguardsmen rescued Capt. John O'Brien of Waterford, N.Y., and a crew of 12 from Lake Michigan early today after heavy seas swamped the tug Carneida and sent it to the bottom on its maiden voyage.

Three barges loaded with 1,900 tons of corn were cut adrift shortly before the captain and crew took to a lifeboat last midnight. Capt. O'Brien called for aid over radio equipment which had just been installed.

Ruben Jacobson of Lakewood, O., technician for Radio Corporation of America who had installed the equipment, was washed overboard and remained in the water 90 minutes before being picked up by the lifeboat.

The Carneida, a 38-footer, was built in Pittsburgh and had just been delivered to the Cargo-Carrier Company of Minneapolis. With the barges in tow it left the Calumet harbor yesterday morning for Buffalo, N.Y. The tug sank about six miles of suburban Lake Bluff.

900 MARKSMEN VIE FOR AMERICAN TRAPSHOOT TITLE

$10,000 Prize Money Awaits Sharpshooters of All Ages

Vandalia, O., Aug. 23—(AP) — There's gold in them thar "pidgins" and about 900 marksmen—crack and otherwise—went after $10,000 today in the Grand American Handicap, most unpredictable of sporting events.

The trapshoot title has been won by a 14-year-old boy, a 70-year-old man, by millionaires, unemployed laborers, farmers, barbers, mechanics, store-owner—by everyone except experts.

No man has ever won it twice, although many have tried. The secret lies in the handicap. Each man must stand between 16 and 25 feet behind the pigeon release, according to his registered scores for the year and his known ability.

Roy W. Miller, 45-year-old rural mail carrier of Grove City, Minn., won the preliminary handicap yesterday. His prize money amounted to almost two-years' salary.

Miller won the hard way, cracking 100 in a row for a perfect score from the 20-yard line. It was the second time in the history of the preliminary that a perfect score has been recorded.

Zweiner himself shot a 99 in 1933 to win the same handicap.

U.S. GOVERNMENT ASKS REVIEW OF 2 DECISIONS

U. S. Government Sends to Supreme Court Cases Over Alleged Excess Profits in First Great War Shipbuilding

Washington, Aug. 23—(AP)—The United States Government asked Supreme Court Thursday to review two decisions involving alleged excess profits on first Great War shipbuilding as a matter of "immediate national concern."

The cases, involving the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, were filed in 1925 and 1936. In one, the company sued the government for $7,500,000 profits not paid in, while in the other the government sued the corporation for recovery of allegedly excessive profits already paid. About $13,365,000 is involved in the suits. The government lost both in district court and is appealing from a decision of the third Circuit Court of Appeals which upheld the lower court.

Solicitor General Francis Biddle, in a petition filed with the Supreme Court, contended that the government had had no choice but to deal with Bethlehem at its terms, and added:

"In times of national emergency the men charged with preparing the nation's defences have no time for haggling with a contractor who refuses to perform his indispensable function unless he be assured an exhorbitant profit."

Sweden Secretly Hoping for British Victory Says Wandler

Montreal, Aug. 23—(CP)—Sweden is secretly and discreetly hoping for a British victory, E. Wandler, Stockholm industrialist here on his way to Newfoundland, said here Thursday.

A manufacturer of paper-making machinery, Wandler will supervise the establishment of a plant in Newfoundland. He came to Montreal from New York.

"Sweden's cultural links have been with Britain and France for the past 10 years rather than with Nazi Germany," he said. "Some people over here seem to have the notion that we have been closer to the Germans. This is a mistake."

Wandler said the Nazi party existed in Sweden but had found no response from the Swedish people.

Rednersville

Rednersville—Miss Joan Scott, Port Hope, spent last week with Noreen Farley.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott, Port Hope, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Farley.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Smith, Toronto, motored down and spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Hennessey, Oshawa, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hennessey.

Misses Eva and Marion Wanamaker returned home Sunday from a motor trip to Toronto, London and Windsor.

Miss Donna and Edith Ward, Wellington, spent last week with their uncle, Mr. Harold Ward.

Miss Marie Stafford of Toronto motored down to spend Sunday with her parents

Mrs. Tom Leslie of London visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Weese, over the week-end, Miss Dall Leslie returning home with her.

A number gathered at the Rednersville Hall Thursday evening to present Mrs. Kennedy (Ruth Sills) with a gift. The evening was spent in games and singing after which Rev. Boomhour read an address. The address was signed on behalf of the community: Muriel Roblin, Vivian Smith, Marjorie Roblin. Ruth was presented with a walnut tea wagon by Miss Muriel Roblin and Vivian Smith. She replied in a few well-chosen words thanking everyone for the lovely gift, after which candies and fruit were passed and an enjoyable evening came to a close.

MINARD'S LINIMENT

West Huntingdon

West Huntingdon—The ladies of Fuller United Church sponsored a very successful lawn social on Wednesday evening on the church grounds. A bounteous repast was enjoyed by the large number present and the program was well received. The Young People's Orchestra of West Huntingdon gave several numbers. Other items included solo and instrumental numbers by Mr. Frank Palmer of Ivanhoe; vocal solos by Mrs. Nelson Welsh of Moira; Recitations by Miss Beverley Palmer of Ivanhoe. Rev. J. MacDonald of the Presbyterian Church spoke briefly. Mr. Kenneth Stewart was chairman for the evening's program.

Mrs. Howard Cooke entertained the members of the W.M.S. of the United Church on Thursday, for their August meeting. The members of the Mission Band and Baby Band were guests at this meeting which took the form of a pot luck dinner at the noon hour. After lunch the following program was staged by members of all three organizations. The Scripture lesson was read by Theda Moorcroft; Watch Tower responded to by members of Mission Band; Roll call by Thanks; Recitation, Muriel Ashley; Reading, Mrs. John Moorcroft.

Mrs. Albert Ashley gave a report on Baby Band work. The meeting was closed with prayer by Mrs. V. Barragar.

Guests from West Huntingdon at the Rutherford-Vanderwater nuptials in Moira United Church on Saturday were Mr. Sam Fargey and David and Mr. Kenneth Stewart.

Miss Eileen Langridge, Belleville, spent last week with Miss Kathleen Moorcroft.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Smith of Niagara Falls are visiting this week with Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Sills.

Friends here were sorry to learn of the serious accident which befell Mr. Delbert McCurdy when he was injured about the face when kicked by a horse.

Mr. Joe Price of Actinolite is holidaying this week with Lindsay and Russell Sills.

Mrs. Foster Wilson spent a couple of days last week with friends at Warkworth. She was accompanied as far as Wooler by Mrs. V. Barragar who visited at Mr. and Mrs. Sharpe's home.

Mrs. Florence Stewart has returned home after spending a month with her daughter, Mrs. G. E. Schrader of Gelbert.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Fitchett and Marilyn were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. David Thompson of Moira.

Miss Margie Haggerty was a Tuesday guest of Miss Joan McCurdy.

Mrs. Thomas Rollins of Fuller spent a few days recently with her daughter, Mrs. Don Fargey.

Mrs. Geo. Cooke entertained the Ivanhoe Branch of the Women's Institute for their August meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Carman Gibson and family of Thurlow were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Green.

Mr. G. E. Schrader of Gelbert spent Wednesday at the Parsonage.

Miss Hilda Moorcroft spent her vacation week visiting friends in Toronto.

Mr. Allan McQuarrie of Lindsay spent a couple of days recently with Mr. Alex McCurdy.

Mrs. J. J. Wilson of Stirling, Mrs. Thomas Moorcroft and Miss Alma Moorcroft of Hazards and Miss Victoria Moorcroft of Cooper visited Mr. and Mrs. John Moorcroft and Mr. and Mrs. Foster Wilson on Friday and Saturday.

Messrs. Elmer Post, Harold Wright, Colin Donald, Mac Sarles and Philip Carr, all members of L.O.L. No. 300, paid a fraternal visit to Frankford Lodge on Saturday evening.

The rain which came on Monday morning was much needed, but it interfered with the stook threshing for a couple of days. Many interesting stories are in circulation regarding the extra good yield and quality of grain being threshed. Perhaps the most outstanding story comes from the farm of Mr. Melville Donnan. In a 9-hour day's cutting of oats, Mr. Donnan used 50 lbs. of twine with an ordinary binder.

Mrs. John Moorcroft spent a few days last week with friends at Madoc.

The Young People's Union of United Church held their weekly meeting at the home of Georgia and Jack Pitman on Friday evening. Due to the busy season not as many as usual attended, but those in attendance enjoyed a good program. Mr. Arthur Hassall conducted the reading of the Scripture lesson. Mr. Kenneth Stewart gave the address, choosing for his subject, "Junk". Mr. Amos Carson gave a reading. At the close, two contests were enjoyed, conducted by Miss Jean Thompson and Mr. Stewart.

St. Andrew's W.M.S. held their August meeting at Mrs. Howard Ashley's home on Thursday with an attendance of 23. The president, Mrs. Harry Thompson, was in charge of the program and also read the Scripture lesson and Rev. Mr. Walker led in prayer. Roll call was answered by word Service. Readings were given by Miss Lorna Wright, Mrs. W. Shaw, Miss Margaret Wright and Mrs. Milton Shaw. In the business period it was decided to hold a pot luck dinner and quilting at the church in September. The meeting closed in the usual way.

Mr. Wm. Fitchett, Sr., of Stirling was a recent guest at the home of his son, W. J. Fitchett.

Recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Sandy McCurdy were Mr. Ed Sharpe of Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. W. Hensley of Branton and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Reid of Harold.

Mr. Kenneth Stewart was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Welsh of Moira, on Sunday.

Mrs. Morley Smith and Barbara of Belleville spent a few days last week with Mr. and Mrs. William Bray.

Choosing as her subject, "The Two Natures of a Believer," Mrs. John Wallace gave a most interesting and inspiring address at the monthly meeting of the Endeavors S. S. Class, which met at Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Post's home on Tuesday evening. Others assisting with the program were, Mr. Philip Carr, who offered prayer, Mrs. Clayton Wright who read the Scripture lesson and Mrs. W. J. Fitchett who contributed a solo. Roll call was answered by a Scriptural question. Mr. Kenneth Stewart addressed the gathering briefly. In the business period it was decided that the sick folks in the community will be remembered. Messrs. Clifford Green and W. J. Fitchett were appointed to prepare the next program. It was also planned to hold a weiner roast with the Young People's Union as guests, the place to be along the beautiful shore of Rawdon Creek on Mr. Hammond's farm. The benediction closed this very helpful meeting.

Born—On Saturday, to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bronson, a daughter.

Recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Haggerty were Mr. Fred Ward of Stirling, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Forsythe of Wellington, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Thompson of Carmel and Mr. William Pilling of Toronto.

Miss Helen and Mr. Kenneth Lane of Frankford were Saturday evening guests at Arthur Wilson's.

Donald Wilson has been holidaying with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Barlow, 2nd of Thurlow.

Miss Alice Bell of Belleville is visiting her niece, Mrs. Foster Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Ashley and George attended the Wood-Wright wedding at Minto United Church on Saturday afternoon.

Miss Jean Haggerty is visiting friends in Toronto this week.

MR. CHURCHILL KNOWS HIS MOTHER TONGUE

"Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few."

This was Prime Minister Churchill's tribute to the Royal Air Force that will live forever. The deeds of the R.A.F. astonish the world and will continue to astonish mankind while the war lasts. Nothing finer or more sincere has ever been said of any arm of the service.

Now for those who love their mother tongue, English, spoken by hundreds of millions, that sentence is a revelation of Mr. Churchill's command of language. It is musical, it is capable of the finest expression, greatest actors can find joy in the words. And yet they are mostly Anglo-Saxon words that make up the sentence. There are 17 words in all, fifteen are Anglo-Saxon and two are popular and familiar words, "human" coming through French from the Latin and "conflict" being from the Latin. Fifteen out of seventeen words in the sentence come from the tongue of the English people of many centuries ago. Mr. Churchill does not use big words. Of the fifteen purely English words, fourteen are one-syllabled. The other Anglo-Saxon word is of two syllables only as are the two words "human" and "conflict," springing from the Latin.

Mr. Churchill stands as a model for those who would achieve power over their own tongue. He speaks in the English of the men and women of his country. When necessary he can use words which have entered the language from the Norman French and other sources to lend a variety to expression and to paint shades of thought by the use of these two great streams, Anglo-Saxon and Norman French, which make up the language which Mr. Churchill knows so well.

HITLER AND 'THE EAST'

General Sir Archibald P. Wavell, Commander of the Middle East Forces, would not be surprised to see Hitler act as Napoleon did when he found his way to invasion of Britain blocked, "turn to the east in search of easier success."

There stands the fact as it stood in the first years of the nineteenth century when the Napoleonic "star" was in the sky. Like a meteor he arose but he passed out into colorless space. Hitler rose in the customary atmosphere of meteoric red. Many see signs of his paling. He tries to hover but he cannot land in Britain for the warders of the great island fortress are alert and allow him no rest. They send their winged messengers of the R.A.F. bearing bombs for the Hitlerian factories, railway lines, communications and oil plants, they make a foray far down into Italy where Duce's men are and there they pound and blast airplane plants and munition works.

Winter is no friend of Hitler, neither is the autumn fog, and perhaps the nazi may try a drive elsewhere because he does not like the way things are moving in the east when he has so big a task before him in the west.

If he does he will find things as another dictator found them, everyone is confident. General Wavell said in a broadcast from Cairo, "We've had a long period of watching and waiting out here, and some of you have grown weary of it. But I can assure you that the importance of our position is fully realized and we shall very soon have our full share of equipment which is now being produced in great quantities.

"We are at the crisis of the war—perhaps at the turning point for victory. We stood alone in 1805 and won freedom back for Europe. We shall do the same again now."

Mr. Churchill and Lord Beaverbrook and their associates and the all arms of the service and the people at large have been playing their part in the preparations and fight.

Britons may well exclaim with their King Henry Fifth of old when he declared that men would live to be proud to have been present in one of the victories of that day. So it is with these people who hold the citadel of the western world today against the Middle European tyrant. They are proud to do and suffer and die if necessary that England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland and the Dominions and Colonies and the spirit of democracy and the rest of the world may have a chance to live without the curse of nazism trailing its slime over all mankind.

Great deeds are being done in the United Kingdom and in Europe against the enemy in nazi-held territories and in Germany and Italy.

Yet as Herbert Morrison said in a broadcast on Thursday afternoon, while achievements have been marked, "we see our work hitherto as but the beginning of the beginning. We are beginning to see daylight through the trees." He cited the instance of one factory which started production four months ahead of schedule. Well might he comment, "It's a lovely thing to beat the clock in these days." Years before the war Hitler was working the clock overtime and lying about it to the world. Britain will hold until production far surpasses that of the enemy in all fields and then will be the step toward victory.

This is something of the task that Hitler has to face—this relentless piling up of British strength, while he dwindles and shrinks away. Perhaps for relief and to whip up the flagging zeal of his countrymen he will make an effort elsewhere but ever there will be the Britain in the west which is determined to give the death-blow to the nazi empire of aggression and tyranny.

General Wavell believes as all Britain believes and as the neutral world believes and as the suppressed peoples of Europe hope and pray, that Britain will triumph.

If Hitler turns to the East or Southeast it will be a sign that things are not going too well in the west. All signs indicate that his way in the west is bound in the long range view to be dsastrous to the aggressor.

MADAME'S STANDARD SHOE

What changes have come in France since June show in an announcement that this week a standard shoe which has been authorized by the Vichy regime will be placed on the market. This shoe will be in eight styles, no other shoe being on the market.

This is one of the results of France under the heel of the conqueror. The Vichy regime has taken this step which it claims will cheapen production.

It was but yesterday that Madame and Madamoiselle thought not in the terms of a standard shoe. That was the day when France was the arbiter of fashion and the moulder of styles, "the glass of fashion and the mould of form" for the great part of the western world. But today France will be limited by her standard shoe.

War Not Taking All Reader's Time

(Montreal Star)

The average reader of a newspaper is a curious animal. He reads each type of news or features in a certain order and will not deviate from this order any more than a housewife will serve the dessert before the soup.

Hence, it is interesting that the war, with all its swift changes and tense headlines has not upset the orderly reading habits of the average newspaper reader. The only actual result of war news has been to increase the time devoted by the average reader to what is probably a more thorough perusal of the daily newspaper as a whole. He reads the war news, of course. Men read the editorial page more closely and many women readers who formerly neglected the editorial page, now read it as carefully as do their husbands.

The war has apparently not restricted the normal diet of reading in all sections and departments of the daily paper. Women continue to peruse society items, obituaries, recipes and local news with unabated interest. The average man devotes as much time as ever to sport news, local news and the financial page.

All these statements are not guesswork. They are founded on solid facts which are contained in a nationwide survey now being conducted on behalf of the newspaper associations of the United States and Canada. This survey, "The Continuing Study of Newspaper Reading," which is being made under the auspices of a committee of advertising and advertising agency executives by a very widely known international research organization, provides a careful study of seventeen daily newspapers in the United States and Canada, with nine other papers yet to be examined.

x x x

Here are some of the findings in the "Continuing Study":

The best read war story on page one of four papers examined was read by 68 per cent of the men and 36 per cent of the women. In other words, approximately two out of three men readers read the most important war story on the front page, while about one out of three women read the same story.

Women, apparently read human interest stories more than war news. The lead war story on page one of a prominent paper was read by 28 per cent of women readers, while two stories, "Girl, 4, Hurt by Automobile" and "4,000 Women Attend Cooking School" got 53 per cent and 48 per cent reading attention respectively. Men readers, however, showed a higher percentage of reading interest in war stories. It is significant to note that at the height of the Nazi drive through Flanders, the leading war story on Page one of a metropolitan paper got 68 per cent reading attention while the sport column received 71 per cent.

In a daily newspaper, the term "continuing features" refers to columns and special departments which appear daily in every issue of the paper. A very large proportion of the total reading time of both men and women is devoted to these continuing features. Another significant fact revealed by the "Continuing Study of Newspaper Reading" showed that war news had definitely not affected the normal reading interest in these features.

x x x

It is also apparent from all the studies to date that the daily newspaper is getting more reading. People who were asked for an estimate of the time they had devoted to reading yesterday's news, stated they had spent more time with their daily paper, and emphasized this with such statements as "Dinner was 10 minutes late because I didn't finish my reading until 6.40...." and "I took a local train so I woulr have a few extra minutes to read on the way."

The conclusion reached by the "Continuing Study of Newspaper Reading" so far, is that war news, while paramount, has not monopolized the attention of newspaper readers, nor has it caused a decrease in interest for the "normal" editorial and news content as well as the advertising content of the newspaper.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Avoiding Overweight Prevents Diabetes

I met a friend recently whom I had not seen for about two years. I had to look at him twice as he had lost considerable weight which greatly improved his appearance. His eyes were bright and I told him his loss of excess weight had given him a more youthful appearance. He then told me that a routine examination by his physician had discovered some sugar in his urine. His physician had told him that if he were willing to reduce his weight he would likely prevent diabetes and the necessity of taking insulin.

By reducing his starch foods by half and his fat foods by one-quarter, in a period of less than a year he had reduced his weight from 186 pounds to 135 pounds, the proper weight for his height and build. When he reached 135 pounds he increased his food intake slightly and during the two months previous to our meeting, his weight had remained at exactly 135 pounds.

Had this man not reduced his weight his chances of becoming a diabetic were great because sugar was present in the urine and the amount of sugar in the blood was at the extreme limit of the amount present in normal urine.

There was no history of diabetes in his family but his physician's warning that overweight was a forerunner of diabetes so impressed him that he went immediately on the low starch diet with the above excellent results.

As a matter of fact, if a full or complete history of every diabetic could be obtained, it would be found that diabetes is hereditary, although all the children of a diabetic parent might not develop diabetes. Dr. E. P. Joslin, Boston, who has done so much work on diabetes over many years, states "when a diabetic marries a non-diabetic but whose father or mother and sometimes brother or sister has diabetes one-half the children should develop diabetes. But if a diabetic will choose a non-diabetic for a partner, none of the children should inherit the disease."

Can diabetes be prevented if there is a family tendency to it?

"Above all things do not become forty and fat. By avoiding overweight the hereditary tendency to diabetes can probably be overcome"

Unsung Heroes

Pilots of the Royal Air Force are earning the plaudits of the world and even the grudging tribute of their enemies for heroic service, sometimes against terrific odds. While joining this chorus of acclaim, we would like to put in a word for the "forgotten men", the air gunners and the bomb aimers. The unsung heroes who crouch in the cramped confines of transparent cubicles or turrets, drawing the concentrated fire of attackers, yet carrying on with cool precision, surely merit unstinting tribute. Without the navigating skill and bombing accuracy of the bomb aimer or the dauntless courage and deadly aim of the gunner, a bombing expedition is not only useless but helpless. Thanks to the unsung heroes, Britain's bombers have been useful and formidable.

Canadians, in the First Great War and in this conflict have proved their unbeatable courage and daring as fighting pilots. The young men now training to man the bomb sights and the gun turrets of the R.A.F. and the R.C.A.F. will contribute to the fame of the "forgotten men."—Canadian Aviation.

The R. A. F.

Yesterday's mysterious slackening in the air raids over England followed a four-day slowing-up in the force and volume of the aerial invasion. Last Thursday, when the attacks reached their peak to date, the Germans boasted that the British were experiencing only a foretaste of the coming tornado; since then, for some reason, the expected crescendo of bombardment has, except for a short-lived rise of activity on Sunday, turned into a diminuendo. The real meaning of this strange interruption is known only to the German High Command. It may indicate preparation for a new and more intense onslaught from the air. The British, decreeing that the entire country should henceforth be considered a defense area, under military rule, are acting as if it might be a prologue to direct invasion. Either of these explanations would still imply that something has gone wrong with the schedule announced by the Germans themselves, which called for an ever-increasing momentum of attack until the Royal Air Force lost command of the skies.

It is evident that this has not occurred. On the contrary, the extraordinary feature of this titanic battle of the air is that it has failed to demonstrate the overwhelming superiority of the Luftwaffe that everybody took for granted. Supposing German fighting planes outnumber the British three to one and that the squadrons so far employed in England represent only a fraction of the total operating and reesrve forces, British claims that German losses are four to one could be heavily discounted and yet show that the Nazi lead is being cut down at a terrific rate. So could the Air Ministry's announcement that 513 Nazi planes, including 377 bombers, were shot down last week. Our correspondent in London describes how carefully the reports of returning pilots are checked, but even if large allowances are made for errors, this would still be an impressive "bag" for the British and a heavy loss of costly and powerful machines for the Germans.

For whatever reason the enemy relaxes, it is to be noted that there is no let-up in the offensive raids of the Royal Air Force. Night after night it repeats its deadly hammering at important objectives in enemy territory. The characteristic of these attacks is that they return again and again to the same factories, airdromes, railway junctions and military bases. The great aircraft works in Milan and Turin have been bombed three times in a week. Although Axis officials continue to minimize the effects of British raids, an order forbidding letters from the Ruhr district to be sent to other parts of Germany strongly suggests that grave damage may have been inflicted in that great industrial valley, the forge of the Nazi war machine.

It is too soon for forecasts, too soon to draw one's breath in hope, but not too soon to applaud the brilliant performance of an outnumbered force in holding the invaders at bay, foiling attempts to put ports, airfields and munitions works out of business, chasing the bombers away from London, successfully defending the island while at the same time taking a bold offensive in hostile country. During these crucial days the quality and spirit of the Royal Air Force have been written into the great legend, this time not in earth or water but in the sky.—N. Y. Times.

Total Blockade

Germany's announcement that it has aplied a "total blockade" to Britain could be accepted with a yawn if it did not indicate that the Nazis are using bombast to cover the failue of U-boat "frightfulness" to close British sea lanes.

"The unsuccessful British attempt to starve German women and children through a hunger blockade," says the Berlin announcement, "is answered by Germany with the complete blockade of the British Isles here proclaimed."

The weakness of the Berlin boast is apparent in the world "proclaimed." It is one thing to proclaim something, and another to carry it out. Britain has made its blockade complete, but all Germany can do is promise something like it, after having unsuccessfully attempted it for almost a year.

The Reich wasn't working on any partial blockade theory when it torpedoed the liner Athenia on the day Britain declared war. Neither was it showing restraint when it sent down the liner Arandora Star which was carrying German and Italian internees to Canada.

No, "sink without trace" has been German policy since the war began, and no exceptions have been made in the case of neutrals, for whom this latest threat is partly intended. The other part of it, no doubt, is for home cnosumption, as an alibi for failure to strangle Britain.

"Airplanes are attacking every vessel," the Berlin announcement adds, but this must be for home consumption alone, because the neutral world knows that Canada's Second Division sailed to Britain unmolested a few weeks ago.

German airplanes have been attacking convoys, it's true, but not every one, and with indifferent results where the raids have been made. With fall and bad flying weather coming on, even this form of attack must be modified.

All in all, the "total blockade" threat is more of an encouragement to the British Empire than a menace.—Windsor Star.

U. S. War Sentiment

The tide of indignation against Germany is rising steadily and inexorably in the American republic. It has grown progressively since the inhuman attack of Hitler's forces on Poland. With the successive invasions of Denmark, Norway, Holland and Belgium, all unoffending neutrals to whom Hitler had made unlimited promises of peace and protection, public opinion in the States has become steadily more hostile. This is indicated by polls taken by various organizations, by numerous letters in the newspapers and by the unrestrained declarations by public men, many of whom are now clamoring for action on the part of their government that would give every assistance to Britain short of going to war. In fact there are even those who advocate a declaration of war.

It is gratifying that Britain has put no pressure on the United States to enter the war. All London has asked for is the product of armament factories in the States which she will pay for. Recently she requested that America sell to her 50 unused destroyers. During the last few days United States citizens of prominence are urging that these be handed over. In increasing numbers, Americans are coming to the realization that an unprecedented disaster would befall them if Britain failed to stop Germany at the English Channel.

It is interesting to note that Wendell Wilkie, Republican candidate for president, is strong for aid to Great Britain. There will be no political football-playing with foreign policy in the coming election. The only flaw in the ointment seems to be the incapacity of the States to provide quickly the kind of armament that Britain requires urgently.

If the British can get a good supply of war planes from the United States during the next few weeks, it seems certain that she can triumph in her critical battle with Germany for the mastery of the air. The United States would be well repaid in the assured defence of her own realm for any extra effort which she may make in hurrying the manufacture of vital weapons for Britain.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

Leon Trotsky Dies A Violent Death

Lev Davidovich Bronstein, the little Russian Jew who became world famous under the name he borrowed from a onetime jailer, "Trotsky," has fallen victim at last to the assassins who pursued him for more than a decade. He leaves a world that loved him little and treated him ill, but will not soon forget him.

Trotsky was a failure, but a failure of Napoleonic mould. If Lenin had lived another year or two, or if this passionate theorist had paid more attention to the squalid realities of practical politics, Trotsky might today be the ruler of Soviet Russia and the would-be ruler of a Soviet world. He fell to Stalin, the furtive ward-heeler who held the seemingly insignificant post of Party Secretary under Lenin, but who cannily used his office to turn the Red bureaucracy into a Stalinite political machine.

So, ironically, Trotsky's name does not appear in the history books of the state he helped to found. But the "capitalist" accounts, which he scorned as mendacious and class-biased, have done him more justice than the official records of the Red Workers' Paradise, and by any of them he appears as a remarkable and dynamic figure. Long an undercover revolutionary, it was he who organised and led the October Revolution which put the Bolsheviks in power; he who created and organised the Red Army, and turned it from a mob of half-clad rioters into a better fighting machine than Stalin could show in Finland last year. His adherents affirm he was Lenin's chosen successor. If this is true then Lenin's aim never wavered from world revolution, for it was on this rock that Trotsky and his faction split, hopelessly and permanently, with the Stalin machine. He lost that fight of 1927, and two years later was sent into exile for the rest of his days.

Of the numerous books and tracts he wrote, best known is his History of the Russian Revolution. It gives you, inadvertently, a good picture of the man—despite the fact Trotsky was so "objective" as to refer to himself throughout the book in the third person. Here is a work by an eyewitness of one of the greatest upsets in history, and his account is as bare and bald as a page of Euclid. Even knowing as he did the human beings concerned, their weaknesses and their errors, he treats the thing as an almost chemical process of inexorable law—each movement foreordained, each leader predestined by the iron rules of dialectical materialism. He would have carried the same attitude into an autobiography; only six months ago he told an interviewer: "I did not lose power personally and accidentally, but through the workings of inevitable historical forces."

These historical forces, materialized in the form of a humble pickaxe, brought a brilliant but futile career to its end.—Montreal Gazette.

An Ambassador Speaks

Ambasador Bullitt was amply entitled, as an American, to speak words of solemn warning to his countrymen. He had lived in France for almost four years as a key observer for his government. He had seen, across the Rhine, the relentless building of the German war machine while the rest of Europe slept. He had watched the paralyzing work of Germany's strategy of intimidation and terror, and he had seen, at first hand, the weakness and disunity that finally laid France low. He had had the bitter experience of seeing the German Army march into Paris, the heart of democratic culture in the Old World. He had a message that needed to be delivered. The American people should be grateful to him for letting them hear it.

What Mr. Bullitt had to say about Nazi aims and American dangers has been said before, although seldom said so well. But at least one part of his message had particular force and authority because it came from a man who had lived in France and had loved France. When, he asked, are we going to tell our legislators that we are ready to make sacrifices in the defense of our freedom? "When are we going to tell them that we want to know what are our duties, not what are our privileges?" The swastika might not be flying over Paris today if the French people had talked to their legislators in such a strain while there still was time. Our own history in the next few years will be happier if our people act, and act now, in the spirit of Mr. Bullitt's warning.—N. Y. Times.

Ordeal Ahead

British guest children in Canada face one ordeal to which not enough thought is being given. It is something against which only the parents of Canadian children can guard.

Nothing is more cruel than the cruelty of childhood, and it is this that these little visitors will have to face. They will be going to school here, amid new surroundings and new companions. They must mingle with Canadian boys and girls, who will find the guests "different." In childhood psychology, to be different is to be "funny," and to be funny is to be a fit butt for all sorts of cruel jokes. These British youngsters will not know Canadian games, they will speak with a different accent, use different expressions, and this will mean much suffering for them.

Children, of course, are not deliberately cruel. They are simply young and thoughtless, heedless of the suffering they inflict on those whom they do not understand. But children are sensitive, and these little guests, if Canada is not careful, may receive wounds that may not be easy to cure.

The remedy is in the hands of Canadian parents. It is their duty, now, to talk with their children, to tell them of the new playmates who will be with them soon, to explain so that the childish mind may grasp the circumstances that bring these children here. Tactful, thoughtful parents can pave the way so that the British guests when they encounter their new associates, will be something in the nature of heroes, and not objects of derision.—Windsor Star.

Eleven Soldiers H. & P. E. Regt. Invalided Home Now in Picton

'All Confident That Nazis Can Never Land in England

OTHER ITEMS

Picton, Aug. 23 —(Special)— Eleven members of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment arrived home from England Wednesday night, having been invalided home for various ailments. The men appeared to be in good spirits but regretted they had seen no action. They stated they were confident the Nazis could never land in England and stated that Canadians had no idea of the preparation Britain has made. They had seen huge craters made by falling bombs but no Canadians had been killed. Some had been struck by flying fragments. Those who returned were Acting Cpl. I. R. Stringer, Privates N. J. Deline, O. B. Herrington, F. L. Weese, H. Cuyler, H. Lethy, J. M. Chambers, A. J. Graham, W. G. Gilroy, A. C. Cooney, G. Filion.

Word has been received here of the death in Chicago of Frederick Lazier, who at one time resided in Picton.

Picton Public School has been redecorated and will re-open on September 3rd, as will Picton Collegiate and most other country schools.

Post-Nuptial Reception

The post-nuptial reception of Mrs. W. T. Reeks was held at Picton Manor on Tuesday afternoon. The recent bride, formerly Margaret Graves, received the guests, wearing a rose frock with brown accessories. The lounge was brightened by baskets of rose gladioli. Miss Nora Fleury of Belleville, niece of Mrs. Reeks, wearing a long frock of organdie with touches of pink and blue, admitted the guests. The tea table was done in yellow and white centred by the wedding cake. Mrs. Thomas Fleury, Belleville, sister of the bride, poured tea and the assistants were Mrs. Rodney Rundle, Misses Florence Purtelle, Catherine Bond, of Picton, Gertrude Fleury of Lindsay and Barbara Fleury of Belleville. Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Lynch, Belleville, and Miss Clare Goodwin of Toronto.

Entertain at Tea

Miss Beatrice Huff entertained at a tea Thursday afternoon in honor of Miss Miriam Powers, who is being married on August 30 to R. P. Errington, of Toronto. Gladioli and other summer flowers were used in decoration. Mrs. A. M. Powers poured tea and Miss Mary Leavens assisted in serving. The guest of honor was presented with a lovely walnut end table from her friends, for which she expressed her appreciation. A social time was spent. Mrs. Harold Rutlan entertained this (Friday) afternoon in honor of Miss Powers, the setting being lovely old Castle Inn which was decorated with a profusion of flowers for the occasion. A social time was spent and gifts were presented to Miss Powers. The bride-to-be has been a member of the teaching staff of Leamington Collegiate for the past four years.

Mrs. (Rev.) D. N. Morden entertained at tea Thursday afternoon at her home on Paul Street, when phlox and gladioli were used in decoration. Roses centred the table at which Mrs. Gilbert White presided. The assistants were Mrs. L. B. Calnan, Mrs. Clayton Morden and Mrs. George Grant of Montreal, who is a guest of her parents, Rev. and Mrs. Morden.

Mrs. Morden entertained at tea again this (Friday) afternoon when the assistants were Mrs. Arthur Morden, Mrs. Ernest Wright and Mrs. George Grant while Mrs. A. E. Calnan poured tea.

Mrs. Charles Ostrom of Belleville and Miss Ethel Sherbne of Winnipeg were guests on Wednesday of Mrs. A. M. Ostrom.

Mrs. W. S. Fraser and Mrs. P. A. Vanderwater are returning today from a few days' visit in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Calnan entertained at tea Wednesday afternoon in the garden of their home on the bay shore. Mrs. F. L. Ward poured tea and assistants were Misses Betty and Barbara Nourse and Frances Elinor Calnan. Mr. and Mrs. Calnan also entertained Sunday afternoon at tea, the out-of-town guests being Mrs. Gerald Allison and Miss Connie Allison of Kingston, Miss Kathleen Creeggan of Gananoque and Dr. and Mrs. Lawrence Kolb of Baltimore, Md.

Mrs. N. Nolan and daughter, Mrs. O'Brien, of Rochester, will be week-end guests of Mrs. James Goodwin and Miss Lena Goodwin.

STERN WARNING GIVEN AGAINST SPEEDSTERS

Stern warning to city and other motorists that cancellation of driving permits will follow this "mad racing through city streets" was sounded by Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C. in open police court today.

Police officers will be instructed to enforce the speed laws to the limit. His Worship said. One officer cannot handle the number of city speedsters that day after day are madly racing along Victoria Ave., Dundas and Front Streets. "This has got to stop, and the only thing to do is to cancel their permits".

Speeding through city streets, was absolutely "silly and unnecessary", Magistrate Butler added.

DUAL ALLIANCE SEEN IN FUTURE FOR DOMINIONS

'New Statesmen and Nation' Says Today Continents Are Natural Units for Defence

PROBLEM OF CANADA

London, Aug. 23 (CP Cable) — Discussing implications of the Canadian-United States joint defence board, the weekly publication "New Statesman and Nation" today said editorially that "sooner or later Canadians will have to reconsider their attitude towards the political structure of the New World."

It said that continents now are natural units for the purposes of defence, adding: "If either the Nazis or the Japanese could win a footing anywhere on either coast of this hemisphere (America) the security of all its 21 republics and of Canada would be threatened."

'Aloofness' of Canadians

The editorial said the "aloofness" of Canadians might in part account for the "somewhat disappointing record" of the Pan-American Union. It recognized Canadian membership would create constitutional difficulties but declared that "commonsense won't be deterred from going forward under the spur of common danger."

Trying to envision the postwar set-up, the weekly said that Europe is a natural unit but its empires "bestride other continents." If the United Kingdom belongs to Europe, "emphatically the Dominions do not." It concluded that "for some purposes we will have to tolerate and even encourage a dual allegiance. A beginning has been made in Canada."

Spectators' Comment

The Spectator, commenting on the British offer to lease sites in the western Atlantic to the United States for naval and air bases said that Prime Minister Churchill was wise to avoid linking up the question with the suggestion that the United States send Britain some old destroyers.

But it added that "cooperation to the utmost that either side feels free to offer is profoundly to be desired—and Mr. Churchill has not disguised the fact we should be glad of their destroyers."

LT.-COL. CASSELS GIVEN PROMOTION

Enters C.A.S.F. as Deputy Adjutant-General With Rank of Brigadier

Ottawa, Aug. 23—(CP)—Lt.-Col. George Hamilton Cassels (retired list) has been appointed to the Canadian Active Service Force as Deputy Adjutant-General with the rank of Brigadier to take over administration duties generally connected with the militia as a result of the National Resources Mobilization Act, 1940, it was announced today.

For services during the Great War, Brigadier Cassels was created a companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, received mention in despatches and was brought to the notice of the Secretary of State for War.

He was born at Cacouna, Que., in 1882. Studied at the Royal Military College and later served with the Toronto Light Horse from 1902 to 1906.

In October 1914 he was appointed to the 48th Highlanders, N.P.A.M., of Toronto, and in 1915 went overseas with the rank of Major in the 58th battalion C.E.F. He served in France and Belgium in 1916 and held the appointments of Deputy Assistant Adjutant General and Assistant Adjutant General. Promoted to Lieutenant-Colonel in 1918 he was invalided home in 1919. His home is in Toronto.

Fire Burns After 150 Years, Lighted by Spark From Flint

Descendant of North Carolina Pioneers Wonders if 'Me and the Fire Will Go Out Together'

FIRE ONCE MOVED

By RALPH HOWLAND
Associated Press Staff Writer

Saluda, N.C., Aug. 23—(AP) —A 150-year old fire burns brightly atop Tyron Mountain and inside the cabin that houses it, a radio plays softly. An 80-year old man sits there alone and occasionally accompanies the radio music with his old fiddle.

A paced highway passes nearby, leading to large cities, and across the mountains an aluminum works pounds out weapons of war.

But William Morris cares little for those things "outside."

He'd rather take his old time-worn poker and stir up the fire; perhaps, take down an aged pan and cook a slab of meat, all the time "wondering if me and the fire will go out together."

Story of The Fire

He'll tell you a story about the blaze if you'll "set awhile, just pull up that chair and just make yourself to home."

A century and a half ago, John and Sarah Morris left Pennsylvania, their meagre possessions piled high on a buckboard, and travelled afar to establish a home.

Their trail led them into the Blue Ridge Mountains, then infested by Indians that had been pushed back from the seaboard.

They chopped down trees and built a cabin. They dug deeply and found stones for a chimney. Then they moved in.

John Morris took out his hunting knife and struck a spark from a flinty arrowhead. The spark fell upon dry wood and a blaze sprang up.

The Morrises knelt in prayer and thanked God for caring so well for them.

Fire Has Never Been Out

That was the birth of the ancestral fire which you now see burning so brightly on the hearth of William Morris.

It never has been out, was moved only once—into the nearby cabin where the old bachelor now lives alone.

As the blaze crackles and makes ghost-like shadows on the log walls, William Morris recalls how people used to walk miles over the mountains to borrow a piece of fire.

"Too lazy to start one themselves. Nowadays a fellow will jump into a car and drive half a block to get himself a match."

Keeping the fire going, once had a utilitarian virtue. Finally, it became so famous in the wilderness as a never-failing flame that the family prided themselves upon it. Utility thus faded into sentiment and finally, with the old man, almost into reverence.

Last of The Family

He's the last of the family.

"So me and the fire will go out together."

And now, as the neighbors rise early every day, they cast glances at the Morris cabin, to see if smoke from the ancient fire is still rising from the chimney.

ESCAPEE THINKS CANADA FINE

Guenther Lorentz Says He Has Been Well Treated but Not Helped from Outside to Escape

Ottawa, Aug. 23—(CP)—Guenther Lorenz, the German prisoner who escaped from an internment camp in Northern Ontario and got as far as Montreal before being picked up, thinks Canada is a "fine country," it was revealed here by officials today.

Questioned by police Guenther was the height of candor.

He said nobody on the outside helped him to get out of the camp, but a few friends inside.

When he got out he asked a man he met how to get to Toronto and was shown the Canadian system — thumbing.

He got several rides by this simple method and found his chauffeurs to be most friendly and agreeable.

Not having any money he asked a fellow he met if he could lend him $2.50.

"Sure thing," the man said, and fished right down in his pocket.

Herr Lorentz speaks with a terrific accent but apparently no one was suspicious of him until he failed to produce his registration card. It is suggested that those on the lookout for him may have been confused by the report that he spoke perfect English.

When captured Lorentz had on his person a number of maps. He explained these simply. At a filling station he asked the attendant whether he could have some maps and the man said, "sure".

H. & P. E. Regt. Highly Praised By Former Senior Officers

Colonels A. E. Bywater and H. J. Smith Take Salute on March Past

READY FOR CAMP

Trenton, August 23 (Special) — Recruits of the Headquarters Company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment were highly praised by two former commanding officers of the regiment, Col. A. E. Bywater and Col. H. J. Smith. The two Colonels carried out an inspection of the company last night at Bayside Park.

Both Frankford and Stirling platoons were transported to Trenton for the inspection and both platoons were congratulated for their showing.

The company under the command of Major Angus Mowat, was marched past, in column of route and in column of platoons, with the Colonels taking the salute.

Commenting on the inspection Col. Bywater and Col. Smith praised the men for their fine showing. "The recruits are fine, well-built and will no doubt make excellent soldiers," they both agreed.

"I am very pleased to be here tonight to carry out this inspection with Col. Smith," stated Col. Bywater to the recruits. "This company is comprised of as fine a body of men as I have ever seen gathered into one company and I am very sorry, that I am not associated actively with the regiment."

"The infantry has not had a great deal to do in this war, as yet," said the Colonel, "but will ultimately have a great deal to do with winning the war. The Royal Air Force has been bearing the brunt of the attack but it will be the fighting infantry, that will be necessary to win the war."

"We will win the war but it will be a long hard struggle," he said. "You men are training now to do your part and I am sure you will put your best efforts forward to do so."

Col. Smith praised the men for their efficiency in marching and in military movements during his address to the company.

"The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment has a proud record and carries many battle honors on its flag, stated Col. Smith. "You men have a record behind you, a record in keeping and a record in making. I am sure you won't fail."

Following the inspection, Major Mowat announced that only 139 recruits would be taken to camp, on September 2. The company had been recruited to full war strength of 239 men and 100 men will not be taken to camp. In selecting those, who are to be left behind, the Commanding Officer stated, that he had cut those who were recruited last from the lists together with those, who are needed in their civil occupations at home.

Schools Open Sept. 3rd.

Trenton Public School Board announces that schools will re-open Tuesday, September 3 as originally set. Pupils who wished to remain out of school to help with the farm work will be given permission to do so.

The Trenton High School will also be opened at the same time. Pupils who have joined up with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will also be given permission to stay away from school, until the end of camp on September 15. Forms were sent out to the pupils so that they can make application for leave in order to do farm or essential war work but so far no applications have been returned. It is expected, that a number will be received within a few days from the recruits in the N.P.A.M.

WEDDINGS

WILSON—BADGLEY

A pretty wedding took place last evening at six-thirty at Holloway Street United Church parsonage, when Anita Jean, daughter of Mrs. Jessie Badgley and the late Albert C. Badgley, became the bride of Wilson Johann Wilson, L.A.C., of the R.C.A.F., Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson J. Wilson of Mount Dennis, Ontario. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Royal E. Newman, 44 Hillside Street.

The bride wore a charming frock of Heavenly blue sheer with white accessories and corsage of pink roses, sweetpeas and bouvardia. She was attended by her mother who was attired in navy blue sheer with corsage of sweetpeas, carnations and bouvardia.

Mr. Robert Milton Badgley, brother of the bride, was groomsman.

A reception at the home of the bride, 52 Ridley Avenue, followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson will reside in Toronto.

Good Health Essential for Teacher, Too

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Summer affords most teachers an opportunity to improve themselves physically for the year ahead. Those teachers who grow stronger, more serene and poised this summer will be fitter for our children to be with next winter.

Many teachers spent some of the summer at school with profit to themselves; others might much better have been lolling and basking in the sun. Too many teachers who need physical rehabilitation are forced to take summer school works, thanks to the inordinate pressure for grades and credits.

Emotional Drain

Some teachers in summer improve their minds and bodies by traveling. Those working on farms and serving as counselors in camps should profit, as a rule, and be more efficient teachers next winter. In my student and early teaching days, I think I built up considerable physical reserve in summers from hard work on the farm.

A few teachers will have to care for the aged and sick at home. In doing so they probably gain spiritually, but often lose physically and must begin with children in September emotionally unfit. I wish all parents who expect a great deal during summers of their sons and daughters who teach in winter would keep in mind the children and youth who will be pupils and students of these sons and daughters. More might plan their own programs with the physical and emotional welfare of the children getting first consideration. Children come first.

Students' Opportunity

Now is a good time, too, for high school and college students not regularly employed to effect a plan for putting themselves in good shape physically. They need exposure to the sun; some need vigorous exercise to which they should grow adapted gradually, such as swimming, rowing, camping, hiking and mountain climbing. Work on the farm, even without wages, should be profitable investment. Girls should not shun the sun as so many do. How I wish parents of young farm children would dress these youngsters so that most of the child's body will be exposed to sunshine.

Some students, of course with the advice of their doctor, will find it advisable to loll about a good deal during the summer.

Even those youths employed in the shade all day should be able to get considerable outdoor recreation in the sunlight during summer. All too many youths wear themselves out in pursuit of nightly pleasures which break down rather than build for health and physical vigor.

Youths who would like to read books on vocations, college, or ways of improving their methods of study ought to make frequent visits to the public library and get advice on reading from the experts there. Let us parents and our children be too proud just to exist and drift aimlessly along; let us be the masters of our own fate and ever plan and work for self-improvement.

Nobody Tells You These Things

Food particles between the teeth ferment and produce this unpleasant condition.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Upon two subjects your beauty reporter does not like to dwell; they are so unpleasant one scarcely knows how to approach them; baneful perspiration and offensive breath. They are common ills; both interfere with social and business life. Whether or not the victim is always conscious of these conditions, nobody can guess, and it is a kindness on the part of relative or friend to make them aware of their handicaps.

Of excessive perspiraion we have written many times; today's preachment will have to do with the second affliction. This is a symptom of some physical disorder and a short cut to relief is a visit to the family physician and one's dentist. Decayed teeth will cause it, also infected tonsils and nasal polyps. Mouth breathers seldom have a sweet breath. Food particles between the teeth ferment and produce this unpleasant condition; that is why the teeth should be brushed after each meal. Sometimes disorders of the intestinal tract are responsible, can be corrected if the proper diet is prescribed, less meat and pastries eaten, more bulky green vegetables to aid the intestinal tract.

It is refreshing to use a mouth wash after the teeth have been cleaned. This practice removes foreign substances that have been removed by the tooth brush but still remain on the tissues of the mouth. One can't be too fastidious about this matter.

Don't put too high a value on standard weights and measurements. They don't mean as much as a girl fancies. A few pounds one way or the other are not of much consequence. Some women look better when they have a fair amount of adipose tissue than when they reduce to what is supposed to be the correct weight.

The idea is to have good proportions, to cultivate correct posture and graceful movement. Grace is impossible without a normal, healthy musculature; so be active, enjoy outdoor games and dancing.

The rule is: tummy flat, chest full, hips tucked back and under, arms moving naturally, the step light.

A GOOD FRIEND is a fingertip coat of summer ermine, that lovely supple fur, with beige overtones. A wide sash of the fur ties at the side in a casual knot.

Half Ton of Jam Made for Soldiers By Victoria Ladies

Just Concluded Canning of Raspberry Jam; Now Wait for Plums to Ripen

Victoria,—On Tuesday, August 6, the Women of the War Emergency met again at the canning factory of Mr. Lorne Brickman to can raspberry jam for the soldiers. That afternoon 536 pounds were made. Over three hundred pounds of sugar was used. Donations of sugar and berries were as follows:—Mrs. Chas. Payne, $2.00 sugar; Mrs. Florence Keech, $1.00 sugar; Mrs. Ed. Smith, 50c sugar; Mrs. McClean, 50c sugar; Mr. E. E. Bonter, 23 boxes blueberries, Albury, Mrs. Earl Onderdonk, 12 boxes blueberries, Albury; Mrs. Will Knox, 12 boxes red berries, Victoria; Mrs. W. H. Montgomery, 12 boxes red berries, Victoria; Mrs. Wm. Hubbs, 24 boxes blueberries, Victoria; Mrs. Harry Adams, 24 boxes blueberries, Rednersville; Mrs. Ralph Smith, 8 boxes blueberries, Rednersville; Mrs. Ralph Redner 24 boxes blueberries, Centre; Mrs. Roy Giles, 12 boxes blueberries, Centre; Mrs. Frank Townsend, 8 boxes blueberries, Centre; Mrs. B. L. Redner, 18 boxes blueberries, Centre; Mrs. Herb. Pulver, 5 boxes cherries, Centre.

Then Mrs. Frank Dempsey of Albury gave sixteen pounds of berry jam. This made a total of 553 lbs of raspberry jam. The total so far this season of jams done by these ladies is 1,108 pounds. The next jam making will be when the plums ripen.

Donations of sugar are very much appreciated.

England Will Be England

LONDON.

Here, just for the sake of helpfulness to a man who might otherwise be puzzled, are presented a lot of footnotes for some future historian of England. It has been said truthfully that the best place to find out what is going on is in the newspapers. This then, not to be too mysterious about it, is a digest of English newspapers, London and rural, for the last week. It gives a fairly complete X-ray view of a people on the brink of battle. And in case you don't want to go further with it, it shows what has been suspected all along: That England in the main will continue to be England. Very well, then, here are the headlines:

There has been 25 percent increase in razor blade manufacturing business since general mobilization began.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

O.K. For Girls to Dance Together If They Lack Boy Friends

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'd rather dance than eat, but it's not always easy for me to get dancing partners. The few boys who go to the club where I go with several girl chums are snapped up by girls who bring them as escorts. And would they let one of their prize darlings stray for a moment? Not they.

So we girls who are all good friends go to the club and dance together. The other evening, a sour old dowager looking on, said, "I should think you'd rather stay home than advertise the fact you haven't a beau to dance with". But we don't feel that way at all. Is it peculiar, bad form, or anything extraordinary for girls to dance together when there aren't enough boys to go 'round?

Georgianna

There is nothing peculiar or out of the way for girls to dance together when there are not enough boys to go 'round. It's highly sensible for girls who enjoy dancing and prefer it to other forms of exercise to dance together whether they have boy friends with them or not. Don't mind the dowager.

Refuse To Go to His Home

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going with a very lovely girl for quite some time now, although we aren't engaged. We think a great deal of each other and I hope something may come of it. I've asked her to come to my home and meet my parents, but she always refuses, saying it isn't proper for a girl to go to a young man's house. Is she right?

Mort.

Of course it would be entirely proper for the young lady to go to your home and meet your parents. Even the most straight-laced girl could not object to going to a friend's home where there is a mother and father. It would be quite a different thing if she went to an apartment where several boys "bached" it. I hope you can get her to change her mind.

He's Several Years Older

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 18 years old and the man I love is 30. He's also in love with me and we want to be married next spring. I live with my married sister, and although she likes my fiance, she objects to our marriage because I'm still so young. I'm attending business college and am already on the lookout for a job.

My fiance has an excellent position and is putting aside some money, so I'm hoping we won't have to start our married life with a lot of debts for furniture and such things. We want to announce our engagement in the fall.

Margaret

Your fiance seems to be a sensible young man, especially since he is putting aside something toward your marriage. I sincerely hope you will wait until the money for the furniture and other things is in hand. All sorts of unlooked-for expenditures crop up after marriage—things one never thought about before—and if there isn't any money to meet these incidentals, friction is likely to occur.

Twelve years difference in ages doesn't really count. The question in my mind, in regard to a girl marrying then as young as you are, is: Will she regret later on having given up so much of her youth?

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Etiquette of Wedding Invitations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My daughter is being married at four-thirty. Following the ceremony I am having a buffet supper at our house. We are mailing invitations for the church, and I am going to write personal notes for the supper.

May I properly enclose the note of invitation for the supper with the invitation for the ceremony, or should it be in a separate envelope? Should it be sent at the same time as the invitation?

Mother

Although you didn't tell me that the invitations to the church are formal, engraved invitations, I judge, from your question, that they are. If so, it is not proper to combine such a formal item with the informal note.

If you are inviting only a few guests to the buffet supper after the ceremony, you might properly invite them either verbally or by telephone. Or, if you prefer, you might write notes worded somewhat like this:

Dear Noreen,

In this mail you and Tom will receive an invitation to the marriage ceremony of Betty and Jim. But we also want you two dear friends to come, directly after the ceremony, to our house to have a cup of tea with us and to greet the newlyweds. We are inviting just the families and a very few close friends. . . and please do say "Yes, we'll come".

Dearest love to you both.

Affectionately,

Clothes for 3.30 Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Will you kindly tell me the correct attire for a woman guest at an afternoon (three-thirty) church wedding, reception following? The reception is to be out-of-doors if the weather permits.

I have a flowered chiffon dress street-length; and a white lace and a black satin dress, both floor length.

E. H.

Your flowered chiffon dress, street-length, would be appropriate and in excellent taste for this afternoon church wedding and reception following. And this type of dress will be "just right", whether the reception takes place indoors or out-of-doors. The floor-length white lace dress or the long black satin dress would be definitely inappropriate.

Massage for Turkey Tracks

Exposure to strong sunlight which causes squinting can put in those little pleats in a hurry.

By HELEN FOLLETT

They call them laughing wrinkles but the woman who has them does not consider them a laughing matter. Compared with frown lines, which make the face severe, they are a minor beauty affliction. They are often caused by impaired vision so when they first appear it is a wise step to have an eye examination.

Exposure to strong sunlight which causes squinting can put in those little pleats in a hurry. Keep your dark glasses at hand and use them. Like many other beauty griefs, avoidance is easier than cure.

If you have already observed that turkey tracks are on the way, get out your massage cream every night and use after your celestial countenance has been washed with pure soap and warm water; creams are more effective on a glowing skin than on one which is not stimulated by active blood streams.

Place the first finger on the eyelid close to the nose. Sweep outward to the temple, do two or three little circles there, come back under the eye to starting point. While the cream remains on, friction the flesh with an ice cube.

• • •

While a great deal of moaning goes on about noses that don't suit their owners, the fact remains that as a general rule the nose fits in pretty well with the rest of the facial composition. Girls of the teen age are the ones who lament the loudest.

Plastic surgery will correct a nose that is disfiguring, the humped one, the flattened one, the one with the bulbous tip. This indulgence is expensive, but considerable skill is required to do the work satisfactorily. If you are considering remodeling along these lines have your own doctor recommend a specialist.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Chronic Intestinal Indigestion

I received a letter from a mother who said her young son had lost four or five pounds of weight in a week, although he ate with apparent appetite everything put before him. In my answer to her, advising that she call in a physician to examine him without delay, I suggested that the boy might be suffering from coeliac disease.

This disease, more commonly called chronic intestinal indigestion probably has been afflicting the human race for a good many hundreds of years, but it wasn't until 1888 that it was discovered and its tabulation begun.

I haven't seen a great many cases of it. Perhaps I should say I have not recognized a great many cases for, looking back with the greater knowledge of it we have today, I feel that there may have been many children, more or less mildly affected, whose condition I never really understood.

Patients with the disease have healthy appetites, eat large quantities of food, but still remain underweight. For a long time this condition was a complete puzzle and then science discovered that it resulted because the system affected by the disease didn't digest fats. In fact, in severe cases it won't digest carbohydrates either. So we have the anomaly of a child who eats plenty and still loses weight.

It naturally occurs that when fats and carbohydrates are not digested by the system they are excreted from the body with the waste material. Consequently the movements in these cases are large. Often this is the first symptom.

The stools vary. Often there is a severe diarrhoea present. At other times they will be almost normal in appearance. During these attacks of diarrhoea come abnormal changes in weight. The youngster may lose a tenth of his weight in a single day; as much as a third of his weight in a week.

Children with coeliac disease are consequently almost underweight. They may be of normal height, but the majority of advanced cases are shorter than normal. Severe cases present an unusual picture. They will exhibit an abnormally distended abdomen. At the same time the buttocks will be greatly atrophied and shrunken. This combination presents a diagnostic picture readily recognizable to one who has an acquaintance with the disease.

FASHION FLASHES

LOOK OUT for hats that have the appearance of wigs. One such model is head-fitting and is fashioned of black or white or yellow ostrich, the strands pulled and pasted. Comes to a widow's peak in front.

NO USE denying it, winter coat time is here, judging from ads and shop reports. An easy model is a topcoat of yellowish-beige woolen with ide sleeve cuffs and double front panels of safari brown Alaska sealskin.

ALMOST A UNIFORM is the black satin frock with side-saddle drapery. A nice model is in lustrous black silk satin with a curved deep neckline in front held at the sides by elaborate clips. A huge bow holds the side draping of the skirt.

BRIGHTEN UP your autumn clothes with a red hat. A delightful high-crowned, small-brimmed sailor is of ruby red felt with a broad crown band of green grosgrain with tabs at one side. Misty green veiling.

THE NICEST TIME of year for the country is in autumn, when it is tweed time too. A new model is of fine tweed, the jacket is purple with a yellow and dark green line plaid. The skirt is of plain purple tweed.

ALICE ALDEN INTERPRETS MODES OF THE MOMENT

Black Magic for Autumn

By ALICE ALDEN

The smart sophisticate relies on black when she wants a really effective costume. Adrian is fond of black and uses it for some of his most striking ensembles, such as this one created for Joan Crawford. The gown is of heavy black crepe and relies for effect on its beautiful cut and its delightful draping. It is one piece with a high neckline, long sleeves and a soft shirred draping from the left shoulder.

The draping is caught in at the waist and continues to the hem of the short-shirted dress. The halo hat is of soft braided fabric and black chenille veiling is effectively and flatteringly arranged. Black suede gloves, shoes and strap bag complete this luxurious yet, in reality, simple ensemble.

A Coat That Goes Places

By ALICE ALDEN

It's open season for holidays now that so many folks prefer other seasons of the year to the usual two weeks in summer. Come autumn and many wise folks go off for a holiday in the woods or step across the gangplank for a cruise.

Winter finds the exodus to Florida and California well under way. All of which adds up to the need for a good travel coat, since no holiday wardrobe is really complete without one. Rita Johnson likes plaid for her travel coats, a good, strong, bold plaid!

This coat fashioned of soft wool is plaided in bright green, yellow, white and navy. The coat features an easy line, has square shoulders, an open collar and self-covered buttons. Nice over a tailored suit.

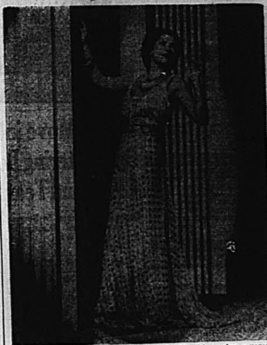
For a Late Vacation

By ALICE ALDEN

Although autumn fashion talk is in the air it isn't too late to think in terms of sports things. Now that people seem to be on the go the year round, the shops generally manage to stock some nifty numbers for casual or country wear. Virginia Field has just chosen the really good looking sports frock. It is a one-piece model in rough linen crash and subscribes to the patriotic colors.

The full skirt is blue, the girdle red and the bodice white with blue buttons. The cartwheel hat is of red felt with stiff square crown in red and white polka dot silk which continues under the hat to form a chignon snood in back.

White at Night



By ALICE ALDEN

As summer wends its golden way, there are thoughts of autumn in the air, at least so far as fashion is concerned. On display already are evening frocks destined for autumn duty as well as for that first big country club or resort hotel dance. No matter the season, Kay Francis likes white for evening, and she has chosen it for a recently completed dress. It is of white chiffon patterned with shimmering squares of gold metallic threads.

The beauty of the fabric is enhanced by the simplicity of the draped lines. The bodice is draped to show low square neckline and the fabric is twisted into shoulder straps which are released to form wide bands down the low neckline in back. The circular fullness of the skirt suspends from the draped girdle of the waistline.

Try to Save Every Tooth

Extractions Are, Not Always Necessary

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

A correspondent writes, "in connection with your article on arthritis I have a question to ask and that is in connection with dead teeth. Should one with arthritis have all his dead teeth extracted?"

It is a very good question. Questions are good in proportion to the difficulty one has in answering them. So if this is very good, you must expect the answer to be somewhat qualified.

The principles which form the background of the question are: 1st, the idea that arthritis is caused by focal infection; that the inflammation of the joints in arthritis gets there from some such focal point as the teeth or tonsils; second, that dead teeth are dead because they have been the seat of infection.

A dead tooth is one in which the nerve is degenerated and the pulp has consequently atrophied. Nearly always this has been caused by a previous infection arising from a filling. Dead teeth often have begun with apical abscesses — these become sterile and harmless, but they are a potential source of reinfection.

Individual Matter.

So the question comes down to how much infection a dead tooth carries, and how much harm it is doing to the arthritis. This can only be determined in each individual case; no more general rule can be laid down.

Dentists and physicians are becoming more conservative about this whole matter. After all, teeth are very valuable adjuncts to nutrition. If a dead tooth is not actually doing any harm, it may be doing a great deal of good. The fad of radical exodontia is distinctly losing its momentum. For years we have been in an orgy of tooth pulling. An eminent dental authority said recently that every dentist should do his utmost to place all infected teeth in a healthy condition, and only when that has failed should extraction be considered.

The head of a large memorial dental clinic states that the fact that a tooth has lost its pulp (nerve) or that a degenerative change has taken place around the root end, are not of themselves sufficient reasons for extraction.

The theory of focal infection also has undergone a somewhat conservative change. Dr. Charles Mayo said: "the future of medical science rests with the doctor who can stop or kill the germs as they develop in the mouth." The future of medical science is a somewhat large order. Doctor Rosenow, one of the leaders of the focal infection idea, writes: "I do not advocate wrecking the mouth," adding later, "but I do believe a tooth is only a tooth, while a life is worth more than all the teeth in the world."

Doubts about the relation of focal infection to many human diseases are recently expressed by Drs. Arnett and Ennis, who say: "no statistically significant association can be demonstrated between apical infec-ritis, kidney disease, chorea or heart disease."

BASEBALL CAPS

New York.—Headgear betrays the ultimate boyishness of college clothes. Felt baseball caps, well cut and substantial, will doubtless perch on the crowns of countless long bobs this fall. At any rate, they seem rapidly to be becoming the rage. They are more in a warm shade of tan that ought to go with everything, and have that highly desirable quality of extreme casualness.

Girls who are not willing to be quite so boyish and casual as to wear a baseball cap might like the round-brimmed felt hats, very simple with a grosgrain band, that can be rolled up into a wad and can take severe treatment. They are made to absorb punishment, and are sold packed in snug little cylinders.

For dressier occasions, and still casual, there are turbans of wool jersey or velvet, the kind that wrap around the head twice and make quite a showing. They come in all the sought-after fall shades and are inexpensive.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON (Mme. Qui Vive)

BEAUTY'S FIRST LAW IS CLEANLINESS

Soap is the queen of cosmetics. A woman can't be too fussy about the kind of soap she buys, and there is something for her to learn about the way she uses it. It should be applied freely, foamed into a rich lather, every particle should be rinsed away. Unless it forms a suds it does not do a thorough renovating. Look at the hands of almost any small boy. Even after beink washed they are grimy. Children hold their hands under the cold water faucet, give a couple of swishes with a bar of soap, rub the dirt off on the towel. It may be mean of us to say it but there are many mothers of small boys who use the same system when they wash their faces.

They seem to be afraid of soap. A little bit on a moist washcloth and that's all. The facial coat is supposed to be precious. It is the same as skin elsewhere on the body, only exposed to more dust and scrubbing isn't going to do it any harm. Because of casual cleansings, blackheads thrive and from little blackheads big pimples grow.

Some skin specialists make their beauty customers use shaving soap. Because it has to be robbel in with the finger there will be a rousing old scouring.

* * *

when the pores are filled with dust and incipient eruptions are making their presence known, there should be a steaming after the soap has been rinsed away. Dip a heavy wash-cloth in hot water, hold close to the face. This treatment is not suitable if the tissues have sagged, but for the oyung person it is ace high in the beaut pack.

One must remember that the skin exudes oil and that dust combines with it; the combination sets up a defensive against any kind of a celaning operation. One needs plenty of time, plenty of energy. One good face scrubbing at bedtime is worth half a dozen quick swishings. If the flesh is sensitive afterwards use a cream, tapping it in gently. Skin surface should be bone dry before anointing.

* * *

Some women claim that their skins put up a protest after soap is used, getting red, smarting, burning. Chances are they have a case of slumbering eczema and soap wakes it up. Medical attention is the quickest, easiest way out of that dilemma. It is often found that the cause of a soap-mad complexion is lack of vitamins that the skin needs for its well being and amiable behavior.

It is not a good idea to use soap and water just before going out in strong sunlight or immediately after coming in. A cleansing with a light cream or oil is recommended.

HOUSEWIVES HAVE THEIR WAY AT PRINTING HOUSE CONVENTION

The housewives of the world, whether they know it or not, have just "attended" a convention, a convention intent on lightening up the daisies in your gardening magazines, deepening the red of those tomatoes on the wrapper of that can on the kitchen shelf, or of originating gayer and fresher figures for that morning dress.

All boxed and gift-wrapped, when delivered to any housewife anywhere would be the annual convention, just concluded in San Francisco, of the International Association of Printing House Craftsmen, Inc., a convention which dealt with nuances and news, tin cans and test tubes, chemistry and cool caclulation, vats and vehicles, prints and printing, book sand bindings, the Gutenberg Bible and bread wrappers, coupons and cars.

It was a convention of printing craftsmen, explains the Christian Science Monitor, but the housewives ran things. Movable type, invented 500 years ago by Johannes Gutenberg, was paid tribute yes, but color, as sovereign of the American home and the American publication, wielded the gavel.

Indeed, color emblazoned all of the special technical meetings of the convention, and experts explained with the aid of movies and illustrations how printing was no longer an industry of movable type but one requiring the skill of an artist, the rich knowledge of the nature world of a Thoreau. For printing today is color.

Housewife's Influence.

"Apples are redder in New England," said a placard in one of the exhibits, a placard filled with printed apples so red and bright and shiny that even the smell of a Massachusetts apple orchard could be imagined without effort.

How modern print shops cultivate and harvest the gay, brilliant fruits and vegetables of California by artful mixing of inks and high-speed presses illustrates how the kitchen need of today's housewife influences the ancient industry which this year honors Gutenberg.

While the craftsmen inspected the famous Gutenberg Bible at the Golden Gate International Exposition on Treasure Island, there was ringing in their ears how bakers can sell more bread when bread wrappers are gayer, brighter and have more sales appeal.

Even though the craftsmen were still joking among themselves and with others about "rubber type", there was real point to the joke at this convention. For on display were rubber plates. Yes, no fooling. The craftsmen now print with rubber plates for even the most delicate work. And their reason is not to make the type fit, evidently.

Even the printing of those new, bright dress materials in department stores, mecca of America's housewives every Monday morning, was a feature of the convention. The craftsmen are getting even better, it seems, at turning out new colors and better color blends. And these new colors, mind you, stand the sun, all day at the beach or while motoring. Did America's housewives realise that "fast" colors in "prints" are largely the work of research printing craftsmen?

Smearing Eliminated.

Yes, and those bright tin cans, which decorate many a kitchen shelf are actually printed before they are cans, printed so well that they go through the process of becoming cans without a scratch. And the same is true of toothpaste tubes, shaving cream tubes, and the like.

A new development in printing was described to the delegates—the more extended use of vapor ink. While evaporation has long been a printing aid, speakers here declared that new inks, not using oils, had been developed which would dry in one fifth of a second coming off a high-speed rotary press, and in 30 minutes when used on an ordinary flat-bed press.

Advantages for this new highly-volatile ink were said to be elimination of smearing and offset. Within 30 minutes after printing a speaker said, the small-town printer could put his product through a cutter, folding machine, or stapler without any danger of blotching.

While the craftsmen were not listening to the marvels of their industry, and hearing about as well as meeting many of the thousands of draftsmen, color chemists, and technicians behind the finished printed job, they were enoying exhibits of rare books, beautifully printed and bound books, or boating around San Francisco Bay and visiting colorful Treasure Island.

Game of Cards and Cool Drink Make Guests and Hostess Happy

By ALICE DENHOFF

Summer is an informal season when one entertains simply and often. If you have a lot of social debts piled up, why not have a bridge party? One of the nicest things about a bridge party is that you can repay even your most elegant friends this way, knowing that your party is just as fashionable as theirs, and there is no easier way to entertain, for all you need is a table, score pad and pencil, packs of the clean, new cards which the good hostess always provides—and the players.

Al Fresco.

If your house boasts a cool terrace or a lovely tree-shaded lawn, why not give your bridge in the open air?

On a scorching day, your friends will love the cool breeze. Your refreshments can be very easy—say a delicious frosty drink with some cookies. You'll find some recipes for extra-special summer beverages below.

The dessert bridge is a popular innovation. Ask your guests for about a half-hour after the usual luncheon hour in your community. If you usually lunch at twelve, ask your friends for about twelve-thirty, but be sure to tell them what kind of a party it is, so that none of them will think you are giving a luncheon and come too hungry to welcome the dessert you have decided to serve them.

Here are recipes especially appropriate:

Iced Cafe au Lait.

Make enough coffee for whatever number of guests you are expecting, and be sure to make the coffee extra strong. Pour one cup of the coffee into each tall glass which you have filled with crushed ice. To each glass add a scoop of coffee or vanilla ice cream, and serve immediately.

* * *

Strawberry Crush.

Two quarts strawberries, 2/3 cup orange juice, 1/3 cup lemon juice, juice from ½ grapefruit, sugar to taste, ¼ cup cooking sherry.

Mash the strawberries, and mix with the fruit juices. Add the sugar and let the mixture stand for one hour. Strain it through cheesecloth, add the sherry, and let it chill thoroughly before serving.

* * *

Eggs a la Neige.

Six egg whites, ¾ cup sugar, 1 pint milk.

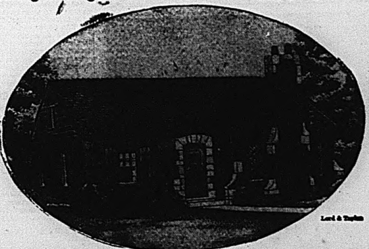
Whip egg whites very stiff, and mix in the sugar gently. Put meringue in a pastry bag, and with it form egg-shaped pieces. Boil the milk and poach the egg-shaped pieces of meringue for a few minutes on each side, taking care that they do not boil. Remove eggs onto a napkin and dry them. Use milk for making the vanilla sauce, as follows:

One pint milk, 1 pint sweet cream, 4 tbsp. granulated sugar, 3 egg yolks, 1 teaspoon vanilla extract or one vanilla bean.

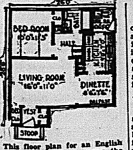
Boil milk and cream together with vanilla bean or extract. Beat egg yolks and sugar together with a whip. Put back on fire, and bring to a boiling point without actually boiling the mixture. Stir constantly. Pass through a muslin cloth and let cool. This thin custard may be bottled and kept in the refrigerator for several days. Add fresh fruit to it for a delicious dessert.

Put custard sauce in a bowl and place the meringue eggs on top. Garnish with fresh fruits. Berries are particularly good. Sprinkle with shaved sweet chocolate if desired.

Living-Dining Rooms Are Worth Copying



Lord & Taylor



This floor plan for an English cottage has four large rooms, the living room so large that it can be used attractively for dining. A stairway to attic space is provided.

By PATRICIA MONTCLAIR

The old-fashioned idea of having one room set aside in the average-sized house, dedicated to eating only is on the wane. Apartment dwellers in the city pueblos have long flouted this notion, arranging their lares and penates so that every bit of space available in their cliff dwellings could be used by the whole family all the time.

It is easy enough to set up a dining room kit in one corner of the room simply by using the table for a lamp and magazine arrangement between meals, and clearing it off, perhaps dragging it out into the centre of the room, when the cook says come-and-get-it. But this is the living and dining room plot in its embryonic stage.

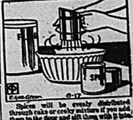
ODD FACT

The biggest cash crop of U.S. agriculturists is not cotton or wheat as is perhaps commonly supposed, but milk. Dairy products bring the farmers more than cotton and wheat combined, says Gill's Index. One out of every 15 families in the country is dependent on the dairy industry for its livelihood.

FOR GARDENERS

Gardening and cleaning are hard on the hands, so equip yourself with extra rubber gloves and wear them every time you do this kind of work. Rub some cold cream under your nails before starting work—you will be delighted how quickly you can clean your nails after a good soap and water bath.

Wife Preservers



Spices will be evenly distributed through cake or cooky mixture if you add them to the flour and sift them with it into the rest of the ingredients.

CEMENTMEN PLAY CLASSY BALL TO DEFEAT 'OILERS'

Ding Luffman and Bawden Hook Up in Mound Duel With Luffman Getting the Nod

SCORE IS 3-2

Two Double Plays Executed by Point Anners Materially Help Hurler

Belleville softball fans passed up the best game of the year over at Coleman Flats last evening as the finals in the City Softball League got under way between the Shell "Oilers" and the Point Anne "Cementmen." Only a corporal's guard turned out to see "Ding" Luffman and Johnny Bawden hook up in as pretty a mound duel as you would care to watch, with Luffman getting the nod as the Ox-Pointers outplayed and outhit the Oilers to score a close 3-2 victory and go one up in the best-of-five series for the right to hold the Bank of Commerce trophy.

With the exception of the fourth inning, when the Oilers scored both their runs and temporarily pulled up even with the Point Anne lads, who rad established a two run lead in the second, and again in the last inning, Luffman turned the opposition back in order, with only three men facing him in each inning. Two double plays, both executed by Whalen and Twining on the Point Anne lineup, materially aided Luffman in defeating the Oilers as his defence, with the exception of one wild throw in fourth, snared everything in sight.

Only Gave Two Hits

Only two hits were given up by Luffman, both coming in the one inning as Ronsky doubled with Henn driving him home with a sharp single, taking third on the throw-in and scoring as Loft threw wild to first on the next batter. Point Anne counted only four safeties of Bawden's deliveries but a walk and an erorr in the second inning with Hutchings driving both home with a sharp single through the infield proved too much of a margin for the Oilers to overcome.

Even at that the Oilers tossed the game away in the fifth, as Whalen missed a quick throw by Henn after Twining's infield hit, only to have Whitehead drive in the winning run with a slashing double. Two walks by Bawden starting the last canto put him in a hole with the Point Anne lads threatening to go further ahead, but a strikeout, a fly to the outfield and a foul, which was taken by Rowbotham ended the threat as Bawden bore down. Bawden rather outshone Luffman in the matter of strikeouts, getting ten of the Point Anne lads to four fanned by the opposition but mitigated his performance by issuing four passes as against two by Luffman.

Victim of Hidden Ball Trick

Whalen at second for the winners stood out defensively handling many hard hit balls without a miscue, while Bawden and Whalen combined for a nice play in the third as Whitehead's bunt down the first base line was fielded for an out. Rowbotham was the victim of the old hidden ball trick in the fifth inning as he was tagged at first base after having drawn a walk. The lineups:

Point Anne: Loft 3b; Whitehead ss; Bennett rf; Green c; Whalen 2b; Hutchings lf; Scott cf; Luffman p and Twining 1b.

Oilers: Ronsky 3b; Henn 2b; Sero ss; Bawden p; Whalen 1b; Amo lf; Murray cf; Rowbotham c and Reynolds rf.

Yanks Move into Third Place By Plastering League-Leading Cleveland Team With 15-2 Loss

Score Nine Runs in Second Frame Aided Dimaggio's Homer With Bases Loaded

CARDS GAIN GROUND

Jump Into Third-Place Tie With Giants by Winning Seventh Straight Game

(By Bill White)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The epitaphs have been written, the decline and fall of the Yankee Empire has been fully explained, the mourners have headed for home—but the Yankees refuse to stay dead.

Certainly they looked anything but hopelessly beaten ex-champions yesterday as they smashed the first place Cleveland Indians 15-2 in as brutal an assault as the American League has seen all year. They hit a new high in seasonal effectiveness in that nightmarish second inning, when they scored nine runs, four on Joe Dimaggio's 26th homer of the season with the bases full.

Raking Al Milnar for 12 lusty blows—six of them for extra bases—the Yanks ran their string of successes to 12 out of their last 15 tries and to four straight over the League's top two teams. That sent them scooting into third place, just eight games off the pace.

The Yankee triumph, plus a 9-3 Detroit victory over Boston Red Sox, brought about largely by the relief hurling of Fred Hutchinson and his timely hitting, cut the Indians lead over the Tigers to 4 1-2 games.

In the League's only other offering—a night game—Johnny Berardino led on 18-hit St. Louis assault on the Athletics that netted the Brownies an 8-4 victory. The Chicago-Washington game was postponed by rain.

Cards Win Seventh Straight

The National League also has a team that refuses to admit it started too late—the cocky Cardinals. They won their seventh straight victory by whaling Philadelphia 9-0 to jump into a third-place tie with New York Giants, busy splitting a doubleheader with Pittsburgh Pirates.

Mort Cooper limited the Phils to six hits while the Cards were banging out 12, including Johnny Mize's 35th of the season.

The Giants won the first game from the Pirates 5-4. The second game went to the Pirates 4-0.

Bill Werber was the toast of Cincinnati for his timely ninth inning home run, that beat Boston Bees 3-2 and gave Bucky Walters his oft-delayed 17th victory.

Vern Olsen almost had no-hitter to his credit as the Cubs whaled the Brooks 5-0. He was touched for singles by Ducky Medwick and Joe Vosmik in the seventh.

WILL RULE PRESIDENT'S CUP REGATTA

This nautical-minded lassie was announced as the queen of the 1940 president's cup regatta in Washington next month. She is Miss Marcy Morgan, a resident of the capital and a direct descendant of Col. Thomas Johnson, who in 1791 was appointed by George Washington as one of three to build the federal city.

ROCHESTER WINGS TWO FULL GAMES AHEAD OF BEARS

Toronto Manager Protests After Umpire Changes Decision on a Play

(By the Associated Press)

Rochester Red Wings, two full games ahead of the second place Newark Bears today, are spinning along toward the finish of the international league race, like a homing pigeon that has sighted its coop.

Wings took two games from Syracuse Chiefs last night to stretch their latest winning streak to five straight and increase their margin by half a game over the Bears, who won a single contest at Toronto.

Elwin Roe tossed a five-hitter to beat the Chiefs 5-1 in the seven inning twilight encounter and Charlie Brumbeloe turned in a sixhitefforthit effort in the afterpiece winning his 18th triumph of the year, 2-1.

With the help of six Leaf errors, Newark handed Toronto its eight straight setback, 4-3, in a game that was played under protest at Toronto. The only Newark earned run was a homer by Mike Chartak over the right-centre field fence. Toronto's manager, Tony Lazzeri declared the game under protest when Umpire Henline called George Sharein out for running into a bunted ball and then permitted him to bat again.

In the only other game played last night, Montreal Royals defeated Baltimore's Orioles, 6-4.

Rain washed out the Jersey City-Buffalo contest.

New York, Aug. 23 (AP)— The mutuals must take in $50,000 nightly, if the forthcoming trotting meet at the old Roosevelt raceway breaks even....Billy Soose, who upset Tony Zale, is demanding a shot at Ken Overlin and his half of the middle weight title, in New York.

Doggone, if a player in a Minnesota amateur league didn't get a homer because his long hit rolled into a very much occupied dog house....While the pooch snapped and snarled, the opposing outfielder stood helplessly by .... Meantime, the hitter dashed around the bases and scored the winning run.

Big ten grid ticket sales are up 10 percent....Billy Southworth has the Cardinals playing .642 ball since he took hold....Detroit offered Washington 20 grand for Buddy Meyer as Gehringer insurance, but Cleveland blocked the deal.

Vern Olsen, Cubs — His two-hitter handed the Dodgers their fourth straight loss.

Bill Werber, Reds — His ninth-inning homer beat the Bees and gave Bucky Walters his 17th win.

Joe Dimaggio, Yanks — His second-inning homer with sacks loaded was top blow as Yanks crushed Indians.

Fred Hutchinson, Tigers — Hurled shoutout relief ball and drove in winning run as Tigers topped Red Sox.

Johnny Berardino, Browns — Got five hits in five trips to the plate to lead Browns to a night game win over the Athletics.

VALUABLE BROOCH FOUND

Ottawa, Aug. 23—(CP)—A valuable pendant and brooch lost by Princess Juliana of the Netherlands while strolling around nearby MacKay Lake, were recovered Thursday by Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

R.C.M.P. officials however gave all the credit to one of their trained dogs, "Pilot" who uncovered the jewelry after following the tracks of the Princess through the woods a short distance from her suburban Rockcliffe home.

ZELLERS SQUAD CHAMPIONS OF SOFTBALL LOOP

Executive Over-Ruled Decision of Umpires as to "No Contest" and Gave Championship to Zellers

RIGHTFULLY EARNED

Zellers Will Play All-Star Team of League for Red Cross on Tuesday

"Chuck" Barnett's youthful Zeller's ladie's softball squad are the 1940 champions of the Ladies' Mercantile Softball League.

So moguls of the league executive decided at a special meeting held in the Hume Arena last night where the loop board of strategy over-ruled the decision of Umpires Simpson and Bawden which declared the last game played between the champions and the K-Nines, no contest.

After investigating the circumstances surrounding the game, which was climaxed with more arguments than a parliamentary committee, and some deft stalling on the part of both squads, the executive decided to call the contest a full game despite the decision of the arbiters, and accordingly announced the Zellers squad as the current season titleholders. The new champions had already scored two decisive wins over the runners-up with the K-Nines eking out one victory in three starts.

However, that is that, and everyone, it appears is satisfied with the findings.

The gal mushballers, however, will not hang up their running shoes and shorts until next week, for the various managers have given their consent and support to a special tilt between an all-star squad and the champion Zellers team, the proceeds of which will be given to the Red Cross.

This game should be a thriller all round, is scheduled for the Coleman Flats on Tuesday night, and will pit the cream of the league against Burnett's white-clad champions. The youngsters are out to show they are not afraid of the best gal's softball seen here this season.

ENTERED IN AMERICAN P.G.A. TOURNEY

When the 23rd annual American P.G.A. tournament gets under way on Aug. 26, Dick Metz, LEFT, runner-up in the 1938 National open, will be on hand to compete against such players as Byron Nelson, CENTRE, who was runner-up in last year's P.G.A. tourney. He lost the final match by dropping the 36th and 37th hole to Henry Picard, RIGHT, who will defend his title this year.

SAY, YOU BETTER DUCK YOUR HEAD

A picture made recently which changes the usual sphere of baseball action from the diamond to the grandstand. As Catcher Swift of the St. Louis Browns dashes over to the field boxes after a towering foul which can be seen dropping into his mitt, fans register all sorts of emotion to be laid bear by the ever-present camera. The young lady at left, foreground, draws away, while the young man in LEFT, centre, foreground, has a look of apprehension on his face, while the young lady seated in CENTRE enjoys the spectacle, she also raises her arm in self-protection and her friend tries her best to duck out of the box. The fans in the safety of the second line of boxes look on in rapt interest.

"DON'T WAKE ME UP, LET ME DREAM"

There was a young feller named Feller, who showed such promise when he was a young school-boy that the Cleveland Indians took him in hand and trained him until he was major league material and the idol of the Cleveland fans. Bob is taking a nap here. The young pitcher has 21 victories to his credit this season. Perhaps he may get into the golden circle of 30 wins for 1940 and solidify his position in baseball's hall of fame. The dream may become a reality.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

$30,000 FIRE AT WALLACEBURG

Plant of Consolidated Lumber Company Destroyed in Short Time

Wallaceburg, Ont., Aug. 23—(CP) —Fire of unknown origin caused damage estimated at $30,000 at the Wallaceburg plant of the Consolidated Lumber Companies Limited early today. Flames breaking through the metal roof and siding of the main storage shed leaped to a height of 40 feet in two or three minutes and started to spread in all directions.

Town firemen had the fire under control in less than an hour although they fought sporadic outbreaks throughout a second hour.

J. Eric MacDonald, manager of the lumber firm, said that at least 200,000 feet of lumber were destroyed and of this the finished stock was valued at $15,000. A carload of plate glass valued at $2,500 and three carloads of roofing material at $4,000 were also destroyed. The loss will not interfere with the plant operations.

The Stars Say

For Saturday, August 24

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

DESPITE some tenacious obstacles or limitations, judging by favorable offsetting planetary factors, there should be a definite march upon ambitious goals on this day. This by taking heed of congested or crystalized situations, probably by forceful measures, aggressive tactics and the co-operation of those in power with a friendly desire to be of assistance. Be wary as to traps and duplicity. Social, domestic and affectional relations are pleasant.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a year of definite progress and the fulfillment of high ambitions, although there may be impediments and difficulties to dispose of. This may be accomplished by friendly assistance from those in power who are impressed by the soundness and practicability of propositions submitted to them. Hard work should tell. There may be happy and propitious conditions in the purely personal life, where friendship is important.

A child born on this day should be steady, industrious and ambitious, and make a success of its affairs despite obstacles and handicaps. Its personal affability, dependability and good nature would make for much popularity.

AT THE BELLE

"MARYLAND"

One of the finest combinations of talent ever assembled for one picture makes "Maryland" (Technicolor) and now playing at the Belle Theatre, an entertainment event to which all movie-goers are looking forward.

To Henry King, director of some of the screen's greatest hits, went the important task of megaphoning "Maryland". Under his watchful eye went the talents of three leading members of the cast who have won "Oscars". In addition, five members of the production staff were honored and so it is not surprising that advance reports have hailed the picture as being even greater than "Kentucky".

Brennan Heads Cast.

Walter Brennan, that fire-eatin' horse-lovin' old codger, who was "Kentucky's" Academy Award-winning star, holds the impressive cast of "Maryland". Always a fine interpreter of character parts, he scores even more solidly in his newest role.

Fay Bainter, who won an "Oscar" for her brilliant work in "Jezebel", has a role which should bring her new honors. Brenda Joyce and John Payne, two of the screen's newest shining lights share the romantic honors.

Charlie Ruggles and Marjorie Weaver are two other bright personalities in the cast. Hattie McDaniel, who won an Academy Award as the lovable "Mammy" of "Gone With the Wind", has a singular role in "Maryland".

Stirring Climax.

Under Director King, a location unit travelled to Worthington Valley in Old Maryland so scenes could be shot against authentic backgrounds.

The romance, color and traditions of the proud South have been blended into a powerful story for the picture which soars to a sweeping climax as stout-hearted racing thoroughbreds compete in America's most spectacular Steeplechase, the Maryland Hunt Cup Race.

The spectacle of flaming silks flashing against the sky and green turf is one that every movie-goer will want to witness.

An interesting short subject, "The Evergreen Empire", a cartoon and the popular Belle News complete the program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Panama Patrol" and "West of the Santa Fe"

Action and more action highlights the fine two feature presentation now showing at the McCarthy Theatre. Leon Ames and Charlotte Wynters in "Panama Patrol" and also Charles Starrett, ace western star in "West of the Santa Fe" are equally matched for screen entertainment to satisfy without flaw, each patron attending the McCarthy Theatre this week-end.

"Panama Patrol" is geared to the moment. It deals with the much publicized activities of foreign spies in the Canal zone and the amazing way in which the federal "Cipher Bureau" helps bring them to justice.

The entire cast are above average and "Panama Patrol" strikes a fast, exciting pace in the early sequences which never lets down until the final fade-out. One exciting incident follows so fast on the heels of another one must hardly wink for fear of missing something.

"West of the Sante Fe," the companion feature, in addition to its splendid and dramatic narrative, offers several new cowboy songs written and sung by the famous radio and screen Sons of the Pioneers, who provide a tuneful background for the fast riding, barking guns and flying fists of its star, Charles Starrett, in the role of a marshal, the best this popular cowboy star of the screen has produced.

"The Man with Nine Lives"

Five men dead! Shot! Poisoned! Frozen alive! Who's next as Karloff prowls an underground labyrinth of horror . . . to kill that unborn millions might live! Tombs of ice for the living! Chambers of terror for the dying! Only deep in the earth could deeds too dark for the light of day and unholy myster like these be revealed!

Boris Karloff, horror king of Hollywood, comes to the screen of the McCarthy Theatre in his most terrifying role in Columbia's "The Man With Nine Lives," which opens next. Roger Pryor, Jo Ann Sayers and Stanley Brown are featured in the weird drama which tells of a scientist who is restored to life after having been in a state of suspended animation for ten years. Karloff portrays the scientist who, upon his restoration, embarks on a series of experiments with ruthless disregard for human life.

You will miss the biggest thriller of the year if you do not see Boris Carloff in "The Man With Nine Lives" next week at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Rancho Grande"

The recent phenomenal popularity of Gene Autry, Republic's singing cowboy, may be interpreted as one of the signs of the times. With world events growing more and more complex, people are inclined to seek the simple, homespun things for their relaxation, and pictures such as Autry's "Rancho Grande", which is now playing at the Capitol Theatre are typical of this need for down-to-earth entertainment.

"Rancho Grande" is a simple, engaging tale about a ranch foreman who saves the Dodge spread from foreclosure, but it is told in such a spritely manner, with lilting songs and gay dialogue, that its local audience accorded it a far better reception than that given to plot-heavy melodramas of the "drawing-room" type.

Gene Autry plays the handsome young foreman of the Rancho Grande who has been named guardian of the madcap Dodge heirs, Kay Dodge, her brother and boon companion, Tom, and their kid sister, Patricia.

Because of the harum-scarum temperaments of the assorted Dodges, Gene has a hard time exposing the treachery of Emory Benson, the family lawyer, who is secretly striving to wrest the Rancho Grande away from its young owners. Benson is constantly stirring the young Dodges into revolt against what they consider Gene's iron-handed tactics, and Gene is constantly cajoling them back into line.

Ferris Taylor is suitably sinister as the villian, and Mary Lee, a cute youngster indeed, scores as young Patsy Dodge. June Storey and Dick Hogan do well in their respective roles of Kay and Tom Dodge, and Smiley Burnette is excellent, as always, in his comedy role of "Frog" Millhouse, constantly plagued by the pursuing Effie Tinker.

"Rancho Grande" is the second in the group of Autry films based on the lyrics of popular tunes. Frank McDonald directed for Republic under Associate Producer William Berke.

"Song of the City"

The added special attraction brings to the screen a torrid blast of action, drama, and mad love! that well give you a grand evening of entertainment! Don't miss it and come early. The Universal News of the World and the 8th Chapter of "Buck Rogers" completes the bill.

HAIR DRESSER FLIES TO BERMUDA

New York, Aug. 23—(AP)— A hair dresser whose special shampoo is a rum-and-raw-egg creation put together somewhat like a cocktail flew to the Bahamas today to work for the Duchess of Windsor.

The hair dresser, 23-year-old Wayne Forrest, a former actor and dancer, was given the assignment by a Fifth Avenue beauty salon which has designed the Duchess' coiffures for years.

His recipe:

Five eggs, two jiggers of rum, one head of hair—mix.

Brenda Joyce, John Payne and Walter Brennan, that fire-eatin', horse-lovin' old codger, who was "Kentucky's" Academy Award-winning star, are all featured in "Maryland" (in technicolor), opening next at the Belle Theatre.

CHAPTER 25

The Old and The New

Brooke did not want Julian to speak, she thought, as she walked beside him on the sand. Nor did she want a beautiful setting to culminate in a falsely romantic scene, false on his part, overwhelmingly real on hers, she thought.

What was she to him? But she did not want to know that quiet yet, preferring to live alone with that which was tender and wholly hers. An exquisite secret, this new and happy love for Julian. . .

He asked, "when would you like to go to Chatham—tomorrow—if you must go back?"

"After a swim," Brooke said. Then, "I could go back by train. It's needless, your driving that distance."

"Of course, I'll drive you back."

"It's been fun, and meeting a really happy family has been a joy."

"You'll have to meet Paul to see the complete setting."

"But you aren't staying your entire three weeks here, are you?"

He shook his head. "No. I'm going farther north to join a party. Barney's party, by the way, is the third Saturday in August. You have a date with me."

By then would she know? By then would Rod have become as dim and as unimportant as people she passed on the streets of New York?

Her voice was quiet. "The last time I went to one of Barney's parties I thought that every one there was an enemy."

"It was you, not they."

"I know that now."

They had reached the large white cottage. He did not linger. She saw him go back by way of the beach. With what thoughts, she wondered, her eyes following him.

In the morning, after a prolonged farewell from Wilma and her children, Brooke slid into the seat beside Julian, her happy mood sustained even to the moment he left her on the verandah of the house in Chatham, a house still locked and gloomy. For Helen and her father did not return until late that afternoon, the former shrilly certain that Brooke had not been alone, the latter too hungry to give her more than a cool peck on the cheek and inquire about her health.

"Grace isn't home," Helen said later as Brooke helped with the dinner.

"I don't know where she went but she went away in her new car with Mrs. Jelliott. She won't say anything about Rod but everybody knows where the money is coming from."

Brooke said, "I think Grace would rather see Rod occasionally than have the money."

"You haven't told us about your new position, Brooke. Weren't you lucky. Then " the remodelling on the house will start in a few weeks so that the apartment upstairs will be ready for occupancy in the fall. I do hope we can get a nice couple and no children."

Since Brooke dreaded the heat and there was neither pleasure nor interest in working for the personable Wilson Stone, Brooke did not regret the slow uneventful days that ultimately brought her brief holiday to an end, knowing that for all the years to come she would be no more than a visitor in her father's home. It was a fact she accepted rather cheerfully now.

But nothing made her unhappy these days, not even this long separation from Julian knowing that they would meet again. It was as if her passionate love for Rod, her tenderness for Tony, her friendship with Jim, all the best of her feeling for the three, had merged in her feelings for Julian.

And Rod? She would be lying, she knew, no matter how firmly she might tell herself that he had been wholly forgotten.

Merciful rain was falling when she came into New York on Sunday evening, feeling distinctly glad to be back. The little room, cooled by the rain, seemed to welcome her. Had she came to the end of despair and self-pity? Energetically she went about unpacking, thinking of tomorrow. She had come to the end of hating tomorrow . . .

The mail clerk gave her a bulky letter one evening. Written partly by Jean and partly by Jim, she read they had settled permanently in a small town in Ohio, that Jim had a position and that they were buying a house. The snapshot enclosed showed a small white house surrounded by little cedar bushes.

The heat continued and after dinner Brooke and others staying at the hotel sought the temporary coolness of the roof. She found other transplanted girls, with dreary jobs and little money, eager to be friendly. One, Margot Stevenson, a stately blonde who was studying dramatics, sought Brooke more and more frequently for dinner.

Though it was unlike her to accept what she could not understand Brooke accepted her happiness and the strange contentment of hot August nights. Julian would return . . . though she was in no hurry for his return. Odd that her love did not demand his presence that it was a patient love It was as if by waiting she sensed its growth and strengthening.

But what if she should come face to face with Rod, feel the memories of years rushing about her? This thought was always short-lived; thought of Julian made her feel safe and untroubled again. She had loved Rod and her love had demanded his presence. She had wept on Jim's shoulder. She had had a gay and delightful companionship with the immature Tony. But with Julian it was enough for the present to think of him and remember him and love him without gestures or words.

One evening at dinner Margot suggested that she and Brooke take a small apartment together in the autumn.

"Because, of course, I'm going to stay," Margot said in her rich contralto tones. "And I could probably beg enough furniture from my aunt to furnish an apartment very comfortably. And I promise not to drive you mad with my vocal exercises. Think about it, Brooke. Think of the luxury of a private bath and a kitchen to putter around in."

Brooke said, "I've been considering it but I couldn't possibly do it alone on my salary."

"It's a tentative agreement then? Fine! My aunt will feel so much better about my being here. To her it's positively barbaric when you can't hang your own curtains." She went on, "I'm afraid we're hopelessly small-town, Brooke. Why was I ever bitten with the dramatic bug? It's a curse. I could live a divinely lazy life with my aunt and marry a solid citizen and continue to be divinely lazy. Instead, I'm living on a pitifully small inheritance, walking around with a book on my head trying to speak with a broad a . . . Is it worth it?"

Brooke said, "I've discovered that the things you want aren't given you. You earn them." Love, an expensive thing, had to be earned, too . . .

Later Margot said, "and by the way, I'm producing two young men with car for the week-end, one apiece of course. We'll go somewhere to swim. And, contrary to most cases, the one for me doesn't want me to give up my idea for career and marry him. He said, "Hurry up and get famous, darling!"

Brooke thought, I'm acquiring roots and friends. No longer did she sensitively read between the lines of her stepmother's scribbled letters, feeling keenly unwanted. Grace had written her regret at being away and the words of her last letter had come to Brooke's mind often:

"I hear from Rod and he sends me money. I know it's her money and I know it's foolish to feel this way, but sometimes I feel that it is as bad as stolen money. I am a hard-headed, independent food! And it's a funny thing, Brooke, and something I never realized before, that when you are down and out there are a lot of people willing to help you—but when you acquire something, people get the idea it's gone to your head and treat you as if it had. I don't suppose you can call the people who cross on the other side of the street when they see you coming your friends, but some that I thought were mine have been doing that to me and looking at me in church as if I were a stranger. Jealous? I don't know. But that's what's been happening lately. When I was working hard, I didn't have time to think about such things. And when I didn't have any money, I had my son."

CHAPTER 26.

And Then Rene

It was Sunday morning, a hot clear day. Brooke had slept late, had breakfasted leisurely alone and had walked a little and returned to her room, knowing that Margot Stevenson, ever punctual, would remind her soon by telephone that she had a "date" that afternoon. It was to be a pleasant and uneventful afternoon, no doubt. Most important was that it was the beginning of a week the end of which would bring Julian back to New York. And over the telephone she would hear the clear precise voice tell her when he would see her again. Would her voice betray her? That day in Maine, that day more sharply etched in memory now than any other day....

When the telephone rang, she was so certain it was Margot that she picked it up quickly and said, "Margot, I'm......"

"It's Rod, Brooke."

Her hand lessened its grip...... Rod......

He said, "I want to see you, Brooke. May I see you now?"

That one voice, deep and vibrant.

"Of course, Rod. Here...." How agreeable she was!

"In fifteen minutes. Have you had luncheon?"

"No."

"In fifteen minutes," he said again.

Why hadn't she refused him? Why hadn't she said, "I'm sorry but I promised to go swimming with Margot and two young men?"

Fifteen minutes.... She called Margot, murmured an apology, changed into a dark sheer frock and pulled the blue turban over her hair. She did not wait for him this time. Scarcely was she ready before the phone rang again and he said that he was waiting.

She was conscious of hurrying when she wanted and needed time.

Wearing brown, Rod, was standing stiffly beside the house telephones. His sunburn had deepened. Brooke's eyes swept over him, finding nothing wanting in the tall, faultlessly dressed figure. If she had never seen him before she thought, she would probably turn to look at him. Now memories rushed over her, bringing the past to the present. She thought of Irene for the first time since he had called....

"Hello, Rod,"....coolly, seeing on closer scrutiny that he was solemn, his eyes troubled.

"Brooke...." He said her name as if he tried to put all his shame and regret into the one syllable.

A greeting which lasted a moment only while they looked at each other, standing in a lobby where people moved about them. A moment for her to know that it was only memories and his dark good looks which stirred her still and that......his touch had lost its magic. Love can—die. Somewhere between one minute and the next it can be born and it can die. Standing here now, knowing that in trouble he had turned to her, feeling no triumph that he had returned, Brooke was more profoundly sorry for him than she had ever been for any one in her life. Why couldn't she be angry? Why couldn't she hurt this vulnerable Rod?

"We could have luncheon here," she said. "It's pleasant and quiet and as cool as any place."

There were few people in the dining-room, few, for that matter, in the hotel this week-end. The waiter led them to a corner table and they ordered at once.

Since it would be absurd at the beginning to pretend that this was a casual luncheon for two people who had known each other intimately, Brooke came to the point at once.

"How is Tony, Rod?" realizing when she saw quick jealousy in his eyes that he probably would not tell her the truth about Tony. Then "How did you know I was living here?"

He lighted a cigarette. "I thought there was a strong possibility that you and Barney had kept in touch with each other. I didn't talk to him but to his secretary. I knew her when I was there, of course. She knew you were here. How is Mrs. Kingsbury?"

"She died at sea on the way to Honolulu" That seemed so long ago now......

He frowned. "I didn't know.... I thought......"

She smiled. "Yes, I'm working here. Barney runs a sort of employment agency for his friends. I'm working for an architect and I don't earn my salary because he has no clients." Her voice was bright.

Rod's voice was heavy. He had not taken his eyes from her.

"You asked me about Tony...."

"I had a letter from him; he said he was going on a cruise."

"He's back now and living with friends at the beach." A tense silence followed. Then he said with annoyance, "He's going through a period of renunciation—of you, of course. He has a quirk that he made a noble sacrifice when he didn't follow you to Hawaii. He's such a kid...."

"Only three years younger than you," she reminded him. She smiled. "I'm interested only in Tony's well-being, Rod. He had problems that were very great to him......"

"I think a certain professor's daughter will settle a few of them for him eventually. She came out to California this summer and they were together all the time......"

Tony settled, apparently, they looked at each other again, Rod embarrassed. Had their embarrassment of their last meeting only just occurred to him, she wondered. She thought, too, that her ease in greeting him, in speaking, had made their present meeting, up to this point, a friendly one. And though she could have continued speaking with ease throughout luncheon, she knew now that a third person occupied the vacant chair beside them, an invisible Irene....

She thought, I want it to be over! I'm bored! That's the whole truth. Was it all unnecessary—the suffering, the loneliness, the tears? "He sits opposite me now, handsome and unhappy, and I'm just sorry for the mess he's made! I don't want drama and I'm only mildly curious as to why he's sitting here at all! I'd rather be swimming with Margot and her two young men."

A stream of reasons could explain her boredom. But there was really only one. An invisible Julian occupied still another chair....

Rod said, "Brooke, I've never forgiven myself for what I did to you...."

She said kindly, "Does it ease your conscience to say that? It's so easy for one to say that one is sorry. I don't want to go over that now with you. Tell your conscience to stop bothering you, Rod. You are going to see Grace, aren't you?"

He smiled with slight bitterness. "Yes. I'll probably see a good deal of her."

"Jim is married. He's married to a girl quite perfect for him, and they are living in Ohio."

His eyes lighted a little. "I'd like to tell him......"

She sat up. "You're feeling very sorry for yourself, aren't you, Rod?"

"Why shouldn't I? What a mess I've made! You, Barney, Jim, my mother......"

She could not be severe when she saw tears start in his eyes. He lowered his head quickly when the waiter came.

Several moments later he looked up.

"Brooke, Irene is going to Reno for a divorce. I'm alone here. I've been here three days trying to get up the nerve to call you......"

Knowing his pride, she knew what it had cost him to admit that. Suddenly she was frightened, felling drawn into the inside when she had felt safely, happily detached.

"Go on, Rod......"

"[illegible] the beginning?"

"No. I know what happened. You [illegible]. You loved her. It wasn't just her money......"

He said vehemently, "Money? I don't know what to do with money I didn't earn!"

She wanted to say, "Please be fair. Don't blame her completely for the failure. Be honest. Don't try to be still my hero, Rod."

Refusal to Lift Blockade Called Act of Hastility

Vichy, Aug. 22 (AP)—Foreign Minister Paul Baudoin tonight called Britain's refusal to lift the blockade against France "an act of hostility."

This, the foreign minister said in a speech is "perhaps even more painful than the Mers-el-Kebir" attack."

He referred to an action by the British fleet at France's north African base early in July, as a result of which French ships were prevented from returning to France.

"The French government will not bow before this decision," the foreign minister said. "It must do everything in its power to save this country from hunger."

(Prime Minister Churchill said Tuesday that Britain would permit food to go to any country as soon as Britain was convinced the country was not under Nazi domination.)

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 23 (CP)—The market lost a little ground in light profit taking during the early hours on Toronto exchange today. In active trading volume totalled 111,000 shares.

Steels and papers weakened moderately and the utilities, foods and senior oils showed little or no change. Gold tone turned a bit soft for Aunor, Preston, Kerr-Addison, East Malartic and a few others. Senior base metals including Noranda, Nickel and Hudson Bay held minor gains and cheaper issues lost ground.

Minor recessions were posted for most oils.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 23—(AP)—Efforts to pin another winning number on the stock market today met with considerable opposition.

Steels and motors slipped at the start and, with scattered exceptions, losses throughout the list ranged from fractions to more than a point. Volume picked up a bit on the downturn. Near the fourth hour recoveries were in evidence here and there.

Stocks in losing territory most of the time were U.S. Steel, General Motors, Glenn Martin, N.Y. Central, Anaconda, Western Union, Standard Oil of Ind., Montgomery Ward and International Paper Pfd.

Canadian issues fell back. Hiram Walker lost one point and Canadian Pacific and Dome and Lake Shore Mines dipped fractions. Distillers held unchanged while Canada 4s, in the bond market, lost 1 7-8 points.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Aug. 23 (CP)—Early bacon-hog markets reporting today showed a steady tone prevailing. At Brantford liveweight sales were $8.50 and dressedweights $11.50. Peterborough and Stratford dressedweights brought $11.49 and $11.50, respectively, plus transportation.

London later reported dressedweights there were selling at $11.50, an increase of 50 cents over its last reported price on Wednesday. London dressedweights at the beginning of the week opened at $11.30.

Chatham prices were unchanged with liveweights at $8.35 and dressedweights at $11.40.

SIX ARMED MEN HOLD UP TRAIN, GET ONLY POUCH

Authorities Believe Gang Sought $100,000 Payrolls Usually Sent by Train From New York to Yonkers

WRONG DAY CHOSEN

New York, Aug. 23—(AP) — Six armed men — interested only in "mail for Yonkers" which postal inspectors said was of no value—held up a New York Central passenger train early today and escaped with a single pouch after handcuffing two clerks to a pipe.

The train was a local bound for Albany and had stopped at the Marble Hill station in the Bronx shortly after leaving Grand Central Station.

The mail clerks told police the robbers demanded to know "where is the mail for Yonkers." When the clerks refused, the men rummaged through the pouches until they found the sack they wanted.

Postal inspectors said a list of the bag's contents showed it contained nothing of importance.

Federal and city officers expressed belief the gang sought payrolls aggregating $100,000 which customarily are sent by registered mail twice weekly from New York banks to Yonkers factories. They added that the robbers had chosen the right train but the wrong day.

Weekly Livestock Report

Toronto, Aug. 23—(CP)—Butcher cows, bulls and fed calves gained 25 cents and stockers lost 25 while steers and heifers held steady in the cattle trading on the Toronto Livestock Market this week. The calf section rose 50 cents and lambs dropped 25-50 cents cwt. Sales on liveweight hogs rose 10c and remained steady on dressedweights.

The cattle run included 3,050 western stockers. Early sales on choice weighty steers reached a top of $8.75. Others sold downward from $8.60-$6.50 for the balance of the week. Butcher steers and heifers sold $6.50-$8.25 with early tops at $8.40. Fed calves were mostly $9-$10.50. Butcher cows sold at $4.25-$5.75 with canners and cutters at $3-$4.

Good butcher bulls brought $5-$5.75 and bolognas $4.25-$5. Good stockers opened at $7-$7.50. Common to medium stockers for the balance of the week sold at $4.50-$6.50 with some fairly good ones bringing $6.75 on Thursday. At the conclusion of trading several hundred stockers were unsold. Milkers and springers were a little more active, selling from $45-$72 each according to quality.

The calf run included 1,000 western stockers. Choice vealers ranged from $10.50-$11.50 with common selling downward $6.50. Grassers traded at $5-$6 cwt. and stock calves were mostly $6.50-$7.50.

Hogs opened steady on dressedweight sales at $12 cwt. Liveweight sales were $9 off trucks for bacons. These prices were unchanged for the balance of the week.

Lambs lost last week's advance of 25-50 cents cwt., selling at $10-$10.50 for good ewes and wethers. Bucks ranged from $9-$9.50 and culls $8-$8.50. Sheep were firm at $2.50-$5.50 cwt. according to quality.

Butter and Egg Prices Advance Slightly

Toronto, Aug. 23.—Scarcity of offerings raised the price of first-grade Ontario butter slightly on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Eggs again advanced in both sections of trading, while the cheese remained nominally unchanged.

Trading on the butter market was light. Demand was not heavy and offerings were scarce. Top-grade creamery solids advanced to 21¾c. Prices of undergrades, which were hard to move, ranged from 19¾c to 21c. Holders of Western butter asked 22¼c, but no sales of this stock were reported.

Egg prices firmed under light receipts and a good demand. In the graded section, A-large eggs moved to 28c, A-medium to 27c, A-pullets to 22½c, grade B to a range of 20½c to 21c and grade C to a range of 15c to 15½c. A-large eggs sold to retailers at 31c, up 1c to 2c from Wednesday's level. Government inspected shipments commanded a premium of 1c per dozen.

Montreal Produce.

Montreal, Aug. 23.—Produce market prices here yesterday, reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

LITTLE FANFARE AS SHIP DOCKS

1,200 Passengers Including British Children Arrive at Eastern Canada Port

An Eastern Canadian Port, Aug. 23—(CP)—A liner with a passenger list of more than 1,200 persons, including "several hundred" British children, reached this port today from the United Kingdom.

It was not known immediately whether the children were aboard the big camouflaged vessel were government or privately-sponsored passengers. They were reported to be bound for homes in the United States, as well as Canada.

There was little fanfare as the ship was pulled slowly into the dock by a couple of tugs. Children and adults could be seen on the decks, watching the tugs warping the vessel in. A handful of officials were on the dockside.

Charge of Theft Adjourned Sine Die

The case of Mike Donato, charged with the theft of $147.30 from Edward Kellaway, Bridge Street, wholesale fruit dealer and former employer of Donato, was adjourned sine die by Magistrate E. J. Butler in city police court today pending the finding of a civil court.

The charge arose from alleged misappropriation of funds belonging to Kellaway.

Donato, former driver and salesman for Kellaway, pleaded not guilty to the charge. Robert Pringle, defence counsel, immediately moved for the dismissal of the charges following the hearing of evidence of several witnesses.

The magistrate however ruled that the case be sent to a civil court for accounting. Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson conducted the prosecution.

FIRST NIGHT

"Bombs were dropped in a number of areas in South Wales and a town in East Scotland.

"Some bombs were dropped in districts on the outskirts of London. Damage was done to houses and a cinema and there was a small number of casualties.

"In two towns in northeast England there was damage to property and in two towns in southeast England slight damage was caused. Some damage and casualties were caused in other areas. A number of fatal injuries have been reported."

First Night Attack on Area

The first night attack of the war on the capital area, followed by only a few hours the spectacular night cross-channel artillery shelling of the important southeastern port of Dover and surrounding coastal region.

Night raids in other sections of Britain, by planes flying alone or in small groups, covered a wide area last night, and before dark one attacking force of as many as 50 planes was sighted over the southeast coast.

These developments led some Britons to believe Germany might be ready for a resumption of the large-scale massed raids which marked the war last week but had not come again since Sunday.

The raid on London, which had hundreds of thousands of the city's nearly 9,000,000 inhabitants in air raid shelters from 3.15 until 4 a.m., appeared to be centred on the western outskirts, but the invading planes could be seen plainly by roof-top watchers in central London as they were picked out by searchlights.

Theatre Demolished

In the attacked area, a direct hit demolished the empty motion picture theatre and adjoining hall. A second motion picture theatre, also empty, a bank and a number of houses were badly damaged. Another bomb started a fire. In another section, high explosive and incendiary bombs fell on the edge of a wood starting a fire which was controlled quickly.

Observers said the German planes came over the city in "fairly large numbers," but the attack lasted only a short time. The thunder of bursting bombs could be heard plainly by spectators in London's west end who chose to watch the searchlight beams play on the raiders and see the "oranges" of exploding anti-aircraft shells break beside the attackers, rather than go to air shelters.

More damaging was the shelling of Dover and the nearby coast by Germany's new long-range guns placed along the coast of German-occupied France.

The guns, estimated by observers here to be 12 to 14 inches in calibre and planted along 30 miles of coast from Calais to Boulogne, concentrated their attack on Dover itself, smashing homes and other buildings and taking an undisclosed toll of lives.

High Explosive Used

High explosive shells burst over a wide coastal area around Dover. The attack came in two sessions, the first about dusk. As late as midnight, Dover residents were leaving their homes to spend the night in safer places.

The Royal Air Force replied with dive-bomber attacks, the big planes crossing the channel during both bombardments and aiming their bombs at the flames as the enemy artillery fired.

The battle was spectacular, with an estimated 50 or more shells ruffling across the channel at the height of one attack, and with the boom of British bombs heard bursting on the German side, from 20 to 30 miles away.

These German guns were the ones brought into their first big action yesterday morning, when their shells burst all around a British convoy in the channel. A bulletin on this attack said no ships were hit.

Nine Brought Down

The R.A.F. brought down nine German planes in yesterday's scattered air attacks, while losing only two itself.

The raid on the outskirts of London was the third of the war on Greater London, the first being a week ago yesterday, when Croydon airdrome and the eastern dock area were attacked, and the second on the following day, when southwestern suburbs were hit.

These were daylight attacks.

This morning many Londoners, initiated by the previous daylight alarms, turned over and went to sleep again when the alarm was sounded, preferring their warm beds to the cold shelters. It was a chilly night.

The metropolitan defence forces took the raid in stride, their searchlights catching the German bombers and forcing them to dive and circle to get away.

Details of Fatalities.

Details of the night's fatalities around the country reached London during the morning.

Three persons — an elderly man, his grandson and an air raid warden—were killed when a single raider dropped four high explosive bombs on a northeast Scotland town. The boy's mother was taken to a hospital critically hurt. They were in a shelter behind their bungalow.

In a northeast England town, two children were killed when a German raider dropped six bombs in the residential area, and in a southeast town one man was killed and two were injured. Many high explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped in the southeast area, but many fell in the open country.

JOINT DEFENCE

High Ranking Officers

High ranking officers of the armed forces of each country constitute a majority of the Board, with career diplomats as secretaries to the joint delegations.

The three Canadian military representatives on the Board are all veterans of 25 years' service or more, all having been through the last war. All have since taken extensive courses at their respective staff colleges in England and have had wide experience in their different services in Canada itself.

Brig. Kenneth Stuart, D.S.O., M.C., Deputy Chief of the General Staff, will represent the army.

Capt. L. W. Murray, R.C.N., Deputy Chief of the Naval Staff, will represent the navy.

Air Commodore A. A. L. Cuffe, R.C.A.F., in command of air defence operations on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, will represent the air arm.

Dr. H. L. Keenleyside, counsellor of the External Affairs Department and head of its United States and Far East branch, is named Canadian Secretary.

Alternates Named Later

Alternates to substitute for or assist the three service members of the Canadian delegation will be named later.

The United States military appointees are:

Lieut.-General Embick, U.S. army, commander of the Atlantic division.

Capt. Harry W. Hill, U.S.N., war planning division-operations.

Commander F. P. Sherman, U.S.N., and Lt.-Col. MacNarnay, U.S. army, are alternates.

Secretary of the American panel is John D. Hickerson, assistant chief of the European division of the State Department.

While the setting up of this joint board to consider the common defence problems of two countries has attracted great popular attention both at home and abroad, both governments have stressed the fact that it is basically a body merely for the study of those problems.

Specific Recommendations Expected

It will undoubtedly make specific recommendations in due course, after it has analysed various possibilities of attack and defence against these attacks. It may advise relatively close co-ordination of defence activities.

Any action, however, which may follow the board's investigations will depend directly on the will of the two governments at that time. The creation of the board involves no commitments in itself and both governments have declared that no commitments exist.

PAPER CHARGES

The comment was made in comment on rumors that Britain might occupy Crete and Corfu.

(British sources as well as the United States Department and the Greek Legation in Washington said they had no information on rumors that the British had occupied Crete and Corfu. Authoritative Italians in Rome denied there had been any such occupation).

Italy's attitude toward Egypt was defined by responsible Fascists as "unchanged" after declarations by Cairo officials that Egypt had no quarrel with any country but would fight if attacked.

Without saying whether Italy intended eventually to invade Egypt as some foreign observers believe, one authority said Italy was "fighting the British, not the Egyptians," and explained that Italian planes bombed Alexandria only because it is a British base.

THE TIMES URGES CABINET CHANGES

Paper Speaks of Some Members in Present Regime

London, Aug. 23 (CP)—The voice of The Times, usually close to the government, was added today to the move for ministerial changes in Britain's government. The paper spoke of a "number of misfits" in the present regime.

Reviewing the parliamentary session closed yesterday, The Times in an editorial entitled "the new order" singled out Prime Minister Churchill, Labor Minister Ernest Bevin, Food Minister Lord Woolton and Aircraft Production Minister Lord Beaverbrook for praise, and had blame for Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Information Minister Alfred Duff Cooper.

The paper said the change in the war leadership made May 10, the day Germany invaded the Lowlands, when Mr. Churchill succeeded Neville Chamberlain, was "overdue," and that it had produced results "certainly fruitful."

"Nevertheless", it said "an administration formed in the middle of a great battle must necessarily contain a number of misfits and a number of failures in organization, not serious enough to impair the immense improvement in our strength and spirit secured during the past three months, but enough to make it certain that we are not yet in every respect giving of our best."

Modern Highway To be Formally Opened Tonight

St. Catharines, Ont., Aug. 23—(CP) — Canada's most modern highway—the four-lane, partially-lighted Queen Elizabeth Way which connects Toronto and Niagara Falls—will be opened formally tonight by Ontario's Highways Minister T. B. McQuesten, before a distinguished international gathering.

The ribbon-snipping ceremony will take place at Henley Bridge, a half-mile north of here and will be attended by 200 persons, representative of provincial and civic governments and from neighboring points of the United States.

The $10,000,000 highway traverses one of the wealthiest sections of Ontario and it will eventually be extended to Fort Erie, thus making connections with Buffalo, N.Y., as well as Niagara Falls, N.Y., and forming another important link in the international highway system.

70 Miles of New Road

It runs for some 70 miles in two sections, the first from Toronto to Burlington, completed more than a year ago, and the second from Burlington to Niagara Falls. Devoid of sharp curves and steep hills, the highway has been made even safer by prohibition of bicycles and it is proposed to ban pedestrians as well.

The Toronto-Burlington section is brilliantly illuminated and plans call for lighting of the entire road. Incidentally, because of wartime economy, this is likely to be the last highway opened in Ontario for the war's duration since all capital expenditures have been suspended.

A. J. Haines, Liberal member of legislature for Lincoln, will act as chairman.

Among the visitors will be Mayor Thomas Holling of Buffalo, Mayor Ernest Mirrington, Niagara Falls, N.Y., and members of the New York State legislature; Hon. T. D. Bouchard, Quebec Minister of Roads, Ernest Gohier, Chief Engineer, Quebec, A. Bergeron, Deputy Minister, Theo G. Morgan, chairman of the executive of the Canadian Good Roads Association, and George A. McNamee, Secretary-Treasurer.

22 RECRUITS JOIN VETERANS' GUARD

Twenty-two recruits from this district for the Veterans' Guard proceeded to Ottawa today for training being under the charge of Corporal Darling. They were piped to the C.N.R. Station by Jamie Clarke and made a splendid appearance as they marched along. These recruits are all veterans of the Great War and will be used for guard duty anywhere in Canada after a training period at Ottawa has been concluded. Included in the recruits were: C. Barnard, F. Conley, W. Ellis, F. Elliott, J. Gilmour, C. Hilton, J. Johnston, E. Martin, H. McWilliams, P. O'Neill, J. Payne, C. Pringle, F. Powell, E. Rist, G. Smart, A. Vollick, E. W. Terry, H. Long, J. Graham, W. King, O. Sculthorpe, A. Rowe.

BRITISH TROOPS DEPART

Shanghai, Aug. 23—(AP)—A second detachment of the East Surrey Regiment embarked from Shanghai today for an undisclosed destination. The troops marched through the streets of the international settlement headed by a United States marine corps band. The first group of the British troops, who are withdrawing from Shanghai, left Wednesday.

The War Today

(By Guy Rhoades)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Residents of Dover, just across the 22-mile wide strait from Calais, began moving today in the wake of an artillery bombardment from the French coast, but there was every evidence that this new Nazi experiment was a failure.

Authorities said it had some "nuisance" value, but the German guns took a pounding from Royal Air Force bombers after they had given away their position by firing in the night. It was believed they were 12-inch naval-type, long barrelled guns, mounted on railway trucks. British artillery replied with a few rounds.

From a military standpoint it would be extremely difficult to cause the abandonment of Dover, because its fortifications are sunk in the massive chalk cliffs and make it, in effect, a little Gibraltar in the English Channel.

Last night's bombardment alarmed the townspeople who had taken air bombing calmly. They said the artillery marksmanship was so erratic there was no way of telling where the shells were going to land.

Wide-ranging but scattered air raids occurred both night and day over Britain and London had its first night raid of the war, although previously there had been two night false alarms. Citizens flocked to shelters or stayed in bed, depending on whether they preferred safety to the comfort of warm beds on a cold night. There was extensive property damage throughout the country and some fatalities.

Claim Entirely Discredited

British authorities said air attack is vastly more profitable than long range gunning, but the Nazi propaganda ministry, which once said a German gun existed which could drop shells on London, promptly bragged it had a weapon which would control the channel.

How true this claim is was effectively illustrated yesterday when a mile-long British convoy passed through the Strait of Dover while the big guns on the enemy side fired about 100 rounds at it without scoring a hit.

In the middle east the Royal Air Force raided over Italian Libya and trations with bombs, while belief trations with bombs, while beylef grew firmer that Italy intended to try a quick smash into Greece from its "protectorate," Albania.

A highly placed Italian official told interviewers Italy would not permit Britain to occupy any of the Greek islands in the Mediterranean and would march into Greece if she did. There has been no indication that Britain has any such intention and the statement had the ring of a build-up.

An Italian-controlled newspaper in Tirana, Albanian capital, accused the Greeks of virtually closing the frontier in order to prevent Albanians who owned property in Greece from reaching it.

While things looked pretty black for Greece, there remained always the chance that the anti-Greek campaign might be an Italian smokescreen designed to draw attention from Italian preparations along the Egypt-Libya border which have been in progress for some weeks, despite Italian assertions they have no intention of fighting the Egyptians.

Alexandria, Egypt, was bombed by Italian aircraft again today with little effect.

Registration of Firearms With Police Heads Opens Today Continuing Till Sept. 15

Registration of rifles and shotguns as provided for by an order-in-council amending the Defence of Canada Regulations, on July 29, will go into force today and last until September 15th, the Ontario Attorney-General's Department announced through police offices today.

Residents of the city owning these types of firearms can register their weapons with Chief Alex Kidd at the City Police Station, or Inspector Gardner at the headquarters of the Belleville Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police, corner of Front and Market Streets.

Rural residents and those living in villages and towns of the county must register their rifles and shotguns with clerks of their municipalities.

Owners of weapons must bring their guns or rifles with them when applying for registration, and a special registration slip will be given by registrars.

Paragraph 2 of Regulation 37B sets out that all rifles and shotguns must be registered by September 15th, 1940, and owners of such weapons are warned to register as quickly as possible. Registration does not mean confiscation of the guns and rifles.

Under the new regulations, the Attorney-General's Department is authorized to refuse or cancel registration in any case.

VICTORIA CROSS AWARDED TO TWO

2nd Lieut. Annand Survives, but C.S.M. Gristock Died of Wounds

London, Aug. 23—(CP Cable) — Announcement was made tonight of the awarding of the Victoria Cross to 2nd Lieut. Richard Wallace Annand of the Durham Light Infantry and CSM. George Gristock of the Royal Norfolk Regiment.

They were the eighth and ninth men to win the award since the war began. Gristock has since died of his wounds. Lieut. Annand was honored for attacking Germans with grenades in Belgium after ammunition was exhausted, and Gristock for attacking although both his legs were severely wounded.

Earl of Athlone's Address at C.N.E. Opening Ceremony

Toronto, Aug. 23—(CP)— The supply of material resources from Canada may well tip the scales of war in favor of the British Empire, the Earl of Athlone, Governor-General of Canada, said today in formally opening the Canadian National Exhibition.

He approved the holding of the 62nd annual C.N.E.—the largest annual show of its kind in the world—because of "the very nature of this war and the very nature of this exhibition."

"This is a war in which the preponderance of material resources may well prove the decisive factor, and the supply from Canada may easily tip the scales in our favor. Here we see before us the shop window of these resources.

"I would invite all our visitors to look into the window and see for themselves what we have in our store and what we can contribute to the common cause and then I would like you to ask yourselves whether it would be possible for an exhibition such as this to be held now in Germany or Italy. And perhaps in the answer to that question you will derive much encouragement and a great confidence in our ability to win through to victory."

Facing Double Task

His Excellency said Canada was facing a double task: To win the war and then to establish an enduring peace. It would be a mistake if in the turmoil of war "we were to undermine the foundations on which peace must be built. It would, in fact, be an act of capitulation to the forces of barbarism, which we are striving to overthrow."

The Governor-General and his wife, Princess Alice, were guests at a luncheon of the C.N.R. directors and the opening ceremonies took place at the main bandshell. The "Ex" gets under way on a big scale tomorrow when 30,000 veterans march in the warriors' day parade, an event given special emphasis this year.

An international typewriting marathon—with contestants from Canada and the United States transcribing H. G. Well's "The Outline of History"—was opened by remote control by James H. R. Cromwell, former United States Minister to Canada, speaking by telephone from Camden, N.J. He spoke of the contest as a demonstration of the exemplary relations between Canada and the United States.

Four Nazi Airmen Captured by Keeper

London, Aug. 23 —(CP)— A delayed-action bomb burst in one of the roped-off areas in London today following German air raids during the night but casualties were comparatively few. The bomb exploded several hours after the raiders had departed leaving behind blasted homes and public buildings.

Shortly before noon single planes raided the Midlands, one dropping some medium-sized bombs which smashed a cottage. Another raider dropped three bombs on another Midlands town, but all fell on open land.

Six bombs fell on a thickly populated district of a third Midlands town. One casualty was reported.

Early this afternoon a single bomber dived out of the clouds and dropped six high explosive bombs along the sea front of a southeast town. All hit the beach.

A German bomber crashed in a clover field in southeast England during the morning. The four nazi airmen were capured by a gamekeeper who turned them over to military authorities.

FAILED TO REGISTER

Winnipeg, Aug. 23—(CP)—Nick Jerama and Paul Paluka, charged in police court here today with failing to register, were remanded until tomorrow and instructed to obtain registration certificates before that time. Both men were arrested yesterday when they could not produce evidence of registration when applying for relief at city soup kitchens.

GIVEN HIGH CONTRACT

Toronto, Aug. 23 (CP)—Percy Faith, Toronto-born orchestra conductor and music arranger, left last night for Chicago where, he said, he will fill a 52-week contract conducting a Chicago orchestra at $1,000 a week.

He has conducted orchestras in the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation programs "Music by Faith" and "Singing Strings."

PREPARING BLACK OUTLOOK FOR INVADERS

Seasoned troops of Scotland's Black Watch who in the last war became known as the "Ladies from Hell" daily train on England's east coast to meet the threatened Nazi invasion. These men have already faced Hitler's troops in Belgium and now await a renewing of "old acquaintances" on Britain's beaches. At the outbreak of the war they were ordered to adopt the regular British uniform in place of the traditional kilts which won them the fighting name of "Ladies from Hell." They are shown rehearsing bayonet charges in waves, an art in which they are well versed.

President Opposes Postponement Compulsory Military Training Until Next Year in Interview

Washington, Aug. 23.— (AP) — President Roosevelt said today that he was personally and absolutely opposed to postponement of compulsory military training until next year.

The President told a Press Conference that new increments of man power were needed now to learn to use modern fighting equipment that already is on hand.

To put off actual drafting of men, he said, would delay the whole United States Defence program a year or two.

Mr. Roosevelt said Congress had been considering the subject since June 20 and still was talking about it. If a Bill should not be enacted in the next couple of weeks, he added, there was going to be real delay in the defence program.

Pending in the Senate as the President spoke was an amendment proposed to the Burke-Wadsworth Conscription Bill by Senator Francis T. Maloney (Dem.-Connecticut) which would delay actual selection of men of active military service until Jan. 1, while a further trial was given for the volunteer system.

Senator Glass Join Advocates

Senator Carter Glass (Dem.-Virginia), has joined the ranks of conscription advocates battling the Maloney proposal.

"I think we have postponed getting prepared for years," he said to reporters, "and I am not in favor of postponing action for another day."

Glass previously had announced his support of the Burke-Wadsworth Compulsory Training Bill, now in its 11th day of Debate, but did not express his views until today on the amendment offered by Senator Maloney.

Hopes were exceedingly slim however, that a final vote could be obtained in the Senate this week on the Legislation.

Announcing his opposition to the Maloney Amendment, Senator Glass told reporters that he stood unequivocally for immediate conscription and would "indicate" his views to the Senate.

"I think that conscription is the only way we ought to raise an army", said the 82-year-old Virginian "I don't think we ought to take the cream of the young men with spirit and courage enough to volunteer and leave the rest in bombproof shelters".

American Ship Sold to Belgium Is Torpedoed

New York, Aug 23 (AP)—The freighter Ville De Gand, one of eight American ships sold to a Belgian firm for trade between Great Britain and New York, has been torpedoed off the Irish coast, the United States lines said today.

The company said that about half of her crew of 54 had been rescued and that hope for the others still existed.

Formerly the American Importer, the vessel carried Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his family in 1935 when the flier went to England after the kidnapping and murder of his son.

Partial Migration Compromise Seen Over Transylvania

Turnu Severin, Rumania, Aug. 23 —(AP)—The possibility that the Transylvanian problem may be solved by compromise involving the partial transfer of populations was seen here today as the Hungarian-Rumanian delegation chiefs headed back here for renewal of their discussions.

In Hungarian circles in Budapest it was reported that Hungary would continue to reject the Rumanian plan for complete transfer of populations but is willing to use the new plan as the basis for discussions to prevent collapse of the conference..

BRITISH BOMB KILLS 16 DUTCH, BERLIN SAYS

Amsterdam, German-occupied Netherlands, Aug 23—(AP via Berlin)—Authorities said today that first reports indicated 16 persons had been killed by British bomb in the Netherlands early this morning.

(The Air Ministry in London had not issued its daily statement on raids on German objectives at the time this dispatch was circulated by German sources. Military objectives in The Netherlands, such as the great airports upon which the German base many of the planes which attack Britain, have been repeatedly bombed by the R.A.F.)

4-Year-Old Boy Out of Danger, Swallows Many Tablets

Athens, Ont., Aug. 23—(CP)— Doctors today reported that Bruce Alguire, four-year-old son of Cecil Alguire, Hard Island, is out of danger after swallowing nearly 20 medicine tablets which he found in his home. When discovered by his two sisters, the boy was unable to walk and later he went into convulsions.

Britain Buys Entire S. African Wool Clip

Pretoria, South Africa, Aug. 23. —(CP-Reuters) —Great Britain has bought the entire wool clip of the Union of South Africa at 10 pence, three farthings (21 1-3 cents) a pound, it was reliably reported here today.

London sources said it was understood Britain was buying the South African wool clip on the same lines as recent similar purchases made from Australia and New Zealand.

In these cases the whole wool clip was brought for the duration of the war and for one year afterwards at a fixed price schedule, having a base average price of 10 3-4 pence a pound.

BARRAGE BALLOON ON RAMPAGE

London, Aug. 23—(CP)—A barrage balloon broke loose and went on a rampage over London today, knocking over chimney pots and setting off showers of sparks by trailing its cable over trolley wires.

Finally it tangled on St. Mark's Church tower. While firemen, police and a balloon crew were trying to free it, it suddenly gave a yank that pulled the church spire loose, snapped its cable and sailed away.

LIGHTNING KILLS 25 COWS

Mount Brydges, Ont., Aug. 23 — (CP)—Morris Brodie, district farmer awaited the passing of a brief electrical storm before bringing in his cows from pasture, today — and found the herd of 25 dead beneath a tree. They were killed by a single lightning bolt and the bodies were lying close together. The herd was valued at $1,400.

The storm swept through a narrow strip in this district and heavy rain fell for 50 minutes. No other damage was reported.

FULL, ACCURATE ACCOUNT OF WAR GIVEN CANADIANS

Arthur R. Ford of London Praises The Canadian Press and Newspapers on Doing 'Real Job'

London, Ont., Aug. 23 (CP)—The Canadian public is receiving "as full and accurate an account of the war as any American newspaper," A. R. Ford, Managing Editor of the London Free Press, told a service club (Kiwanis) today.

He described how all despatches from England and other waring nations are censored at the source—not when they reach Canada. The Canadian Press Bureau at New York receives the same cabled news from England as The Associated Press—plus its own extensive London Bureau Service—and this is re-routed to Canada without further censorship.

He criticized the statement in a United States magazine (Time, June 17) that Canada was under "one of the world's most rigorous censorships." Censorship in Canada was voluntary on the part of the newspapers and affected primarily domestic news of troop and vessel movements and such information as might be valuable to the enemy. The censors had not, for instance, asked the Canadian Press to alter or delete enemy communiques and these had been carried textually since start of the war.

"It is an expensive job covering a war with increase in staffs and increase in cable costs," he said. "The Canadian Press and the Canadian papers are doing a real job for the Canadian public."

Mrs. McFarlane Sent for Trial On Murder Charge

Mrs. Alice Archer McFarlane, 17-year-old bride of Frankford, charged with the murder of her 18-months-old baby, Gordon Archer, on July 25th was committed for trial at the next court of competent jurisdiction by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in Trenton Police Court this afternoon. Prior to the commencement of the preliminary hearing of her husband, Robert McFarlane on a charge of murder, Magistrate Butler, stated he was prepared to give judgment in the preliminary hearing of Mrs. McFarlane, the evidence being heard a week ago. Before passing sentence, the Magistrate asked the accused to stand and asked her "if she had anything to say before sentence was given." The young bride simply shook her head in the negative and the above judgment was given.

The court room was packed with residents of Trenton and district. Mrs. McFarlane and her husband were seated near each other in the prisoner's dock but did not converse with each other during the hearing. Both appeared composed and followed closely all the evidence presented.

Boy of Fifteen Waits Two Days, Is First at C.N.E.

Toronto, Aug. 23—(CP) — Five shivering youngsters were the first to enter the gates of the Canadian National Exhibition after spending the night in the scanty shelter of an entrance arch. Jack Thornton, 15, of suburban Mimico, had been waiting since late Wednesday and he was the first inside. He said he'd look around for a while and then go home to get some sleep.

STAY OF EXECUTION IS GRANTED

Dublin, Aug. 23—(CP) — Justice Gavin Duffy today signed a writ of Habeas Corpus granting a last-minute stay of execution for Patrick McGrath and Thomas Green, Irish Republican army suspects, sentenced to death by a military court for the murder of a detective.

The application for the writ contended the military court which sentenced the men to be executed by a firing squad was unconstitutional. A hearing on the writ was set for Monday.

ONTARIO GREETS EARL OF ATHLONE, PRINCESS ALICE

Premier Hepburn Welcomes Vice-Regal Visitors and Expresses Loyalty of the Province to the King and Empire's War Effort

Toronto, Aug. 23—(CP)—Ontario today gave its first official welcome to the Governor-General, the Earl of Athlone, and Princess Alice when they arrived in Toronto on a tour that will take them to Hamilton, St. Catharines, and Niagara Falls.

Premier Hepburn welcomed the vice-regal visitors and expressed the firm and continued loyalty of the province to the King and the Empire's war effort.

On their arrival, the Governor-General and Princess Alice received Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews and Mrs. Matthews in their private car and the provincial welcome was given later at the Legislature Buildings.

The ceremony was modelled on last Spring's reception for the King and Queen with same decorations and furniture used. A guard of honour from the Irish Regiment of Canada presented arms and a color party broke the Governor-General's standard from the main flagstaff in front of Queen's Park.

Three Addresses of Welcome

Addresses of welcome were read by Premier Hepburn and Mayor Ralph Day of Toronto and Mrs. Hepburn presented Princess Alice with flowers. Later in the day, His Excellency will formally open the Canadian National Exhibition.

The Vice-Regal party will spend Saturday and Sunday in Toronto and then go on to Hamilton, St. Catharines and Niagara Falls before leaving for a tour of the Maritime Provinces. While here they will visit the John Inglis Bren Gun plant. The Governor-General will inspect the Royal Canadian Air Force Manning Pool and they will attend a church service Sunday.

The Governor-General said in reply to Premier Hepburn's welcome he had been studying with interest "the way in which Canada has responded to the unceasing demands of the war on her men and her resources."

Ontario 'Veritable Gold Mine'

"By no means the least impressive feature of her effort is the magnificent contribution of the Province of Ontario. Here you have a veritable gold mine of those very resources which are so urgently and so abundantly required if we are to achieve victory, and I am glad to think that your industries are organised in such a way that these materials can be readily forthcoming.

"But you have another great asset without which no nation can hope to survive. You have the spirit of resolution and fortitude which has been so great a product of Ontario in building up and defending the complex structure of democratic government throughout the Dominion."

Premier Hepburn commented that the Governor-General, after "four decades of service for the Empire, was prepared to forego a well-earned respite and undertake now the onerous duties he now fulfils.

800 Children Evacuees Enjoy Ocean Voyage

An Eastern Canadian Port, Aug. 23—(CP)—Carrying more than 800 children evacuated from Great Britain and 400 other passengers, a big liner docked here today and prepared to leave for another eastern Canadian port after disembarking a small group of the travellers.

The youngsters all were brought overseas on private funds and the biggest group of them was a party of 285 boys and girls between the ages of five and sixteen who are going to the United States.

A. Hallerton-Shaw of London, who acted as chief escort for the group sponsored by the American Committee for the Evacuation of Children, said the children "all had a good time and they really enjoyed the voyage."

One of his charges was 15-year-old Magdalene Corbett, who will stay in Boston for the duration and who smilingly told reporters she is a descendant on her mother's side of Button Gwinnett, "the first governor of Georgia and one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence."

U. S. Editors Favor Republican Leader

New York, Aug. 23—(AP)—Editor and Publisher today printed a national table of the political preferences of 1,030 daily newspapers in the United States which showed that 683 of them had declared for Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican nominee. The canvas was as of Aug. 21.

A condensed table of the '32, '36 and '40 preferences as compiled by the trade publication follows.

Lewis Machine-Gunner On Coastal Freighter Doesn't Like Shells

London, Aug. 23—(CP)—"I don't mind bombs so much. You can hear them coming at you. But I don't like those shells a little bit. . . ."

That comment on the new phase of the battle of Britain came today from the Lewis machine-gunner on a little British coastal steamship which yesterday ran a 10-mile gauntlet of fire from German "big Berthas" on the French coast.

"The wind was against us and we couldn't hear the whistle of the shells. We never knew they were being fired until they suddenly began crashing into the sea near us sending up great geysers.

"One shell whizzed right over the decks."

The skipper of the 1,500-ton craft, Capt. James Blaire, a weather-beaten Scotsman, laughed when asked if he was "scared" during the shelling.

"Yes," he scoffed, and calmly tugged at his pipe. "Don't I look it."

Capt. Blaire said his ship was travelling out of a northern port when it ran into the Nazi bombardment which lasted from Folkestone to beyond Dover.

The only signs of attack on the vessel were a few dents of shrapnel from the Nazi long-range batteries. No one was injured.

American Resident Contributes His Mite To Canada's Effort

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 23 (CP) —If you can't contribute cash to this war, you contribute anything you have handy, as one American resident demonstrated the other day at the Niagara Falls border.

A man carrying a heavy burlap sack approached the Canadian end of the Whirpool Rapids Bridge, when he reached the Canadian Customs Office at the end of the bridge, he dropped the bag to the floor and explained he wanted to continue to Britain's war effort. He asked the Customs Officers to forward the bag to England. They found the bag was filled with old copper wire, scrap brass and other metals, which he wanted made into munitions.

The customs collector is considering how best to comply with the man's wishes.

HELD FOR QUESTIONING

Brantford, Ont., Aug. 23 (CP)— Chief Constable Harry Stanley in court today asked that Alfred Proffert, arrested on a charge of vagrancy, be held for further investigation as a result of certain documents found on his person. A letter, written partly in code, and addressed to a friend in Montreal, said the writer had to leave Hamilton "as the police were hot on his trail." Corporal P. Monohan of the R.C.M.P. was handed the letter.

NINE NAZI PLANES DOWNED

London, Aug. 23.—(CP)— The Air Ministry said today nine German planes were destroyed over Britain yesterday, seven shot down by British fighters, two by anti-aircraft fire.

"Four of our fighter aircraft were lost but two of the pilots are safe", the Ministry announced. "An enemy bomber was shot down in the early hours tihs morning by Lewis gun fire from the ground".

CHARGED WITH DESERTION

Vichy, France, Aug. 23—(AP) — The Petain Government confirmed officially today that former Education Minister Jean Zay, now under arrest at Clermont-Ferrand, would be tried there by a military court on a charge of desertion from the army. The trial date was not set.

Exiled Communist Leader Dies After Attack

Leon Trotsky, former Communist leader, shown with Mrs. Trotsky, who has been living in exile since Joseph Stalin ousted him from control of the party, succumbed to injuries received when he was attacked and struck on the head with a pick-axe in his Mexican villa. Trotsky's brain was pierced by the pick-axe which was wielded by Frank Jackson, who posed as an ardent admirer of Trotsky and had the freedom of the exile's home.

R.A.F. BOMBERS ATTACK NAZI GUN EMPLACEMENTS

Also Bomb 22 Airdromes in German - Held Territory, Losing One Plane

London, Aug. 23 (CP)—The Air Ministry announced tonight Royal Air Force bombers attacked German gun emplacements on the French coast between Calais and Boulogne for several hours last night despite heavy anti-aircraft fire.

The air force attacked 22 airdromes in German-occupied territory, the Ministry said, losing one plane.

The Ministry's statement, issued Friday evening said:

"Gun emplacements on the French coast between Calais and Boulogne were heavily attacked by R.A.F. bombers last night after a convoy had been shelled in the channel. Our aircraft countered intense anti-aircraft fire but maintained their attacks for several hours.

Plants in Germany Bombed

"Targets in Germany bombed during the night include the synthetic oil plant at Bottrop, the aircraft factory at Frankfurt, the power station at Knappsack, near Cologne, a high explosive factory at Greisheim near Frankfurt, and docks at the Rhine port at Duisburg. Railway junctions at Mannheim and Coblenz were attacked and the goods siding at Hamm and Soest were bombed as usual. Attacks were also made on 22 airdromes in Germany and occupied territory.

"The strong bomber force engaged in these operations returned safely except that on aircraft made a forced landing and the crew were killed".

CRASHED IN STORM

Bucharest, Rumania, Aug. 23 — (AP)—A passenger plane en route from Bucharest to the Leipzig, Germany, fair crashed in a storm near Turnu Severin, Rumania, today. Reports said the 17 passengers and three members of the crew all were killed.

15 YEARS IN PRISON

Montreal, Aug. 23—(CP)—Paul Seguin, 38, was sentenced today by Judge Rodolphe DeSerres to 15 years in penitentiary for armed robbery of a bank.

Seguin and Marcel Latour, 25, both pleaded guilty Tuesday to taking $3,015 at gun point from a teller at a branch of the Banque Canadienne National Monday. Latour, who had had no previous convictions, was given a 10-year term.

TO BE PAID FOR PRISONERS

Toronto, Aug. 23.—(CP)—Military prisoners heretofore kept in military prisons will be imprisoned in Ontario jails, provincial authorities said today. The Ontario government will be paid 85 cents a day for each prisoner.

Soldiers will be committed to civil jails on any charge, such as theft or disorderly. If the sentence is under two years he may be placed in a reformatory or county jail, if over two years, in a penitentiary.

CANADIAN FREIGHTER SUNK

New York, Aug. 23—(AP)—The New York Maritime Register said that the 7,244-ton Canadian freighter Geraldine Mary had been sunk by "enemy action" off the Irish coast with a loss of three lives—one passenger and two crewmen. The 16-year-old vessel traded between Newfoundland and England.

FISH DIE BY THOUSANDS

St. Hyacinthe, Que., Aug. 23, — (CP)—Thousands of fish are dying in the Yamaska River here and officials of the Provincial Fish and Game Department have taken fish from several points in the river for analysis.

A combination of low water, hot weather, and possible contamination of the discolored waters is blamed by Riverside residents for the high mortality.

FIRED ON BY RAIDERS

Wellington, N.Z., Aug. 23—(CP)— The 8,706-ton British steamship Turakina sent a radio from the Tasman Sea Tuesday night saying she was being fired on by a raider, Prime Minister Peter Fraser of New Zealand announced today.

THUNDERING ARTILLERY DUEL ACROSS CHANNEL

Hungarian-Rumanian Conference Over Transylvania Collapses

Nazi 'Big Bertha' Emplacements on Fr. Coast Bombed

Waves of German Planes Sent Over Behind Artillery Preparation

London, Aug. 24. —(CP)—Gunfire and bomb explosions from the direction of the Thames Estuary were heard in London this afternoon during a second air raid alarm of a day marked by an assault by new waves of German massed bombers and an exchange by cross-channel, long-range guns.

A heavy barrage of anti-aircraft fire ringed London, with the heaviest flashes seen in the northeast.

The sound of bombardment along the Thames Estuary, waterway to London, was heard plainly in the city.

Observers on rooftops in the northeastern outskirts of the city said dogfights were raging overhead between the raiders and R.A.F. fighters.

Take Cover for Second Time

London's people took cover for the second time at 3.43 p.m. (10.43 a.m. EDT) after having been caught during the rush hour at 8.24 a.m. by the first alarm.

The heavy firing faded after a few mmoents during the afternoon alarm and the drone of the planes gradually died away.

Shortly before the sirents screamed, large numbers of German Dornier bombs and Messerschmitt fighters were reported coming over the southeast coast and were engaged by the R.A.F. fighters while Britain's own big guns laid down a counter - barrage against the French coast in reply to the German shelling of Dover.

Fight Running Battle

Coastal patrols were fighting a running battle with the Nazi craft, some coming over in groups of 55.

Today's second raid was the 12th alarm in London since the outbreak of war.

During this attack German planes were also over a south east coast town and one in the southwest.

The day's attacks followed a

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Elevation and the air! Air simply becomes less and less dense with elevation and, of course, colder. The effects are many and curious. Darwin, in crossing the Andes, found that potatoes boiled for hours were as hard as ever: the boiling point was greatly reduced. Other travelers found that they were easily overcome with fatigue due to the rarity of the air. Blood burst from the lips and ears, respiration was laborious, headaches and dizziness were experienced, there was a loss of appetite and thirst was intense. Fire may be kindled, but is kept burning with difficulty. Sounds are feeble: lightning is seen, but no thunder heard.

NEW REGULATIONS ARE ANNOUNCED

Germans and Italians Naturalized Since 1922 Must Register as Alien Enemies

Ottawa, Aug. 24—(CP)—A special edition of the Canada Gazette last night announced changes in the Defence of Canada Regulations requiring that all Italians and Germans naturalized since 1922 must register as enemy aliens and report regularly to the police. Before the regulations were changed, only Italians and Germans naturalized after 1929 had to register.

By putting back the date seven years, the government followed the recommendation of, the House of Commons Committee which studied the regulations.

The view taken by the committee was that any Italian naturalized after Mussolini came into power in 1922 was open to suspicion because since that time Italian consuls were claimed to have been active in Canada converting Italians here to Fascist principles.

No German Naturalized Between 1922-29.

The change, while it includes Germans as well as Italians, does not affect Germans because none was naturalized between 1922 and 1929. For a number of years after the First Great War no Germans were given naturalization papers.

A provision is made that any Italian who can satisfy the registrar-general that he is a loyal Canadian citizen may be granted exemptions so that he will not be required to report periodically to the police.

Another amendment to the regulations provided that the Minister of Justice shall make a report at the beginning of each session of parliament and every four weeks thereafter of persons detained under the regulations. Previously the minister reported periodically.

A new regulation prohibits, without permission of the Minister of National Defence, the manufacture, printing or the reproduction in any form or manner for commercial purposes, any uniform of His Majesty's naval, military or air forces.

LONDONERS HEAR AIR RAID SIRENS, NO NAZIS APPEAR

Nothing Happens in London Area and Those Who Enter Shelters Soon Come Out

STREETS CROWDED

During Night a Few Bombs Dropped by Nazis on Outskirts in Open Ground

London, Aug. 24—(CP)—Londoners went to work this morning to the sound of air raid sirens, signalling a 51-minute daylight alarm during which nothing apparently happened in the London areas.

The alarm sounded at 8.24 a.m. (3.24 a.m. EDT) and sent many people to shelters. But after several minutes, when nothing had happened, they came out and went on about their business.

By the time the all-clear sounded at 9.15 the streets in the centre of town were almost as crowded as usual with the morning rush.

The alarm was believed to have been caused by planes heading inland from the southeast. Reports from a southeast town said that the faint noise of planes was heard high overhead, followed by the noise of bombs exploding to the north.

Sounds of Explosions

Later new explosions were heard from another direction, and British fighters then were seen racing out toward the source of the explosions.

Over the London area itself, however, there was no activity except for patrols by British fighter planes.

During the night a few bombs were dropped on the outskirts of London, in a southeastern district. All were reported to have fallen in open ground, and to have caused little damage.

Trains, buses and street cars did not stop, although most other street traffic was halted.

Today's alarm came little more than 24 hours after the first Nazi night attack on the capital, which sent hundreds of thousands of London's nearly 9,000,000 inhabitants into shelters from 3.15 until 4 a.m. yesterday. Three thickly-populated suburbs were bombed, but casualties were relatively light.

Rehearse Troops Against Possible Parachute Action

London, Aug. 24. —(CP)—The Daily Mail disclosed today that British soldiers have been carrying on a full dress rehearsal against possible parachute action in Britain.

Slim soldiers, in woman's attire, carrying handbags and powderpuffs to enable them to renew their make-up if caught in the rain, have roamed the country. Others have been disguised as milkmen or bowler-hatted business men.

They are equipped with bicycles, rifles and camping equipment.

It is up to other members of their regiments to round them up.

Canadian Soldier Predicts End of Hostilities by Nov. 15

War Will End With Resounding Victory for Great Britain Says C.Q.M.S. Horstead

STARS AUTHORITY

By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Aug. 24—(CP)—If you believe in the influence of the planets and the language of the stars you can brace yourself for the news which at the moment sounds too good to be true.

Here it is....the war is going to be over by Nov. 15 of this year, with a resounding victory for Britain.

This prediction was confided to me today by C.Q.M.S. R. H. Horstead of Windsor, Ont., who had gained a considerable reputation as an astrologer before he came overseas with a crack Scottish battalion from Western Ontario

Horstead, who claims to have foreshadowed the outbreak of the first Great War and the signing of the Armistice on Nov. 11, 1918, says he has checked his zodiac charts several times with the same results...the war is fast rushing towards an end. He suggested, however, there was no need to start dusting off the bunting or painting signs of "welcome."

Even with an early wind up of hostilities, the planets indicate it will be anywhere from 10 to 12 months before the Canadians are on their way back home, he says. There will be plenty for them to do in helping re-establish order in Europe and other tasks before they are released to pursue their normal avocations in a world once again at peace.

Some time before the predicted close of the war, another world-shattering event was due to happen, he said. He thought it might involve the death of some outstanding personality or an attempted assassination.

"It may prove to be an attempt against Hitler's life, but I wouldn't like to be too positive on that point before I have had an opportunity of consulting my charts more thoroughly," Horstead said.

Belleville District Fair

Belleville District Fair, one of the district enterprises which always attracts attention, is at hand. In a few days the annual exhibition will be in full swing, opening on Thursday, August 29th. and closing on Saturday night, August 31st.

Belleville and the surrounding country, one of the best in Ontario, have always been loyal to the directors and officers of the Agricultural Society in their efforts to stimulate interest in and to develop every phase of the rural and urban life of this community and district. This year with the prospects of the finest exhibition of competition of exhibits from all parts of the district and outside, the same loyal support is urged and anticipated.

Improvements have been made for the housing of exhibits, particularly in livestock.

Entertainment will comprise popular midway and stage attractions. Bands will provide music. An added attraction will be the giving away of two motor vehicles during the fair.

Everything is in readiness for what directors anticipate will be the best exhibition in the history of the society.

Witnesses Identify McFarlane As Man With His Wife July 25 At Hearing on Murder Charge

Hearing Adjourned Until Tuesday as Important Witness Unable to be Present Through Illness

WIFE COMMITTED

Trenton, Ont., Aug. 24th—Identification of Robert McFarlane, 21-year-old Frankford bridegroom, charged with the murder of Gordon Archer, 18 months old son of his wife Alice Archer McFarlane, as the man who accompanied her on the evening of July 25th — the night before the wire-bound body of the dead infant was found floating in the Trent River, was established by the Crown at the opening of the preliminary hearing into the charge against McFarlane, in police court here yesterday.

Sixteen witnesses gave evidence before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K. C., Belleville, adjourned the hearing until Tuesday, Aug. 27th, after County Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson had informed the court that an important witness could not appear through illness.

Prior to the opening of the hearing into the charge against McFarlane, his wife, Alice Archer MacFarlane, was formally committed for trial on a charge of murder by Magistrate Butler. The seventeen-year-old bride showed no emotion when asked to stand, and replied "No" in a low voice when asked if she had anything to say.

E. Ormonde Butler, Belleville, appeared for the accused man, while Jacob Goodman, counsel for Mrs. Alice MacFarlane was present at the hearing.

Testimony to the effect that the accused and his wife and baby had visited the homes of friends and relatives on the evening of July 25th, and had been seen with her at the east end of the C.N.R. footbridge near the spot where the dead baby was found, was given by several witnesses. Others told the

French Tragedy Has Only Begun To Unfold Says Times

New York, Aug. 24.—(CP)—The New York Times, discussing a "France in Torment", asked today for the "sympathy and understanding" of Americans and Britons for the French people who "have not lost the qualities of mind and heart that made them great".

"The French tragedy has only begun to unfold", The Times said in an editorial that recounted the suffering the French people have had to endure under their German masters since the armistice.

"But whatever happens the American people—and the British, for that matter—must not lose their old admiration for the stunned people of France", the editorial continued. "They will not hold the French people responsible for all the acts committed in their name. . . . . But will the French keep their sanity in the months to come? Will Nazi propaganda poison them? Will the French after this war be the French we knew "

"The answer will depend partly on the length of the war, partly upon outcome of the struggle for Britain", The Times said.

400 CHILDREN BOUND FOR HOMES IN UNITED STATES

Large Part of This Group Will be Cared for by Personnel of Rochester, N.Y., Company

CHILDREN THANK NAVY

Among Passenger List Were Number of Jewish Physicians Exiled from Germany

An Eastern Canadian Port, Aug. 24—(CP)—An ocean liner unloaded 1,200 passengers—800 of them children—from the United Kingdom when it docked here today.

Identification tags pinned on their lapels, the children clutched their gas-mask container as they awaited to go ashore where officials of the council for overseas children were to receive them.

Four hundred of the children are bound for wartime homes in the United States. A large part of this group will find homes with officials and employees of the Eastman Kodak Company.

They said their goodbyes to stewards and officers of the former luxury liner before they trotted down the gangplank with long-legged English dolls under their arms. One little girl had a Scotch Collie on a leash. It was as big as herself.

The most fond farewells said by the children were to officers of the Royal Navy who were on their way to new posts. The youngsters crowded around them demanding autographs.

FOUR SOLDIERS KILLED, 5 HURT IN CAR ACCIDENTS

Military and Provincial Police Investigate Two Separate Highway Accidents

ONE AT CHURCHILL

In One Case Driver of Truck Allegedly Lost Control When Trying to Avoid Car

(By The Canadian Press)

Military and police officials today continued to investigate two separate Ontario Highway accidents which last night killed four soldiers and injured five others. All soldiers involved were privates.

J. McCabe and L. W. O'Connel, members of the Royal Canadian Regiment, Canadian Active Service force, stationed at Camp Borden, died in Toronto Military Hospital after a laundry truck in which they were riding, crashed through a guard rail and into a ditch at Churchill, 35 miles north of Toronto.

Clive Johnson, 21, and Donald Reid, 21, of the 2nd Elgin Regiment, non-permanent active militia, stationed at London, were killed near St. Thomas when the car in which they were riding crashed into the rear of a steel-laden wagon.

Injured in the Churchill accident were: Martin McKenzie, 18, R.C.R., whose home is in Toronto; J. Sereier of the Ontario Regiment (Tank), who suffered back injuries; Norval Shaw, 19, R.C.R., of Lambton Mills, Ont.; who suffered a possible skull fracture; William Jacobs, R.C.R., a veteran of the First Great War, who suffered internal injuries; and J. L. A. Massey, Royal Canadian Army Service Corps, Camp Borden, whose home is in Ottawa, who suffered shoulder and chest injuries.

SENATE LIKELY TO APPROVE BILL

Senate Leader Expects to Vote on Compulsory Training Scheme Next Week

Washington, Aug. 24 (AP)—United States administration strategists predicted today that the Senate would approve the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill next week by a margin of at least ten votes and in a form calling for immediate conscription.

These leaders also said a recheck of their polls, following President Roosevelt's call for speedy enactment of a selective service law that would become effective at once, indicated that a substitute bill by Senator Francis Maloney (Dem.-Connecticut) to delay the draft until January 1 faced defeat by a margin of from two to four votes.

The Senate gave up its usual Saturday holiday to continue debate on the Burke-Wadsworth measure, and Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, predicting a final vote on the bill "sometime next week."

Barkley told reporters he hoped to get the Senate to agree to a limitation of debate and expressed the opinion that Mr. Roosevelt's expression should hasten action.

On the other hand, Senator Burton Wheeler (Dem.-Montana), an opponent of conscription, said he thought no attempt would be made to cut off debate "on a matter of this importance."

Rumanians Fail To Give Reply to Hungary's Demand

Delegations Prepare To Depart Without Arriving at Solution Of Trouble

Budapest, Rumania, Aug. 24 (AP)—The Hungarian-Rumanian conference over Transylvania collapsed today.

The two delegations, admitting failure to find a common ground for continuing the negotiations, prepared to depart for Bucharest and Budapest.

The collapse of the Axis-inspired attempt to arrive at a friendly settlement of Hungary's claims to the 35,000-square mile province of Transylvania, which Rumania has held since the first Great War, came after the Rumanians failed to give a satisfactory reply to a Hungarian demand for some concrete territorial concessions.

The Hungarians had demanded approximately two-thirds of the province. The Rumanians refused and offered to exchange minority populations instead.

Hungarian Delegates Glum

The fact that several hundred thousand Hungarians live in Transylvania has been the focal point of the long Hungarian campaign for return of the province.

Hungarian delegates were glum as they left the hall where intermittent conferences had been in session for ten days. They hastened to their Danube steamship to return to Budapest.

The Rumanian delegates stayed to draft an official explanation of the conference failure.

Stiffening of Rumania's attitude toward the negotiations was seen in the calling up of army reserves, the appointment of a new chief and vice-chief of the Rumanian general staff, and the offer of five seats in the government to the anti-revisionist group of Juliu Maniu, the peasant party leader.

The army appointees were understood to oppose any cession of Transylvania territory.

Maniu was understood to have rejected the proffered cabinet posts unless King Carol's new totalitarian party is dissolved.

New Defensive Measures Taken.

Budapest, Aug. 24 (AP).—Hungary took new defensive measures today, calling up army reservists overnight, as the conference with Rumania over Transylvania ended in failure.

The number of reservists called up was not disclosed.

Additional soldiers were detailed to guard the national railway system, and auto bus and taxicab companies restricted their activities presumably to put their vehicles at the disposal of the military authorities.

Escaped Indian Caught After 12 Days

Cochrane, Ont., Aug. 24 (CP) — William McNichol, 29, Indian who escaped from a prison road gang working between Long Lac and Hearst 12 days ago, was arrested here last night.

Police said McNichol told them he fled because other prisoners intended to make trouble for him. He said he wanted to return to Burwash Industrial Farm, where he is serving a two-year sentence on a charge of breaking and entering. He said he had not eaten for two days.

A police circular telling of McNichol's escape was received at police headquarters here only a few hours before the Indian was taken into custody.

GOV'T HAS GONE FAR TO HELP WESTERN FARMER

Hon. J. G. Gardiner Explains Statement Given by Him at Winnipeg

PROVINCIAL PROBLEM

Regina, Aug. 24—(CP)—The government has gone a long way in assuring funds to the western farmer to meet living costs this winter, Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of Agriculture, said last night in a statement here.

The statement was in explanation of a statement given by him in Winnipeg last Monday.

Mr. Gardiner stated last night: "My attention has been called to Canadian Press reports from Winnipeg of a statement I gave to the Winnipeg Free Press. The statement itself is word for word as I gave it. The lead would indicate that the meaning of the statement was that the provincial and municipal governments must solve the problem of providing for western farmers this winter.

To Help Farmer

"I think the wording of the statement means that the federal government has already gone a considerable distance in order to provide the farmer with money to carry him through the winter. The suggestion is that the provincial governments may have a problem to solve in seeing that the farmer is able to use this money in caring for himself and his family through the winter."

In its "lead" to Mr. Gardiner's statement of last Monday The Canadian Press erroneously stated that he had said "that provincial and municipal governments must solve the problem of providing for western farmers this winter."

Mr. Gardiner's statement of that day, after mentioning the government guarantee of a 70-cent-a bushel advance on wheat and other government assistance to farmers, said the government is "providing the farmer with every dollar it is possible to get for him under the circumstances" and "exploring every avenue."

Provinces And Municipalities

He added: "It appears to me that there may be a problem to provide that farmers are in a position to live through the winter as a result of having received any amounts obtained. This would appear under our constitution to be a problem to be dealt with by the provinces, municipalities and creditors working in co-operation with the farmers."

"I think the wording of the statement means that the federal government has already gone a considerable distance in order to provide the farmer with money to carry him through the winter. The suggestion is that the provincial governments may have a problem to solve in seeing that the farmer is able to use this money in caring for himself and his family through the winter."

Heavily-Armed Motorcycle Squads Modern 'Cavalry Scouts'

Gen. McNaughton Develops Hard Striking Arm for C.A.S.F.

3-MEN BIKES

(By Sam Robertson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Aug. 24—(CP Cable)—New motorcycle reconnaissance squads made up of hard-riding, sharp-shooting troops have given the Canadian Active Service Force a new striking arm.

Three heavily-armed men ride a bike and sidecar in this mechanized version of light cavalry brigades.

A Bren gunner occupies the sidecar which was specially designed by Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Canadian soldier-scientist who commands a British army corps.

A revolving stool gives the gunner an unrestricted field of fire on a sweeping curve from front to rear. A postilion rider perches behind the driver.

The bike crews who with grim humor call themselves "suicide squads" will be used mainly for reconnoitring the enemy's advanced positions, studying their strength.

A large number of high-speed bikes manufactured in the United States for the French army were diverted to the Canadians. The French army had intended them for the use of dispatch riders but Gen. McNaughton decided they should fill a more important role.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

NINETEEN GUNS ALREADY REGISTERED

Immediate response on the part of several city and county residents to the government's edict that all rifles and shotguns must be registered before September 15th was evident here yesterday as the first day of registration got under way.

Nineteen guns, the property of eight city residents, were registered at the city police station. One hunting lover brought in his armory of seven rifles and shotguns and a brace of revolvers. Others ranged from two guns upward.

Outlying district residents also brought in their weapons to Provincial Police headquarters here where a large number were registered.

Still greater numbers arrived in the city today for registration purposes.

Wartime Control Brings Uniform Lumber Measuring

Among the wartime problems arising from the accumulation by the Ministry of Supply of national stocks of timber is the necessity for a common system of measuring lumber in the United Kingdom, writes Mr. L. H. Ausman, Assistant Trade Commissioner at Bristol, in a report to the Department of Trade and Commerce. "Apparently certain methods are peculiar to individual areas, depending on local trade practice. Accordingly, representatives of the hardwood trade, in consultation with the Timber Control, have issued amended measuring instructions for the national stock of imported hardwood."

The report, which appears in the current issue of the Commercial Intelligence Journal, gives these instructions, as quoted b the Timber Trades Journal, so far as they are of interest to Canadian lumber dealers.

American Playwright To Speak Sunday

Robert Emmet Sherwood, noted American playwright and originator of the "Stop Hitler Now" movement in the United States, has accepted the invitation of the Director of Public Information to speak in the "Let's Face The Facts" radio series, Sunday night, August 25. Mr. Sherwood, who will talk from New York, will be heard over a national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, starting at 10.00 p.m. Eastern Daylight Time.

Robert Sherwood is known personally to many thousands of Canadians. In the World War he terminated his studies at Harvard University in order to enlist as a private soldier in the 42nd Highlanders, Montreal, with which he saw much fighting overseas. He was honorably discharged in 1919.

FROST STRIKES IN N. HASTINGS

Potato Vines, Corn-Stalks and Other Plants Shrivelled When Mercury Drops to 25 Degrees

Leaving a wake of blackened potato vines, corn-stalks, tomatoes and other plant crops in its wake, frost struck suddenly in North Hastings last night, when temperatures dipped below the 25 degrees mark.

Practically all crops are ruined in the region north of Millbridge to the Algonquin National Park. South of Millbridge to Madoc, the frost also caused considerable damage in the low-lying areas. In the southern part of the county the mercury dropped as low as 38.5.

Farmers in the city today could not estimate the damage done to the northern crops. Partial destruction was caused last week when frost appeared, but it was not as severe as the frosty blast that struck last night.

Provincial Police Constable Stan Palmatier, Bancroft, said today that his region has established something of a record in having frost in every month of the current year. "White" frost were apparent in May, June and July, but not sufficiently heavy to cause crop damage.

CARRIER PIGEON LIGHTS ON CAR

Note Carried on One of Its Legs is Strangely Worded and Does Not Make Sense

Apparently tired from a long distance flight, its plumage drooping with fatigue, a carrier pigeon, dropped out of a blue sky at approximately 7.30 last night, and came to rest atop the automobile of Wesley Huffman, Grier Street.

Investigation revealed a note written on a piece of brown wrapping paper, attached to one of the pigeon's legs. Written in the legible hand of a person apparently possessed of some degree of education, the note is strangely worded, and in some instances does not make sense. It reads: "Dear Joe: I let your pigeon fly from Belleville, as the man here, in case he gets lost. I didn't put the dime on leg as I was afraid he would choke himself. I will see you later, and hope he gets home alright."

ALL CITY SCHOOLS TO OPEN SEPT. 3

Board of Education Decides Question at Special Meeting and Separate School Board Will Co-operate

Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School and all city Public schools, and St. Michael's Academy, will open on Tuesday, Sept. 3rd., instead of September 15th, the Belleville Board of Education decided at a special meeting held yesterday.

The opening is commensurate with collegiate institutes and public schools in other parts of Ontario.

Some members of the board expressed themselves as being against the new opening date, but the majority ruled in favor after a discussion.

As far as the Collegiate Institute is concerned, male students desirous of working on farms to assist in alleviating the farm labor shortage will not be affected by the new ruling. Special concessions for these youths will be made by collegiate officials, it was stated today.

Registration of students will start on Sept. 3rd. and the schools will remain open from that date on. Previous arrangements were to the effect, that schools would open on this date for registration purposes only, then close until Sept. 15th.

Queried this morning, officials of the Separate School Board stated that they would co-operate with the Board of Education with regard to the opening date.

Canadian Writers Have Duty to Perform Says President

Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Que., Aug. 24 (CP).—Canadian writers have the 'clear and definite duty' of keeping the democratic ideal constantly before the nation's eye, Madge MacBeth of Ottawa said today in her presidential address before the first wartime convention of the Canadian Authors' Association.

"This is not a time to stop writing," she told the gathering of about 100 Canadian literary folk attending the Association's nineteenth annual meeting at Macdonald College here. "Our duty is to keep telling our heroic youth—and those who stay at home—what they are fighting for."

There are thousands of boys in the front lines who were "giving themselves to this war with a sense of bewilderment and confusion," she said.

"We can help. We can show them that they're fighting for a proud and honorable past . . . for a mad fantastic present when we are thoughtlessly enjoying the fruits of the labor of those who build and dreamed for us . . for a future chastened by the weight of this experience, a future of better balances."

Other speakers scheduled to address the opening session were Louise Sillcox, delegate of the Authors' League of America, Jean-Charles-Harvey of Montreal, editor of "Le Jour", and Prof. W. Kirkconnell of McMaster University of Hamilton, Ont.

JURY REPORTS DEATH MISHAP

No Blame Attached to Anyone in Death of Wilbert Demers

Trenton, Aug. 24—No blame was attached to anyone in the death of Wilbert Demers of Pembroke by a coroner's jury investigating the death in the C.P.R. roundhouse that Wilbert Demers came to his death in the C.P.R. Roundhouse on August 22 as the result of a fractured skull caused by falling from an engine.

Dr. J. McKay, of Belleville, testified that death was the cause of a fracture at the base of the skull and hemorrhage of the brain.

Wilbert Demers, accompanied by Henry Demers and Walter Venkus were on their way to the tobacco fields of Western Ontario. Leaving Pembroke on August 21, they caught a freight train to Smith Falls and then caught another to Trenton.

"We were very cold when we got here," said Henry Demers, "so we looked for some place to get warm. We entered the roundhouse and climbed into the cab of an engine. When Mr. Hood entered Walter and I didn't move but Wilbert must have jumped or fell from the cab."

The injured man was found a few minutes later lying on the cement floor of the roundhouse. The men in the cab did not hear him fall but Henry Demers testified he heard his brother say: "Fall, fall, fall," before he left the cab.

Mr. Hood testified that he noticed the man lying on the floor as he descended from the cab. "He seemed to be hurt so I called the other men and also summoned a doctor," he stated.

Sgt. W. Probert who investigated the accident testified that there was a drop of six feet from the cab to the floor.

The War This Week

(By H. M. Peters)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Big guns thundered across the Straits of Dover during the war's 50th week as German and British artillerymen tried out the new cannon emplaced on the French and English coasts. Immediate effects of the firing were not apparent but it marked a new phase in the battle of Britain which was otherwise in a comparative lull.

Hitler's airmen who learned a healthy respect for the British Spitfire and hurricane pilots in the previous week—when 500 Nazi planes were shot down over Britain—changed their tactics and attempted hit and run raids rather than mass attacks. Severe Royal Air force bombing of German factories and communications continued, while a heavy air attack was also directed at the new gun emplacements between Calais and Boulogne.

On the diplomatic front the week became an important milestone in the history of the English-speaking world when new steps were taken in the relations of Canada and Great Britain with the United States.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King and President Roosevelt decided upon a joint Defence Board for Canada and the United States to consider all means necessary to protect the North American continent from attack.

Next Prime Minister Churchill announced an offer to the United States of 99-year leases on territory in Newfoundland and certain British West Indies points, to be chosen later, upon which the Republic could establish the air and naval bases it needs for hemisphere defence.

Found Second Wind.

At home Britain appeared to have found her second wind in the struggle. Mr. Churchill was able to announce to the House of Commons that Britain is producing planes at a faster rate than Germany, although Germany ahs an advantage in existing planes.

Elsewhere in the war the small British forces withdrew from British Somaliland to Aden, across the Red Sea and the Italians, for the present at least, added the Somaliland territory to their East African empire.

Italian forces throughout Africa were heavily bombed and Mussolini's fleet lost a submarine and other craft when the R.A.F. surprised them in harbor.

Greece called more reservists to the colors as her quarrel with Italy developed in intensity. Egypt sent a mobile division to strategic positions before British troops to resist any Italian invasion.

Glancing back 25 years:

The White Star liner Arabic was sunk by a German submarine off the Irish coast, Aug. 19, 1915. Thirty-nine lives were lost. In the same week a British submarine torpedoed the German battleship Miltke. Italy declared war on Turkey and the German navy evacuated the Gulf of Riga. Zeebrugge was bombarded for three hours by British warships.

Children Hear Talks, See Films On Safety Measures

Belleville and district youth, some thirteen hundred strong, put its shoulder today to the wheel of a safety campaign that is rolling across the province in an effort to reduce unnecessary accidents.

The youngsters added their enthusiasm and support to the campaign by taking part in a large parade through city streets prior to their assembly at the Belle Theatre where the importance of safety was stressed by outstanding speakers. The "kids" proudly carrying banners advocating safety, marched down city thoroughfares preceded by motor-cycle patrol officers Hatch and Caldwell.

In the theatre they heard an inspiring and highly educational address by the famous sports announcer and advocate of youths' athletic clubs, Harry "Red" Foster, who pointed out the fact that a number of safety clubs were in the process of organization throughout the province. He urged the youngsters to be on the alert at all times and to avoid needless risks whenever possible. A prominent city service club will be approached in the near future to take over sponsorship of a Belleville safety club.

Inspector Frank Gardner, Ontario Provincial Police, also addressed the youngsters, while Alderman Eddie Logan officially welcomed the children and guests on behalf of Mayor Glen Thompson.

Later the children were treated to a motion picture entertainment that included five films, two of which brought out in detail the necessity of safety at all times.

Rigid Censorship Enforced in Eire

Dublin, Aug. 24—(CP)— Rigid new censorship regulations were enforced in Eire today, making impossible the publication of war news without the government's permission.

Matters relating to hostilities on land, sea or in the air between the fighting forces of any state must be passed by the censor.

If hostile acts of war have taken place in the territory of Ireland (including Ulster Northern Ireland), or at sea within 50 miles of the coast, the news accounts must be submitted to censorship before publication.

Newspapers are forbidden to publish pictures of "wars in progress or lately terminating in any part of the world" without previous censrosihp. Maps which do not carry captions of a propaganda nature are expected.

GERMAN RAIDS ON SMALLER SCALE

Bombs Dropped in Several Areas but Casualties Are Very Few

London, Aug. 24 (CP)—A government communique early Saturday said German air raids last night were "on a smaller scale" and that casualties were very few.

The communique:-

"Last night enemy activity was on a smaller scale. Bombs were dropped at a number of points in the southeast and southwest of England, in one district in the Midlands and in another in South Wales.

"Some property was damaged in the Midlands and South Wales. Elsewhere very little damage was done. Casualties were very few and no fatal injuries have been reported."

ADMITS 6 THEFTS IN SINGLE DAY

Herbert G. Baird, Bracebridge, Sentenced to 2½ Years in Penitentiary

Bracebridge, Ont., Aug. 24—Herbert G. Baird, 22, Houghton Township, who admitted committing six thefts in one day, was sentenced yesterday to 2 1-2 years in Kingston penitentiary. Further charges are pending at Owen Sound, Sudbury and North Bay.

Police said Baird made a full confession and had assisted in gathering evidence against himself. He was driving a stolen automobile and was carrying a loaded revolver when arrested here recently.

Baird had been released from reformatory May 30 after serving a six-month term for shopbreaking. He travelled throughout Ontario and police said he admitted seven charges of burglary and eight charges of auto theft. During his trip he visited Toronto, Niagara Falls, London and the Muskoka district, among other places.

Mrs. S. Forestell Marmora, Marks Eighty-Third Birthday

Marmora—Mrs. S. Forestell celebrated her eighty-third birthday on Sunday at her home on Forsythe Street. Mrs. Forestell received many lovely gifts from relatives and friends. Out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. John O'Donnell of Stirling; Mr. Jim O'Donnell, Campbellford, and Mr. and Mrs. Dan Forestell, Coniston.

Miss Grace Crawford, Reg. N., of Albany, N.Y., is visiting her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Hamilton Crawford.

Miss Dorothy Marett of Kingston is visiting her mother, Mrs. F. N. Marett, at Crowe Lake.

Mrs. Pat Murphy and son of Windsor are visiting relatives and friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Peckinpaugh and family of Cleveland, Ohio, are occupying their cottage at Crowe Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Skelly and daughter Louise, of Rochester, are visiting Mrs. Skelly's father, Mr. Hugh Shannon, and other relatives in the district.

NEWEST HIGHWAY FORMALLY OPENED

Hamilton - Niagara Falls Section of "Queen Elizabeth Way" is Clear Right-of-Way

St. Catharines, Ont., Aug. 24 — (CP)—Ontario's newest highway, a four-lane 70-mile stretch from Toronto to this city in the rich fruit-growing Niagara peninsula belt, was open today to the Province's 700,000 motorists and United States tourists. Dedicated by the King and Queen on their visit to Canada last year the highway bears the official title "Queen Elizabeth Way".

At the official opening last night, Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Ontario Minister of Highways, said that the Hamilton-Niagara Falls section of the highway is a clear right-of-way with no private entrances, exits nor crossings

More than 50 bridges—modern clover leaves with underpasses—are dotted at important and secondary crossings and junctions on this stretch. A few "unimportant" and rarely-used grade crossings still exist "but at these points we have restricted building of any kind within 600 feet so that if a modern crossing is to be provided later we will not be burdened with the expense of tearing down buildings," Mr. McQuesten said.

Hint to Roosevelt

Noting that American tourist travel in Ontario had slipped to a low point this year, Mr. McQuesten suggested that President Roosevelt "squelch" rumors tending to hamper incoming traffic from the United States in his next fireside radio chat.

The Minister cited some statements—all false—which circulated in the United States. They were:

That gasoline this side of the border is 90 cents a gallon; food in Canada is being rationed and is thereby expensive; better grades of food are being shipped abroad and only inferior grades are available; it is against the law for Americans to take money back with them; American advantage of high exchange is more than offset by generally-increased prices in Canada; all foreigners including Americans, are under surveillance and that difficulties and inconveniences are met at the border in entering or leaving the country.

He countered with these statements:

Special gasoline, which most Americans use, is available in most parts of Canada at 22 cents a gallon; food was never more plentiful nor less expensive; there is no regulation preventing tourists from taking money back with them; the American $1 bill is worth $1.10 in Canada; tourists returning home need only a driver's licence, letter or business card and a survey showed that it took only seven seconds on an average to re-enter the United States.

652 LOST LIVES UPON HIGHWAYS OF PROVINCE

In 1939 Pedestrians Were 40 P.C. of Fatalities, 19.2 P.C. Drivers and 31.6 P.C. Passengers

Toronto, Aug. 23 (CP)—Ontario's death toll from highway accidents during 1939 was 652 according to the annual summary of statistics on motor vehicle traffic accidents issued today by Provincial Highways Department officials.

There were 13,710 accidents during the year and 11,638 persons were injured. The accidents cost $1,860,264 in damage to vehicles and property.

Pedestrians topped the list of classes of persons killed. The figures showed 40 per cent were pedestrians, 19.2 per cent were drivers and 31.6 per cent were passengers.

The summary shows an increase of 12 in the number of deaths over the 1938 figure and a marked increase of 21.6 per cent in the non-collision type of accident.

Men, numbering 480, were the chief victims of the fatal accidents during the year.

The hours between 4 p.m. and 10 p.m. were the most dangerous on the highway with the largest number of accidents taking place then. The safest hours on an average was between 5 a.m. and 6 p.m.

York county, which includes Toronto, had 4,193 accidents during the year. Ranking next were Wentworth with 1,057, Middlesex 840, Essex 752, Carleton 493 and Welland 328.

HON. J. L. RALSTON TO TAKE SALUTE ON WARRIORS DAY

Military Theme of C.N.E. Emphasized Today With Large Concentration of Troops and Veterans

SPORTS PROGRAM

Toronto, Aug. 24 (CP)—The military theme of the 62nd annual Canadian National Exhibition was emphasized today—Warrior's Day — as thousands of soldiers marched into the grounds of the huge fair.

Hon. J. L. Ralston will take the salute during the march past of the soldiers in front of the grandstand this afternoon in what is expected to be one of the largest gatherings of soldiers in the history of the exhibition. Besides veterans of the first Great War, there will be representatives of the Canadian Active Service Force, Royal Canadian Air Force, Home Guards and United States veterans. A military tattoo will be held tonight.

The exhibition—largest annual fair in the world—was officially opened yesterday by the Earl of Athlone, Governor-General of Canada, who said in the opening address that the supply of material resources from Canada may easily tip the scales of war in favor of the British Empire.

The Earl and his consort, Princess Alice, were guests at a luncheon of the fair's directors, then walked to the main bandshell near the shores of Lake Ontario for the opening ceremonies.

To Tour Peninsula

The Governor-General and his wife arrived in Toronto yesterday and after the weekend here will leave on a tour through the Niagara Peninsula.

The Vice-Regal couple was greeted at the Ontario Legislative Buildings at a ceremony fashioned after that held here last spring for the King and Queen. The Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, Hon. Albert Matthews, Premier Mitchell Hepburn and Mayor Ralph Day of Toronto extended welcomes.

The Earl said that Ontario was a gold mine of "those very resources which are so urgently and so abundantly required if we are to achieve victory."

Speaking to a group of women at the women's buildings of the exhibition, Princess Alice expressed the pleasure of herself and his Excellency at being in Canada.

"People always talk about the beauty of the Canadian Rockies," she said. "We had no idea we could find so much beauty around Ontario."

The opening day of the fair saw cool weather and the attendance of 44,000 was 9,000 less than opening day last year. Cool weather was forecast for today's heavy sport program which included an amateur rowing regatta, an international swimming meet, the Canadian 15-mile tandem canoe championship and Barker golf trophy swims for the two-mile men's Dominion championship and the one-mile women's crown.

TRUTH ABOUT GASOLINE PRICES

It stands to reason that when gasoline is produced under rigid control by skilful, qualified chemists, in the most up-to-date, independent refinery in Canada, the cost of production is most economical.

Add to this that GOOD RICH overhead—production—handling — and distribution costs are also most economical — and you have the reason why "GOLD STAR" First Grade Premium Quality—80 OCTANE gasoline sells at considerably less than other gasoline of equal quality.

So why pay more? It isn't necessary.

R. A. F.'S STRIKING POWER

Mounting evidence of the striking efficiency of the Royal Air Force has come to the attention of mankind. Bombers sank two Italian submarines, one destroyer and a submarine depot ship in the roadstead at Bomba, Lydia, Thursday.

Well might the British Prime Minister, in his statement the other day, state that the air force was playing a great role in the turning of the tide of the war.

Italy has felt this latest blow. She has felt the strong arm of the R.A.F. a great deal of late. Only a short time ago her gigantic plants suffered terrific bombardments from British planes which made a flight of 800 miles either way to visit north Italy and pound the Duce's war industries. It is the same type of bombardment which is given night after night to airdromes in Germany and lines of communications. Something of the same vigor in the way of attack was delivered against the German gun emplacements in France between Calais and Boulogne.

Italy will feel this loss of submarines and will be more chary and wary than ever. Italy's warships have a fleeing way with them but they are paying a heavy price for the action Mussolini took when he sided with the nazis and served France a deal which the people of that nation will not forget.

In British Somaliland, Italy has gained desert sand because Britain wisely withdrew to husband all her resources. Italy is left a barren desert to look after.

The smashing blows which the British are delivering at the Italians in Libya indicate British might and determination.

Defending Britain, attacking Germany, Italy and nazi-overrun countries, helping to police with the Royal Navy the vast sea coasts and the North African area, is a job for a giant and that giant is the R.AF.

HOW CANADA SERVES IN MANY WAYS

The public generally appreciates something of the service which Canada is able to give to the Motherland and the Empire in these days when civilization is guarded by Britain against the violent force of the Hun menace. Canada is the closest of the Dominions and is a territory of vast resources and possesses a climate, everything that goes to make a nation great. The Dominion of Canada is blessed in its wealth in the rocks, in its waters, in its water power, in its fisheries, in its timberlands, in its fields for agriculture, in its climate which breeds enterprise and health. It is in fact as His Excellency the Earl of Athlone, the Governor-General, stated in Toronto on Friday, "a veritable gold mine." Canadians realize this and feel the vast responsibility resting upon them in this hour of destiny and for the generations to come.

They have seen what it is meaning in the development of the air arm of the service under the Empire Training Plan. They have seen it at work in the development of Canadian armies, they have proof of it in the riches of the wealth of gold which is being taken from the rocks to add to the riches of Canada and help in the purchase of war supplies especially in the United States where it helps to build up purchasing power. In its agriculture it is aiding in no uncertain manner the Motherland with its cheese production, its meat products, its grains.

Then yesterday readers were told how important Canada was to become in the present day in helping to carry on the work of research in insect parasites. On Friday it was announced that the famous Canadian scientist, Dr. W. R Thompson, who has been assistant director of the Imperial Institute of Entomology and Superintendent of the Insect Parasite Laboratory, Farnham Royal, Buckinghamshire, England, has come to Canada to continue his work where he will have at his disposal the facilities of the Dominion Insect Parasite Laboratory at Belleville, the largest and best equipped institution of its kind in the world. Research of this kind must continue for it plays a great role in control of crops and the harvest of the forests. Canada and the United States possess a climate which is suitable for research work of this kind and offer opportunities for the collection of new species of parasites, which will make it possible for Dr. Thompson to carry on the work here as it was carried on in England. This step means that the Dominion Laboratory at Belleville becomes the centre of research for the time being.

Belleville is particularly pleased to have Dr. Thompson for his name as a scientist is known throughout a large part of the world. He is a native of Ontario and has had a brilliant career in his chosen profession.

The Dominion Government in setting up the laboratory here in its wisdom provided for study of problems of entomology for the sake of Canada, in cooperation with scientific institutions in the United States, Great Britain and the rest of the world, and now when a time comes when work of this kind is cramped in Europe through conditions which have come about on the European Continent through German occupation of a number of countries, Canada is able to render an important wartime service.

Lumbermen Rise to Occasion As Lumber Plays Big Part in War

"The importance of the part played by wood and the dependance being placed on Canada as a source of supply for British requirements in forest products of all kinds; logs, pit props, and the sawn and finished products, are placing an increasing responsibility on the various divisions of the Canadian lumber industry," says Canada Lumberman. "This applies to men as well as to timber, for apart from the loss of men through regular enlistment, a number of outstanding lumbermen have been selected for service at Ottawa while others are to be found in some of the forestry units which have been organized.

"The current situation is familiar to all. Shut off from usual sources of supply, Great Britain is, today, almost solely dependent upon Canada for the greater part of her large and varied timber requirements. The condition created by the lack of bottoms has been corrected, and today Canadian lumber and timber products are moving with increasing freedom and in increasing volume.

"Coupled with this insistent overseas demand are large and varied domestic requirements, including those for war purposes. The two combine to place an unexpected strain on the productive capacity of Canadian sawmills.

"These demands must be met. In this connection, British requirements come first, followed by Canadian military requirements, export and domestic needs in that order. In other words, British and Canadian military needs must be met first, and following that, because of the urgent call for U.S. funds, exports to the United States are likely to be placed ahead of general domestic requirements.

"The result is that most of our sawmills are operating at near peak capacity. This applies throughout the East and the West. At that, the relation of shipments to production is such that stocks are actually being reduced rather than built up or held at present levels. While as yet there is no evidence of an acute shortage, though readily-available stocks in certain grades and sizes have been reduced materially, it is predicted that a real shortage may develop before the year is out.

"If the present tempo continues, and there is no reason to anticipate any let-up this year, and every reason to expect it to become even more insistent, steps may have to be taken to increase the productive capacity of the existing plants and to ensure an even larger supply of logs. Touching on this point, the British timber controller intimated that he did not anticipate that British requirements would show any reduction during 1941. In other words, the mother country is likely to lean on the Canadian lumber industry at least as heavily as is the case today.

"There would seem to be, then, good reason to anticipate that the lumber industry must gear itself to still greater productive activity. It may mean adding to mill equipment, as well as taking other steps to improve plant efficiency. In addition, as far as most Eastern operators are concerned, it involves taking steps to still further increase the log output this Fall and Winter. Thus it is likely that woods operations will be stepped up considerably, involving placing an unusually large number of men in logging camps.

Whatever the demand, Canadian lumbermen will rise to the occasion. They appreciate the pressing need for timber and timber products of all kinds, and, if necessary, are prepared to make sacrifices to meet, to the fullest extent possible, all that may be required of them.

Is it Feasible to Raft Timber Across Atlantic?

(Canada Lumberman)

Great Britain is looking to Canada for an increasing volume of timber. This is not surprising since all timber shipments from Northern Europe have been cut off and Finland and the Scandinavian countries are quite unable to do any exporting. Consequently England is left with one main source of supply, plus what she can take off her own forests. The main source of supply, Canada — has ample forest resources, and by virtue of the fact that Great Britain is definitely still "mistress of the waves" there should be no difficulty in keeping shipments moving at something approaching normal levels. But there is one point on which this has broken down and that is the lack of sufficient bottoms.

There are many things that Great Britain must have before she can think of her timber wants. Timber is a very bulky cargo and there is a definite need for such things as foodstuffs, ammunition, armaments and items vital to the successful prosecution of the war. Consequently she is forced to limp along on a curtailed lumber program, at a time when she needs much more lumber than usual.

Taking everything into consideration, it is at this point that a thought pops up in the minds of some lumbermen—who are nothing if they are not practical. Why not raft timber to Great Britain from Canada? It's been done before from other countries with success, why not again?

Swedish Interests Active in Rafting Plan

During the last war Swedish interests were active in considering the idea of towing supplies in the form of rafts over to Great Britain. Apparently the idea was received rather coldly in England, but the enthusiasm of the originator could not be dampened and he went ahead with his plans. Later in the year by means of his Refanut Company, he puts his idea of floating sawn goods over the North Sea to a practical test.

The first raft to make the trip from Haparanda to Copenhagen consisted of 2,100 standards which were bound together in the shape of a boat so that it could be easily towed. At the time, doubt was expressed in many quarters that a vessel towing such a load would be able to navigate in the heavy seas. An editorial view expressed in the columns of the British publication "Timber Trades Journal" was more than doubtful whether the voyage would be possible during the war, as the slow pace at which the rafts were towed would make them an easy prey for the U-boats.

The timber raft reached Copenhagen safely, the wood was quite undamaged from the salt water and the successful project was hailed as a remarkable feat. As a result of this voyage a project was made known to construct a North Sea raft to carry about 4,000 standards and very soon after the Armistice a London timber-importing firm obtained permission to bring in a raft from one of the Norwegian ports which would contain some 1,200 standards.

About this time a firm of London agents were interesting themselves in a raft of steel framing which had already been loaded with pitprops for conveyance across the Atlantic to Great Britain as soon as the opportunity presented itself. It was at that time that it was learned that in the early days of the 19th century, Wood Brothers, shipbuilders, Port Glasgow, the builders of the "Comet" used a similar method of bringing timber from Canada, the float being barque rigged and sailing over under its own power.

Early in 1919 announcement was made that the Mercantile Transport Corporation of New York had bought up the rights of the Bayley Ocean Freight Transporter which, it was stated, could be equipped with a power plant at low cost or towed to its destination by an ocean-going tug. This raft was built to carry from 2,000 to 8,000 standards and the company made it known that they were prepared to deliver cargoes to any market, or would arrange with a syndicate of timber merchants or colliery companies requiring large quantities of timber or pitprops, to build the vessels ready for sea. The Benson timber rafts and the Davis rafts have since been proved quite successful on the Pacific coast.

Twenty-one years ago a timber raft reached Ipswitch from Norway and this was described as the first raft to successfully cross to England. The raft which caused such a stir in U. K. lumber circles, was built at Hommelvik by Merakur Brug on behalf of the consignees, T. Gabriel and Sons and Burtons and towed across the North Sea by tug, arriving safely in spite of the heavy odds on the Drontheim Exchange that she would not reach the English side intact.

The raft consisted of 1,300 standards of timber and measured 360 feet by 42 feet wide. She was submerged 10 feet and there was 8 feet of timber out of the water. Credit for the construction of the raft was given to J. F. M. Fransden of Jordeson and Co., agents for the shippers, who undertook the superintendence of the building at Meraker Works on behalf of Messrs. Gabriel and Capt. Gardiner, who piloted the craft across the water.

IS IT FEASIBLE GAL TWO

On the trip across very heavy gales were encountered, but it was stated that the raft, even then, had no water over her. Only five pieces of lumber were lost on the voyage and these were lost as a result of a bump from the tug before starting.

Did Not Have to Pay Dock Dues

It is interesting to note that the raft did not have to pay dock dues since it had neither propelling power or sails and moreover, the raft did not enter or leave any port; it "began" in one port and "finished" in another. The clearance papers from Norway described the raft as the tug's cargo as there was no official description to meet the case.

The sole rights in the particular methods of construction adopted for this raft were vested in Messrs. Gabriel and Mr. W. V. Gilbert was the consulting engineer in the construction of the raft. Sir James Ball, Timber Controller in the last war, was credited with showing an interest in the possibility of rafting timber across the Atlantic by means of "demountable" rafts, and was at one time reported to have had plans under way for a practical test.

Canadian Pit Props

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review)

Empire resources in timber are being largely developed, especially in Canada, the main source of supply, to meet British war needs, because old channels of trade have become almost completely blocked.

In a report to the department of trade and commerce G. B. Johnson, Canadian trade commissioner of Glasgow, states that one of the British government timber control's most serious problems is to provide supplies of timber for the mines. Although Canada in peacetime had never been able to compete with Finland and Russia in supplying pit props, the Dominion has adequate resources of that class of timber and consequently, a quantity of pit props was contracted for.

Upwards of 1,000,000 cubic fathoms of props are imported annually by the United Kingdom, says Mr. Johnson. It is understood that contracts placed in Canada and Newfoundland by the timber control for delivery in 1940 are 350,000 cubic fathoms. "While this quantity is much less than half the annual British consumption, the shortage is made up by the large stocks of Baltic and Finnish props in the country at the outbreak of war, which have only now been taken over by the collieries, and by the increased production of home-grown timber, especially for the Scotch collieries," he adds. "These stocks of Baltic and Finnish props, augmented by purchases from Canada for 1940 delivery and by domestic production, should carry the collieries well into 1941. As time goes on, however, it seems inevitable that the requirements of props from Canada will be on a larger scale."

A Convenient Method of Blood Transfusion

We are reading stories and seeing motion pictures of emergency operations requiring transfusion of blood. It is certainly dramatic to see the life giving blood of one individual flowing into another who is practically at the point of death. There is also the picture of the wild drive of the ambulance interne to pick up a blood giver (donor) who has the right type of blood needed for an emergency case.

Much of the worry and drama is now avoided by the blood banks kept in hospital refrigerators enabling the surgeon to have on hand a stock of the various types of blood so that no delay occurs when blood is needed.

What may be a great step forward in blood transfusions is reported by Drs. F. R. Edward, J. Kay and T. B. Davie in the British Medical Journal. These physicians point out that it is the plasma (the fluid or liquid part of the blood) that produces the desired result, not the blood corpuscles, the red cells carrying oxygen to all the tissues. The plasma will keep indefinitely at room temperature and there is no need for any special 'type' of blood as when the whole blood is needed.

Blood is taken from the donors and kept for three or four days, by which time the red corpuscles get completely separated from the plasma. The blood used by these physicians was fourteen days old.

A further advantage of the plasma is that it can be dried and stored in tiny air tight glass vessels. It is thus easily carried cannot become contaminated, and when needed the necessary amount of warm distilled water can be added so that it can be transfused readily.

These physicians frankly state that the number of cases in which the plasma has been used is not large, but its ability to prevent or remove shock is equal to that of whole blood. It seems to be ideal for use in emergencies, when no supply of blood is available, and in war surgery.

In the treatment of shock due to severe burns and scalds, the plasma has proven as effective as whole blood. Physicians everywhere will await the results of further treatment by this convenient method.

What's the Answer

BY THE ACE CAMERAMAN

(Distributed by the King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WHAT'S THE ANSWER?

1. Back in the '90s several words were advanced to describe a certain act. Here are four of them. What do they mean? Electromort, thanelectrize, electrocacy, voltacuss.
2. You've all seen the fluroescent lamp. How does it work?
3. From the seeds of a certain citrus is derived an oil of a nut-like flavor, useful in industry, in cooking and as a salad oil. What is the fruit?
4. According to Dean Frank Whitmore of Penn State, Dixie is expected to be the chemical frontier of the United States during the next twenty-five years. What products is the South expected to supply to the nation?
5. The cowbird has been called the parasite of the bird world. Why?
6. The name of England's Royal Family was changed by proclamation in 1917. It is now Windsor. What was it before the change?
7. Look at the sports pages and you'll find results dated from the following racing plants: Tanforan, Suffolk Downs, Rockingham Park, and Latonia. Where are they?

Answers

1. The act of electric killing.
2. Ultra-violet energy is converted into visible light through the medium of fluorescent powders that line the tubes.
3. The grapefruit.
4. Some of the raw materials include petroleum, sugar, gas and coal, starch cellulose, vegetable oils and sulphur.
5. Building no nest, it will lay its eggs in the nests of birds which have feeding habits similar to its own.
6. The House of Saxe-Cobourg.
7. Tanforan, San Bruno, California; Suffolk Downs, Boston, Mass.; Rockingham Park, Salem, N.H.; Latonia, Covington, Kentucky.

KEEPERS OF THE MOAT

"The gratitude of every home in our island, in our Empire, and indeed throughout the world, except in the abodes of the guilty, goes out to the British airmen who undaunted by odds, unwearied in their constant challenge and mortal danger, are turning the tide of the World War by their prowess and by their devotion. Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few."
—Winston Churchill, Aug. 20, 1940.

ABOUT THE ARTIST

"KEEERS OF THE MOAT" is the work of the famous Polish artist, Arthur Szyk (pronounced Shick). Mr. Szyk, who was born in Poland in 1894 has, until recently, resided in London. He studied art throughout Europe and is world famed for his remarkable and unique illuminations, miniatures and cartoons. His paintings have been exhibited at Geneva, Paris, New York, etc., and at a recent exhibition in London. Mr. T. W. Earp (Art Critic of the London Daily Telegraph) describes him as being the greatest illuminator since the 16th century. Her Majesty, Queen Mary, possesses an important painting entitled "St. George," and many other examples of his paintings are represented in the British Museum, White House (Washington), etc. Mr. Szyk is now engaged upon a series of paintings depicting the "History of Canada." His works have been reproduced in numerous English, American and Continental books.

OF HEAVEN'S BENEDICTION

CHAPTER 27.

Confession

Rod looked miserable. Low, in confession, he said, "I hated the life and the people out there. I—I didnt belong. It seemed such a waste of the years I put in studying and working. And Tony.... He and Irene are going on a trip around the world......"

It had been Tony then.... Irene wanted her adored son more than she wanted her young husband....

Rod said, "Not one thing but a dozen things contributed. I don't know whose fault it is. It just shouldn't have happened. It ran its course and——and that was all. She knew it. We didn't quarrel. She simply announced that she was going to Reno. She probably knew all the time it wouldn't last...."

Brooke said, out of her new wisdom, "I doubt that, Rod. Women always think that love will last forever, even a woman like Irene...." If Irene wept, no one would know and only Tony, who loved her, would suspect. And only for a little would Irene hear the sad echo....

"That's all," he said abruptly. "I'm going to look for a job next week."

After a moment she said, "Rod, you were cut out to go up the ladder slowly and thoroughly. Taking it in one leap was contrary to your nature. Grace would like to see you. She won't mind in the least about this except that she hates divorce. She'll even gladly go back to kitchen work again. You should see her before you do anything else."

"Why don't you hate me? Why aren't you against me? Every one else is!"

"Because I'm not in love with you any more, Rod. If I were, I'd be more curious as to what actually happened in California between you and Irene—with Tony in the background. Though there were others, Tony was the real issue between you. Because I'm not in love with you any more, Rod. But I'm sorry for you because I believe you are truly sorry. You were so glamorous to me once, so brilliant, so unfailingly right. And now, months later, you're a too-good-looking young man who wants sympathy and a pat on the back. You fed on my admiration for years and now you need it again...."

He said, "I'm not going to look for a job here...."

"Running away?"

"I'll never live it down."

"You're being silly, Rod. After all, what did you do? You married a woman so rich that you didn't need to work." She smiled. "The Puritan conscience. New England. I know. I have one. But people will admire you a great deal more if you stay. You're thinking of Barney mostly, aren't you?"

"And others in the same organization. Any work I'm lucky enough to get will bring me in contact with them eventually...."

She bit on her lip before she said, "I think you flatter yourself that any one cares that much. Your mother cared because it separated you from her for too long a time. I cared because I thought I was going to marry you. Barney cared because he had an investment in you. You're being needlessly sensitive."

"You're right." He smiled slightly. "You usually are."

She spoke up quickly. "Oh, no. Don't think it or say it to please me."

"You're looking wonderful, Brooke."

"You say that like a little boy, Rod, who wants his mother to open the cookie jar...."

She smiled. "I find I can stand the heat very well."

"You will see me again, won't you? I haven't any one else to see."

Her stern sense of loyalty—or her soft heart?

She nodded. "Yes. But you are married, you know...."

"It doesn't seem like a marriage......"

"We haven't touched our lunch, Rod."

They parted in the lobby and she returned to her room. Now Rod, like Tony, had become a responsibility. Odd, that money and luxury and a woman like Irene had deflated his immense ego. She thought, "I'd like to hear Irene's version. But no one will, except perhaps Tony. Irene will be gallant even if she is hurt.

If only she could stay on the outside! But, as she looked across the hot ugly roofs, she felt drawn into Rod's life again. She thought, "No, I won't let myself! I can be his friend when he hasn't any. I can listen to him!"

No doubt he still thought she was in love with him.... That much of his conceit still remained. And it would be fair to tell him that she was not when they met again, though she would not say that she had ceased to be with increasing rapidity since a bright July afternoon on a Maine beach. Yes, recalling him as he sat opposite her, something remained. You could not know any one so long and so intimately and feel nothing. A detached tenderness akin to pity tarried. But love dies and passion wears out......

It was not until Saturday that she heard from Rod again.

It was the night of Barney's party and Julian had called that morning, his message brief, the clear concise tones of his voice familiar and beloved. No, she had not forgotten, Brooke had said. Forgotten? He should see her deflated bank account for the evening frock, a sheath of white.

Her room was in a state of wild disorder—the new frock, hurriedly opened and spilling out of the box and paper into which it had come, Margot Stevenson's exquisite little white wrap hanging crookedly on the bedpost, shoes, stockings, a glittering little bag and a box containing orchids....

The shrill ringing of the telephone added to the confusion. Julian, already?

"It's Rod, Brooke."

Her heart sank. Not tonight, Rod.

"How are you, Rod?"

He laughed. "I'm lucky. May I see you? I've news, good news...."

"Not tonight!" "I'm not dressed and I'm going out...."

"Oh, but just for a minute, please. I'm just a few blocks away ......"

"You'll have to wait."

"I'll wait."

Rod, waiting now......

She had meant to take infinite time to dress. Instead she hurried, pinning Julian's orchids on the lapel of Margot's wrap. Hurried because she knew so well the agony of waiting....

She did not know that it was raining until she stepped from the elevator into a lobby crowded with people who had rushed in to escape the downpour. Rod, his blue suit and dark hat spotted, came toward her, taking in all of her, not with the ardor of a year ago but with possession and gratitude and quick jealousy....

She thought, "Once I ached to look like this for you, feeling perfectly turned out and orchids on my shoulder...."

Rod tried to say with good humor, "I didn't know I was cutting in on anything so important as this...."

"We'll go to the lounge. It's too crowded here." If Julian called her room, she would not be there to answer.... Why tonight, Rod!

Only a young man and young woman, deep in serious conversation, were in the lounge. Brooke led the way to a divan in the far corner.

She said gently, "Rod, I'm sorry but I haven't much time.... You have friends here now, haven't you?"

"Not many. But tell me the good news...."

CHAPTER 28

Misunderstanding

But there was no joy in Rod's voice. "I have a job. I think it's a good one—beginning Monday a week. That will give me time to go home to see mother. I've an apartment, too, and I'm going to get my things out of storage." His lashes flickered. "I'm not broke, Brooke, I meant to tell you this last week. Irene put some money in my name when we were married. She insists that I keep it, knowing I've got to start all over again."

Tony had spoken of his mother's generosity....If Julian came and didn't find her....

"That's fine, Rod."

"I would have called you this week but I've been so darned busy."

Your excuses don't matter any more, Rod. I don't believe I'll ever have to make any excuses for Julian....

"Who is it tonight, Brooke? Do you mind?"

"It's Julian Carlton."

Rod flushed. "Oh!" Then, looking relieved, his flush fading, smiling a half-smile, "I'm not worried about him. He's too well known as the love 'em-and-leave-'em type."

"Is he?" quietly. A year ago she would have believed him.

He nodded. Then, "Brooke, I.." The warmth of his eyes that had once shut out everything else except him came to them. "When this is all over, we can be married and forget it forever, I hope."

He had dismissed Julian and he had taken for granted that she would marry him. Brooke looked at him with amused dismay, her dark brows lifted. He was pleased with himself again. He had a job and an apartment and a faithful girl and money from a generous first wife. She could have laughed at his conceit, his blindness, his stupidity....

Her eyes flew to the clock. It was three minutes within the time Julian had said he would come for her.

"I can't talk any more, Rod. I'm going to Barney's tonight. He has a place in Connecticut now. Shall I tell him anything?"

"That won't be necessary. He'll read it in the papers next week."

Two minutes....

She arose and walked with him, entering the lobby just as Julian, his fairness, his sunburn accentuated by evening clothes, stepped from the revolving door.

She knew what he thought as surely as if he had said, "I suppose you've been seeing Rod frequently." She saw disappointment in the alert blue eyes, the tightness of his jaw, and swift anger replacing disappointment.

People in the lobby who were waiting for the rain to stop saw the meeting of two tall young men, one in evening clothes, one in street clothes, and a tall girl beautifully dressed in white with dark hair centerparted.

They heard the young man in evening clothes, slightly taller than the other, say "Hello, Rod. How are you?"

"Hello, Julian. I'm fine, thank you."

They shook hands. The girl stood apart, looking from one to the other with thoughtful eyes.

Rod said, "You've quite a drive ahead. I don't want to keep you." Turning to the girl, he smiled. "I'll call you, Brooke."

"Good night, Rod."

"Good night, Julian."

When he had gone, Julian said, "I'll get the car and come back for you, Brooke."

With sick shame she looked up at him. Remote and cool, he looked back, heightening the barrier between them. The evening was spoiled when it had scarcely begun.

She waited, looking out at the rain dancing on the wet street and people hurrying. The sound of Julian's horn had become familiar during their drive north together, and when she heard it she picked up her frock a little and went out.

People waiting in the lobby looked as if they envied her....

In a tangle of traffic Julian said, "It's too bad it's a night like this. We'll have to be indoors."

"Perhaps its only local."

She felt leaden. How to break his icy indifference! She glanced at him quickly and glanced away again, knowing that now they were together again, her love would demand not only his presence but expression. Yet she was stirred and happy and glad that the drive was a long one.

"When it was terribly hot here," she said, "I thought of you in Maine. In fact, in my thoughts you were always on the beach, never doing anything else."

His chuckle cheered her. "When at that particular moment I was probably playing tennis." Then guardedly he said, "I'll be the second person to tell you that you are looking particularly lovely tonight."

"Thank you." She dragged the words from her. "Irene is going to Reno this week. Rod is here alone."

"I can't resist saying that — I told you so. I told you in February."

"In February nothing helped me, Julian."

After a time when they were riding on an open country road he said, "I hope you'll be very happy, Brooke. In spite of what you think, it is not an unusual case."

"But you don't know all the details."

"And I'm no longer curious to know them."

"You don't understand...." She could have wept.

He said severely, "I understand that at the end of six weeks you and Rod Westover will be married. What I think doesn't matter. My failure to understand doesn't matter either. Now let's talk about something else."

There were tears in her voice. "No, Julian. Let's not talk at all."

Nor could she think while they rode in silence. Each thought was washed away before it was half formed. He did not understand and she could not blurt out to the impregnable barrier "I'm in love with you, Julian. Let me tell you!" And so she sat quietly, her heart sick, for how many miles she neither knew nor cared until the lights of Barney's house came into view.

When Julian opened the car door their eyes met briefly and he smiled.

"I was boorish Forgive me. The grass is wet. And before Barney appears and again commands me to pick you up and carry you in...."

She gave herself up to him.

The big house was crowded with guests. Barney, grinning up at a blonde who towered over him, moved away when he saw Julian and Brooke. In the throng Brooke saw Wilson Stone and Denny, his wife.

Barney boomed, "Hello!" and pumped Julian's hand, then Brooke's. "Take your coat upstairs, Brooke."

She left them, hearing Barney ask Julian if he had done any fishing in Maine.

CHAPTER 29

Insurmountable Barrier

There was no one in the large room upstairs overflowing with the wraps of Barney's guests. Brooke removed her borrowed wrap, pinned Julian's orchids to the shoulder of her dress and sat down at the dressing table. A little time in which to prepare herself for the continued misunderstanding between Julian and herself. Never had she felt less in a party mood.

When some one knocked she rose quickly.

"Brooke?"

It was Barney.

Opening the door, she saw that he was looking more serious than usual as he stood aside with a cigar in one hand and a glass in the other.

"Let's go over here," he said, nodding across the hall.

They went to his study.

"Rod's back," he said without preface. "Miss Short, my secretary, told me. I'd have known anyway because I was called for a reference."

"Irene is going to Reno this week," Brooke said.

Barney raised bushy brows. "Is she? Not surprised. Expected that but not quite this soon. Couldn't last. I knew it. And damn it, I'd like to have Rod back with me. Best man I ever had. The best worker, and dependable. But the talk....Well, I might later." He grinned. "When you and he are married...."

She looked at him, her eyes bright with anger. "Why do you think I still want to marry him? People can change. I have! No, it's Julian, Barney. And I didn't even like Julian very much at first. Now ....Must I marry Rod because every one expects me to......Even Julian?"

Barney wagged his head. Obviously he was enjoying himself.

"Are you asking me?" He went to her and looked straight at her. "Rod's caused a hell of a lot of trouble. The funny part is that I don't think he meant to."

"He is ashamed and he'd give anything in the world to be back with you."

"Might be done yet."

"Your heart is as soft as mine."

He laughed. "Don't tell anybody that. Julian's damned hard-headed. Let's go downstairs."

She would never remember the names of the people she met that night, and only vaguely would she remember their faces. It was as if she were seeing a motion picture and the operator was running the film too fast.

She talked to Wilson Stone and the attractive, red-haired Denny, his wife, hearing more about their adored first-born. She danced with a succession of young men and answered them in stock phrases, conscious only of Julian as he moved here and there about the large room, smiling his clean swift smile, holding a lighter to somebody's cigarette, lifting a glass to his mouth.

When finally she danced with Julian, then sat beside him and ate with him, he was a charming stranger. They had ceased to have anything to talk about when he thought she was going to marry Rod.

They were among the last to go, leaving Barney, the genial host who knew that his party had been a success, standing in the doorway.

The storm had ceased, leaving the night clear. Brooke thought, "If it had not rained, we could have walked outside away from all those people and perhaps...."

But Julian spoke evenly. "Barney said that in time he would take Rod back into the company. He'll have an excellent opportunity there. Rod's a good man, I'm told, thorough and efficient and honest."

Yes, Rod was like that, she thought. A skilled robot who had gone awry once in his life....

She said quietly, "Barney is a wonderful friend."

A long time passed before Julian said, looking ahead, "The first time I saw you I was with Barney. We talked about you and Rod then, Barney knowing about Irene, of course. I looked at you and you were radiantly happy that night. But you were such a little girl..."

He paused but did not look at her. Then "You were in love with love, Brooke, with Rod's good looks and with all the fine things your imagination had created over a period of years when he was away from you. If he disappointed you, you excused him You weren't, you see, in love with a man, a human being. That's why I say that you were such a little girl...."

He paused again and continued slowly, "The next time I saw you the dream was beginning to turn to reality. You saw your fine young knight in armor infatuated with a wise and amusing woman. The next time I saw you the dream had become a nightmare. I wouldn't let you talk about it, if you remember, and I wouldn't be a shoulder for you to cry on though I was glad when you told me you had one friend, Jim Bartlett, upon whose shoulder I was certain you'd been crying.

"I don't know what happened to you when you went away. But you came back a whole person. You were real and gallant. You had faced facts. I don't minimize what happened between you and Rod. Your love was your life and you lost something to worship. But I saw you growing up and I tried to help by not sympathizing with you. Others had done that. I didn't make love to you. It was difficult not to. You've been the very essence of life for me from the very beginning."

"Go on, Julian."

"I loathe talk! But it's now or never!" Perhaps never would be much better!"

She saw the lights of the city reluctantly. There wasn't much time left for talk.

He said, "I thought you'd gotten over it. Outgrown is a better word. Because you are superior to him. I've talked with him and since I've known you it seemed impossible that you two could have been in harmony in anyway."

"Love doesn't explain itself when you are very young."

He said nothing more until he stopped the car before the hotel and turned to her.

"Brooke, the first time I saw you I wanted you. The second time I saw you I wanted to marry you." He smiled. "The thing you felt between us that you didn't understand was that." He drew back. "Now will you go?"

Her voice shook. "Now I won't go!"

"Very well." He smiled again. "You'll have all of it—a girl who is going to rush into matrimony in only six weeks. I don't know why I am telling you. I suppose that's the lawyer's training—to explain himself, present his case fully. But I think I've made a pretty thorough job of it already....I love you and I've stayed away from you. In Maine, though nothing was said, I felt we were very close to each other. When you left and I stayed on, we were still close. I remained there when I wanted to come back to you. Nothing is sillier looking than a man sincerely and passionately in love. I've been wearing that silly look for weeks now. And tonight......Tonight I wanted to walk out into Barney's garden and put my arms around you and tell you that I was terribly in love with you. Now will you go?"

"No."

"There's a law against parking here."

"You could drive around the block."

"And prolong it? I won't. You want to be very gentle and kind to me." His mouth curved. "I won't allow it, my darling. I don't even look glum, I hope. Do you mind if I don't take you in?"

"Julian...."

"No!" He got out, circled the car and opened the door for her. 'Good night and good-bye, Brooke."

She went without a protest, lightheaded, wondering how she could be so happy when he had said goodbye. All the things he had said were echoing in her mind.

Witnesses Identify McFarlane

court they had given a lift to a man and woman walking along the Trenton-Frankford highway near 11 p. m. the same night. All but two identified McFarlane as being the male member of the couple, but none could identify the woman.

Dr. J. A. Farley, coroner, who retrieved the body of the dead infant from the water, corroborated previous evidence regarding the condition of the body. Cross-examined by Mr. Butler, he established identity of wire produced in court.

Statements alleged to have been made by the accused persons were identified by J. Tinney, court reporter, in court and admitted as evidence in the hearing. Exhibits of articles of clothing, shoes, etc., belonging to the dead child, a flat stone taken from the river were identified by Chief of Police William Bain.

The stone was marked with scratches and was but one of its kind in that particular part of the river where the body was found, the Police Chief said.

The stone, he added, was a land stone. Another stone produced by the Crown, was said to be a river stone, by the witness, because of the presence of vegetation.

He also identified wire said to have been cut and removed from the body of the dead infant by Dr. L. Erb, pathologist.

Sought Permission to Wed

Robt. McFarlane had come to his office seeking permission to marry Alice Archer, a former ward of his organization, Capt. T. D. Ruston, Children's Aid Society, Belleville, testified. He questioned McFarlane about his financial condition and was told he was taking his wife and child to the home of his parents in Frankford after the marriage.

"Did he say that definitely?" the Crown asked.

"Definitely."

"Do your files indicate this wedding took place?"

"Yes, I have a letter to that effect."

"Would it be fair to suggest that Robert McFarlane knew of the existence of this baby before his marriage to Alice Archer?" the Crown asked.

"Yes", Captain Ruston replied.

Stones Not Roll in Water

James Thow, C. N. R. section man, who first saw the body of the dead child in the Trent River gave corroborative testimony of his evidence in the hearing of Alice Archer McFarlane.

Cross-examined by Mr. Butler, Thow decried the possibility of stones such as produced as evidence rolling into the water, but admitted they could be thrown by children.

Constable Frank Loso, told the court of the finding, face-down, of the body of a child in the river near the C. N. R. bridge abutment. He identified various exhibits and a statement said to have been signed by the accused.

Geo. H. Cobley, Trenton undertaker, related the bringing of the body of the child to his premises, and of removal of the wire that bound its body, under instructions of Chief of Police Bain.

The visit of Mr. and Mrs. McFarlane to her home on the evening of July 25th was related by Mrs. Dorothy Taylor, Trenton. She did not know the McFarlanes had been married, she told Defence Counsel Butler in cross examination.

Baby Not Present

Re-examined by the Crown, Mrs. Taylor testified Gordon Archer, the dead child, was not present with the McFarlanes at her home on the night of July 25th.

Allen Taylor, former witness's husband, corroborated this statement. They had remained about 20 minutes after calling at 5.45 p. m. At 9 o'clock that evening Taylor had seen McFarlane at the east end of the C. N. R. footbridge with his wife and her baby, when he (Taylor) was returning from swimming.

"Is there any question in your mind that Robert was there?"

"No."

Baby Was All Right

He had passed within 4 to 5 feet of the McFarlanes and in his opinion the condition of the baby was all right. Taylor told Defence Counsel Butler, he had not known McFarlane previous to their meeting at the Taylor home.

The McFarlanes and baby had come to her home on Byron Street at 7 p. m., July 25th, and remained until 9.30, Mrs. Dorothy Johnson, sister of Alice McFarlane, told the court. The baby had been "fine" all evening. When they departed, they had gone in the direction of Dundas Street.

Was Aware of Child

McFarlane was aware his wife had had a baby before their marriage, Mrs. Johnson said, relating that accused had seen Alice three times a week prior to marriage. She had asked McFarlane if his mother knew Alice had a child, and he replied, "Yes".

"Positively Alive"

The baby was positively alive and in good health on the evening of July 25th, she testified, identifying articles produced by the Crown as those found on the body of the dead infant.

The accused had called on her sister for only a month before their marriage on July 12th, Mrs. Johnson said in cross-examination. He knew the first night he called that Alice had a baby.

McFarlane had come to his house at seven o'clock, July 25th, and conversed with him about building a house, Fred Johnson testified. Witness and wife had told McFarlane that Alice Archer had a baby, the first evening he called, he said.

"Thought He Should Know"

"He had wanted to go with Alice steady, and we thought he should know," Johnson said.

Questioned as to the condition of the baby on July 25th, Johnson told the Crown it was "in perfect health."

"Very Fond of Him"

He had asked McFarlane if he intended to care for the baby after his marriage to Alice Archer, and accused had replied, "I certainly am. I am very fond of him." Under cross-examination, Johnson told Defence Counsel Butler, that the McFarlanes appeared to be very happy on the evening of July 25th.

Picked up on Highway

Mr. and Mrs. George Wickens, Glen Miller, testified they had picked up a man and woman on the Trenton-Frankford highway, about 11 p. m. July 25th. Ten minutes later they got out of the car at the Wickens home, and crossed the road.

"Do you know who the man was?"

"No."

"Did you ever see this man (indicating accused) before?"

"I don't remember".

Mrs. Wickens did not have any recollection of what the man looked like except "he was small".

Wickens told the Crown that he had seen McFarlane before but he could not identify him as the man who rode in his car that night. The couple were alone when he picked them up, he said.

"I did not recognize either of the people, whom I picked up that night," he told Defence Counsel.

Everett Hall, Bata employee, had seen McFarlane and his wife, north of Glen Miller the same evening. Mrs. McFarlane was not carrying anything. He picked them up in his car about 11.25 p. m. and took them as far as the turn leading to the Bata Shoe Company plant.

"There was a young lady with McFarlane when I saw them near No. 5 powerhouse on the Trenton-Frankford highway on the night of July 25th", Jack Foster, Bata employee, and cousin of the accused, told the court.

"I did not know who she was. She was not carrying anything."

He had driven them to McFarlane's home in Frankford, and his wife had remarked they were both of small stature.

Mrs. Martha McFarlane, mother of the accused, heard her son and his wife enter her home at roughly 11.30 p. m. on July 25th. The next morning they ate their breakfast and went to work.

She had been informed of her son's marriage after the wedding, and had had no knowledge of it previously, she testified.

Danced Around Radio

She did not know that Alice McFarlane had a baby until the day following their arrest in Trenton. The morning of July 26th, the couple were in high spirits, and danced around the radio.

The hearing adjourned at this point until Tuesday, Aug. 27th.

Dr. and Mrs. Thompson are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Baird. Their son and daughter who arrived in Canada some weeks ago, will join their parents here later.

WEDDINGS

LINDEL—LLOYD

Picton, Aug. 24.—(Special)—The United Church parsonage at Bloomfield was the scene of a wedding of interest on August 17 when Beatrice Helen Lloyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Lloyd of Bloomfield, became the bride of Pte. Hiram Oscar Lindel of Camp Borden. Rev. J. T. E. Blanchard officiated. The attendants were the bride's father and a sister-in-law, Mrs. J. W. Lloyd. The bride was gowned in light blue voile with white accessories. After a trip to North Hastings, they will make their home in Bloomfield. The groom has many friends in Coe Hill district where he was born, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lindel.

THOMPSON—BECKER

A quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized at the United Church manse, Regina, Sask., on Saturday, August third, when Aurora Henrietta, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Becker, Yorkton, Sask., was united in marriage with Const. R. F. Thompson, (R.C.M.P.) Yorkton, Sask., son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Thompson, Massassaga, Ont. The Rev. E. Outerbridge officiated.

The bride, who was unattended, wsa charming in a white tailored suite with white and dusky rose accessories and a corsage of gladioli in matching colours. The register was signed by Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Becker, parents of the bride. For travelling the bride chose a navy and striped sheer wth white accessories.

MACPHERSON—TWEEDY

A quiet summer wedding was solemnized by Rev. W. J. Davis at Cannifton parsonage on Saturday, August the seventeenth, when Anna Mildred, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tweedy, Thurlow, became the bride of Cecil Gordon, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. MacPherson also of Thurlow.

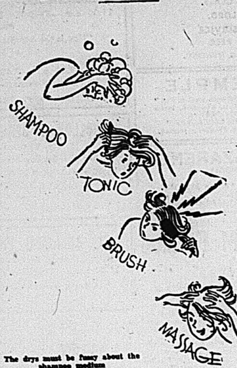
The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked charming in a British Blue ensemble with navy and white accessories and wore the groom's gift which was a gold engraved locket.

Miss Jean MacPherson, sister of the groom, acted as bridesmaid. Both the bride and bridesmaid wore a corsage of roses, maidenhairfern and baby's breath.

Mr. Jack Tweedy, brother of the bride, acted as groomsman.

After showers of confetti and best wishes the happy couple left for Ottawa and other points east. On their return they will reside on the Third Concession of Thurlow.

Getting All Steamed up



The drys must be fussy about the shampoo medium

By HELEN FOLLETT

Beauty shop owners say there are more complaints about excessively oily hair than about locks that are over dry. In one case the sebaceous glands are on a rampage, spout like geysers, seem never to take time off. With the other condition the glands are on strike. Scalp and tresses both are arid.

The drys have one advantage: the hair looks more abundant than when it falls prostrate on the crown, stays and sticks there. Oily hair requires considerable heat when it gets a permanent wave; dry locks must have a limited period of boiling or the result will be a kink. Operators understand these matters; have means of deciding just how much steaming is required.

The drys must be fussy about the shampoo medium, using only the blandest of soaps, which should be melted. Before the wave is set, the hair should be sprayed with brilliantine and a lubricant frictioned into the scalp. It's not a bad idea to use warm olive or mineral oil the night before the shampoo.

Brilliantine can be applied with an atomizer before the coiffure is arranged each day. It is surprising how much oil crisp tresses will soak up.

• • •

Young, fresh skins do not need astringents. Warm water and soap at night, clear cold water in the morning; that's the rule for the pretty lassies.

When birthdays traipse along, as they do in a hurry after the thirty milestone has been passed, the tissues of the face are likely to lose tone. When that condition is present wrinkles may be on the way. To ward off these tiny gullies, keep a bottle of witch hazel at hand and use freely; get a bottle of your favorite astringent and apply it; don't expect it to help if it stands in your beauty cabinet.

Ice rubs hustle up the blood streams, harden fibers, refresh a depleted surface.

Successful Tea Sponsored by War Work Society, Madoc

Madoc—On Thursday afternoon the War Works Committee of Madoc Women's Institute held a very successful afternoon tea at the home of Mrs. G. C. Moon. Mrs. Geo. West had charge of the home-cooking table. In the tea room the president, Mrs. Tanner, poured tea while Mrs. K. Nicol, Mrs. Emery and Mrs. C. R. Johnson served the guests. Other members assisting were Mrs. Walter Whytock, Mrs. T. Blue, Mrs. Corrigal and Mrs. C. Whytock. Miss Lamoine West provided music during the afternoon. The money will be used for buying yarn for Madoc boys overseas.

Mr. and Mrs Murney Dougan and family of Port Chicago, Cal., and Mrs. (Dr.) Kay of Schomberg spent Thursday afternoon visiting relatives in Madoc, Mrs. Walter Whytock and Mrs. F. Hill.

Mrs. Jas. Aylesworth is visiting relatives in Napanee and vicinity.

Women's Transport Service Will Be Organized Here

A branch of the Canadian Red Cross Women's Transport Service is being formed in Belleville. The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, August 25

SUNDAY'S horoscope accents spiritual, mystical and cultural activities, with much gratification in such application. There are hints of untoward, disastrous adventures connected with journeys,—changes, removals or in peculiar situations in which arcachery or irregularity are strangely ominous. Refrain from all sorts of chances and hazards.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of upsets and upheavals, both sudden and unpreditable. It would be wise to be cautious in travel and in all manner of changes. Be governed by intuitions rather than eccentric whims.

A child born on this day may be unusually gifted in creative expression, probably in music, poetry or art of a novel or modernistic form. It will have some erratic tendencies, with leanings toward "the easiest way"—expediency rather than principle. Yet it will be spiritually inclined, strongly intuitive.

For Monday, August 26

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is rather conflicting with signs of drastic activity, with matters moving at high tempo and in aggressive attack. Rash, tempestuous and impulsive conduct may have power to undermine very expansive and productive prospects, in which superiors may be aggravated to non-co-operation. With restraint, composure and good judment, there may be real achievement.

Those whose birthday it is have prospects of some very constructive and productive activities during the year if they will but curb tendencies to rash, turbulent and over-aggressive action. Well-directed force, enthusiasm and stimulated mind and energies could lead to expansion and real success. Strife, passion and over-indulgence spell defeat and grief.

A child born on this day should be talented, forceful and ardent, with really fine mentality and intentions but it may stand in need of discipline and self control.

FASHION FLASHES

THERE'S DECEPTION about some of the new one-piece frocks for they are cut and styled to suggest a two-piece model. One such model, done in black velvet, has a snug buttoned-down-the-front bodice top with faille collar and cuffs embroidered in tiny brilliants and gold thread.

A DATE for dinner will find many a girl wearing a two-fabric model. One frock has a draw-string top of black silk jersey with a very full taffeta skirt with green, yellow and red gypsy stripes.

Lovely Brenda Joyce and John Payne supply the romantic interest in the technicolor production, "Maryland," which is now playing at the Belle.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Doesn't Want Him to Spend a Cent

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A year ago I went with a boy for a few months. We had so much fun. He had only a part-time job and we didn't go to expensive places, but we thoroughly enjoyed ourselves. In September he went back to college, and I thought it was because of his studies and no money that he stopped coming to see me. I was sorry about this, because I always wanted him to understand he could come any evening, even if he didn't spend a cent.

I recently heard that he now has a good position, so it can't be because of lack of money that he stays away. We never quarreled. I did want to give a party, but the circumstances at my home prevent that.

I don't want to marry him or anyone else for five or six years, but I'd like to go with him because we can have so much inexpensive and harmless fun together. We are both under 20.

Should I write him a letter asking him to come over? I hesitate because if he'd get the idea I was chasing him, he wouldn't come at all. Other boys don't interest me one speck. He's different.

What To Do.

Why not ask him to come to see you? You were good friends for a long time, and have had no quarrel. Sometimes for no reason at all friends don't see each other and, when they meet, find they're just as congenial. It's too bad you can't have a little party in your home. Perhaps you and some girl chum could have a joint party in her home, sharing expenses and invite this boy, with a group of others.

Wants To Borrow From His Girl Friend

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The girl I'm going with at present has well-to-do parents, and they give her a very generous allowance. She wastes most of it on this and that foolishness, while I'm really hard up. I have a job but don't make much. This girl never notices that I don't have much, and though I've hinted she has never offered to lend me a cent.

I know she loves me, and we're planning to marry as soon as I get a substantial raise. Do you think it would be O.K. for me to borrow from her occasionally?

Fred.

If you hope to marry your "heiress", it seems to me that it would be very risky for you to borrow from her. A penny has often turned the current of friendship, and a borrowing friend soon takes on the aspect of an enemy. Don't borrow if you're in earnest with this girl.

Mother Must Consider Supporting Children

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 30 years of age, with an unemployed husband and four children to provide for, no education or training, and would like to know if you can advise me as to where I can get training in the particular lines in which I think I am adapted. For about a year I have worked in laundries and on power machines.

I'm a good talker. Do you know how one can make a living talking? For instance, radio work? Does it pay well, and how would one go about it? I've always been able to talk people into giving me work, but I can't hold these jobs, and don't earn enough. I enrolled in night school and tried to learn stenography but was advised that I should operate a press instead. However, hard labor isn't in my line; I do enough of that at home.

J. E. B.

In the city from which you write, there is one of the best training schools in the United States, where all classes are free. An intelligent person taking this training seriously could hardly fail to get a job. If you will send me your name, on a three-cent stamped envelope, I will give you the name and address of this school.

Radio work is extremely difficult to get, unless you have some talent or ideas in which the public is especially interested.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

On Being Hostess To Your Hostess

Most of us enjoy making generous bows of hospitality to other persons. But in some circumstances we hesitate to carry out our wish, wondering if our inclination may be more generous than proper or appropriate.

Such a circumstance is when we are visiting. Our hostess and host have made all kinds of hospitable plans for our happiness, have been the personification of hospitality. We have been so much on the "receiving end" that we long to make some gesture on the "giving end." But, we wonder, will this be proper, appropriate? Will there be any possibility that our hostess and host may misinterpret our suggestion that, for one occasion during our visit, we change our status from guest to hostess (or host)?

Have no misgivings about the propriety and appropriateness of inviting your hostess, or your host, to be your guest (or guests) during your visit. It's a proper thing for yo to do, and it's a delightful plan for you to make.

If your visit is in the country, keep your eyes open, as you drive or walk about, for a delightful wayside inn or tea-room, to which to invite your hostess, or your hostess and the children, for lunch or tea, or your hostess and host for dinner, or the family for Sunday lunch or mid-day dinner. If possible, order the menu and pay the check before the party. This will give more ease and graciousness to your party.

Or let's say that you are visiting a hostess who lives in the city, or that your hostess lives in the country and that you and she are planning to go to the city to shop. There are many kinds of happy plans that you can generously make. Your suggestion may be lunch, either with your hostess alone, or with one or two friends of your hostess whom you have met and especially like, or who may have given parties for you or otherwise offered charming hospitality. Or the party may be lunch followed by a matinee or movie, or a matinee or movie followed by a "dish of tea." Or it may be possible for you to invite the host to join you and the hostess for lunch or dinner.

In any event, let me urge you to make your invitation definite. Maybe something like this, "Mary, when we go into town on Tuesday, may I give a party for you and Jim at that nice restaurant that is such a favorite of yours? If you agree, I'd like to ask Mr. and Mrs. Allen and Mr. and Mrs. Graham to join us. We could perhaps have an early dinner, and take that ten o'clock train back here."

Tip to the Hostess

When lemon is served as an accessory....with iced tea, for example, or with fish....it's better, because more convenient for the user, to serve a quarter of lemon rather than a slice.

Rawdon

Rawdon—Mrs. C. Mather and son Bert of Colbourne visited Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fanning on Sunday.

Mrs. Russell Johnson and Carlyn attended a party in honor of Miss Edna Johnson, Frankford, at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Hugh Morton, Stirling, on Wednesday afternoon. Edna leaves at an early date to train for a nurse.

Mrs. Victor Graham visited friends in Peterborough last week and attended the fair.

Mrs. Burton Morton and Muriel spent last week visiting Miss Lila Burgess and other friends in Norwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Douglas and children of Fuller visited Mrs. Edith Sharp, Wellman's, on Sunday evening.

Wellman's Young People's Sunday School class held their August meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dunham, with the new president, Miss Hazel Dunham in charge.

The meeting opened with devotions and the following program was enjoyed—A reading by Miss Gladys Pauley and a vocal solo by Mrs. Frederick Bechett. Miss Isobel Bechett contributed a piano solo and Rev. J. E. Beckel gave an interesting talk on his recent visit to St. Ola, where his son, Boyd is stationed as a student minister. The National Anthem was sung, after which Miss Barbara Whitehouse conducted a splendid series of games and everyone took part in this recreational period. At the close the hostess served candy and apples and was tendered a vote of thanks.

On Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Burton Morton entertained to tea Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morton, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morton, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dracup of Sine, Dr. and Mrs. Roy Hendry and Janet, Toronto and Mrs. William Jackman of Stirling.

A large number of Rawdon young people attended the Junior Farmers' outing at Oak Lake Thursday evening.

Allan's Mills

Allan's Mills — Miss Betty McKeown spent last week with Donna McGee at Wellman's Corners.

Mrs. C. L. McKeown, Beverley and John are visiting at the home of Rev. Canone and Mrs. W. G. Swayne.

Mrs. Harry McAdam and Miss Lois McAdam visited Mr. and Mrs. A. Burkitt on Thursday.

Mrs. Wm. McComb spent Thursday with her mother, Mrs. Ed Anderson of Stanwood.

Misses Marjorie and Betty McKeown attended a kitchen shower at the home of Miss Ruth Bateman on Friday afternoon in honor of Miss Phyllis Barlow, bride-to-be.

The young people in this vicinity attended the Junior Farmers' dance on Thursday night at Oak Lake.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Parenthood

When, some weeks ago, I wrote in this column that I thought some parents worked too hard at the job of parenthood, I didn't for a moment seek to suggest that some parents take parenthood too seriously. A lot of people seem to have misread that meaning from the column, and I certainly never intended anything of the kind. Parenthood is a job that just couldn't be taken too seriously.

I pointed out then that in the practise of medicine the wisest course is to restrict your treatment to what you are sure is necessary and give nature full opportunity to help! Sometimes doctors get the idea that it is medicine and not nature that is accomplishing the cure. There is an analogy between the practise of medicine and the practise of parenthood.

For example, nature certainly does the best job with a child's play time. Letting a child do as it wants, within reasonable limits, of course, is still the best way of handling the play period, I think. The more you try to utilize the play period for teaching things, even if you employ the fancy, modern, indirect systems, the less benefit the child derives from his play. He needs time in his daily life when he is completely carefree and without strain.

What one needs most of all as a parent, is patience, infinite patience. I have often been asked how a child's first training should be begun. I have only two pieces of advice to offer. The first is begin training early — and six months is none too early. For instance, toilet training should be started as soon after birth as the child can sit up. My second bit of advice is patience; there's nothing quite so important. As soon as you lose patience, become irritated, and unreasonable with a young child, then he begins to lose confidence in you and your advice. Your influence in his development may be stopped until this confidence is regained.

Every baby spills his food as he learns to feed himself; every baby mispronounces sounds as he learns to talk; every baby makes mistakes when he is learning proper toilet habits. Constant correction in a kindl way finally results in the child learning the correct habits. If you get unduly cross with him you only slow up his attempts.

Experts today who put forward this system or that one for raising children, work on the assumption that parents today are a bad lot. Or, at least, that seems to be the idea. Well, I don't think parents are so bad. I think I get a pretty good idea of the problems and worries of parents in the bundle of letters I get almost every day. All that's wrong with them in most cases, it appears, is that they are more or less afraid of the responsibilities of parenthood. And there's really no basis for most of their fears.

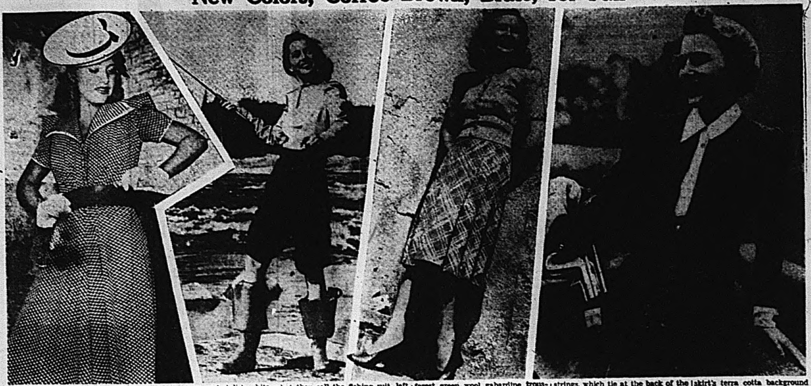
New Colors, Coffee Brown, Brass, for Fall



The August sun smiles pleasantly on these smart fashions for town and country. At left is a black and white jersey dress and stylish white hat which is just the thing for afternoon wear. "Puss-in-Boots" is what they call the fishing suit, left centre. It consists of a beige gabardine blouse with long sleeves and forest green wool gabardine trousers which may be worn as slacks or ingeniously pulled up with draw strings, which tie at the back of the waist. The fish like it, too, they say. Next comes a terra cotta and dove gray sweater and skirt outfit. The skirt's terra cotta background is a broken plaid of gray. At right is a snappy cardigan to wear with the new long sleeve shirtwaist.

The Painted Desert

By TEMPLE MANNING

It seems incredible that a land brimming with natural and scenic wonders shows a lack of vacation spots for some folks. There is nothing so wonderful in all Europe as our Yellowstone Park, the Grand Canyon, Carlsbad Caverns—to name but three. Nowhere on earth is there anything so fascinating or beautiful as the Painted Desert of Arizona and New Mexico.

Sheik Stuff.

We know the Sahara and the sandy wastes of the Soudan, and wonderful as they are, they cannot compare to the Painted Desert and Rainbow Bridge. The sheiks and the nomads are all very nice and picturesque but they have to give way to our Navajos and Hopis. If you haven't yet charted your vacation, give a thought to the Painted Desert and see one of the great vistas of America. Your party will be one of the many thousands who are lured from U.S. 66 and who enter the Painted Desert via Cameron, Ariz. Your car will pass by the tracks of prehistoric dinosaurs which roamed the region millions of years ago while Nature, that old master painter, was coloring the terrain with incredibly lovely hues.

Truly Named.

The Painted Desert occupies an area of about 40,000 miles, set aside almost entirely for Indian reservations. The desert itself is a land of rocky sandstone and other formations, the colors ranging from pale pastels to deep tones in yellow, blue and violet. The shifting mineral sands, the pungent perfume of sage, the canyons and gorges with their reflections and shadows make up a glorious picture.

There is but little wild life in the desert except for here or there a swift-running pack-rat or a lizard sunning itself, the sun momentarily dimmed as a vulture swoops by. It is this silence, this solitude and air of remoteness that is so potent in its lure and fascination. We know of no vacation more soothing for the nerves.

Indian Reservations.

Not the least of the attractions of the Painted Desert lands are the reservations and trading post, with the chance to learn more about the Navajos and Hopis. The Navajo reservations stretch in a circle around those of the Hopi, with the capital at Window Rock. The Navajos are a nomadic people, seldom settling in any one village for any length of time. Some of the Indians go in for sheep and cattle raising, moving their stock with the grass to be found in the dry canyons.

At the trading posts visitors can buy the exquisite silver jewelry and the beautiful blankets for which this tribe is famous.

The Hopis in their group of villages from which they seldom emerge to travel farther, raise sheep, dry farm and construct interesting baskets and pottery. From one big group of Hopi villages trails lead in all directions past springs, buttes and mesas. As they go quietly about their work and duties, the Hopis seem very different from the Indians who stage such wonderful dances, symbols of their intensely religious feelings and tribal pride, dances that reflect the rain, the snow, thunder and lightning.

Daily Does It—Where Exercises Are Concerned

Said she: "I simply can't spare the time. I know I need to do exercises, but they take too long."

Said I: "Bosh! I have no time, either, but I do daily dozens. They needn't take time."

Said she: "It's my tummy . . ." thoughtfully. "Do you think you could help me?"

This is what I told her, writes Ursula Bloom in Home notes:

For that tummy. In bed in the morning before I get up, I do a few breathing exercises whilst I read the paper. Try doing the same. Lie more or less flat and breathe in deeply, moving the lower ribs outwards. Divide the rest of the breath into two parts. Draw up from lower part of tummy muscles so that you feel them moving. Once. Twice. Exhale without making a noise through the mouth. You'll feel that exercise doing its job.

At night whilst my bath is filling, I touch my toes six times. I found myself slacking, so now as I undress I put my clothes on the floor deliberately, and darned well have to pick them up. It's exercise.

Here's another: Place hands on hips, and swing the body round in circles—three times only each way, because this makes you giddy.

And another: Stand feet apart, swing body round to face almost over hip, drop hands forward then, breathing in, strain them upwards pulling on the waist line, right over the top of the head and drop to the sides. But be wary. Do this only twice, once each way the first time, or you'll know all about it!

Deep Breathing.

To develop the bust, practise breast stroke on the floor. Or turn an imaginary mangle. Breathing exercises before an open window in the morning are the thing for this, too.

If you are going to be really strenuous and want to get back that oh-so-slim waist line of your youth, here is a set of exercises which will honestly do the trick. Allow seven minutes for them.

Stand straight and raise your hands sidewards, clasping them over your head. Raise the right knee and clap the hands underneath it, then lower knee, and clap hands above head again. Repeat with the left knee.

Sit tailor-fashion with one hand on each knee, pull in the tummy muscles, let the chest cave in and the shoulders droop. Then push out the muscles and straighten the shoulders again.

Stand with the left foot on a hassock or book, left hand against the wall; swing right leg as far forward and back as you can, keeping it in a straight line. (This is not so easy as it sounds!)

Kneel erect, knees together and hands at sides. Then slowly let the body go back, keeping the spine and neck in a straight line, then raise yourself slowly again.

Abdominal Muscles.

If you want to get a flat tummy, sit up straight and pull in the abdominal muscles until you can almost feel the front muscles touch the spine. Breathe in as you pull in, then relax as you breathe out. I do this exercise in my bath, and find it works well, and saves time, too.

When you are walking home you can do special exercises as you go. Make up your mind to walk so far with the tummy well in, breathing regularly, head erect, chin in. In this way habits are formed; habits which make good figures.

Maybe your feet are being a bit of a pest? Everybody seems to be having trouble with them. Here are special exercises to help them.

Grasp the toes and work them to and fro gently but with vigor, and without moving the rest of the foot. Massage from toes to instep (never the other way) and from instep to ankle; use firm, stroking movements. Finish by massaging the ball of the foot with the thumbs. You will feel fine.

Crumpled Toes.

To cure crumpled toes, pick up a pencil with the bare toes. It sounds idiotic, but it does the trick.

Walk daily round the room on tiptoe if you want to strenthen your feet. Stand on a book and curl your toes over the edges, as though trying to open it.

Half of you never attempt any massage of any sort. It works wonders, makes you feel good, and does not take too long. Every morning when you get up, stroke each foot upwards towards the calf, in three slow strokes, increasing into a slapping movement. Then from calf to thigh. From thigh to body. This starts the circulation throbbing. You'll feel marvellous. I swore I would not try it because it takes too long, but I tried it one lazy Sunday morning, and something else has to go by the board now because I simply cannot give it up.

Liaison Flying Women's Work

According to One Girl Pilot, Back from War in France

New York.—A larger place for women in aviation, particularly military aviation, is advocated by Aline Rhonie of New York, who is back in the United States after serving as an ambulance driver in France.

One of the first women in the United States to qualify for a transport pilot's license, Miss Rhonie would like to see women employed more as liaison fliers behind the battle lines in a corps such as Britain has organized for women who can fly new planes from the factories.

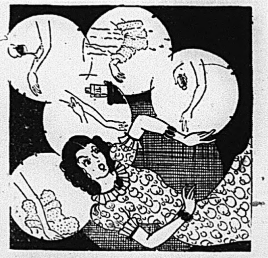
Women would be excellent in cross country and communications work," Miss Rhonie says. "You give a woman flier an important message to deliver and 9 times out of 100 she'll get it there if humanly possible."

Miss Rhonie agrees with Jacqueline Cochran, another of America's foremost women fliers, that there is no place for women pilots in the front lines.

"Our place is not in the front line, nor even in the test pilot work. Women make good teachers, however, and they could be valuable in giving cadet pilots the first 75 hours of instruction before they are turned over to military fliers for tactical instruction."

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON
(Mme. Qui Vive)



ARMS AND THE WOMAN

This is the season of the year when arms should sit in at the beauty feast. Feminine fins take a lot of punishment during the summer season. They are burnt by the sun, frisked over by wind, subjected to atmospheric dust. By all beauty rights they should be soft, fair, velvety of surface. A pair of pretty arms is a grand asset. A dimple in an elbow has a definite sentimental appeal.

Perhaps you have picked up some yallery polka dots at the beaches. Evidences of a health-giving outdoor life, but you would be just as happy if you didn't have them. Freckles can be weakened. We won't say that horrid dark ones will scuttle away in a hurry under cosmetic treatment, but light ones can be subdued. We're going to tell you how to do it.

In nearly all large beauty shops, there is a department for hand and arm massage. But only the wildest money flingers patronize it because the average woman is out for decorative effects rather than sound, substantial beauty treatments. Hair, complexion and finger nails, dig into the beauty budget. But arm treatments can be given at home. One a week will do wonders.

Fox-trot to the drug store, get a bottle of cocoanut oil and a few ounces of almond meal. Drop into the 5 and 10 and buy yourself a large tin salt shaker to hold the meal. Begin with a rousing old scrubbing with hot water, soap and a heavy bath brush. If you were sunburned early in the season you've probably got a collection of dead skin scales that should come off. Give attention to the elbows. Arm hinges are more useful than beautiful. The skin is coarse there, inclined to be grey. If you've had more birthdays than you care to divulge there will be heavy wrinkles.

Rinse with warm water to get the flesh in a glow, dry thoroughly with a coarse towel. The best one for this purpose is a turkish towel of unbleached linen.

• • •

Dip your fingers in the cocoanut oil, massage from finger tips to the shoulder. Rub it in with the thumb. Smooth with flattened fingers. Form a bracelet of one hand and swing it round and round the wrist and lower arm. Work in as much oil as you can. Be lavish with it. Force it into the cuticle around the finger nails.

Sprinkle on the meal so it will form a paste with the oil. That's the time to SOS for help. Get somebody to wring large thick towels out of steaming hot water and bind them around your arms. Repeat half a dozen times. Remove the pack with the moist towel, dry, pat in a borated talcum.

Timely Advice for Hapless Motorists

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

If you are the first to arrive at the scene of an automobile accident and find the driver clear on the ground unable to move on account of pain in the back, what you suspect is a fractured spine.

What will you do for the patient? Tell everybody who comes up not to move him until the ambulance arrives and then go and telephone for the ambulance, or send someone while you stand guard over well-meaning helpers who want to carry him some place.

Improper lifting of such an accident victim may result in permanent crippling from injury to the nervous system.

Carelessness in first aid in these circumstances has resulted in thousands of permanently disabled persons in this country. It is estimated that 13,000 spines were fractured in automobile accidents in 1937.

Never Trivial.

With a fractured spine there is always a backache of varying severity. Often it may be no more than a kink in the back. There is usually no deformity and contrary to general belief about a broken back, the victim is often if not usually able to walk after the injury. He frequently minimizes his accident, saying that he has nothing but a muscle cramp. Any back pain after an automobile accident no matter how apparently trivial calls for an X-ray examination.

Small indeed may be the accident which causes spinal fracture. One of the commonest forms is the hitting of a speed breaker or obstruction of any kind in the road, so that the occupant is thrown up. The fracture may occur in the bones of the neck from hitting the roof of the car, or in the lower back from coming down on the buttocks. Even sudden stopping may produce such an injury from "whiplash" or "jackknifing" the body. The driver always innocently thinks of the car going 50 miles an hour when as a matter of much more concern to him, his torso is also going at the same rate of speed.

How To Lift.

In lifting a victim of an automobile accident never lift his face up, with one person holding under the armpits and another hooking under the knees. If he must be lifted before a strecther arrives, it is safer to lift him hanging face down, by two people, one at the armpits and the other at the knees. Even on the stretcher he should be carried face down.

Backache of a different kind—not due to spinal fracture—may come from poor posture at the wheel. Long drives, on a low seat with the shoulders bent over the wheel and a slump in the lower back will put a strain on the tendons and muscles of the back and result in touring backache.

It will be relieved by exercises—bending and running around and doing a dozen squatting exercises.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

D.C.—"How can one overcome a slight roundness of the shoulders? Are shoulder braces needed?"

Answer—I would not advise shoulder braces for a slight roundness of the shoulders. This can be overcome by exercise such as standing up against the wall and throwing the shoulders back until the back of the head, the shoulders, the buttocks and the heels all touch the wall. Standing straight, sitting straight, and walking straight all help out.

FASHION FLASHES

VEILED MYSTERY is the apt name of an off-the-face Breton sailor done in black velvet with a peaked crown. A wisp of a black lace veil creates a mask across the eyes.

BACK AGAIN comes the favorite shoe, the pump of bronze kid. A new model has an elaborately draped toe quarter and a very high heel.

JUST DOTTING on a new fashion are the campus gals now thinking about college clothes. The new fashion is a wool pinafore frock to be worn over different tops. A nice model is in ruby red woolen worn with a black jersey blouse.

Cooking That Fish

You've heard the story of the fish that got away, but the fish that didn't tastes better. Nothing so nice as a dish of fish right out of the water, into the pan and on to the table. Trout, salmon and swordfish have been running well, tasty fish all.

Trout Dishes.

Here are some suggestions for the catch of the "compleat angler", starting with the southern fashion of fixing a catch of trout. An old Virginia cook says to clean the trout thoroughly, wash and dry. Tie the fish several times around with packthread to keep them whole and in shape. Roll trout in melted butter, lay over a clear fire at a good distance, so that the fish may broil slowly. On the modern broiling rack, use a moderately low flame. To do right by the tasty trout, serve it with a piquant sauce. For a splendid recipe, wash and bone one anchovy and cut into very small pieces. Chop one tablespoon capers. Combine ½-teaspoon flour, some butter, and cook all the items with pepper, salt, nutmeg, teaspoon vinegar. When blended, pour over trout.

Another easy way to fix trout is to wrap each fish in a strip of bacon, place in pan and bake for 20 minutes without turning. For sauteed brook trout, wipe, sprinkle inside the fish with salt and roll in corn meal. Saute in butter until brown. Serve with a sauce made with ½-cup butter, teaspoon salt and juice of a lemon.

Deep Water Fish.

The best way to cook swordfish is the State of Maine fashion. Wipe slices of fish, sprinkle with salt and pepper. Melt a generous amount of butter in a hot frying pan, and cook until slices begin to brown.

Swordfish being a fatless fish, it dries up quickly if overcooked or if insufficient butter is used. Serve with sauce made of melted butter, salt and lemon. Another favorite way of cooking swordfish is to rub a one-inch slice of the fish with salt and pepper and lay in a well-buttered baking pan. Cover top of fish with finely chopped onions and dot generously with butter. Pour ½-cup water in the bottom of the pan and bake in a hot oven for 25 minutes, basting carefully but not disarranging the onions and peppers.

Proud Salmon.

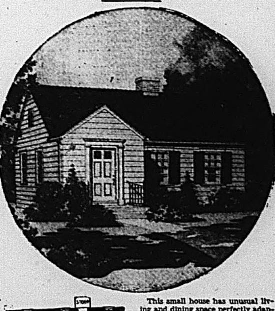
For a truly delicious dish, try baked salmon. For a 1½-pound slice of salmon, melt two tablespoons butter in a saucepan and add to it one chopped onion, ½ chopped green pepper and ½ clove garlic mashed. Just before the onion begins to brown, add one cup canned tomatoes chopped, one bay leaf finely crumbled, teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper. Let simmer for five minutes. Dredge the salmon with salt and pepper, and place in shallow baking dish in the bottom of which have been laid four slices of bacon.

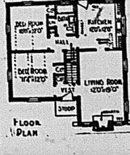
Pour the tomato and onion mixture over and around the fish and bake in a hot oven for half hour.

LIPSTICK STAINS

If lipstick stains do not come out of linens or washable clothing easily, rub the stains with white petroleum jelly. Roll the garment up for an hour, then quickly sponge the stain with carbon tetrachloride (get it from your druggist) and rinse in cold water.

Spaced for Real Living





This small house has unusual living and dining space perfectly adapted to drawing room importance by the decorator device of matching draperies at all windows. If you don't need an extra bed, convert the bed closet into a de luxe closet for your wardrobe.

CURTAINS NEED CHANGE

Curtains should be changed as often as they need changing, certainly after the windows have had their weekly washing along with the mirrors, lighting fixtures, and medicine chest. The washing of walls and window shades belongs on the list of things that need to be done periodically.

Just a Question Whether Cards, Yankees Started Stretch Drive Soon Enough to Catch Leaders

St. Louis Riding in Third Place After Eight Game Winning Streak

YANKS COMING

Defeat Cleveland for Second Straight Time With Steve Sundra the Hero

(By Sid Feder)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The music's the same, but they'll have to rewrite the words for the third-act finale of the major league pennant races.

It's no longer a case of how far will Cleveland and Cincinnati win by, but who wants the flags. Of course, there's no immediate danger—today or tomorrow—that they will blow their chances, but for the past couple of weeks, the Indians and the Reds have looked like anything but a couple of clubs going after the jackpot. The Reds have dropped nine of 15 and the tribe has barely stayed over the .500 mark for that stretch.

As matters stand now, with the Indians trying to save one game of three from the fast-coming New York Yankees, and the St. Louis Cardinals sailing along on an eight-game winning streak, it seems to be a question of whether those two clubs started their stretch drives early enough to get anywhere.

The Indians called on rapid Robert Feller today in the finale against the Yanks. After Al Minar was given a thorough going over Thursday, the Yanks went to work on Al Smith yesterday and posted a 3-3 decision behind the six-hit elbowing and hitting of Steve Sundra. Steve broke up the ball game with a two-run single in the seventh to lift the Yanks within seven games of the lead.

Bees Turn on Reds

Meantime, the Reds' old jinx—Casey Stengel and his otherwise stingless stringers from the Boston Beehive—turned up with their old stuff in Cincinnati and knocked off the National League pace-setters 7-2 behind steady twirling by Jim Tobin and some fancy flailing by Max West and Chet Ross, each of whom hit a homer and drove in three runs.

Since Brooklyn's second-place Dodgers also lost, blowing a 5-4 verdict to the Chicago Cubs in 11 innings, this loss didn't mean much to the Reds right quick, leaving their lead at 6 1-2 games, but back of Brooklyn came the Cardinals. The Ex-Gas House gang whipped the Phillies 5-2 on Bob Bowman's six-hit hurling to run their winning string to eight straight. This boosted the Cards into undisputed possession of third place, since Sweet William Terry's New York Giants lost a 13-10 merry-go-round to the Pittsburgh Pirates and dropped to the bottom of the first division.

Single in 13th Wins

For a time, in Washington, it looked like a Senate filibuster was on, as the Senators and Chicago White Sox went inning after inning getting nowhere. But in the 13th frame, Jimmy Bloodworth stepped into the first pitch Clint Brown served up after replacing Bill Dietrich and knocked it into the outfield for a single sending in the deciding run in a 3-2 win for the Nats. Ken Chase went the whole way for Washington and fanned an even dozen.

George Caster tossed three hitless relief innings to have a 6-4 victory for the Athletics over the St. Louis Browns at Philadelphia.

Toronto Defeats Newark Bears 7-4 Behind Fine Hurling of Vallie Eaves

(By The Associated Press)

Jersey City Giants have small hopes of repeating as International League champions, at this late date, but if they can keep up this week's winning pace, they're sure to wind up close to the top.

The J's have captured five of their last six starts and are only one game out of third place today.

Last night they split a doubleheader with Buffalo, but still managed to gain ground, when the third place Baltimore Orioles lost to Montreal.

Clyde Castleman, aided by a hitless relief performance by Harry Feldman, gained credit for his fifth victory when the Little Giants took the seven inning opener 11-6. Bisons came back in the nightcap to beat Bill Harris 4-2, scoring all their runs on homers.

Extending their winning srteak to four games, Montreal Royals brough Kemp Wicker his 17th win of the season with a 6-4 victory over Baltimore. It was the fifth straight loss for Orioles. Wicker gave up 13 hits.

Rochester Red Wings stretched their league lead to 3 1-2 games over Newark, sweeping a doubleheader with Syracuse Chiefs 6-5 and 8-0, while the Bears were losing to Toronto.

John Berly relieved Hank Gornicki and pitched the last three innings to gain credit for the Wings' first game victory. The Wings came back to take theoir seventh in a row behind Herschel Lyon's six-hit twirling in the nightcap. Lyons fanned six and didn't issue a pass in winning his 17th victory.

Toronto Maple Leafs snapped an tight-game losing streak in handing Newark a 7-4 setback While Vallie Eaves held Newark to eight hits and struck out ten Leafs clubbed George Barley and John Johnson scoring five runs in the first inning.

MINERS WANT ARMS

Blackpool, England (CP)—A request for the arming of all miners to meet a possible invasion was made at the annual conference of the Mineworkers' Federation here.

RECORD BECKONS

Alex Kampouris, flashy second sacker with the Newark Bears, who has scored more homers this year than any Newark player in history, may establish an International league record very shortly. He has struck out 116 times this season, leaving him one short of the record established by Joe Hauser, of Baltimore, in 1930.

WAGING SLUGGING DUEL

Never lacking for outstanding sluggers in the American league, and this year is no exception. Currently waging a battle for the important honor of batting in the most runs are Hank Greenberg, Detroit outfielder, LEFT, and Joe DiMaggio, the Yankee's flashy flycatcher, RIGHT. The change which Greenberg made from first base to the outfield at the start of the season to help the Tigers has not affected his batting, while DiMaggio, like the rest of the Yankees, got off to a bad start but has been speeding up in recent weeks, and in addition to pounding runs over the plate, may yet retain the batting championship which he won last summer with a mark of .361.

'ROARING GRAND' TO ERNEST WOLFE

Charleston Auditor Breaks 98 Out of 100 Targets in Outshooting 823 Marksmen

Vandalia, O., Aug. 24 (AP).—The roar of 800,000 shotgun shells has died away today, and the Grand American Handicap title — highest award in the trapshooting game is on its way to West Virginia in possession of Ernest H. Wolfe, 38-year-old Charleston auditor.

The dapper marksman from the hill country ignored a heavy wind in the grand finale yesterday to break 98 targets of 100 from the 23-yard line in outshooting 823 of the Western Hemisphere's top-flight scattergun enthusiasts. He was the first West Virginia resident to take the "roaring grand" in 41 years.

Mrs. Lela Hall of Strasburg, Mo., national women's clay target queen five of the last six years, annexed the feminine end of the laurels with 95 of 100 from 22 yards.

The trapshooters split up some $50,000 in prize mone as a result of the week's big barrage.

Fights Last Night

Hollywood — Jimmy Garrison, 140½, Kansas City, and Jackie Wilson, 139, Cleveland, drew, (10).

Long Branch, N.J.—Bill McDowell, 152, Paterson, N.J., knocked out Paul Griffiths, 157, Scranton, (3).

SHIP SINKINGS FOR WEEK ENDING AUG. TWENTY-THIRD

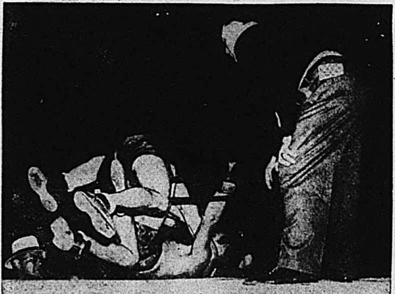
(By the Canadian Press)

Loss of three merchant ships became known during the week ended Aug. 23: the Newfoundland freighter Geraldine Mary, 7,244 tons, by enemy action off the Irish coast; the 7,590-ton Belgian ship Ville De Gaud, torpedoed, and the 3,500-ton Swedish craft Artos torpedoed.

The Admiralty statement for the week ended Aug. 12 said that nine British ships of 32,257 tons were lost. In addition one 942-ton Allied ship and two neutral ships totalling 6,708 tons were lost, making the week's total 12 ships with aggregate tonnage of 39,907.

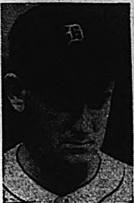
EARNS DRAW

Maxie Berger, of Montreal, Canada's junior welterweight boxing champion, fought an eight-round draw against Red Guggino in Brooklyn. Maxie scored frequently with right smashes to Guggino's head and when the decision of the judges was announced it was heartily booed by the fans who had decided the Canadian had won by quite a margin.



AS SOOSE SCORED SURPRISE DEFEAT OVER ZALE

Billy Soose, Penn State college adonis from Farrell, Pa., scored a surprise 10-round decision victory over Middleweight Champion Tony Zale of Gary, Indiana, in their non-title battle before a crowd of 6,500 at Chicago's Mill stadium. Photo shows both fighters as they fell outside the ropes on the ring's apron following an exchange of punches near the end of the eighth round when both men slipped.



RELIEF ACE

A feature of most teams that win major league pennants is a strong relief pitcher who can go in and hold the enemy in check when the starter falters. Should Detroit Tigers come through in the American league this year, a large portion of the credit would be due Alton Benton, ABOVE, who has won his place as the league's best relief man with a pitching staff that is not especially strong.

LATTA DEFEATS CANNIFTON 9-2 TO EVEN SERIES

Third and Deciding Game for Title of South Hastings Loop to be Played in Shannonville

GAME LATE STARTING

Garfield Hall Allows Only Four Hits to Put Team Back in Running

PROOF TO DESK FOR HEAD

Paced by the four-hit pitching effort of Garfield Hall, the Latta nine are right back in the running for baseball honors in the South Hastings League today as at Cannifton last evening they jumped on the offerings of two Cannifton hurlers for a total of nine safeties to score a rather impressive 9-2 victory and even the series at two games apiece. Going into the game with their backs to the wall and facing certain elimination in defeat, the Latta management gambled on their starting hurler and pitched Hall for the first time in the series only to have the kid come through with a well-deserved win and force a fifth and deciding contest which will be played in Shannonville Monday evening.

Late starting nearly robbed the Latta nine of their win last evening as the umpires almost had to hang a lantern on the ball during the last two innings to get the necessary seven innings played. Seven o'clock is altogether too late to be starting ball games at this time of year if it is expected to get a game in.

Open Scoring

Cannifton opened the scoring in the initial frame last evening as after two were away Jarrell walked and scored on two successive singles by Bleekman and Collins. Latta evened matters in their half of the second when Hall got aboard as a teammate was cut down at second and scored as the result of a Cannifton error. They went three ahead in the third as Callaghan started off with a triple and scored on Foster's double. Wagar walked and both rode home as Goulet smacked out a timely single.

Latta batted all the way around in the sixth as a barrage of singles drove Jarrell from the mound to be replaced by May who finished the game, but four runs had tallied to put the game beyond all doubt. In one final effort to pull the game out of the fire, Cannifton scored once in the last inning as Gannon got a life on a Latta error to score on Jarrell's single.

Support Superb

The entire Latta team came nobly to Hall's support as they played superb ball to keep the Cannifton lads off the score sheet, while errors at critical moments permitted several Latta counters Marsh in left for the winners stood out defensively, with Foster at third also going well. Cannifton runners were cut down by a double play in the fourth as Eves struck out and Cearley was nabbed as he tried to steal second on the same play.

Four walks, one of them developing into Cannifton's first counter, rather mitigated Hall's performance on the hilltop but six strikeouts aided materially in keeping down the score. Jarrell on the other hand gave up three walks, hit two and struck out two during his sojourn on the mound. May, who relieved him, was nicked for two hits, but struck out four, getting the side by strikes in the seventh. The lineups:

Latta — Meraw 2b; Parks 1b; Marsh lf; Callaghan c; Foster 3b; Wagar ss; Harrison cf; Goulet rf and Hall p.

Cannifton — E. Jarrell c; Empson ss; L. Jarrell p; Bleekman cf; Collins 2b; Cearley 1b; Gannon 3b; Eves lf; McCaffery and May rf.

Treasure Hunt Nearing End

(Canada Lumberman)

The search for the valuable cargo of walnut which was lost when the schooner "New Brunswick" sank in Lake Erie in 1859 seems to be nearing the end. Several attempts have been made to locate the hull of this old schooner, but without success. Now, it is reported that its location has been definitely established. The present search was started last year by "Hickory Joe" Ley of Leamington, Ontario. It was tentatively located last Fall, and it is said that its position is now definitely known. However, when a diver recently viewed sections of this long-lost hull, there was no sign of the cargo of walnut. In fact, he reported that the hull is separated and scattered all over the lake bottom. It is possible that the walnut may be scattered over a considerable area. Work is being continued, and steps will be taken to salvage any walnut which may be found. It has been estimated that this cargo of walnut logs would be worth in the neighborhood of $100,000, and that its long stay under water would not have harmed it to any appreciable extent.

QUINTE INSTITUTE

Mrs. Andy Reid was hostess to the Quinte Branch of the Women's Institute Tuesday of last week. A large number of members and visitors enjoyed a delightful afternoon.

After the usual opening Mrs. Connors, president, conducted the business part of the meeting.

Mrs. Harry Greatrix was appointed local leader for the Refinishing of Furniture Project. The training school for this district will be held in Melrose Council Hall Oct. 10 and 23rd. Receipt books for canning and preserving were distributed to all who wished them.

Letters of appreciation were read from Lieut. Priston, England, Pte. Gordon Gilroy, Alex Farquharson, Camp Sheto, Man., Walter Anderson, England.

Mrs. Harry Grills who is being sent to Toronto exhibition by the Institute to compete with other Institute workers gave an outline of her work.

A letter from the district representative was read asking all members to be usre and weigh all fruit and sugar for jam making and asked for donations for the Hostess House at the airport where the boys entertain their parents and friends.

Mrs. A. Greatrix, convener for Education, then took charge of the meeting. The Maple Leaf was sung accompanied by Mrs. Cole with the accordian. "Nelly Gray" was sung and just for a diversion "Jingle Bells" was sung but it took a lot of imagination to cool the terribly warm atmosphere.

Mrs. S. Geddes gave a splendid paper on "The Sunny Side of Life." When we think of the strife and hardships our boys overseas are going through it makes us wonder where the sunny side of life is for them and yet they are taking it on the chin like brave soldiers fighting for their religion and freedom.

While war is tearing apart the lands overseas:

We stand and view with grateful heart
This land of rock and tree
No bomb has torn the spaces wide,
No anguish cry we hear,
No hand has rudely grasped a child,
No marching feet we fear
The grey rocks lie where first they were
The pines still boldly fling their arms on high
And from the sky we hear red birds sing.
The lakes still hold their peaceful way.
No blood has stained their shores,
No trenches deep have gashed the earth
Of guns there is no roar,
The acres here are yet untamed
And nations law holds sway
Our flag flies free and gallantly
In Canada today.

These few lines show we live in a most sunny part of the earth. And we should give thanks to God for such a peaceful land to live in.

Mrs. Cole gave a reading "Grandfather's Story".

Community singing "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall" was sung heartily.

Miss Jones, Belleville, gave a very inspiring talk on duties to King and country.

Rev. Mr. Harrison closed his talk with a short prayer.

Roll call was a quiz contest conducted by Mrs. A. Greatrix. The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem and Grace.

Mrs. Reid and her conveners served a dainty lunch.

U.S. TRADE RISES ON WAR IMPETUS

Exports and Imports of Country Show Increases First Half of Year

Exports of aircraft, non-ferrous metals, steel manufactures, metal-working machinery, munitions and industrial chemicals amounted to $643,000,000 in the first six months of 1940, accounting for 32 per cent. of total United States exports and being 132 per cent. in excess of the 1939 exports of these products. In the first half of 1939 such exports represented only 20 per cent. of total exports, points out Mr. D. S. Cole, Canadian Trade Commissioner at New York, reviewing business condition sin the United States in a report to the Department of Trade and Commerce. Total exports from the United States for the six months ending June 30 were valued at $2,067,734,000, showing a gain of 46 per cent. over the figure of $1,416,011,000 for the corresponding period of 1939.

Total imports into the United States in the same period were $1,293,807,000, as compared with $1,094,458,000 in the similar period of 1939, a gain of 18 per cent. Imports of five leading strategic materials, crude rubber, tin, ferro-manganese, nickel and wool, accounted for 21 per cent. of the 1940 total as against 14 per cent. in 1939. Imports of crude materials and semi-manufactures, representing 59 per cent. of the total, were also substantially higher, while imports of foodstuffs showed a slight increase. Those of manufactured articles were lower in volume and value.

MISSING WOMAN FOUND IN BUSH

Mrs. William Goudge, 61, Subsisted on Berries for Three Days

New Liskeard, Ont., Aug. 24 — (CP)—Missing more than 48 hours, Mrs. William Goudge, 61, was found late Friday wandering about bush country five miles from her home in Pense Township, 22 miles northeast of here. She was in an exhausted condition and was carried from the bush on a stretcher.

Mrs. Goudge left her home Wednesday to pick berries. A posse of 50 men, including three police officers, began a search when she failed to return. She was found near a stream and her only food consisted of berries. The first night she was lost a heavy rain struck the district and last night it turned cold.

AT THE McCARTHY

"THE MAN WITH NINE LIVES"

Heralded as one of the most sensational shockers ever to come out of Hollywood, "The Man With Nine Lives" starring Boris Karloff, king of horror, is opening next at the McCarthy Theatre.

Roger Pryor and Jo Ann Sayers are also featured in the new film but the picture is mainly carried by Karloff as he portrays one of his most terrifying characterizations, a scientist who is brought back to life after having been seemingly dead for ten years.

Timely and topical, the new film takes for its basic theme the question of "Frozen Sleep", which has made so many headlines in the nation's newspapers. Karloff is seen as a famous scientist who has prepared an underground ice-chamber where he and four other human guinea-pigs have remained in a state of suspended animation for a decade. Chancing upon the underground chamber are Roger Pryor, a young doctor who has heard about Karloff's researches, and his fiancee, Jo Ann Sayers.

It is with the return of the apparently dead scientist to life that the picture gathers its thrilling and shocking intensity. For, with all the ruthlessness of a man to whom life means nothing, Karloff embarks on a grim series of experiments which result in the death of four of his fellow-sleepers. The action culminates in startling series of events, too spine-chilling to describe — other than to warn that "The Man With Nine Lives" will perhaps be the most chilling film you will ever see Boris Karloff bring to the screen. An all-star comedy and latest Fox News will be presented with the above.

"Panama Patrol."

Leon Ames and Charlotte Wynters in the exciting drama "Panama Patrol" and also Charles Starrett in the musical-western "West of the Sana Fe" are now playing at the McCarthy Theatre and for an evening of action and exciting screenfare it is a twin show every member of the family will enjoy.

"Hitler—Beast of Berlin."

The picture Hitler fears—not a newsreel—not propaganda—not hate inspired—but the plain unvarnished truth revealed for the first time, will be seen next week at the McCarthy Theatre when the strongest story ever written abou Nazi Germany, "Hitler—Beast of Berlin" from the story "Goose Step" by Shepard Traupe, opens a limited engagement. Due to the number of theatres in Ontario presenting the film the McCarthy management was only able to procure this film for the usual showing with no opportunity to hold it over. "Hitler—Beast of Berlin" is the picture recommended that every loyal Canadian should see.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Enemy Agent"

Attempts by foreign spies to secure plans for one of America's most closely guarded military secrets, highly publicized airplane "bomb-sight," form the dramatic theme of Universal's timely screenplay, "Enemy Agent," which opens next at the Capitol Theatre.

Although the story is described as fictional, it shows how enemy spies might gain employment in the giant aircraft factories of Southern California, and then carry on sabotage while trying to steal blueprints of the bomb-sight and advance warplane designs.

Richard Cromwell portrays the young aircraft draftsman who is unjustly accused of selling military secrets. Helen Vinson has the role of a Federal Bureau of Intelligence operative assigned to the case. Robert Armstrong is seen as a G-man on the trail of enemy agents and Philip Dorn, noted Dutch-Holland actor, plays the suave and brilliant spy ring head. Others in the cast include Jack LaRue, Jack Carson, Jack Arnold, Marjorie Reynolds and Bradley Page.

"Enemy Agent" was directed by Lew Landers and Ben Pivar was the associate producer. Jerome Ash did the photography.

On the same program, "When Ladies Meet," a fine star hit featuring Myrna Loy, Ann Harding, Frank Morgan and Robert Montgomery.

ESCORT FOR GRACIE AT JASPER

Appearing at Jasper Park Lodge in her first charity concert in the Canadian Rockies recently, Gracie Fields made excellent use of the spare time during her mountain visit. It was a red letter hour when she met two of Canada's famous Royal Canadian Mounted Police while strolling in the environs of Outlook Cabin where King George and Queen Elizabeth stayed during their visit a year ago. Walking with the popular comedienne are Sgt. J. W. Faulkner, at Gracie's right, and Const. R. C. R. Woods.

AT THE BELLE

"Maryland"

The new technicolor film "Maryland" is now playing at the Belle Theatre, it captures all the tradition, beauty and romance of the proud South. Walter Brennan heads the impressive cast, that includes no less than three Academy Award winners, as the horse trainer he offers one of his best character portrayals.

Fay Bainter gives her best performance to date and lovely Brenda Joyce has never been better. The latter's romantic interest is handsome John Payne ,one of the screen's most promising young actors. They are excellent as the two spirited young people in love, torn by fierce family pride.

Charlie Ruggles is back again, humorous and capable as ever. Hattie McDaniel that lovable kerchiefed mammy of "Gone with the Wind", has a similar role which brings her new screen laurels. Pert, beautiful Marjorie Weaver capably rounds out the featured cast.

The background is beautiful and authentic because much of "Maryland" was filmed on location just a few miles outside of Baltimore, where the annual world-famed Maryland Hunt Cup race is held. This spectacular steeplechase climaxes the film, that is regarded as even greater than "Kentucky".

There is an interesting short subject, "The Evergreen Empire", described by Lowell Thomas, a cartoon and the popular Belle news to round out this very entertaining show.

Humor of British Praised by Paper

New York, Aug. 24—(CP)—In an editorial captioned "The strength of humor," The New York Herald Tribune today discusses "the humor of the British" and concludes, after telling how British authors and cartoonists depict the lighter side of the war:

"Certainly a nation that can cherish such foolery under the stress of war has a spirit of resilience that is a mark of greatness."

Of Peter Fleming's "The Flying Visit," describing the imaginary visit to England of Hitler, the Herald Tribune said: "That such a book could be written by a German is most unlikely. That, even if written, its publication would be permitted in Germany is not to be believed....

"But this, however directly it may bear on the regimentation of opinion in Germany, is less significant than the fact that in the midst of a life-and-death struggle the British can laugh at their arch-enemy and make him ridiculous, and at the same time derive amusement from the foibles of their own leaders."

SHORT STORY BY LEROY SHOOSTER

The Honest Docters

One time 2 docters were operating on an unconscious patient and one exclaimed, Hay look, here's a 5 doller gold piece leening against "I claim half," replied the 2nd docter, and the first docter said, "The trouble is, it really still belongs to this patient."

So they left it in him and 5 years later it started to effect his liver and they had to operate on him again and got another big fee for their honesty.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Aug. 24—(CP)—Dressedweight hogs were selling at $11.25 at Stratford, a drop of 25c from its previous price, early Bacon-Hog Markets reporting showed today. Dressedweights at Hull, Chatham and Peterboro were unchanged.

London dressedweights were selling at $11.25, a decrease of 25c from its last price.

Liveweights: $8.35.

Dressedweights: Hull $11.30, Peterboro $11.50 plus transportation, Stratford $11.25 plus transportation, Chatham $11.40, London $11.25 plus transportation.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 24 (CP)—Stocks held their ground in lighter trading in the final market of the week on the Toronto exchange. Gold stocks were the most active in a session that saw aggregate turnover back around summer low at about 50,000 shares.

Preston advanced 8 cents to 1.83 Little Long Lac advanced 20 cents to 2.20 and gains of 5 cents or less came through for MacLeod Cockshutt, East Malartic and Sylvanite. Senior golds were steady and Bralorne was 10 cents lower at 9.40.

Action was light in the base metal group with prices showing slightly more strength than weakness. International Nickel and Smelters added ¼ to ½ and Steep Rock at 1.40 was 3 cents up.

Price adjustments were narrow in the industrial section and much of the trading was in broken lots. A loss of a point to 24 for Dominion Bridge was the main change in the steel group. Papers, including Atitibi pfd. and Bathurst, ruled higher.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Aug. 24 (AP)—In another of the slowest markets in 22 years, leading stocks today loitered in a narrow range.

The main excuse put forward by brokers for the inept performance was that traders seemed to feel that getting out on a speculative limb at this stage of the war was a bit too hazardous. A summer vacation atmosphere prevaded boardrooms.

The ticker tape frequently came to a full stop for lengthy intervals. For the two hours the turnover was well under 100,000 shares.

Shares ahead at one time or another included Bethlehem Steel, U.S. Rubber, United Aircraft, U.S. Steel, Kennecott, Westinghouse, International Paper Preferred and Pennsylvania.

Behind now and then were General Motors, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Glenn Martin, International Nickel, American Smelting, N.Y. Central, Great Northern and Johns-Manville.

Dome Mines and Hiram Walker, in the Canadian group, were slightly improved. Canadian Pacific dipped 1-8 point. Other issues were inactive.

FURTHER CONTRIBUTIONS RECEIVED

London, Aug. 24 (CP)—The Air Ministry today received further contributions towards the purchase of Spitfires and Hurricanes, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported last night.

A Lincolnshire farmer, who sent 100 pounds, said that he had promised to give that sum the first time the Royal Air Force brought down 70 German planes in one day.

A Frenchman at Hendon sent a cheque for five guineas in the name of his own son who is a pilot in the French Air Force and who has not been heard of since June. The father wrote: "I am sure he would join these free Frenchmen under General Charles De Gaulle, if he had the luck of being able to join us."

PURCHASE SAVING STAMPS

Kingston, Aug. 24 (CP)—Working in grain fields during harvest, 11 women have purchased war Saving Stamps with their earnings, it was announced yesterday by Col. A. H. Fair, owner of Hemlock Park Farms. Col. Fair said 300 acres of grain ripened fast and the women volunteered to work on the grain in the evenings.

Farmers Invited to Peterborough Plant

On several occasions all who have attempted to judge market hogs alive have found their judgment wrong when the hogs were dressed. This is not a great disappointment to the one who is closely in touch with the business of grading, because it is commonly known that there are factors that influence the quality of the carcasses that cannot be detected when the hogs are alive.

It is however, disappointing to the farmer, who has been raising and finishing hogs for market for many years to be told that his hogs do not meet with the requirements of the export market. But when you consider that only a very few farmers have had the opportunity of seeing their hogs dressed and looking at them in terms of Wiltshire sides it is more easily understood.

Farmers are invited to visit the plant in Peterborough and see their hogs graded. The drover who is handling the hogs can advise the farmer when the hogs will be killed. If it is not convenient to visit the plant a letter will receive prompt attention.

Some good lots of hogs marketed out of the Belleville district during the week of August 23rd, 1940, are as follows:

Name and Address:	No.	GRADE A 1	B 1	B 2	B 3	C 1	C 2	C 3	Premium

Further Price Gains On Produce Markets

Toronto, Aug. 24.—Eggs continued to register price gains on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, while undergrade butter prices showed fractional improvement and cheese remained nominally unchanged.

With offerings very light, egg prices were quite firm under a brisk demand. In the graded section, A-large eggs advanced to 29c, A-medium to 28c, A-pullet to 23c and Grade B to 21c. Grade C eggs were unchanged at 15c to 15½c. A-pullet eggs gained 1c in wholesale-to-retail trading. The egg market has been firm since midweek on the strength of a good local and out-of-town demand. Inspected shipments to northern points have been normal in volume. At the close yesterday government-inspected shipments commanded a premium of 1c.

First-grade Ontario creamery butter was firm in tone but unchanged in price. Offerings were light and brokers experienced no difficulty in keeping them moving. Demand was fairly good at 21¾c, but buyers refused to go above that price for first grade stock. Undergrades ranged in price from 20c to 21c, up slightly from Thursday.

Montreal Produce.

Montreal, Aug. 24 (CP).—Produce market prices here yesterday, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Strength Increased Rapidly

London, Aug. 24 (CP)—The strength of the Royal armored corps is being rapidly increased by a scheme for turning out fully-trained men in 16 weeks instead of the normal period of 24, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported last night.

NAZI 'BIG BERTHA'

night of comparatively light German raids in which a few parachutes were dropped in the heavily industrialized midlands.

British artillerymen opened up with a heavy attack on Nazi "Big Bertha" emplacements on the French coast after the Germans lobbed shells into the Dover area and sent waves of planes across the English coast.

One wave of 56 German planes crossed the southeast coast toward London.

Another 21 bomber attack on the town of Ramsgate, near the mouth of the Thames Estuary, scattered bombs all over the town's shopping centre and did much damage, but caused only a few casualties.

In the face of heavy anti-aircraft fire German bombs fell in a steady stream all over town, hitting many houses and municipal offices as well as the shopping centre.

Several raiders attacked without effect three small ships nestling under the protection of the Kent Cliffs, just outside the harbor. Seven bombs failed to find their mark.

Air raid alarms sounded over London early but nothing happened here and the all-clear signal sounded after 51 minutes. The alarm sounded at 8:24 a.m., catching thousands of Londoners hurrying to work.

An earlier unconfirmed report said the Germans had bombed the London area in the second night attack in 24 hours, but the Air Ministry said a wave of German bombers had been turned back before reaching the city's outskirts.

Numerous Dogfights

During the prolonged coastal ish Spitfire down a German oped over the Channel and a Brit- from Dover. Plane plunged into Messerschmitt, apparently "spotting" for the German guns across from Dover. The plan plunged into the sea near the English shore.

A violent explosion at 10 a.m. in the area where shells fell during Thursday night's German bombardment of Dover heralded the beginning of today's shelling.

The roar of the blast scarcely had died when British naval guns set up on the shore began firing at German positions across the sunlit channel.

Counterfire Dies Down

The counterfire of the British batteries died as anti-aircraft guns and then British fighters went into action against German fighters and bombers crossing the coast.

Three of the German shells landed on the South Kent coast near Dover, killing a woman and injuring several persons.

Meanwhile German planes began coming over at about 10-minute intervals. They headed inland and soon there was the distant sound of bomb explosions.

Detonations of artillery fire bounced off the hillsides, echoing and re-echoing, to the sharp chatter of machine guns firing in the dogfights so high overhead the cambatants could be seen only when they dived.

Pre-dawn Attack on Midlands

A prolonged pre-dawn attack was made on the midlands, in which single planes or small squadrons, hard to trap, rained between 200 and 300 incendiary bombs on one area, while high explosive and incendiary bombs were loosed elsewhere on a midlands town.

A report said the high explosive missiles fell near the post office, damaging property.

Royal Air Force fighter planes went into action.

A government announcement said "enemy activity was on a smaller scale" during the night, with other attacks on south Wales and southeast and southwest England.

Early this morning a lone raider circled a midland town for about half an hour, and eight explosives were heard before it flew out of the range of defence searchlights. Single Nazi bombers flying at intervals over a southwest England town drew anti-aircraft fire, while in a southwest rural area small fires were started by bombs dropped in wheat fields.

Defence batteries of a town in the west of England were in action through the night. One raider, caught in the searchlight beams lurched as if hit when anti-aircraft shells burst all around it, one almost on the tail of the plane.

Incendiary bombs dropped in the town's residential district started fires which were extinguished quickly.

The London News Chronicle reported three bombs were dropped during the night on London's outskirts, but there was no confirmation from other sources.

Damage Practically Nil

The Times labelled the latest Nazi operations "hit-and-run raids" by planes which "range the country at all hours of the day and night, drop a bomb or two, fire a burst from their machine guns into a terrace or a country garden, and make off again to their French air fields."

The paper described the military damage inflicted by these raids as "practically nil," claimed the proportion of Nazi planes brought down was almost as great as in the mass attacks and, reviewing Britain's defence against the latter said: "It is possible that we do not even yet realize the extent of our victory. . . . It may well be that this series of battles will be long remembered in the history of warfare as the first instance of an offensive on a great scale carried out entirely by an air arm under circumstances as favorable as it can usually hope to find and routed with great loss."

Few Casualties

The downed Messerschmitt toppled crazily, narrowly missing the jutting headland between Dover and Folkestone. Preliminary government reports said three other aircraft had been downed.

During the night attacks, described by the Air Ministry as "on a smaller scale than heretofore", there were a few casualties and some houses damaged in an East Anglia town.

A factory home guard unit disclosed two parachutes, which apparently had not been manned, were found in the midlands after last night's raid.

Some eighty parachutes were found in the Midlands and other areas of England, and Scotland, August 14, but widespread search failed to find any parachutists and the dropping of empty parachutes was described here as a "German hoax" designed to affect civilian morale.

So far there has been no official Nazi claim that parachutists had been dropped in this country, although a German radio announcer, heard here Tuesday, declared parachutists actually had been landed and were being sheltered by Fifth Coumnists.

British authorities now are considering a reply to a recent German not declaring that reprisals would be taken against captured British aviators if British civilians killed German parachutists.

It was understood the British view would be that parachutists either are dropped as spies or uniformed soldiers, and that the German goveriment "can not have it both ways".

FOUR SOLDIERS

Removed to Toronto

The seven soldiers involved in the Churchill crash were removed to military hospital in Toronto, where McCabe died of internal injuries and O'Connell of a fractured skull shortly after admittance.

Charles A. S. Hunt, 42, of Toronto, driver of the truck in which the Camp Borden soldiers had hitch-hiked a ride to Toronto, was taken to the hospital in Barrie, 20 miles north of Churchill, where his condition is not regarded as critical.

Police said Hunt lost control of the truck, when he swerved to avoid a car. Impact hurled the truck's passengers through the roof, and one was flung 50 feet as the truck hurtled into a ditch.

Victims of the St. Thomas crash Johnson and Reid were pinned against the seat of their car by the rear platform of the wagon into which they crashed. An hour elapsed before the bodies were extricated. John Rice of Frome, Ont., was the wagon driver. Police said that they believed the soldiers' car crashed into the rear of the wagon without slackening speed, because no skid-marks were found on the road.

The youths were returning to camp after visiting Johnson's mother, Mrs. Gertrude Shackleton of Shedden.

400 CHILDREN

They had a special reason for remembering the navy. During the trans-Atlantic voyage they knew that somewhere off in the fog the big guns of British warships were guarding them from enemy craft.

One of these British officers is Lieut. R. N. Bruce Lockhart, son of R. H. Bruce Lockhart, author of "Memoirs of a British Agent" and "Retreat From Glory." The young officer is on his way to his new post as Flag Lieutenant to the new Commander-in-Chief of the Royal Navy's China station.

A Happy Lot

The children were a happy lot and the escorts praised their conduct throughout the voyage. Model boy of the ship was Malcolm Bonney of Kenton High School, near London. Malcolm is just six years old.

Reporters found him poring over a book, "Token of Freedom," which someone had given him for a birthday present. The book contains passages of Pericles, Danton, Milton and Shakespeare. Malcolm is one of the children who are going to Eastman homes.

An escort said, "Malcolm is one boy who is going places. Every night he said his prayers, he said Grace at the table and he makes his own bed." The escort added: "I'm sorry we couldn't give him a party."

Going to School

While this was going on, the little Middlesex lad with his red skull cap smiled as if it were his just due. Then he said, "I'm going to school in America. I really don't like to go to school but it's the best thing for you, you know."

Another boy wearing school colors was Paul Anthony from Ulverston Grammar School. He is from London but was going to school in Lancashire until he was "evacuated."

"I am going to stay somewhere in Montreal," Paul said, "I hope I can use my French."

Listed among the passengers was Marquis G. P. D. 'Aigneaux. He would say nothing to reporters. Another passenger was Lady Isobel Cripps.

In one of the saloons a large group of Jewish refugees crowded around immigration officers Among them were some Jewish physicians, exiled from Germany.

FOUR WOMEN, MAN

Montreal after a check with Hamilton police revealed that a bloodstained car found on a Montreal street two days after the body was discovered, was owned by his father. Jeffrey Munn was a retired farmer, living in Hamilton.

Jargaille declared it was "the most brutal, premeditated murder in the annals of the province." He said he believed robbery was the motive for the killing. He was not sure of the actual scene of the crime and there was a possibility it had taken place in Montreal.

Dozen Skull Fractures

Dr. Rosario Fontaine, pathologist, found that the body was badly scorched and that more than a dozen skull fractures were visible. The face was battered beyond recognition and the only means of identification at first available were a ring bearing the initials "J. M." and some blankets.

During the early investigations police had received an inquiry from the Hamilton police asking information on the whereabouts of Jeffrey Munn, formerly a resident of that district.

Police finally located a rooming house where Munn had stayed for several days. There they found a roll of film in a camera which had belonged to Munn. The film was developed and with an enlarged photograph of Munn in their possession they renewed their investigations.

They were able to identify persons who had seen Munn since he arrived in Montreal and were also able to trace persons who had been seen with him at various times.

GERMAN FUGITIVE IN CUSTODY AT VIRGINIA, MINN.

Patrolman Reports He Believes Man is from Canadian Internment Camp

HAD CRUDE MAP

International Falls, Minn., Aug. 24—(AP)—Robert Hodgson, Minnesota border patrolman stationed at Virginia, Minn. said today he had taken into custody a man he identified as a suspected German fugitive from a Canadian internment camp.

Hodgson said the man gave the name of Manuel Fischer, 29, a native of GeGrmany and citizen of Spain, who was captured by British forces in Belgium and sent to Canada as a war prisoner.

The officer believed Fischer had fled from a Canadian internment camp in Northwestern Ontario.

Hodgson said the man carried two crudely drawn maps, apparently self-made, which showed "a border town" between Lake Superior and Emerson, Minn., on the Manitoba line, and another border town between Winnipeg and Vancouver, B.C. The fugitive was believed to have crossed the border here and hitch-hiked to Virginia, 90 miles southeast of here.

Hodgson had not disclosed how the capture was made. Fischer was being held here for Canadian authorities.

Ottawa, Aug. 24. (CP)—A German taken into custody by a United States border patrolman near International Falls, Minn., is believed by internment officials here to be the man who escaped from an internment camp in Northwestern Ontario last Monday. No official word of the man's recapture, however, has been received yet at internment headquarters here.

From the description of the fugitive included in news reports of the man's apprehension, officials were certain the man held was the man they were seeking. The man was reported at International Falls as giving the name Manual Fischer, 29, and described as a native of Germany and citizen of Spain, who was captured by British forces in Belgium.

Officials here stated the man was correctly described as a Spanish-speaking German but he was a civilian prisoner who had been interned in Britain and later transferred to a camp in far northwestern Ontario.

E. A. Kellaway Held on Charge of Criminal Negligence

Edward A. Kellaway, West Bridge Street grocer and wholesale fruit merchant, was formally arrested today on a charge of criminal negligence in connection with a motor accident near Millbridge on August 17th, that claimed the life of Mrs. Jessie Allore, Trenton, and sent four Belleville residents to hospital with injuries.

Kellaway, was taken in custody by Provincial Police Constable Stanley Palmatier, Bancroft, and arraigned before Miss Mary Butler, J. P. He was remanded in custody pending bail arrangements, which in all probability will be made this afternoon.

Other charges arising from the accident is that of manslaughter preferred by police against Herbert Herrington, 18-year-old Belleville resident who is alleged to have been driving the truck just previous to the fatality. Herrington was remanded today for one week.

Community of Interests Draws Two Great Democracies Together

Offering by Britain of Naval, Air Bases to the United States and Formation of Joint Defence Board Help to Cement Friendship of the Two Nations

BRITAIN MAY GET OLD DESTROYERS YET

By CHARLES BRUCE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, Aug. 24—(CP)—Announcement that Britain has offered naval and air bases in America to the United States, coupled with formation of a Canadian-United States joint defence board, were spectacular developments in a drawing together of the two great democratic systems that has been marked since last September.

Most talked-of current move in the trend is one to sell or trade 50 over-age destroyers to assist Britain in keeping the narrow channel waters clear of the Nazi menace. Powerful opinion in the United States favors this. Two who have urged it are Gen John J. Pershing, first Great War leader of the United States army, and Admiral William Standley, one-time chief of naval operations.

First overt act in the United States toward non-belligerent assistance to Great Britain was last November's repeal of the embargo on sale of arms to warring nations. Since that time Britain has placed $2,000,000,000 in orders for planes, supplies and munitions.

Not All Commercial

Respects of the relationship are not all commercial. Americans, probably 1,000 or so, are serving in the Canadian Active Service Force, in Canada and overseas. Others are training pilots in the Royal Canadian Air Force. Still others squat in the cockpits of British fighting planes over the mother country's threatened coastline, or ferry planes from British factories to bases of the Royal Air Force. One, killed attacking a Nazi bomber, was buried in English soil the other day under the joined flags of two countries.

In mid-July, just when London indicated it would welcome Americans in the R.A.F., no oath of allegiance was required, Washington told United States citizens they needn't fear loss of their nationality so long as they did not take an oath of citizenship in a foreign country, and as long as they paid their own way and enlisted outside the United States.

Advocate Federal Union

This side the Atlantic, two powerful civilian groups—"Union Now" advocating federal union of the British Empire and the United States, and the committee to defend America by aiding the Allies—have channelled into organized expression the conviction that "there is but one task for all." Neither of these qualifies for any "anglophile" stigma. They are simply pro-democracy.

Another, the committee to aid child refugees, has been active in planning for the evacuation of British children to the United States, and public opinion was reflected in Congress when legislation was passed to allow United States ships to enter belligerent waters to collect the children.

One straw in the wind indicating a closer community of interest was the resumption in August of trans-Atlantic clipper calls at Bermuda, indicating that the censoring of American mail there is no longer considered objectionable. Only a few months ago such censorship raised a brief furore. Availability of the clipper mail to British censors there will make it hard for German or Italian securities to reach the United States for conversion into foreign exchange, and likewise probably halt the flow of Nazi- DEATHS YESTERDAY TMhet Fascist propaganda pictures into America.

(By Ross Munro Canadian Press Staff Writer).

New York, Aug. 24 (CP)—Britain's cause, and the view that she should be given all the material aid possible, is being presented to United States citizens through numerous channels, none more active than the organization headed by William Allen White, newspaperman, author, commentator and a recognized leader of American opinion.

Through the organization—called "the committee to defend America by aiding the Allies"—Americans are being told that Britain's peril is the danger for the United States. The message comes through the newspapers, speeches and a flood of pamphlets.

Founded only a few months ago, the committee has grown until it now has a large headquarters in New York, 617 local chairmen scattered through every state in the union and about 25,000 active members.

Realistic and hard-fisted in its outlook, the committee offers concrete proposals to aid the Empire, and at present is strenuously urging consummation of the plan whereby the United States would make available over-age destroyers to Britain.

It was one of the first advocates of such a policy of assistance. The committee also wants more planes and guns to be sent to England—quickly. The United States' surplus food supplies should be made available for Britain it contends.

The organization favors the evacuation of women children and old people from the United Kingdom to the western hemisphere and asks removal of all difficulties which might prevent Americans volunteering in the Empire's armies.

Mr. White, 72-year-old editor of the Emporia (Kansas) Gazette, campaigns vigorously both from his Kansas home and during frequent trips to New York and Washington. Clark M. Eichelberger, director of the League of Nations Association, is a director of the committee and one of its leaders.

The committee's pamphlets point a sharp warning to Americans concerning the totalitarian threat. One full-page advertisement, written by Robert Sherwood, the playwright and author of the broadway play "There Shall be no Night," has been published in a number of leading United States newspapers. Smaller advertisements also have appeared.

The movement is financed by voluntary donations.

Gives 2 Men Ride, Is Clubbed, Robbed Of Money and Car

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 24—(CP)—Morris Wiseman, Hamilton salesman, received a clubbing, was robbed of $7 and had his car stolen early today as his reward for giving a ride to two men he picked up on the Toronto-Hamilton highway.

He picked the men up a few miles from Toronto when they explained they were on the way to Hamilton to seek work.

Wiseman's head wound required six stitches.

$82 in one of his pockets was overlooked.

Incidents Occur During Air Raids

London, Aug. 24 (CP)—Random reports of incidents during air raid over Britain:

The old man remained atop his ladder placidly painting the peak of his house until an airraid warden climbed up after him.

"Air raid?" he echoed incredulously. "Bombs? I thought it was the wind shaking my ladder."

Far from a shelter . . . doors of neighboring homes locked. A young mother looked around in vain for some place to shelter her infant. Nothing else for it, she placed the child in a garbage can. Only inconvenience: tea leaf stains on shawl.

Raiders passed overhead and dust rose to reveal the Baptist Chapel roof shattered, windows blown out. From a cupboard steps an elderly woman. She had found shelter among hymn books and collection boxes.

LITTLE CHANGES NOTED IN PRICES ON LOCAL MART

Corn, Tomatoes, With Watermelons and Muskmelons Offered in Quantity

FOWL PLENTIFUL

Eggs rose sharply in price on the Belleville market Saturday morning, retailing at 30c per dozen for grade "A" large, down to 27c and 28c per dozen for lesser grades. Butter held steady however, selling at the usual price of 30c per pound or as in some cases, two pounds for 55c.

Fowl and chicken held at the usual prices, with broilers selling at 75c to 85c the pair, while fowl ranged downward from $1.25 each. Ducks were to be had at 75c each.

Huckleberries were displayed in considerable quantities, selling at the regular price of 15c per quart, with six-quart baskets retailing at 70c. Blackberries were 25c per box, while currants were offered at 10c per box.

Montmorency cherries still continued to be offered in limited quantities, selling at 15c the berry box or at 80c the six-quart basket, while Shiro plums brought 50c and 60c per basket. Peaches were 15c the berry box.

Tomatoes were plentiful, selling at 40c the peck, 25c the six-quart basket or at $1.25 per bushel. Cooking apples were 25c per basket or $1.00 the bushel and Red Astrachans bringing 40c the basket or $1.50 the bushel.

Corn was 20c the dozen, while potatoes held at the usual price of 25c per peck or at 80c the bushel. Watermelons and muskmelons were offered at prices ranging downward from 75c each for the watermelons and from 25c downward for the muskmelons.

Cucumbers rose sharply in price, with vendors claiming blight responsible for the sudden increase in price. Six-quart baskets of gherkins sold for 75c and 80c with prices ranging downward to 25c for the larger variety. Cauliflowers ranged downward from 30c, while large meaty heads of cabbage were to be had at 15c for two heads. Celery was 10c per head. Large quantities of summer vegetables were to be had at the usual price of 5c per bunch.

Fish vendors offered white fish for sale at 20c per pound.

Vendors displaying a rather slim offering of young porkers were asking $3.75 each and upwards. Dry maple harwood, in four feet lengths, was offered at $8 per cord.

DOVER TO FOLKESTONE POINT OF AIR ATTACK

British Warplanes Sweep Over Blacked-Out, Cloud-Blanketed Berlin

Berlin Residents Huddle in Shelters Over Three Hours

British Planes Also Seen Over Extensive Areas of Prussia and Saxony

Berlin, Aug. 26—(AP)—Hundreds of anti-aircraft guns thundered into action in Berlin early today as British warplanes swept over the blacked-out, cloud-blanketed capital and kept its residents huddled in underground shelters for three hours and four minutes.

So incessant and ear-splitting was the cannonading it was impossible for observers to tell whether blasts of bombs were mingled with the gunfire. The British planes came over the city in at least four waves but authorities did not estimate their number.

The air raid alarm, this city's fifth since the start of the war, coincided with the appearance of British planes over extensive areas of Prussia and Saxony, causing warnings in many cities. Leipzig, crowded with visitors to the famous fall fair, had a 25-minute alarm.

Germans Re-open Railway Line

(Reports from Switzerland said the Germans had re-opened the Basel railway, frontier gateway between Germany and Switzerland which had been closed since June 30. Its closing was reported at the time to have been ordered to mask German preparations for attempted invasion of Britain).

Those whose duties kept them above ground during the alarm in Berlin saw a spectacular display of flashes of gunfire rent the blackness and hundreds of tracer shells arched into the sky like roman candles.

Roar of Motors Audible

Heavy clouds, which hung only a few hundred feet over the city, obscured the enemy planes from view but the roar of motors was audible in the heart of the city.

Splinters of anti-aircraft shells fell on rooftops like hail as guns followed the sound of the raiders across the sky from one end of the city to the other. The gunners apparently controlled their fire solely by sound-detecting devices.

Some spectators gained the impression the fliers were not sure they were over the city and were groping about trying to find an opening in the clouds.

Searchlights seemed to be of lit-

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

The weathervane! Everyone associates changing weather with changing wind direction, and certainly, that is the chief cause. The weather instrument. There is no end of variety in weathervane designs The weathercock, in which an image of the barnyard rooster is used, dates from the ninth century. It is a symbol of watchfulness, and refers also to St. Peter's sad experience. Other designs figure keys, gridirons, insects, ships, etc. etc. Almost any motif may be used as a basis for the design of a windvane, the only provision being that the wind surface on one side of the spindle must be greater than that on the other side.

Bulletins

London, Aug. 26—(CP)—Armament factories in the Berlin area were bombed by night-raiding British planes over the German capital, the Air Ministry announced today.

Its statement said:

"Royal Air Force aircraft continued their attacks on military objectives in Germany last night.

"Targets in northwestern Germany and the Ruhr were bombed as well as armament factories in the Berlin area."

London, Aug. 26—(CP)—German raiding planes dropped incendiary bombs over a wide area of Wales today and droned over southeast England.

Craiova, Rumania, Aug. 26 (AP)—Bulgaria was reported reliably to have consented to postpone occupation of the South Dobruja until late in September in negotiations today with Rumania over cessation of the Rumanian territory.

Dublin, Aug. 26—(AP)— Bombs were reported dropped near New Ross in County Wexford, southeastern Eire, today and four persons were killed.

London, Aug. 26—(CP)—German bombs killed more than 50 Britons today in raids on the midlands and southeastern England.

At least 50 persons were killed in raids in southeast coastal towns, it was announced, and some were killed and injured in a midlands city where delayed action bombs continued exploding after waves of raids during the night.

London, Aug. 26—(CP)—Another air raid alarm—the sixth since Saturday—sounded in London at 3:26 p.m. (10:26 a.m. EDT.)

Silence settled over the capital as the wailing sirens died down.

There was no sound immediately either of telltale airplane motors or of fire from anti-aircraft guns.

The Germans apparently were trying to pierce the outer ring of the capital's air defences.

The all clear signal was sounded at 4:03 p.m. (11:03 a.m. EDT.)

ARGENTINE DEPUTIES DUEL

Buenos Aires, Aug. 26.—(AP) — Two Argentine deputies exchanged single pistol shots without injury today in a duel growing out of Saturday's vote refusing the resignation of President Roberto M. Oritz, and then became reconciled.

The participants were Paul Damonte Taborda, a member of the Radical (Liberal) Party, and Miguel Osorio, Conservative.

London Newspapers Warn Against Clamor for Reprisals

The Times Says Object of R.A.F. Attacks Should be Striking of Military Targets, Oil Tanks and Airplane Factories—First Canadian Squadron Flies Own Canadian-Built Planes and Fights Highly Successful Action

By Harold Fair
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 26 —(CP—Cable)— Three influential morning newspapers—The Times, The Daily Telegraph and The Daily Express—warned in leading articles today on the week-end air war against a public clamor for raids on Berlin because the Nazis have raided the Empire Capital.

The newspapers argued that the main object of the Royal Air Force attacks on the Reich should be the striking of military targets, especially oil tanks and plane-manufacturing plants.

The Times said not the slightest fear or panic prevailed as a result of Germany's raids and recalled that in the last war the word "reprisal" was forbidden in orders and messages on the theory that the British army did not fire a round merely because a round had been fired at it. The British army fired only when its action was based on an established plan. The Times said.

'Carefully Planned Strategy'

It added that British bombers have been attacking military objectives in Germany and German-occupied territory nightly and if it becomes necessary the program will be accentuated "but their operations must be based on a carefully planned strategy in the future as they have been in the past."

The newspaper said that it was "especially heartening" to learn that the first Canadian squadron flying their own Canadian-built planes had fought a highly successful action.

The Telegraph hoped that "these attacks on London and civilians will not lead to any misguided clamor for reprisals on Berlin or Munich. It is much better strategy to persevere in our hitherto settled policy of strictly confining the attack to military objectives."

The Express, predicting that many will urge the bombing of Berlin, asserted that "it is imperative that the government shall not be deflected from its purpose, however loud and insistent the murmur grows. The purpose of the government is to win the war the quickest way. Vital objectives of the bomber command of the R.A.F. just now are Nazi synthetic oil refineries and aircraft factories.

All morning newspapers played up Saturday night's raid reproducing pictures of famous London buildings silhouetted against the glow of the fire.

55 ENEMY CRAFT DESTROYED IN SUNDAY'S RAIDS

Forty-Nine Shot Down by R.A.F. Fighters and Six by Anti-Aircraft Guns

ATTACKS WIDE-SPREAD

South England, Midlands, Northeast England and Scotland Visited

London, Aug. 26—(CP)— Fifty-five German airplanes were brought down during Sunday's air attacks on Britain, it was announced officially this morning.

A communique of the Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security said:

"It is now known that 55 enemy aircraft were destroyed during yesterday's attacks on this country, 49 being shot down by our fighters and six by anti-aircraft guns."

The toll represented an increase of 15 over the figure previously announced when it was reported that the British lost 13 planes.

Another communique issued by the two ministries on German raids on Britain said "bombs fell in several places on the outskirts of the London area, causing fires and damage to property."

SAYS FOE FLYERS ARE NOT AWARE OF NAZI LOSSES

Neutral Air Attache Claims Nazi Bomber Crews Have No Practice Together

EFFICIENCY SUFFERS

London, Aug. 26—(CP)—Britons who have been looking for a break in the Luftwaffe's morale because of losses of the last three weeks — the British defences have downed over 800 raiders since Aug. 8—may be disappointed, according to one neutral air attache who said today the German airmen do not know anything about their own losses.

"Their bomber crews are assembled at an airdrome to which they have been brought by train: the pilot from Hamburg, the bombardier from Reims, the machine gunner from Brussels, the navigator from Lille," he explained.

Number of Planes Secret

"They are given a plane, told where to go and what to do, and take off from an airport on the French coast. When the job is done they fly to Norway, landing among ground crews and don't know the number of planes which set out."

Say 3000 Planes Used by Nazis Against Britain

Neutral Air Attaches Estimate Hitler Using One Sixth of Force

DAMAGE IS SMALL

Fires Started by Nazi Raiders Are Curbed Swiftly by Efficient British Firefighters

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 26—(AP)— Three thousand German warplanes, said to represent one sixth of the Nazi air force's total operating strength, are being used in the aerial offensive aimed at breaking the Royal Air Force and the spirit of the British people, neutral air attaches estimated today.

The new practice of sending planes singly or in twos and threes, instead of the original plan of mass attacks by scores and sometimes hundreds of bombers on a single objective, has been less costly to the Nazi air force, these observers declared.

The former tactics enabled the R. A. F. to concentrate its defences, and a burst from a British fighter's guns fired into the thick of a Nazi formation was sure to damage, if not bring down, at least one of

SOUTHEAST COAST TOWN BOMBED FOR 20 MINUTES

Number of Casualties Are Reported and Considerable Damage to Property Noted

RAILWAY DAMAGED

London, Aug 26—(CP)— Two German bombers bombed the southeast coast town for fully 20 minutes today at the peak of morning shopping. There were a number of casualties, including some dead, and considerable damage to buildings in the town.

One large bomb dropped by the fighter-escorted bombers demolished six houses. Another damaged a railroad track.

Scenes of horror accompanied the furious bombing—which caught the city unaware.

A laundry in which girls were working was hit squarely. The body of at least one woman was pulled from the wreckage.

ALBERT RITCHIE, JAIL-BREAKER, SOON CAPTURED

Fractures Bones in Foot in 25-Foot Fall at County Jail and is Now in Hospital

HIDES IN CAR

A well-executed sensational jail-break, shortly after noon on Sunday resulted in a few hours of freedom for Albert Ritchie, Bancroft, prisoner in the Hastings County jail, and severe injuries, when he fell 25 feet from a second storey window to the hard gravel of the jail yard.

Ritchie is in hospital suffering with bone fractures of a foot and arm injuries He was awaiting transfer to the Ontario Reformatory after being sentenced for nine months for theft by Magistrate Lloyd last week.

The prisoner made his bid for freedom shortly after noon yesterday, when few people were about. He hid in an automobile owned by Frank Wilson, Foxboro who with V. Hughes, Everett Street, rushed him to the office of Dr. R. A. Flynn. The physician ordered him to hospital after ascertaining the extent of his injuries. Police were notified and turnkey Joseph Samain and Plainclothesman Fred Isard of the city police identified him. Governor G. H. French, who was vaca-

R. A. F. FIGHTS OFF 2 NAZI FORCES

Ten-Minute Battle Waged at 20,000 Feet Sees Germans Beaten Off

London, Aug. 26.—(CP)—British fighters in a violent battle over a town in southeastern England fought off today two big forces of German bombers which headed for London.

The raiders were met by the defenders at a height of about 20,000 feet and the fight continued for more than 10 minutes. Most of the action was out of sight above the clouds.

'ENGLAND MOST UNITED COUNTRY IN WORLD TODAY'

Dr. W. R. Thompson, Famous Entomologist, Says on Arrival to Carry on Research at Laboratory Here

NAZIS CAN'T WIN

Tells How Nazi Aggression Has Interfered With Entomological Research in Europe

"England is, without doubt, the most united country on the face of the globe today", stated Dr. W. R. Thompson, assistant director, Imperial Institute of Entomology and Superintendent of the Insect Parasite Laboratory, Farnham Royal, Buckinghamshire, England, in an interview this morning. Dr. Thompson has been transferred to Belleville to carry on his work at the Dominion Insect Parasite Laboratory, Dundas Street.

"There is no thought among English people today that the Germans can succeed in any attempted invasion of the British Isles. They are satisfied with their army now home from the continent, again completely equipped and guarding the fortified coastal areas, that they will withstand any attempted invasion by Hitler", he said.

OLD ST. GILES STRUCK BY NAZIS

Slabs Above Grave of John Milton, Author of Paradise Lost, Escape Harm

London, Aug. 26—(CP—The old church of St. Giles and the statue of Milton outside it were hit during German Saturday night raids on the "city"—London's financial district—it was disclosed today.

A bomb blew a hole in the northwest wall of the church and shattered most of the windows.

Slabs above the grave of the poet Milton, inside the church, escaped harm.

St. Giles Cripplegate is in the heart of the closely-built downtown section of London, only a few blocks from the monumental St. Paul's Cathedral and in the region of the ancient Guild Hall.

First reports of fires spreading in London Saturday night said that only the charred walls of a downtown church remained, but censorship had hid the name.

St. Giles is the burial place of the blind poet John Milton who died in 1674.

Near the north door stood the bronze statue of Milton by Horace Montford, with reliefs from Milton's "Paradise Lost" and "Comus."

The church was built in the 14th century, almost completely rebuilt after a fire in 1545 and enlarged and restored generally during the 17th and 18th centuries.

EARL OF ATHLONE VISITS HAMILTON.

Hamilton, Aug. 26.—(CP)— The Earl of Athlone and his wife, Princess Alice, arrived here. It was the first visit of the Governor-General to Hamilton.

They were welcomed by Mayor William Morrison, K.C., and Mrs. Morrison and City Clerk James Berry. The vice-regal party will inspect the munitions works at the National Steel Car Company later today.

Rifle Fire Used By Ground Crews To Repel Attacks

Folkestone Bears Brunt of Attack in Which Three German Planes Shot Down

London, Aug. 26 (CP)—Massed German raiders, hurtling across Britain's coast along a 30-mile front, blasted Dover, Folkestone and the South Foreland today after the first big British air attack of the war on Berlin.

The day's biggest battle was over Dover, the English channel port 22 miles from the French coast. Four of the attackers were downed there.

Folkestone, a town of 35,000 population, bore the brunt of a heavy attack in which three of the German craft were shot down after creating scenes of horror among the population. Folkestone is southwest of Dover and 26 miles from Boulange, France.

South Foreland, sparsely settled sandy waste northeast of Dover, was the scene of the day's third major attack.

The dull roar of bombs was heard at intervals throughout the battle all along the coast east of Dover to Folkestone.

The German attackers and British challengers battled desperately for almost two hours, the planes plunging so low over Folkestone that Royal Air Force men guarding barrage balloons opened fire on the raiding craft with rifles.

Apartment Houses Bombed

Before the British fighters downed their first three German planes in the Folkestone area, large apartment houses close to the seafront were bombed to the ground. A number of fires caused huge flames. Rescue workers searched in the ruins for victims.

Only a few bombs were dropped east of Dover. The action over Dover itself was confined mostly to dogfights high in the sky while anti-aircraft guns pumped shells incessantly at the raiders.

The crews of three German planes shot down at Folkestone were rescued by British motor lifeboats. A Spitfire which shot down one of them circled slowly over the victims until the lifeboat reached them.

Saw Bombs Leaving Rack

At Folkestone the Germans swooped out of the sun and the townspeople saw the bombs leaving their racks as the raiders dived within a few hundred feet of the rooftops.

Three other dive-bombers were shot down in fighting over the mainland.

As three escorting Messerschmitts turned for home they dashed by Dover for their daily "balloon-potting" and shot down two of the big cable-bearing bags.

At least 10 of the raiders were shot out of the German formations. In one of the attacks two Nazi machines were shot down within three minutes after British planes swept aloft to the challenge. One fell in flames just outside the town, the second plummeted into the Channel.

Laundry Squarely Hit

One bomb hit squarely on a laundry filled with girls at work. One body was removed from the wreckage immediately and volunteer forces searched for additional victims. Another bomb destroyed six houses. Still another tore up railroad tracks. The attack caught the town unawares, the people at first thinking the attackers were their own planes.

"They headed for us, accompanied by fighters which seemed to drop out of the sky," one eye-witness related.

Today's assaults followed a thundering early morning raid on

Won't Bomb Civilians Or Use Terror Attacks Say R.A.F. Sources

Will Not Hesitate to Attack Military Objectives as Ordnance Works or Electrical Factories in Berlin Area

London, Aug. 26—(CP)—R. A. F. sources declared British bombers would not hesitate to attack and bomb "military objectives" in the Berlin area, but insisted raids such as that early today must not be merely retaliatory.

"If the opportunity to bomb ordnance works or electrical factories around Berlin presents itself, you may be sure we will take advantage of it," these informants said.

Not Going to Bomb Civilians, Say British

"But we are not going to bomb civilians or go in for 'terror attacks.' They waste bombs, gasoline and men. The result is a few hundred civilians dead, who do not impair the German war effort."

OFFICERS NAMED FOR 3RD DIVISION

Many from Overseas Will Return to Take Command in Canada

Ottawa, Aug. 26—(CP)—The 3rd Division, Canadian Active Service Force, will have the benefit of experience of officers overseas. Week-end announcements of appointments by the Department of National Defence foreshadowed the recall of several senior officers from England to take commands with the 3rd Division. Their places will be filled by advancing officers already in England.

Simultaneously with announcement of appointments to the 3rd Division the Department announced that Col. E. W. Samson, Assistant Adjutant and Quarter Master General with the 1st Division when it went over, had been promoted Deputy Adjutant General with the rank of Brigadier at Canadian military headquarters in London.

Three infantry brigades of the 3rd Division will be commanded by Brig. J. P. U. Archambault, Montreal, Lt.-Col. W. G. Colquohoun, Winnipeg and Lt.-Col. E. W. Haldenby, Toronto. The last two will advance to the rank of Brigadier.

Went Over With First

Brig. Colquhoun went over with the 1st Division and Brig. Haldenby commanded the 48th Highlanders in the evacuation of Le Havre.

Brig. Archambault, with a distinguished record in the Great War which won him the D.S.O., M.C. and Legion of Honor with Croix de Chevalier, has held various staff appointments and since 1939 has been District Officer Commanding Military District No. 4.

Lt.-Col. H. O. N. Brownfield, commanding the 8th Field Battery at present overseas, has been promoted to command the Artillery Brigade of the 3rd Division. He is a graduate of the Staff College at Chamberley in England. He has been an instructor at Royal Military College and held staff appointments at Saint John, N.B.

Lt.-Col. G. H. Whyte of the Reserve Regimental Depot, British Columbia Regiment, now becomes commander of the 3rd Divisional Engineers.

Empire Cheese Exhibitors Gain Awards at C. N. E.

Toronto, Aug. 26—(CP)—L. E. Adair of Burgessville, Ont., showed the best entries in seven out of the eight sections in the cheese competition now on display at the Canadian National Exhibition.

A. Bennington of Tillsonburg, Ont., won the award in the factory cheese (white) July section, placed second in the June section and third in the three Canadian Stiltons section.

All entries were from Ontario.

Among those who placed in the competition were: T. Roy Johnson, Listowel; Donald Howes, Atwood; H. J. Neeb, Tavistock; C. O. Pickard, Mount Elgin; C. Carter, Lakeside.

DEFECTIVE CHIMNEY HELD RESPONSIBLE

A defective chimney hole in the building occupied by the Model Ladies' Wear, Front Street, was responsible for a fire which started in the roof at noon on Saturday, claimed firemen this morning. Very little damage was occasioned however, as the blaze was discovered before it gained any headway and a few minutes work by the firemen with the hand pump soon extinguished the flames.

KEPT REGISTRATION CARD TWENTY YEARS

At least there was no doubt in the mind of Mr. James Campbell, of Oak Lake district, that he would not be able to identify himself when he went to the polling booth to register last week. Because, for identification purposes he had his registration certificate dating from 1918 when the last registration of Canadian man power took place.

Registrars at Turner's polling division in Sidney Township were surprised, when Mr. Campbell pulled out of his pocket the case which for the past twenty-two years had carried his last registration card. Few, if any of the persons at the poll had remembered the last registration, much less kept their cards down through the years.

The certificates given registrants in June 1918 were almost identical in appearance with the slips received by Canadians last week. The lettering at the top read Canada Registration Board, but otherwise the card was exactly the same as those received by Canadians last week.

VOCATIONAL STUDENTS SEEK OCCUPATION

A group of vocational students from the Oshawa Collegiate Institute arrived in the city today to seek employment in the skilled trades at the Trenton base of the Royal Canadian Air Force. The young men are graduates of special courses similar to those being given classes of students at the Belleville Collegiate Institute.

FARM LABOR SHORTAGE NOT TOO APPARENT

Alleviation of the farm labor shortage in Hastings County is apparent now without too great a draft on the high school man power, Employment Bureau officials stated today. Reeves of the county have been supplied with application blanks for farmers needing harvest labor, but thus far the response has been anything but heavy. Approximately twelve students have been placed on farms thus far.

TWO PIGS BELIEVED STOLEN ON MARKET

Not like the ones in the fairy tale, these two little pigs went to market all right, but during market hours they completely disappeared, much to the surprise and chagrin of their owner.

On Saturday Judson McGowan, Madoc district farmer, brought two small pigs to Belleville for sale on the city market. The pigs were secured in a box in the McGowan trailer, which was left on the market place, while Mr. McGowan completed the family shopping Saturday afternoon. Upon his return the two pigs had completely disappeared from their pen.

"They couldn't get out themselves and there's no doubt but they were stolen during my absence," the irritated farmer told Belleville police when he returned to find his livestock gone.

The annual "get-together" of cheese makers, milk-producers, buyers and dairy instructors of this district will be held in the warehouse of W. S. Cook and Sons, cheese exporters, Albion Street, on Wednesday of this week, it was announced today.

Included in the list of prominent speakers are C. Lackner, Director of Dairying for Ontario, H. B. Sandwith, Ontario Director of Dairying, J. F. Singleton, Assistant Director of Marketing Services, Ottawa and others.

Following the regular meeting refreshments of cheese, buns and coffee will be served.

'ENGLAND MOST

"They have suffered many heavy blows, such as the capitulation of Belgium and the defeat of France, but these setbacks, serious and all as they seemed at the time, did not get them down. The Fifth Column element in England has been squelched and this threat is now well in hand. There is no fuss nor bother and everyone is confident of victory".

Having left England just prior to recent mass air-raids by Germany Dr. Thompson said that he has not witnessed any of the terrible experiences resulting from the work of enemy bombers. Farnham Royal, some distance from London, has not been raided up until the time he left, he said, but connected as he is with an organization with branches in all parts of the European continent, he was able to tell of the experiences of some of his workers who had been stationed in the invaded countries.

Assistant Forced to Leave France

Only this morning he received a letter from one of his workers who had been stationed in France at the time of the German invasion. The letter had been mailed from Bordeaux on the 16th of June, but did not arrive in England until August 9th., so demoralized were communications at that time. His assistant in France had been forced to leave his automobile in which he fled to Bordeaux and was barely able to catch one of the last boats leaving the harbor before the city was occupied by the Germans.

"It has been the same all over Europe", continued Dr. Thompson. "We had laboratories in Czechoslovakia, in Finland, and in the Scandinavian countries carrying on various branches of our work, but the assistants were forced to leave in each case. In Finland, our representative had considerable difficulty in getting out of the country during the time of the Russian invasion last winter".

Why Work Transferred Here

"As you know" continued Dr. Thompson, "many of the pests affecting forests and agriculture, came originally from European countries and our work in Central Europe has dealt mainly with the eradication of the saw-fly which has of late years attacked Canadian forests. The war has so seriously interfered with our work in these countries that it has become impossible to collect the necessary insect parasites for propagation and distribution to Empire countries. For this reason, the work of the parent organization will be carried on from Belleville".

Dr. Thompson was particularly grateful to Canadian authorities for their kindness and helpfulness in assisting him in this emergency. Officials at local laboratory have rendered every assistance possible in transferring his office to Canada he said.

Canadian Sergt. Accomplishes Trip He Failed to Make in Seven Attempts During the Last War

Somewhere in England, Aug. 26—(CP)—Sgt. W. P. Brown, former City Editor of the Jacksonville, Fla., Journal, has accomplished something he failed to do in seven attempts while serving with the Canadian forces in the First Great War.

He has finally managed to get a glimpse of Scotland, the home of his forefathers, and this time without the slightest effort or expenditure of personal funds. The trip came in the course of duty while serving with his unit, a Western Ontario Scottish regiment.

"Sure, you want to know why I didn't manage to get up north on those seven previous attempts," Sgt. Brown remarked. "Well, it was this way. I started out each time with the very best of intentions but always landed somewhere else with just enough to get back to my unit."

With a deep chuckle and sly wink he recalled the circumstances which put him behind the eight-ball when last he tried to reach Edinburgh nearly 25 years ago. It was the year "Paper Money" romped home to Victory in the English derby.

"Why it gives me a headache even now to think of it," he said. "You see, I wandered into a spot in London where we used to foregather, with not another penny except a five-dollar pound note to pay for some light refreshments.

"Paper money, but that's all I've got," I explained to my friend Jessie, who was behind the counter.

"Paper money! Half a mo, there's a horse running in the derby today with that name!" Jessie observed. "Why don't you back a good hunch with a fiver, I ain't got enough change anyway."

Brown, who didn't know much about hunches, took the advice and strolled off. "Paper Money" came home in front all right, at the glittering odds of 33-1.

"The dividends reaped from that juicy hunch should have taken me well beyond John O'Groates, but strange to say, I never got anywhere near good old Scotland although I was absent without leave for 20 days," the sergeant sighed.

On joining his present unit, Brown met two Windsorites, Capt. Bart Motherall and R.Q.M.S. Ralph Sheppard who served with him in the same battalion during the last war. It was the first time the three had met in more than 20 years.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Berliners today spent an uncomfortable three-hour period underground as the Royal Air Force, making a round trip of more than 1,200 miles, gave them a taste of something similar to the treatment the Luftwaffe has been giving London during the last 48 hours.

There was this difference in the R.A.F. raids, however. They were designed to blast military objectives only, not to kill or hurt civilians. British authorities believe the quickest way to end the war is to destroy the enemy's military war effort, not frighten his women and children.

People Shake Off Alarm

Not that the British people show any particular signs of fright. A number of them were hurt, some killed, many rendered homeless, but they were cheerful as soon as they shook off the momentary alarm of having things explode alongside them.

The most noticeable effect on the people's minds seems to have been to enrage them. A great popular howl, supported by a few newspapers, went up demanding retaliatory raids on Berlin, but papers like The Times and The Daily Telegraph and Morning Post soberly warned such tactics would not win the war because they did not fit in with military plans.

Estimate Nazi Using 3,000 Planes

Observers estimated the Germans were employing 3,000 planes, about one-sixth of their operating force in their latest efforts against the United Kingdom, but noted that their losses again were extremely heavy. Yesterday alone 55 German craft were shot down while Britain lost 13 and saved four pilots.

Eye-witnesses to air battles around the coasts today said the number of Germans falling from the skies indicated the toll again would be heavy.

There was this, too. British crews forced down or landing by parachute at home live to fight another day. Germans falling in Britain go to prison camps and not back to their home airdromes.

R.A.F. Pounds Nazi Airdromes

Meanwhile the R.A.F. continued strafing fields from which German aircraft are operating, smashing up their oil stores and bombing munitions plants. Today's Berlin raid was carried out under unfavorable conditions as there was an extremely low ceiling. Nevertheless persons in midtown Berlin reported hearing heavy detonations above the din of anti-aircraft fire.

London suffered damage and casualties, but fires started by German incendiary bombs were quickly subdued by the regular fire department and the thousands of auxiliary fire service workers who had months of peaceful conditions under which to train.

Old Church Damaged

The censor today released the news that the famous old church of St. Giles Cripplegate, in the financial section, had been damaged. Only a few hours before warehouses were struck near St. Paul's cathedral and set afire.

Such damage as this will not demoralize Britons, but they are probably one of the most property-conscious peoples in the world. St. Giles' is the property of every person in London and every person elsewhere in the country who hopes to go there.

They will regard the men who bomb their monuments in about the same light as a Canadian farmer would regard an arsonist who set fire to his barn.

AIR AND SEA DRAMA OFF ENGLAND

A spectacular picture made from the cliffs of Dover just at the split second when two German bombing planes let loose their load of dynamite on a British lightship. When the smoke of the explosion had blown away the lightship was found not to have been damaged.

Shannonville

Shannonville — Mr. and Mrs. William Doxtater spent the week end in Rossmore, guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Belnap.

Misses Joy and Jean English of Beamsville are visiting at the home of their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Hickerson.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wannamaker and Miss Joan Wannamaker of Lakefield, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. Hickerson.

Mr. Ronald Mayell spent Friday in Kingston.

The National Registration of all persons 16 years and older was begun on Monday. Registration was carried on in Mr. K. R. Vivian's garage. Mrs. W. S Dies and Mrs. K. R. Vivian were deputy registrars. Volunteer registrars were Mrs. Kathleen Mills, Dr. H. E. Eckardt, Mrs. Madeline Spencer, Mr. Jack Coukell, Mrs. Price, Mrs. Stanley, MacDonald, Mr. Sidney Fitzgerald. At the last day the Indian Department (Ottawa) decided to let members of the reserve register so they could go to their work as they would not have been able to hold their positions outside the reserve. Wednesday evening was a busy one in Shannonville and kept all registrars busy for about five hours without a let up. Any Indian who did not get registered is allowed to register at post office and in Deseronto.

OBITUARY

LATE MRS. SARAH CROOKS

The funeral of Mrs. Sarah Crooks, widow of Isaiah Crooks, took place Saturday afternoon, August 24th., from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. George S. Wallbridge, 246 Albert Street, and many friends were present. The service in the home and at the graveside in Belleville cemetery was conducted by the Rev. W. J. Walker, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

The bearers were Messrs. Thomas Marshall, F. M. McKeown, Thomas Clare, Samuel Sprague, E. J. Catcher and I. L. Moore.

There were many beautiful floral tributes.

EZEKIEL McGOWAN

After a brief illness Ezekiel McGowan passed away on Sunday, Aug. 25th, in the Hastings County Home where he resided for the past ten years. The deceased had reached the advanced age of 92 years. He was well known by many in this district and was well respected. In religion he was a member of the United Church. His wife died many years ago.

The funeral will take place from Duffin's Funeral Home, Stirling, on Tuesday afternoon, August 27.

MICHAEL HALEY

Michael Haley passed away suddenly at his residence, 141 Pinnacle Street, on Sunday morning, Aug. 25th. Death was due to a heart seizure.

The late Mr. Haley was born 78 years ago near Erinsville in Hungerford Township. For many years he was engaged in farming and prior to coming to Belleville ten years ago, he resided on the 9th concession of Thurlow Township. In religion he was a member of St. Michael's Church and well respected.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Lily Moreau, four daughters, Miss Margaret Haley, Toronto; Miss Nora Haley, Toronto; Miss Irene Haley, Hamilton; Mrs. Frank Armstrong, Guelph; three sons, Mr. Stafford Haley, Frankford; Mr. Franklin Haley, Rochester, N.Y., and Mr. Farley Haley, Toronto; one sister, Mrs. Annie Donoghue, Erinsville.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, the funeral announcement will be made later.

Gratifying Response To Gov't's Request

Belleville police report a gratifying response to the Government request for registration of rifles, shot guns and small arms today. "All day we have been busy registering these types of fire-arms under the Defence of Canada Regulations. There has been a steady stream of hunters coming to the police station seeking to register their firearms, the majority of which are used for hunting and shooting of various types of game", stated Sergeant Arthur Harman today after spending the greater part of the morning registering fire arms.

Residents of the city may register their personally-owned rifles, shot guns and small fire arms, including revolvers, pistols and other such weapons, at the city police station from now until Sept. 15th, while persons residing in the rural sections must register their personal fire-arms with the Provincial Police at their nearest community in which the O.P.P. is stationed or with the clerk of the municipality.

Citizens are urged to comply with the law and register their fire-arms as soon as possible.

Annual Flower Show At Tweed Proves Most Successful

Tweed—The annual flower show held by Tweed Horticultural Society was held on Friday, August 23rd. Despite the decided reduction in the number of exhibitors, the number of entries was but little short of other years, averaging eighteen exhibits for each of the ten exhibitors. The entire accommodation of Tweed Memorial Park pavilion was required to provide space for the exhibits.

The quality of the bloom was high and the judges, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Pallises of Campbellford, found considerable difficulty in deciding their placings. Once again the gladiolus exhibit was the centre of attraction with nearly fifty entries.

The officers and directors of Tweed Horticultural Society are:

President—Mrs. H. Countryman; 1st Vice Pres., Mr. S. H. Connor; 2nd Vice Pres., Mrs. A. C. Blakely; Sec. Treas., Miss C. M. Meiklejohn; directors, Mrs. J. W. Kingston, Mrs. H. Coulter, Mrs. W. S. Gordon, Mrs. A. Varty, Mrs. D. W. Sills, Mrs. M. J. Quinn, Mrs. W. L. Ketcheson, Miss Myrtle Foster, Mrs. C. R. Porritt and Mr. John Sager.

They are to be commended for their enthusiasm and enterprise in keeping alive the flower show for the 14th consecutive year. The first show was held in 1925 when Mr. G. A. Meiklejohn was the president.

The youngest exhibitor, Billie Beatty, 11, entered 2 exhibits, winning prizes on both and is as thrilled as though he had won the sweepstakes.

The society served an excellent supper from 5 to 7 o'clock. It was well attended.

Police Blotter

City police recovered an automobile late last night which had been reported stolen last Friday. The vehicle, a 1927 model Chevrolet, the property of Samuel Kirkey, 22 Francis St., Trenton, was found abandoned a few hundred yards from where it was reported stolen. The vehicle was discovered by Constables Taylor and Evans on Church St.

Robert Badgley, 52 Ridley St., reported the theft of a tire, tube and rim, which had been removed from his parked automobile over the weekend. Badgley parked his car on a vacant lot near the upper end of Pinnacle St. and it was during his absence the spare tire and accessories were stolen.

Only three transients, two Saturday and one last night, appeared seeking shelter at the police station over the weekend. An inebriate, apprehended yesterday, took French leave, however, but his whereabouts are always well known to the police.

POLICE COURT

Only one case was heard in city police court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today Frank Rabel, Bata Village, appeared on a charge of careless driving and was fined $5.00 and costs after being convicted. The charge arose out of a motor accident, which occurred on Highland Ave., on August 16th last, at which time a motor car driven by Rabel collided with a tree, according to constables Arnott and Wright, who testified today. Rabel, who is a native of Czecho-Slovakia, stated it was necessary to take to the side of the road in order to avoid a head-on collision with an oncoming truck. Rabel had entered Highland Ave., from off West Dundas Street.

Two other traffic cases listed for trial were postponed until Friday at the request of Chief Kidd, clerk of the court.

His Worship announced there would be no session of police court next Monday (Labor Day), but city court would be held on Tuesday and Friday of next week.

Browning Machine Gun To be Made by Inglis

Ottawa, Aug. 26 (CP)—Browning machine guns for aircraft use are to be made by John Inglis Company, Toronto, which now has Bren machine guns in production it was learned today.

The Browning is an American-designed gun of .50 calibre. The present order, the size of which is unannounced, is understood to be for both the British and Canadian governments.

Nazi Leader Says 'Pole Is Servant of German'

Berlin, Aug. 26.—(AP)— Arthur Grieser, Nazi leader of the Danzig and Warthe River districts, told the Hitler Youth Organization today in a broadcast that German settlers in the newly-acquired eastern regions should consider Poles as servant people. Soliciting the Youth's support for Germanization of the eastern regions, Greiser said: "The Pole is the servant of the German and will remain it forever".

Beacon Flash Light On Kings Highway Completely Demolished

Some reckless motorist crashed into the highway traffic flash-light beacon, which is used to caution motor vehicular traffic along the four-lane highway east of Belleville on Highway No. 2, and completely demolished the beacon light some time last night. The damaged beacon light was discovered by Charles Bennett, resident foreman for the Highway Department this morning. The matter was immediately reported to Inspector Frank Gardner and the Provincial Motorcycle Patrol.

The flash beacon light, which is used to caution motorists where the four-lane highway runs parallel in the vicinity of Bell's Creek, about three miles east of Belleville, was set into a large cement base. The motorist responsible for the damaging of the light, must have crashed head-on into the beacon light, as the entire mechanism was put out of commission and the iron-pipe standard crashed to the pavement. The cement base was moved about 18 inches, as the result of the impact, while the entire mechanism of the light was demolished. This type of beacon warning light is valued around $400.00 each, stated Mr. Bennett in his report.

SHERWOOD SAYS 'LINDY' AND FORD NAZI ADMIRERS

Noted American Playwright Gave Fine Address in 'Let's Face the Facts' Series

SURE BRITAIN WILL WIN

Requests United States to Supply to Great Britain Anything She May Require

The following is the full text of the radio speech delivered by Robert Emmet Sherwood, eminent American playwright in the series "Let's Face The Facts" Sunday night, August 25th. Mr. Sherwood, speaking from New York, at the invitation of the Director of Public Information, was heard over a national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Canadian Radio Audience: It is a great privilege to be permitted to speak to you tonight. I can not speak as an expert on European affairs, as did Miss Dorothy Thompson, Mr. Frederick Birchall, and Mr. Gregory Clark.

I can speak only as an American citizen who is devoted with all his heart and soul to our common cause. And it is our common cause. We Americans are rapidly awakening to the fact that we are already at war. For Hitler and his allies are at war with all men who believe in liberty and democracy, law and justice. It would be very difficult to find any American patriot who has not thrilled to the fighting words of Winston Churchill, especially when he said that if the British Commonwealth shall last for a thousand years, men will say that this was its finest hour. The vast majority of us Americans know that the future of our free institutions and our democratic faith is at stake in the Battle for Britain. We now realise that your Canadian men—all the gallant men who are offering heroic resistance to Hitler—are fighting to defend our homes as surely as their own. We say, may God give them strength—and may we give them reinforcement—now!

Holds Same Belief

The belief which I now hold is the same belief which I held in 1917 when, being rejected for enlistment in the U. S. forces, I went to Montreal and joined up. I had the honor of serving as a private soldier in the 42nd Battalion, Black Watch, in the Canadian Expeditionary Force in France. I hope that there will be some of you now listening who will remember me—in the Guy Street barracks in Montreal—in Bramshott Camp in England, and in the lovely little village of Witley, Surrey—on the River Somme, in France, and on Vimy Ridge, which is forever sacred Canadian soil.

The one great enduring memory that I took with me out of my period of service with the C.E.F. was the memory of association with the best men I've ever known. They were all kinds of men—of origins that were English, Irish, Scotch, French, or Indian—many Americans like myself, of all races and creeds. In the company with me was a young Danish student, a very quiet, well mannered, scholarly man named Thomas Dinesen. Being a Dane he had been neutral in the war. But he sailed from Copenhagen to New York to do some anthropological research work, and while he was crossing the Atlantic, his ship was attacked by a German submarine. That cured him of his neutrality. He too went to Montreal and joined up. In France, he won the Croix de Guerre and the Victoria Cross. After the war he returned to Denmark and the life of a scholar. I wonder where Dinesen is now. Perhaps the Nazi gangsters who grabbed his little country have discovered that he is a wearer of the V. C.

Remembers Many Soldiers

I remember others in our outfit—a Scotchman, who was a chartered accountant in New York—an Irishman who worked behind a soda fountain in Connecticut—a French Canadian farmer from Northern Ontario—a Jewish tailor's assistant from Brooklyn. They all wore kilts. They were all fine soldiers.

The mixture in the Canadian army provided the supreme answer to Hitler's phony doctrine of racism. There was no dominant race in this force. It was just a body of men—free men.

And the officers who commanded these men also commanded their respect. In 1917-18, when I was there, a large portion of the officers had come up from the ranks. My own company was led in the last victorious battles by one who had been a grocer's boy before the war. Here again was an answer to Hitler—a decisive answer to his hopeful theory that there is no dynamism in democracy.

Which leads me to make mention of a grotesque fallacy—one which was fostered by Hitler's propaganda machine and repeated by stupid people everywhere—the fallacy that a totalitarian system is efficient, and therefore must conquer a democratic system which is necessarily inefficient, incompetent, obsolete.

According to this fallacy, the only way for the democratic states to survive is by imitating the Nazi-Fascist-Communist type of state, which is a machine, and therefore bloodless, heartless and irresistible.

This, I submit, is nonsense.

Anyone would be a fool to attempt to deny the extraordinary power of the present German military machine. But the strength of that machine so far is no proof of the strength of totalitarianism or the weakness of democracy. It is simply renewed proof of what the world has known for generations—that the Germans constitute a terrific, aggressive force. They have great military skill and their people are ready and willing to accept regimentation. They are now doped up with the cocaine of world revolution and the dream of world domination. They are armed with powerful weapons—especially the airplane, the tank and the submarine—all of which were invented and developed by free men living and working in free countries.

Claims Republic Murdered

The Germans have murdered the French Republic. They outnumbered the French two to one. But—suppose the battle had been between French democracy and Italian Fascism. Italy has had a rigid totalitarian regime for twenty years. But does anyone believe that 40,000,000 Italians could have prevailed against 40,000,000 Frenchmen?

Czechoslovakia was one of the purest democracies in Europe. It was also the strongest power of its size in the world. Could the Czechs have been beaten by any totalitarian state of equal size— by Roumania, for instance?

And consider the amazing showing of 3,000,000 free Finns against 170,000,000 Russians, who had had twenty-two years of totalitarian preparation.

The advantage that the dictatorships seem to possess over the democracies is not efficiency. A state is not efficient in which, for every hundred workers, there must be forty policemen to see that the hundred don't slack, and twenty storm troopers to watch the policemen, and a dozen secret agents to watch the watchers. That, perhaps, is a good way to solve the unemployment problem. But it is a degraded way of life. And, I regret, it is not efficiency.

The advantage on the totalitarian side consists in total ruthlessness, total lack of humanity. They glory in their barbarism, which has swept them to the brink of victory, over the bodies of innocent, decent people. I think you know—you free people who are listening now to this free speech from an American friend of yours—I think you know that it is the triumphant barbarism of the slave states which will eventually bring every one of them to eternal defeat.

Hitler in "Mein Kamp" has again and again proclaimed his devotion to something he calls "Nature"—Nature! As opposed to the democratic, Christian ideal. This is of course a reversion to paganism. It is also a flat denial of nature—of human nature.

Based on Christian Ideal

The democratic ideal—the Christain ideal—is based upon faith in the essential dignity of the individual man. Hitlerism is based upon contempt for the individual and denial of all rights to the individual. All Nazi leaders, Hitler included, invariably consider the masses of men as animals—so many sheep, to be herded, shorn and driven to the slaughter.

This Nazi ideal of government can succeed if men consent to abandon their humanity and accept the status of beasts. But it is impossible for men born and bred in the British tradition to do this. It is impossible for Americans. We all share this common tradition. The generations behind us have shared it since Magna Charta, more than seven hundred years ago. It is a remarkable fact, an inspiring fact, that the British tradition has spread over the whole earth, among all races, and in no place where it has been established has freedom ever been renounced, as it was renounced in Germany when Hitler came to power. It is worthy of emphasis that today the French people, in Canada, and the Dutch in South Africa, are living in freedom, as those in their own motherlands are not. Our peoples throughout the whole British Commonwealth and the United States have steadily worked and fought for the greater spread of freedom, for social progress, for the eternal extension of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness

This tradition, this way of life, has of course often been threatened by individuals and minority groups within our own borders. There have always been those who, have contested the principles of freedom and equality. They have been animated chiefly by two of the most debased of mortal motives—personal greed and bigotry. Their attempts to extingush liberty have always been frustrated by the overpowering will of the British and American people.

In my own country, today, there are important men who have succumbed to the demoralizing, degenerative influence of Hitlerism. They are chiefly men who worship the machine. They have seen the enormous output of German factories, the results of the toil of laborers who have no right to organize or even to speak, no choice as to where they shall work, or for how many hours a day, or for what wages. They have seen the ultimate in regimentation, and they like it, and wish that we could have the same system over here.

I should like to name the two outstanding exponents of this point of view, which I and many other Americans consider a traitorous point of view. They are both erstwhile American heroes. They are Henry Ford and Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh. I don't need to say much about Ford. A great industrialist, the genius of the assembly line, he has too often revealed that, outside of his factories, he is a profoundly stupid man.

Tragic Example

But Lindbergh is to me a tragic example of mental aberration. He might so well have become a man of tremendous national and international value. A year ago he was working where he belonged, in Washington, using his considerable technical knowledge and skill in the furthering of our defense. But—with the outbreak of war last September—what did Lindbergh do for his country? He quit the service. He quit so that he could devote himself to pleading Hitler's cause.

Lindbergh was exposed to Nazism, he was infected by it. He is a man spiritually diseased. But I can assure you that his opinions are just as unpopular with real Americans as are the men from whom he got tnem—Hitler, Goering and Goebbels.

What Lindbergh preaches is simply this: in order to avoid war with the totalitarian states, we must make friends with them, we must flatter them, we must imitate them. This same policy was preached to Americans before the Civil War. It was said that in order to avoid strife and bloodshed, we should accept the evil of slavery. The great opponent of this policy of appeasement was Abraham Lincoln. He was a gentle man, a man of great tolerance. But he confessed that this policy stirred him to hatred. The words he spoke on this subject are of vital importance to Americans today. He said he hated this policy because it deprives our republic of its just influence in the world; enables the enemies of free institutions everywhere to taunt us as hypocrites; causes the real friends of freedom to doubt our sincerity; and especially because it forces so many good men among ourselves into an open war with the very fundamentals of civil liberty denying the good faith of the Declaration of Independence, and insisting that there is no right principle of action but self-interest.

Spirit Not Expressed by Lindbergh

We who now live in the Union which Abraham Lincoln fought and died to save—this government of the people, by the people, for the people—we wish to tell the world that the voice of our country is not expressed by Lindbergh, or any other bootlickers of Hitler. It is not expressed by the misguided isolationists who think that the Atlantic and Pacific oceans are still just as broad as in the days of sailing vessels. The voice of our country is expressed, truly and eloquently, by President Roosevelt, and by the other great American political leader, the Republican candidate for the Presidency, Wendell Willkie.

The essence of our national policy was established once and for all by the President, in his address at Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario, just two years ago.

Let us remember his words:

"Civilization is not national—it is international—even though that observation, trite to most of us, is today challenged in some parts of the world. Ideas are not limited by territorial borders; they are the common inheritance of all free people. Thought is not anchored in any land; and the profit of education redounds to the equal benefit of the whole world. That is one form of free trade to which the leaders of every opposing political party can subscribe.

"In a large sense we in the Americas stand charged today with the maintaining of that tradition....

"We in the Americas are no longer a far away continent, to which the eddies of controversies beyond the seas could bring no interest or harm. Instead we in the Americas have become a consideration to every propaganda office and to every general staff beyond the seas."

No one who heard that speech of the President's over the radio can forget the solemnity with which he spoke the two following historic sentences:

"The Dominion of Canada is part of the sisterhood of the British Empire. I give to you assurance that the people of the United States will not stand idly by if domination of Canadian soil is threatened by any other Empire."

Such was the Declaration of Interdependence spoken by the President of the United States and approved by the American people.

Help Must Continue

Within the past weeks, the words of this declaration have been translated into action, to bring Canadians and Americans together at last in the interests of our common cause, to provide constructive help by the United States for Canada and for Britain This help must continue; it must be increased; it must provide the basis for permanent policy. In the collaboration, the cooperation, the acknowledged brotherhood of the entire English speaking world is the one substantial hope for peace in the family of man. It is the one guarantee that Hitler will never rise again. It is my belief—it is a belief which burns in the hearts of many patriotic Americans—that this hope will be fulfilled within our own lives, by the massed force of our own spirit.

We live now under a tremendous threat. We must be prepared to fight for the one faith that matters to all individual men and women who believe in the dignity of the individual.

And we can be confident of victory. Our common tradition of freedom has been tested on a thousand battlefields, from Waterloo to Gettysburg. It is now meeting its supreme test on the white cliffs of Dover.

It will survive because it is essentially true and therefore indomitably strong.

It is founded on the one conviction by which humanity itself can survive—the conviction that there is divinity in man—there is honor in man—there is genius in man—there is the capacity in man for widsom, for tolerance, for beauty, for love, and, above all, for creation.

We know that these qualities are unconquerable. That is the knowledge that made us free. That is the faith that the dive bombers and the tanks can never destroy.

I thank you.

KING INSPECTS INDIAN TROOPS STATIONED IN ENGLAND

King George pays a visit to the troops of the Royal Indian Army Service Corps now training in England. The troops are easily identified by their colorful turbans and white Sam Browne belts.

Berlin Communique On R. A. F. Raids

Berlin, Aug. 26—(AP)—A number of incendiary bombs fell in the northern Berlin suburb of Rosenthal during the night as British bombers penetrated to Berlin but there were no admissions of casualties.

Informed sources said the British bombers came in at least four waves during a three-hour raid but their approximate number was not known.

They claimed no bombs were dropped on the city itself.

Heavy explosions heard in downtown Berlin, they said, were the detonations of anti-aircraft shells.

BRITISH VICTORY PREDICTED BY MADAME TABOUIS

French Columnist Says Hitler's War Time-Table Badly Behind Schedule

PREDICTS FR. REVOLT

Geneva Park, Ont., Aug. 26—(CP)—Madame Genevieve Tabouis, internationally-known French newspaper columnist, provided the highlight address as the Canadian Institute on Economics and Politics closed its nine-day session during the weekend.

Mme. Tabouis' interpretation of recent events and prediction of a British victory brought an uproar of approval unequalled in the nine-year history of the institute.

Speaking Saturday night, she said Hitler's war time-table was badly behind schedule and declared that "we must work strenuously for a few weeks—just a few weeks—and we can be sure of victory.."

Mme. Tabouis said the invasion of the British Isles was to have taken place between July 25 and Aug. 10 with a simultaneous attack from Norway on eight British ports by 2,000 boats supported by planes, parachute troops and tanks.

Three Reasons Given

She gave three reasons why the attack was not launched:

Failure to acquire the French navy, failure of Mussolini to live up to his promises regarding British Africa and a German-Japanese dispute over French Indo-China.

"Hitler is far from his plan of finishing the war in one year, after which, with a short interval for setting up a German-planned European economy, he planned to carry the war to the United States.." she said. "The situation in Europe is far, far better than we think it is, and Hitler knows it.

"Germany is in a bad way what with the Russians and the Japs interested only in themselves and with Iatly, a weak partner, doing nothing for Germany......If the British stand for a few weeks more the situation will change in their favor."

Sending Agents to U. S.

She said that Hitler "as a last stand" is sending 250 propaganda agents to the United States to "sell him as the 'big pacifist' and the great unifier of Europe— even attempt to stop the magnificent evolution I have seen come over the American people in one fortnight."

The fall of France was due to a political-military conspiracy, she said, but "if Premier Reynaud had been able to disclose the terms of the armistice by a normal working of the press, I can vow that despite all the blemishes that have been heaped on my country, no armistice would have been signed..."

Predicts French Revolt

She predicted a revolt in France during the coming winter "first against Germany, and second against the power in the country."

Mr. Robert McClure of the International Red Cross in China advocated a stronger stand by Britain against Japanese incidents in the Far East in an address delivered at Sunday's closing session.

"Japan uses these incidents as testing grounds to see how the western powers re-act," he said. "If they found they were unsuccessful, they would back down."

He expressed belief the United States navy soon would be using the Singapore naval base which he called the 'most up-to-date base in the world."

CHILDREN TAKE OVER THE C. N. E.

Big Fair Gives Children Last Big Blowout Before They Return to School

Toronto, Aug. 26—(CP)— The children took over the Canadian National Exhibition today and thousands romped through the grounds in their last big blowout before the start of school.

Just as in other years at the big fair, today was devoted to the children and they promenaded through buildings and across lawns, devoured untold quantities of sweets, drank gallons of soft drinks, and, because it was 'kids' day' enjoyed amusements on the midway at special low rates.

Biggest wartime exhibition in its 62-year history, the fair will feature, in honor of the children, a junior track meet in front of the grandstand, a freckle-faced kids competition and a decorated doll carriage and float competition. There's also a children's zoo and a model airplane contest. Special school tickets admit the children into the fair and into the grandstand without charge.

As usual, the children's shelter will be filled to overflowing throughout the day and night with "losted" tots and ice cream cones will be passed out by the scores to keep tear-shedding at a minimum.

In keeping with the wartime theme, Warriors' Day Saturday saw a crowd of 211,000 pass through the gates. This was 4,000 more than attended the same day at the fair last year.

More than 28,000 watched from the grandstand as 18,000 war veterans, greatest assemblage of warriors here in years, marched with 300 Royal Canadian Air Force members in review before Hon. J. L. Ralston, Federal Defence Minister. A military tattoo at night climaxed the day.

LIFEBUOY HEALTH SOAP
LIFEBUOY IN YOUR DAILY BATH Stops "B.O."

TOO bad to spend money to make a good impression—and then make a bad one! But that's exactly what Tom had done. During humid summer days, NO ONE escapes this possibility, because we all perspire up to three pints daily . . . Left on the body, this sweat deposit turns stale—decomposes. Then YOU have "B.O."

You can stop "B.O." before it starts with Lifebuoy. Lifebuoy contains an exclusive deodorizing ingredient not found in any other leading toilet soap. Used in your daily bath Lifebuoy stops "B.O." Its peppy, purifying lather washes stale perspiration deposits away!

SCIENTIFIC FACTS ABOUT 'B.O.'

The adult skin has 2 to 3 million sweat glands which act as a cooling system, giving off from 1 to 3 pints of perspiration daily—even when we are sitting still. If perspiration stopped, we would die from hyper-pyrexia (heat stroke).

Because much of the water in perspiration evaporates, we do not see or feel it. Summer heat, nervous excitement, heavy clothes or warm rooms quickly decompose this sweat deposit—turn it stale—cause offensive "B.O." (Body Odor).

'World's Fastest Plane' Shown; Army Puts Speed at 500 M.P.H.

Knudsen Sees the New Lockheed Interceptor as General Arnold Describes Its Power—Greatest Bomber Also Nears Completion

Los Angeles, Aug. 26.—The newest warplane of the United States, the Lockheed Interceptor, can fly more than 500 miles an hour, Major Gen. Henry H. Arnold said in releasing for the first time its performance figures.

"The world's fastest," said the chief of the Army Air Corps. Its speed, he added, was 460 miles an hour at two-thirds throttle, but it is stepped up past 500 M.P.H. when "wide open."

The plane's range is 1,100 miles; the rate of climb 4,000 feet a minute; its armament, one rapid-fire cannon, shooting a one pound shell, and four machine guns.

William S. Knudsen, chairman of the National Defense Advisory Committee, watched the new plane put through its paces today.

Major K. B. Wolfe, chief production engineer for the Army Air Corps, said that the Army had ordered a large quantity of these new type planes.

"I can't tell you the exact number, but it is the largest order for combat planes under the national defense program," he stated. "We hope to get delivery of 100 a month.

General Arnold also disclosed today that the biggest airplane ever built—a bomber capable of flying non-stop from New York to Europe, thence back and to Los Angeles—was nearing completion. The great plane has been under construction secretly in the Douglas factory at near-by Santa Monica for four years.

Engines the Largest Ever Built

Lieut. Col. C. E. Bradshaw, Army Air Corps officer in charge of its construction, said that the plane would be powered with four 2,000-horsepower engines, the largest ever built. It will be in the air this Fall.

With a wing spread of 212 feet and a length of 112 feet, its tail assembly alone is larger than the ordinary commercial plane.

The craft will have a gasoline capacity of 11,000 gallons. It will carry bigger cannon than any airplane in the world, but Colonel Bradshaw said that the exact armament details were secret. The plane will require a crew of ten.

After his inspection tour, Mr. Knudsen told reporters:

"When we get back to Washington we'll coordinate the demands of the Army and Navy and speed up production. Too many factories are wasting their time on a lot of different types of planes. One is building eleven different types.

"Over in Germany they just tell the Dornier people to keep turning out Dornier 17s as fast as they can. That's why they can build 2,000 airplanes a month."

"Our observers are in Europe," said General Arnold, "and we know just what kind of planes they're building. Our stuff is certainly not behind theirs."

He gave figures to show that with the automotive industry helping on production of engines and tools, the airplane output would be going full blast by next Spring.

"Pretty soon," said Mr. Knudsen with a smile, "it'll be like the automobile business—they'll have to worry about the second-hand market."

Earlier Model Flown Here in '39.

An earlier model of the Lockheed interceptor plane which was flown in California yesterday was seen in New York Feb. 11, 1939, when Captain Ben S. Kelse, then a lieutenant in the Air Corps, landed it at Mitchel Field after a near-record dash across the continent.

This prototype of the plane flown yesterday was a one-place job while the new one is understood to have seats for two men. The original plane was of all-metal, stressed-skin, semi-monocoque construction, with retractable tricycle landing gear and two liquid-cooled Allison engines of 1,090 horsepower each. Its wing span was 52 feet and it measured 37 feet 9 15-16 inches in length and was nine feet in height. Its total wing area was 327.5 square feet. Empty it weighed 11,171 pounds and had a useful load of 2,329 pounds. Its fuel tanks held 410 gallons of gasoline and twenty-six gallons of oil.

The engines of the plane were set into the leading edge of the full cantilever metal wing, while the nose extended out beyond the sharp points of the propeller spinners. It had the twin tail characteristic of Lockheed planes. Because of the plane's high speed, it was equipped with Fowler flaps to reduce landing speed.

Exactly what speed this particular plane was capable of was never known. It was known, however, that at 16,000 feet it would do 404 miles an hour. It was also known that with a throttle setting of 350 miles an hour and a fuel load of 360 gallons of gasoline, it had a range of 1,070 miles. Its absolute ceiling was said to be 30,000 feet.

The plane shown yesterday undoubtedly has profited by the flights of the original interceptor. It is known that after the original craft had been flown for many hours everyone concerned with it was pleased with its performance, although most of these individuals thought it ought to be enlarged so as to carry two instead of one.

Incidents Occur During Air Raids

The drill sergeant turned from his task of teaching Home Guard members to fire a rifle, put his gun to his shoulder and fired. In a field 50 yards away, two Nazi airmen drop their revolvers and forget their attempt to destroy their plane which had made a forced landing.

Ten minutes from the time he banged his tankard on the mess bar and ran to his fighter plane in response to an alarm one R.A.F. pilot bagged a German and returned to finish his beer. He encountered his quarry only 500 feet up and got him with the first burst of gunfire.

"I did not see your damn Spitfire at all" said a sullen German pilot whose bomber had been shot out of the air. A member of the German Condor Legion which fought in Spain, he told his victor "your planes are too damn quick."

Wendy Anderton, 11 year old daughter of a farmer who "captured" five German airmen after their plane was shot down, was handed a bar of chocolate and a little book by one of the youthful captives. The book was full of German-French phrases, issued to German servicemen for the entry to France.

VICEREGAL GUESTS WELCOMED

The Province of Ontario and the capital city of Toronto have in the past few days welcomed His Excellency the Earl of Athlone, Governor-General of Canada and his wife, Lady Alice. These members of the royal family who have seen long service for the Empire, are particularly welcomed in Ontario and its capital in these wartime days.

Their visit recalls the tour of Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth one year ago last May and June of whom there are memories which will never fade.

His Excellency pointed in his address at the opening of the Canadian National Exhibition to the dual task of winning the war and of establishing an enduring peace which rests on the British people.

These two angles of this task will be kept before the people for the one strengthens the other. To establish an enduring peace means that the war must go on until nazism and hitlerism are wiped out as possible threats to the security of the peace of the world.

SEPT. 8TH, DAY OF NATIONAL PRAYER

At His Majesty's request there will be observed in the United Kingdom a day of prayer on Sunday, September 8th., the first Sunday of the anniversary of the outbreak of the war. His Majesty's Government in Canada has requested in the words of Prime Minister King's statement "the clergy of all churches in Canada to arrange, in preparing for services on Sunday, September 8th., that the day shall be observed by their congregations as a day of national prayer and intercession."

The Canadian people feel it their duty to enter into a service of national prayer and will take part with their whole heart and soul in the service. The anniversary of the beginning of the war brings the realization to countless millions that the nation should bow in prayer for blessing and guidance to victory and in expressing gratitude that British arms have been so blessed in this trying year of the struggle when other nations who have been Allies have been overrun by the enemy of world liberty. Men and women realize that the power of prayer is mighty even against a crafty and savage foe, that prayer stays the minds of the people on the things that are true and good and on the supreme values of life, and that the confidence that the British nation and the Empire are fighting in the cause of justice, truth and right has lent strength and spirit in bearing the task. During the year prayers from countless millions have besought Providence for British victory for the sake of men and women and children the world over, and they believe that divine aid in strengthening the hearts of men and women and in bestowing wisdom upon those who represent the people of the Empire in the high places of authority has been manifested in the past twelve months.

Again the people will join in intercession for the nation and empire and the cause they represent in the present struggle and for the leaders who direct the councils of the Empire against the powers of nazi darkness, hate and violence.

Again Britain and the Empire will offer prayers for Heaven's blessing.

NAZI EFFORT FRUITLESS AGAINST BRITISH SPIRIT

As the days and weeks pass, more and more it is to be seen how fruitless has been the effort of the nazis to quell the spirit of Britain or make progress in the blitzkrieg. The German attack on Great Britain has shown several changes of tactics, which appear to many as signs of an increasing realization by the Germans that their task against Britain is their supreme task. No evidence has yet been shown that the nazis will have success. All signs point the other way.

The confidence of the British people has been unshaken—it is their confidence that all the nazi effort and intrigue will fail to subdue the British Isles. More and more manifest on the horizon of the neutral world's outlook is the feeling that the German's position bears increasing evidence that the nazis have not the power to carry out their wish. The world has faith that Britain will triumph and that her victory will mean that mankind is cleared of the violence of force as utilized by the nazis and fascists in international affairs.

Germans tried out mass raiding the week before last, last week they tried bombing by single planes, according to reports and then they tried out the "Big Bertha" plan. In this latest method of the Germans, they have met more than their match in the British for the British keep open the Strait of Dover, despite shore batteries placed by the enemy on the coast of France across the Channel. An instance of that was seen a few days ago when a British convoy a mile long proceeded on its way with British support though German guns fired upon the convoy from land emplacements and nazi bombers strove to attack.

British planes are night after night doing heavy damage to German communications, airdromes and factories, performing a wonder of achievement, along with hard blows delivered at the Italian war plants.

Meanwhile the season advances towards autumn which will add to the insurmountable difficulties which the German command will face.

There has not been a sign of success for the enemy. In fact the signs point without the slightest doubt to the failure of the Germans in this effort and consequently to the failure of all the nazis plans. Britain is the great fortress of liberty and it stands unshaken and confident.

Tombstones Studied To Clear Title

(By Lee E. Cooper in The New York Times)

The grist of realty sales reports now and then turns the spotlight on a property carried so long in one ownership that it is almost proper to classify the holding as "ancient".

Lawyers and realty men in some cases must pore over musty records and search family trees in the manner of a genealogist to present an unbroken chain of ownership back into the early days of the history of this country.

Sale of such a parcel took place a few days ago in Holmdel Township, Monmouth County, N. J., when John P. Luyster transferred title to eleven acres of a sixty-acre tract in what appears to be the first bona fide sale ever to have been made of this particular land.

The property was originally acquired by Peter Wyckoff of Gravesend, Kings County, N. Y., by grant from the English Throne. Wyckoff in 1716 presented this property as a gift to Johannes Luyster, an ancestor of the present seller.

This original deed of transfer was framed and hangs in the farmhouse, built in 1726 by Johannes Luyster and still standing on the property. Ever since that time descendants of the recipient of this gift have lived on the place.

To get a clear picture of the chain of title the New York Abstract Company, which certified the title, found it necessary to examine the tombstones of six generations of this family, all of whom lived and died there in the course of the last 225 years.

All are buried in a private cemetery on a part of the property still in the family's hands and which did not figure in the eleven-acre sale just recorded.

In these hectic days of chance and change, there is something refreshing and quieting in the realization that the love of some particular spot in a city or in the country often may inspire a family to keep it off the market for centuries, through good times and bad, so that sons and daughters may occupy and enjoy the homestead as their fathers and grandfathers did before them.

R. A. F. Has Saved Britain

By Noel Baker, Labor Member of the British House of Commons and for many years a close student of air warfare.

Many people in British countries have been asking, "Is not this air news too good to be true?" It is this question I want to take tonight.

First let me summarise what I believe to be the facts, and let me say by way of fact that I am not a paid agent of the Ministry of Information or any other department of the state. I have always demanded in Parliament that the Government tell the truth. And I believe I know the truth about the Air Force. I studied air warfare as carefully as a civilian can do so for 20 years. I have seen it in Spain, in Finland, and in other places. I have many friends among the officers of the Royal Air Force and I see them often.

I have checked up with the Air Ministry as carefully as I can on the results, and I am certain that they are not overstating their successes. Indeed I believe the figures they have given us understate the truth.

• • •

Do you remember what those figures are? In seven days one week our forces brought down 570 Nazi aircraft in Britain and around its coasts. Of this total 377 were bombers, and with the aircraft Goering lost 1,400 of the pilots and expert crew. In shooting them down the R. A. F. lost 111 fighter aircraft, but 56 pilots escaped by parachute and regained their bases. Our loss in airmen over Britain was thus just 55. In machines we lost one to 5½ lost by Goering. In men we lost 1 to 18.

But to these losses we must add the further losses of our raids against the enemy. During these same seven days we lost in bombing operations in Germany, in German-occupied territory, in Italy and in France a total of 31 machines. That involved the loss of 130 of our pilots and our trained bomber crew.

Thus if we add up the total cost of our operations both in defence and attack it comes to 141 aircraft against the Nazi 570, with the loss of 186 personnel against the Nazi 1,400. One to four in machines, one to seven and a half in men. These are the figures as the Air Ministry presents them to the press. And on one side they are complete, correct and final. Our losses are, of course, all known and they are given in full. They are given in full for various reasons. But not least because to hide or understate them would demoralize our pilots and their courage as nothing else could do. Faked official optimism is a most foolish form of Dutch courage, and with a fighting force it brings swift retribution in its tracks.

But it is not so certain that our Air Ministry gives the Nazi losses quite so fully. Indeed, it is not possible to know for certain what they are. With modern aircraft the aerial dogfights are so swift and sudden that the turmoil of scores of simultaneous combat is so great that not even the most experienced pilots can always be certain when his enemy has been destroyed. No victory is counted unless the pilot is quite certain, and unless the evidence has been checked and counter-checked.

Thus it is absolutely certain that there are many Germans who are not counted but who never reach home. And our Air Command makes no allowance for them of any kind. Of course in all estimates of fighting it is right to leave a liberal margin for mistakes. That margin has been left, if only on one side of the ledger. It is a margin far wider than truth.

• • •

The second story is of a flight of Hurricanes, six machines, which met the biggest force of German bombers they had ever seen. They said there were at least 120 of them. More than they had ever seen together at Dunkirk, and these bombers had a fleet of M.E. fighters banked up above them in the sky. But the six Hurricanes never faltered. One section, three machines, attacked the fighters. The other one went right in among the bombers. In a few minutes three Nazi bombers had been destroyed, the rest, bombers and Messerschmitts together, turned tail and fled for home. Eighty thousand miles of flying, three bombers downed, many tons of bombs wasted in the sea, and NO results. What a picture for Goering to contemplate when his men got home!

And my third story is of a lone Blenheim fighter who went up to meet a Nazi bomber in the dark. He fought the enemy above a northern city, chased him southward, back again towards the north, then right across the country to the coast, and at last shot him down when they were 40 miles out to sea.

• • •

What damage have the Nazis done us by their raids? Everyone knows Dr. Goebbels' grotesque and lying claims—German fighters, like swarms of gnats above the streets of London—our airdromes in ruins—our ports out of action—our factories in flames. Well, I have not seen a single German plane in London. Two impartial trans-Atlantic witnesses, Helen Kirkpatrick and Virginia Coles, whose experience and feminine integrity is their sufficient passport in many lands, toured our south coast here on Friday. Neither saw serious damage of any kind. Helen Kirkpatrick told me that at Dover she saw eight Nazis crash before her eyes. But she saw no damage to the keyes or harbor. She saw one shell hole in a private house.

The attack of our bombers in Germany is a very different affair. That is proved by every report, whether from pilots, neutrals or other sources, which is received. Proved by our aerial photography, photographs which we have made. It is proved by the mass movements of German civilians from the Ruhr district. Proved by Goering's new announcements of fundamental changes in his A. R.P.

In five months of 1918 the Allied air force dropped 300 tons of bombs on the Ruhr and they demoralised the population and enormously reduced the quantity of arms which they produced. In the last month our bombers have dropped more than 4,000 tons, and each bomb is far more effective than bombs were 20 years ago. Our bombing crews are steadily, mercilessly, surely, blasting German oil plants, German aircraft factories, German railways into the chaos that will bring Hitler to defeat.

• • •

And why are the Royal Air Force superior in quality to Goering's hitherto unbeaten mass? There are many reasons. But there is one that embraces and states them all. In the air quality is far more important than in any other kind of war.

Fifteen years ago an experienced author said that a pilot in a 1925 machine could shoot down 1,000 opponents in 1914 models with no risk or danger to himself. I believe our air force is superior to the Germans in the quality of its material, of its manpower, of its training and its morale. No one now denies, least of all the German pilots, that the Spitfire is the finest fighter in the world. The Wellington with its speed, its range, its armor, its power-driven gun turrets, is quite as certainly the finest bomber.

The men, physically and mentally, are the finest and most carefully selected types which the British Commonwealth of Nations in its long and glorious history has yet produced. They are trained in navigation, shooting, formation flying, tactics, to a standard which, quite evidently, Goering and his generals have never dreamt.

The German machines are very good. Their instruments are the same. Their pilots and their crews are obstinate and brave. But neither their skill nor their knowledge nor their aircraft are equal to the task they have ahead.

• • •

And there is one other advantage which will be decisive and which is ours. This morning at 4 a.m. I stood at a bomber station in the dewy freshness of our August morn and watched some Wellingtons come home. I watched the superb precision of the pilots as they swept towards the flare paths and brought the mighty monsters safely down to earth.

A few minutes later I sat at breakfast drinking coffee with these quite young men. They had been through cloud and darkness, through anti-aircraft fire and searchlights, over, above, around and through the German balloons, to do their job in Germany. They had passed through every obstacle to their objective knowing that if the gunners got them they had 350 miles of cruel sea to cross before they could get home.

They were tired, but not very tired. They had been doing it for months but they showed not the slightest sign of nerves or strain. To them their raids was just one more job accomplished, a fit subject for shop talk and shop jokes of the kind which young men love.

But with them as with all our pilots there was something beneath their talk which you could feel but never hear. It was their inner knowledge that in their hands now lies the fate of all mankind. It was their unspoken faith in the cause for which they fight. It is that grim half-conscious idealism which bears them onwards through the stormiest night and which above all things will save Britain and the world.—Ottawa Journal.

Refugee Dogs Waiting for Their Masters

At the Blue Cross Kennels at Blackheath are more than a hundred refugee dogs from France and Belgium, most of them waiting to rejoin their new masters after six months' quarantine. The dogs jump up and down and beat on the bars of their kennels as you pass, but the kennel-maids reassured me, saying "that's all right, it's only because you're a stranger here". Because of the quarantine laws, these dogs must never meet, except with a double wire in between them, so that each one has his or her own separate quarters in rows, with signposts, saying "Sunshine Corner", "Shady Lane", and so forth.

King of Shady Lane, over which he lords it with an air of undisputed authority, is Sadi, an enormous black Belgian police dog, who was discovered roaming about the beach at Dunkirk with a label tied round his neck with a piece of string, "will someone please take care of me?" One look at Sadi and it would be quite ridiculous even to think of saying "no". So here he is at Blackheath, although to his great annoyance he is still wearing the pneumonia jacket he had to be popped into the moment he arrived, in order to recover from the privations of his journey.

Most of the dogs arrived collarless, but Javotte, a wire-haired terrier, is an exception, for she landed here complete with gas-mask and mackintosh gas-proof coat, neither of which she has since had occasion to don.

At first glance I mistook one dog for a very fat, podgy guinea-pig. His name is Tommy Atkins, and actually he's a white puppy, of extremely doubtful ancestry, whom Gunner Bowen found whimpering miserably in a shell crater in France, and brought home with him to England. I can't imagine in the least what Tommy Atkins will grow up to look like, but, if I felt my own dog would allow it even for a moment, I know I'd have tried to smuggle Tommy Atkins out of the kennels with me.

Here is part of a letter from Driver J. Stuart, of the R.A.S.C. He says, "I am writing on behalf of the dog I have brought back from France with me. I was in Arras and have had him eight months (I have been in France nine months). I saved him from a bad accident and have been more than repaid. He is a Malignoir, a Belgian police-dog, similar to an Alsation, but not quite so big. He has kept guard in the woods and was instrumental in the capture of four parachutists, who were dropped near our transport line, and more than once he has helped me through. I have had him on my lorry, and together we have covered 11,000 miles from the Maginot to Dieppe, and as far south as Paris, Nantes and Brest.

"We arrived in England on Monday morning at Plymouth, and he was taken away from me in a police van by the customs to go into quarantine. I am devoted to him, but of course could not insist on accompanying him as I am only in the ranks. I should like you if you can to find out where he is. It will be a struggle to pay his fees, but I would sooner borrow than lose him after all this time." Since he wrote that letter, Driver Stuart has heard that his dog is not only well, but will be cared for free of all cost to him at the Blue Cross Kennels.—From the London Listener.

Many Thyroid Cases Cured Without Operation

In my student days the severe type of goitre—exopthalmic goitre or Grave's disease—was a serious matter to the patient and his family. It often meant travelling hundreds of miles to some outstanding surgeon and often the case was too far advanced to obtain successful results. To-day, while practically every hospital has one or a number of surgeons skilled in this operation it is known that many cases can be successfully treated by Xrays, and still others are relieved of their symptoms by rest and medicine.

There are, of course, certain cases in which operation should be performed as pointed out by Drs. Walter Redisch, New York, and William H. Perloff, Philadelphia in Endocrinology.

1.—Those cases in which there is mechanical pressure present, aside from the regular symptoms of severe goitre.

2.—Cases in which one or more modules or lumps can be felt, firmer than the remainder of the gland.

3.—Those cases in which other forms of treatment such as rest and iodine have failed.

4.—Wherever there is immediate danger from heart and bloodvessel disturbances.

In recording the results obtained by use of iodine alone, Drs. Redisch and Perloff state that iodine causes a great improvement in some patients, has no effect in others and makes still others worse. By using sodium iodide with the pure iodine, instead of potassium iodide, results showed about 10 per cent of the cases completely and permanently cured, 40 per cent free of symptoms so long as iodine is used, and almost fifty per cent "almost" free of symptoms, but with some signs and symptoms still present.

I have spoken before of the great number of cases cured by Xrays, which is safe and allows the patient to do his daily work although treatment requires many months.

The thought then is that while many cases must undergo surgery, and others treatment by Xray, there are many other cases in which iodine alone, or iodine with rest, brings relief of symptoms.

These facts are, of course, known to your physician and you may therefore rest assured that if he recommends surgery, it is because he is trying to prevent further damage to your heart and other organs due to the over-active thyroid gland.

AIR BASE OFFERED UNITED STATES BY BERMUDA

99-Year Lease to be Given and Possibility Sound May be Used as Naval Base

NO CONFIRMATION

Washington, Aug. 26 —(AP)— Bermuda's announcement that she was ready to place an air base at the disposal of the United States encouraged expectations today that some official pronouncement would be forthcoming this week on the status of negotiations for additional defence outposts in other British possessions.

Thus far neither the White House nor the Navy Department has made any comment on Saturday's disclosure at Hamilton, Bermuda, that the Great Sound of the resort islands would be made available to the United States on a 99-year lease for an air, and possibly naval base.

Besides Bermuda, Newfoundland, Trinidad, Barbados and the Bahamas have been mentioned as possible base sites. President Roosevelt, who has been conducting the negotiations, has not hinted, however, what locations are being discussed.

Senator Alben Barkley (Dem.-Kentucky), commenting on the Bermuda announcement, said yesterday that the United States should acquire "a whole string" of air and fleet bases guarding approaches to the Panama Canal.

A Fine Spirit

Apropo of the Bermuda base, he said, "I think it's a very fine indication of the spirit of those who control Bermuda to offer it to us." He called such a base desirable "if not indispensable" for defence of the Atlantic approaches to the United States.

Asked how Britain should be paid for bases leased, Barkley replied that no official plan had yet been advanced. He noted, however, that unofficial suggestions included a reduction or cancellation of the British war debt, and the transfer of 50 "overage" American destroyers to the Royal Navy.

The question of the destroyer transfer was aired last night in a radio debate between Senators Gerald Nye (Rep.-North Dakota), and John Danaher (Rep.-Connecticut), and Senator Claude Pepper (Dem.-Florida) and Col. Henry Breckenridge, New York State Attorney.

Nye and Danaher argued that it would be an act of war to make the fighting craft available to Britain. Pepper and Breckenridge urged such a transfer, contending that it might turn the tide of battle against "our declared enemies" and thus keep war from the United States.

Public Opinion Favors Move

Public opinion in the British West Indies, as reflected in the Colonies' newspapers, favors the leasing of air and naval bases to the United States to assist in the defence of this hemisphere.

The newspapers generally welcome the proposal as tending to lift a measure of the burden from Britain's shoulders and at the same time strengthen the defences of the West Indies themselves. One paper suggested it would increase United States tourist travel to the islands, since visitors would travel with a feeling of greater security.

In Bermuda, where the administration announced Saturday that Great Sound was to be made available to the United States for an air base, the Royal Gazette and Colonist favors the scheme. "There is absolutely no question of any loss of our British birthright, of our being ceded or sold or any intereference with our generous measure of self-government", the paper said.

The Daily Gleaner at Kingston, Jamaica, declared: "So long as the present British connection with the British West Indies remains unaltered, we do not believe there would be any objection in the West Indies to the arrangement proposed".

Added Protection

"We perceive in this new arrangement an added protection and promotion of West Indian interests", the paper added.

"Any arrangements for the leasing of naval and air bases in these colonies, however distasteful to the peoples of these islands, will be loyally accepted if they serve to ensure American help for the mother country in this grave crisis of her history", says the Barbados Advocate.

An "ideal" naval and seaplane base could be developed at St. Rupert's Bay in Dominica, midway between the French possessions of Martinique and Guadeloupe, according to the Tribune of Roseau, the Capital. "We should be willing to yield our pride and place no obstacle in the way of Imperial defence", it states.

The newspaper pointed out that up until a short time before the opening of the present war German fleet units used the Bay for exercises. "It is no mere chance which brought the German navy repeatedly to Dominica", the Tribune states.

In St. Vincent, one of the Windward Islands group, the Vincentian declares it realizes the importance of such base leases "in relieving the tremendous strain on Britain and giving these islands a feeling of greater security". It welcomes the proposal "with a feeling of optimism".

A box like device mounted on wheels and equipped with mirrors and electric lights has been invented by a resident of Silver Creek, N.Y., to enable garage mechanics to examine the under side of cars without crawling under them.

tioning at the time returned to duty and assumed charge of the case.

Climbed Seven Feet up Wall

Ritchie, called upon "human fly" abilities in order to effect his get-away. He escaped into the prisoner's yard, while other inmates were at the noonday meal, and attendants in an adjoining cell-block. He mounted a small wooden lean-to and reached the barred windows on the second floor. From here he managed in some way to climb seven feet up the face of the stone wall to the roof of the jail proper.

Entering the attic through a trap-door in the roof, he was momentarily trapped. Unable to find a way of egress he tore about thirty feet of old electric wiring from a nearby wall and threw the loose end out of the window after attaching the wire to a beam. Climbing down the wire he had reached a point level with the second-storey window, when the wire gave way, and he crashed heavily to the ground, 25 feet below.

Footmarks Driven Into Gravel

The force of the impact drove footmarks a distance of three inches into the hard gravelly surface of the jail-yard.

Wilfred Quance and his wife, Patterson Street residents were eye witnesses to the fall. "He hit the ground with terrific force," Quance told newspapermen and officials, "and at first I thought he was killed."

Quance shouted to the man and asked him if he was hurt. "He nodded his head, then ran as fast as he could down Patterson Street. I called to him to halt but he kept on going." Quance dashed down the stairs from his second-floor verandah and gave chase to the fugitive. By this time Ritchie had reached Pinnacle Street and disappeared. Quance telephoned police.

Ritchie apparently, unable to run due to his injured foot sought refuge in the Wilson car parked less than two blocks away from the scene of his break. Here he was discovered by Wilson some five hours after the break had occurred.

Jail officials stated today, that Ritchie had successfully "broken" from another jail, but no particulars were available. His condition today was reported to be good by hospital authiorities.

New 'Iron Lung', Used in Tacoma, Weighs 40 Pounds

Tacoma, Wash., Aug. 26—(AP)— A new "iron lung" weighing but 40 pounds compared with more than 600 pounds for the old "boiler-type" respirator, is being used here for the first time during the Tacoma's current siege of infantile paralysis.

Paralysis specialists here hail the pee-wee respirator, invented by Dr. F. H. Terhaar of Los Angeles, as a "godsend," particularly for cases where the more unwieldy and larger lung presents transportation problems.

Dr. Melvin Warren, head of the Pierce County Hospital infantile paralysis ward, estimates the Terhaar lung will save thousands of lives annually because of its extreme mobility.

The new respirator looks like the chest protector of a suit of armor. Rubber sleeves fit tightly at the waist and arms of the paralysis victim, sealing in the precious pulmonary air. It works on the same principle as the "boiler" lung, a portable motor collapsing and opening bellows that "breathe" for the patient.

Willkie Urges Speed-up of Military Plane Construction

New York, Aug. 26—(AP)— Unless the United States Congress acts quickly on conscription legislation, it was disclosed today at Wendell L. Willkie's headquarters, the Republican Presidential nominee probably will make a speech soon urging its prompt passage.

In his acceptance address Willkie expressed approval of "some form of selective service." He himself had nothing to say for quotation since that time, but aides said that he favored immediate action.

Talking with reporters on defence legislation in general, Willkie called for a speed-up of military plane construction.

HUNGARY CALLS UP RESERVISTS

Rumania Also Sending Reinforcements Into Disputed Province of Transylvania

Budapest, Aug. 26—(AP)—Thousands of additional Hungarian Reservists answered a call to the colors today amid reports Rumania was sending reinforcements into the disputed border province of Transylvania.

The summons came with return of a Hungarian delegation from Turnu-Severin, where negotiations with Rumania over Hungary's demands for a slice of Transylvania collapsed Saturday.

Reports from Bucharest said the Rumanian government was considering appointment of a new delegation to resume negotiations and attempt to satisfy Berlin's demands for quick settlement of the dispute, informed circles there said that under any circumstances it was unlikely agreement could be reached before several months.

The Hungarian government press, meanwhile, declared Rumania was not acting in accord with the desires of the Rome-Berlin axis and said Hungary would stand firm in her demands on Transylvania, which Rumania gained in the last settlement.

Official Hungarian circles said Germany and Italy were exercising strong pressure on Rumania to make territorial concessions.

ROUND-UP OF GERMANS IN DUTCH EAST INDIES

Batavia, Netherlands East Indies, Aug. 26 —(AP)— Several thousand of the 9,000 Germans living in the East Indies when Germany invaded the Low Countries have been rounded up and placed in concentration camps by government authorities. No distinction was made at first between any of the German residents, but since then, hundreds of German Jews and others opposed to Hitler have been released from the camps.

REGISTER ALIENS IN FOUR MONTHS

Estimated 3,600,0000 Aliens be Fingerprinted Under U. S. Law

Washington, Aug. 26—(AP)—Justice Department officials completed their arrangements today for the tremendous task of registering and fingerprinting an estimated 3,600,000 aliens during the next four months.

The job will be started tomorrow in about 7,300 post offices and is scheduled for completion on Dec. 26.

To finish on time, the Department must average 36,000 registrations daily, because, with Sundays and holidays excluded, the registration period contains only 100 days until the deadline.

The registration law, enacted by Congress as a defence precaution, requires that every alien over the age of 14 present himself at a first or second class post office or a Post office in a county seat for registration and fingerprinting. Would-be citizens who have taken out their first papers must register like non-citizens.

Children under 14 must be registered by parents or legal guardians and need answer only nine of the 15 questions.

The registration questions cover personal identification; the manner of entry into this country; occupation; military service; memberships in social or other organizations, and any activity in promoting the interests of a foreign government.

The penalty for failure to register or for making false statements in connection with registration is $1,000 fine or six months imprisonment or both.

Mexican Gunboat Halts U.S. Tanker

Mexico City, Aug. 26—(AP)— United States Ambassador Josephus Daniels said today he expected to make a full report to Washington on the halting of the American oil tanker R. J. Hanna yesterday by a Mexican gunboat.

Information furnished by the Embassy by the Mexican navy and Foreign Office said the tanker, a 6,905-ton vessel out of San Francisco owned by the Standard Oil Company of California had been halted briefly about 75 miles north of Acapulco, Pacific port.

The Hanna was permitted to proceed, it was said, after establishing her identity. The gunboat steamed across the ship's bows to make her halt, Mexican officials said. They denied a warning shot had been fired.

(In Washington the State Department said its attention was brought to the incident by a radio message "purporting" to come from the captain of the Hanna and that immediate inquiries had been made in Mexico City. According to the message a shot was fired over the Hanna but she did not halt and was not pursued).

Last week the American freighter Herman Frasch was halted and searched off Acapulco by another Mexican gunboat.

PICOBAC Wins on its Merits!

HALLOWAY W. M. S.

The August meeting of the Halloway Women's Missionary Society was held on the afternoon of Wednesday, August 21st, at the home of Mrs. Ed. Emerson.

Opening devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Earl Snider. As this was the Baby Band meeting, all hymns and selections were in keeping with this subject. Supplies costing $1.25 were purchased for Baby Band work. The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Arthur Wilson. A reading entitled: "Our Hopes", was given by Mrs. Herb. Townsend. Mrs. Don Rose gave a reading. The offertory hymn was sung as Miss Audrey Wannamaker gathered the offering which amounted to $3.25. A poem 'Homes' was read by Mrs. Kenneth Kingston.

The Baby Band Secretary, Mrs. Emerson, had charge of the rest of the program. Musical selections were given by Audrey Wannamaker and by Norman and Paul Snider. A story "How the Artist Forgot Four Colours," was read which described how the artist in his representation of the children in heaven forgot that not only white children are given a place there, but children of all colours and races. Peter Larsen gave a reading and Mrs. Milton Robson, the Branch Superintendent, spoke a few words of congratulation on the success of the recently organized Band. The mothers present registered their children in the Record Book and received membership cards and gift boxes. There were present 16 adults and 15 children.

At the conclusion of the meeting a lunch of sandwiches, cake and ice cream was served.

BLACK, the beauty that blooms forever, is tops on city streets this Summer, and from all accounts is to be THE color when the town fills up again after Labor Day.

To greet the crowd and tell tall tales of holidays, here's a handsome jacket dress of black velveteen splashed with white. The dress is slim with a high surplice closing which shows at the neck of the jacket. The turnback of the collar is duplicated at the jacket bottom in front. Inside tucks shape the jacket at the waist. The trim is cream colored bengaline. Fullness of skirt at centre front.

Those Cloudy Weather Gals

The woman who isn't interested in outdoor life misses out on a lot of pleasure.

By HELEN FOLLETT

To be too serious is to be foolish. Do we hear some member of the beauty class piping up with "but if life is serious." Yassum! we agree. And that is precisely the reason why no woman should forget how to play, no matter what her age may be.

Young people sit around with serious faces, discuss life and this crazy world. Look like old men and women. Isn't right, isn't normal. Youth should be gay, and so should middle age and even the ages after that. Laughter combats worries, slays them. It keeps the muscles of the face strong and resilient. And the appearance of one's face has a lot to do with the feelings inside the heart.

There's something wrong with a woman who doesn't like to play with a baby, a dog or a cat, whose sentiments aren't touched by all young creatures. The woman who isn't interested in outdoor life misses out on a lot of pleasure. She attends nobly to her stern duties, looking after her home and her family, never taking time off for a little fun. She wonders why her husband stays out nights and why her children threaten to run away from home. She's Mrs. Cloudy Weather, and they're looking for sunshine.

Fleming Re-union Interesting Event At Searles Beach

To the stirring strains of old Scottish airs played by Pipers Jamie Clark and F. Scrivens one hundred and fifty-five members of the Fleming clan gathered at Searles Beach, Oak Lake, for their fifth annual reunion on Wednesday. As usual for these gatherings the weather was ideal.

A bountiful repast was served at 12.30 after which President Harry Rollins, Belleville, called the gathering to order with the singing of God Save the King. In a few well chosen words he expressed his pleasure at the large number present and extended a cordial welcome to the visitors, regretting the absence of those who were ill.

The secretary's report was read by D. L. Fleming, Belleville, in which was recorded the births, marriages, and deaths occurring in 1940. After best wishes were extended to the newly married members of the clan and a welcome given to the new names on the family tree, a one minute silence was observed for those who had passed on. Treasurer's report was given by James Haggerty, Belleville. Interesting short addresses were given by W. J. Moore, Peterboro; Borden Rollins, Montreal; Robt. Reid, Frankford; Mrs. P. Ketchum, Warner, N.H.; Kenneth Wright, Toronto; Mrs. Dave Whytock, Warner, N.H.; J. M. Dafoe, Frankford, Ray Grant, Belleville; Mrs. Geo. Pollard, Stirling; Mrs. Wm. Holbert Thomasburg; S. B. Rollins, Tweed; Mrs. C. B. Hamm, Belleville; Geo. Adams, Belleville. Miss Annie Fleming, Belleville, was then presented with a small gift in appreciation for her untiring work as historian.

Little Carolyn Rollins, Stirling, skillfully danced the Highland Fling to the music of the pipes and seven year old Jackie Vance, Thomasburg, sang the wood-pecker's song in a very engaging manner.

Prizes given for oldest member of clan present—Miss Annie Fleming, Belleville. The youngest one present—Ray Grant Demill, Crookston. The oldest grandmother present—Mrs. W. H. Rollins, Ivanhoe. The one coming the farthest —Mrs. D. Whytock, Warner, N.H. The latest bride present—Mrs. Roy Demill, Crookston.

The following officers were re-elected:—

Hon. Pres.—Mr. C. A. Fleming.

President—Harry Rollins, Belleville; Treasurer—James Haggerty, Belleville; Secretary—B. Fleming, Ivanhoe; Historian—Mrs. Ray Grant, Belleville.

Special mention was made of those members of the clan who are now serving their country:

Private Wm. Pilling, R.A.F.
Capt. Edgar Matthews.
Private Sheldon Calver.
Private Clare Wright.

It was decided to hold the 1941 reunion in the same place at the same time.

Letters of regret were read from: Mrs. Fred Hanson, Chicago; Mrs. Wm. Hubbell, Smith's Falls; Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Sutherland, Carstairs, Alta.; Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Downey, Saskatoon; Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Dennison, Fort William; Mr. and Mrs. J. Graham Anderson Toronto; Mrs. P. Girdwood, Perth, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Ashton Johnston, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. S. Donnan, Stirling; Mrs. Belle Symons and Mr. and Mrs. W. Perry, Toronto; Arthur Richardson and family, Davis, California; N. H. Fleming, Mount Vernon, N.Y.; Jack Fleming, Ottawa; Betty Nicol, Kingston; Mrs. J. A. Joslin, Edmonton; Mr. and Mrs. John Clement, Ivanhoe; Miss Mary Jane Fleming, Ivanhoe.

Sports Program

An interesting sports program included races for the children and various contests. The results of the events were:—Boys under 6, Jackie Vance; Boys, 6 to 8—Kenneth Runnalls; Girls, 8 to 12, 1—Vivian Wood, 2, Marjorie Wright; Boys, 8 to 12 —1. Donald Runnalls. 2. Douglas Reid; Girls, 13 to 15—1. Betty Vance; 2. Mrs. Roy Demille; Boys 13 to 15— 1. Maurice Rollins; 2. Don Wright; Boys 8 to 12—Don Runnalls; Girls 13 to 16 —Betty Vance; Boys, 13 to 16—Maurice Rollins; Balloon race, ladies — Mrs. Don Campbell; Balloon race, gentlemen,—Harold Morton; Paper plate —Reta Fleming, Justin Fleming; grandmother's nail driving—Mrs. A. Stevenson; spot race—Mrs. Don Campbell; Peanut race — Mrs. Percy Blakely, Mrs. Wright; Rolling pin—Mrs. Roy Demille, Mrs. Campbell.

Don Campbell's ball players took Tom Fleming's team into camp to the tune of 5-3. This is an annual event between these two teams.

The families represented at the gathering on Wednesday were descendants of Anne Haggerty, Robt. Fleming, Eliza Wright, John Fleming, James Fleming, David Fleming, Janet Read and Isobel Murray.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, August 27

MANY surprising denouements may be looked for on this day, with the augury of definite rewards and recognition of long-sustained and patient efforts in launching sound and practical projects which may have new features or novel constructive angles appealing to progressive and productive avenues for promotion and development. While merit and detail may be readily appreciated, it might be just as well to hand over production to others, since the mental and nervous system are under high tension and ideas may be somewhat beclouded or confused.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year of definite opportunity for placing new ideas, novel, practical and soundly constructive and having appeal to progressive channels for development and promotion. Such co-operation may be very desirable since the mind is in a more or less erratic or obscure state, and the nerves keyed up to hazardous tension or emotional excitement.

A child born on this day may be diligent, hardworking and ambitious, especially in creative work of a new and progressive trend.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Jealous of Her Baby

Dear Miss Fairfax:

What can I do with my husband? He is an exceptionally good man in almost all ways, except that he won't let me spend money for clothes which I really need. It isn't as if we haven't the money, because we do, but he wants to have a bank account, and that's in his name too.

We've been married three years and have a daughter of two whom he worships. But in all this time he has said only twice that he loves me. I know he isn't the affectionate kind, but I wonder if he really loves me. I have to stand by and watch him love the baby. I'm bitter with jealousy.

Do other men act like that? I mean, is it natural for him to be so cruel? He hasn't kissed me for a week. Do you think it could be because he is eight years older than I am? Please help me ease my mind.

Butch

I've had letters from women who were jealous of the "other woman", jealous of their husband's love of sports, jealous of his love of reading, jealous of his family, particularly his mother, but this is the first time I have ever had a letter from a woman jealous of her own baby. And you will see, my dear girl, that I've left out of your letter some of the dreadful promptings this jealousy has brought about in regard to your own child.

Some men, and I hate to say it, refrain from demonstrations of affection to their wives when they see how it affects them. Try a little simulated indifference to this husband of yours. Make him want to know what has come over you and he'll probably be as eager to kiss you as you are to be kissed. Sorry, but human nature is like that.

Unwelcome Attentions

Dear Miss Fairfax:

He works in the same office building with me. He's ill-groomed, messy-looking and needs to be made acquainted with a barber, the clothes presser, etc. I didn't know the man was alive but it seems he fell for me in the elevator and he sent me a pound box of cheap candy, declaring his love, asked for a date. Naturally I ignored it.

Now he is writing to me that I am his dream of a wife but, believe me, he's my nightmare of a husband. Going down in the elevator the other evening he jogged my arm and said: "I'm the guy that sent you that box of candy". I answered: "I haven't touched it, would you like to have it back?" He said: "Please keep it". I'm now being guyed by the entire force of the business organization which employs me. I find it pretty difficult not to show my indignation.

Tormented

Please don't show the office force that these unwelcome attentions irritate you or they're likely to continue in even a more aggravated form. We human creatures are like that. And when it comes to teasing, even a person with whom we have friendly relations, we're apt to lose our tempers. Just pretend these unwelcome attentions amuse you as much as they do your fellow employees.

Faithfulness Wins Out

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 23 years old, considered good-looking, and for more than two years I have been deeply interested in a girl of 21. I think I have a fairly good job, and I'm steady although not what you'd call brilliant.

Recently my girl met a young man who has a sport model automobile and a good-sized allowance from well-to-do parents, and has been going out with him quite frequently. I love her very much and don't know what to do in this case. Should I step out of the picture, or try to win her back?

Wondering

It's pretty hard to stand up against a rival who has a snappy car and a generous allowance from doting parents. But this is good way to spoil a young man and keep him from real success. You do not say you were positively engaged to this girl, so why this sweeping gesture of renunciation. Be friendly when you meet, and don't censure her for her change of heart.

And, my dear boy, it isn't necessary for me to tell you that young men with snappy cars and plenty of pocket money often change their minds about girls. If such a thing should happen, there you will be, ever faithful.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Correct Attendants at Formal Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am to be married this month, and the wedding is to be a formal church wedding.

1.—Will the guests have to wear hats to church?

2.—My wedding party will consist of maid of honor, best man, two senior bridesmaids, two senior ushers, two junior bridesmaids. I would also like to have two junior ushers. Would this be proper?

Would the two junior bridesmaids and the two senior bridesmaids walk down the church aisle together, or would they walk separately?

H. P.

1.—Whether your guests at an evening church wedding would wear hats depends on the denomination of the church. The officiating clergyman will inform you about this. In certain denominations women are forbidden to enter the church with "uncovered heads" and they wear either small "evening hats" or a scarf, perhaps of tulle.

2.—You don't tell me the age of these junior bridesmaids, but if you have in mind to invite two young boys to "match up" with the ages of the junior bridesmaids, so that they may walk with the junior bridesmaids in the recessional, I'm not enthusiastic about this plan.

If I were you, I would have the two ushers ("senior" ushers) walk together first in the processional. Then the two senior bridesmaids, then the two junior bridesmaids. Next, the maid of honour, walking alone, and then you and your father or whoever is to give you in marriage.

Then, for the recessional, you and your bridegroom, first; next, the maid of honour, walking alone; next, the two senior bridesmaids, walking together; then the two junior bridesmaids, walking together; and last, the two senior ushers, walking together.

If your bridegroom wishes to invite two more ushers, I suggest that he invite two close friends of approximately the same age as the ushers he has already invited.

About "Jr." and "2nd"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

When a child is named after its father, is there any set rule for the use of "Junior" or "2nd" or "II" or is it just a matter of choice? Does a "middle class" person consider "2nd" or "II" "highbrow"?

D. R.

Yes, there is a very definite rule about the use of "Junior" or "Second". If the child's name is the same as his father's, he uses "Junior" after his name as long as his father is living.

If he is named for an uncle or cousin, he may use "Second" or "2nd" or "II" after his name.

Since this is a definite rule, I see no reason why anyone should regard the correct use of these as "highbrow".

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Moderation for Mothers

I suppose there isn't a medical man in the country who hasn't had an expectant mother come to him with the question: "Is it all right for me to smoke?" or "Is it all right for me to have a drink while I am carrying my child?" And I know there isn't much unanimity about the answers they give. Both these questions have been heatedly debated for a good many years.

I have handled cases in which the expectant mothers both drank and smoked, and yet brought babies into the world who were quite healthy. Howver, when women come to me with the question, "Can I smoke; can I drink, while I am expecting my baby?", I nearly always give an emphatic "No".

I have often been called "old-fashioned", because I hold these views. But I still cling to them, and for good reasons based on long experience.

The advice of another physician may be, "moderate drinking or smoking won't hurt". To which my reply would be, "Nobody can say that the chances of the baby being born sound and healthy won't be improved by the mother's abstinence from smoking and drinking".

In maternal care, the most important consideration is whether this or that will help, not whether it will fail to do harm.

The rule of health the philosopher gave us centuries ago, "Moderation in all things", is a one. But with respect to moderation in the matter of drinking and smoking by a pregnant woman, what is "moderation"? Persons have varying capacities for all things, and when a woman becomes pregnant, the physical changes that go on within her body are quite likely to change her ordinary capacities. It would be extremely difficult to determine what moderation in drinking and smoking is for pregnant women. One drink may be too much. If it is left up to the woman to decide what is moderation, then when she finds one drink doesn't do her any harm, she may take a second, or a third and so on until damage has been done.

I always feel that the safe thing for expectant mothers to do is abstain from both alcohol and nicotine. Nicotine in consumption interferes with the normal amount of pure air absorbed through the lungs, and some of these impurities get into the blood stream and through the blood are absorbed into the foetus.

These "don'ts" for pregnant mothers appy to mothers who are nursing babies also. Some authorities for years have contended that when nursing mothers smoke to excess, the nicotine poison in their milk often causes toxic effects on their babies.

I don't think that giving up smoking and drinking is too much of a sacrifice to ask of a woman who may be required by motherhood to make much greater ones.

Fruit Cookies
Plum Conserve
Lemon Sherbet
Iced Tea

• • •

Plum Conserve

2 qts. plums
2 lbs. sugar
1 lemon
2 oranges
1-2 lb. English walnut meats

Cook plums in as small an amount of water as possible until soft. Rub through strainer and add sugar, fruit juices and rind, and let cook slowly for about 1 hour or until quite thick. When done add coarsely chopped nut meats and turn into sterilized jelly glasses. Cover with paraffin.

• • •

Lemon Sherbet

2 cups sugar
4 cups water
2 egg whites
3-4 cup lemon juice

Boil sugar and water for about 10 minutes; cool. Add lemon juice to syrup and then beaten egg whites, folded into mixture. Freeze.

• • •

Fruit Cookies

1 cup butter
1 1-2 cups brown sugar
1-2 cup molasses
3 eggs, well beaten
3 cups flour
2 cups currants
1 tsp. ginger
1 tsp. cinnamon
1 tsp. allspice
1 tsp. soda
1 cup seeded raisins

Cream butter, add sugar, creaming well together, then add molasses and beaten eggs. Sift dry ingredients with flour and sprinkle some of mixture over well washed and rinsed currants and raisins. Add flour to first mixture and last add fruit. Roll out or drop from spoon on greased cookie sheet and bake in 350 degree oven until done.

GERMANS SUFFER 'SHARP REVERSE' IN DAY ATTACKS

Increasing Night Attacks of Enemy Indicate Change of Tactics Says Air Ministry Spokesman

CRESCENDO EXPECTED

Night Attacks So Far Very Sporadic Have Evidently Gained Nothing Worthwhile

By D. E. BURRISS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 26—(CP Cable) — Germany's air force was said by an Air Ministry spokesman today to have suffered a "very sharp reverse" in daylight efforts to break through Britain's defences and that increasing night attacks apparently indicated the prelude to a change of tactics.

The spokesman said he wanted to appear in no way pessimistic but at the same time predicted that Britain could consider the Nazi night raids as the beginning of a "crescendo which will increase as the enemy communications improve in newly occupied territory."

"As they get better dug in," he said, "the scale of attacks on this country will be increased much further."

The spokesman said the Nazis are being forced by the Royal Air Force to change tactics because in atempted mass flights Germany has suffered "very sharp reverses and lost much more heavily than was expected."

"Good Smack" at Enemy

He warned the public not to consider the R.A.F.'s huge tool of the Nazi air fleet as a "normal daily bag," explaining that the days in which a handful of British planes brought down "great numbers" of enemy craft must be considered "abnormal." He said he made this explanation because the public seemed disappointed when the R. A. F. brought down "only 50 or so."

The spokesman, who confessed he was "possibly too conservative," conceded that the R.A.F. had taken a "good smack" at the enemy air force but warned that Britons must not consider that "they are not going to come at us more and more increasingly."

Right now Nazi officials are trying to get the night attacks better synchonized—that is so they can attack many places at one time."

Nazi Concentrations Moved to France

He told how Nazi air force concentrations—those of both bombing and fighter units—had been moved from Germany into locations in fallen France and that when communications between these centres were perfected Britain could expect much heavier and more frequent night visits. They were gradually building up more and more their attacking forces and concentrating on night flying instruction which they had previously neglected.

"These night attacks so far have been extraordinarily sporadic and seem to have been almost purposeless considering the number of bombs dropped," he said. "And I don't think they have gained anything worthwhile."

On the other hand British planes, he thought, had done "considerably more damage to German targets, especially to things that really matter."

820 Nazi Planes Shot Down Since August 8th Last

(By The Canadian Press)

Resumption of mass raids on Britain today (Monday) brought the destruction of ten more Nazi aircraft, bringing to 820 the number shot down in the eleven days since August 8 that the Germans have attacked in force.

A summary of German and British losses, compiled by the Canadian Press follows:

	German	British
August 8	61	18
August 11	66	26
August 12	62	13
August 13	78	13
August 14	31	7
August 15	180	34
August 16	75	22
August 18	152	22
August 24	50	19
August 25	55	13
August 26	10	—
Total	820	187

On the missing days the Germans attacked in small groups, with anywhere from five to 25 Nazi craft being destroyed daily.

PILOTS AVOID BERMUDA

New York, Aug. 26—(AP)— Officials of Pan American Airways said today that pilots of their Atlantic clippers would continue to avoid Bermuda—where British censors have been seizing American mail—except in case of adverse weather or mechanical trouble.

Pan American's statement followed announcement Saturday by State Secretary Cordell Hull that Washington was still opposed to seizure and censorship of United States mails on the British islands.

H. M. S. HOSTILE SUNK BY MINE

Destroyer of the "Hero" Class is 1,340-Ton Vessel With Complement of 145 Men

London, Aug. 26.— (CP)— The Destroyer Hostile has been sunk by an enemy mine, the Admiralty announced tonight.

The Admiralty statement said: "The Secretary of the Admiralty regrets to announce that H.M.S. Hostile (Lt.-Cmdr. A. F. Burnell-Nujent, D.S.C., R.N.) has been sunk by an enemy mine. The next of kin of casualties have been informed".

The Hostile, one of the "Hero" class, was a 1,340-ton vessel with a normal complement of 145 men. Completed in 1936, she was capable of 36 knots and mounted four 4.7-inch guns and eight torpedo tubes.

FATHER CLEMENT DIES

Montreal, Aug. 26 (CP)—Father Adolphe Clement, 66, for many years rector of St. Joseph's Oratory here until his retirement in 1937, died suddenly in hospital last night. Closely associated with the late Brother Andre in the founding of the Oratory that looks down from Mount Royal over the north side of Montreal, Father Clement was known to thousands of tourists from Canada and the United States.

HONOR MEMORY OF LATE LORD TWEEDSMUIR

New York, Aug. 26.—(CP)— Douglas Cole, Canadian Trade Commissioner in New York, placed a wreath at the foot of the portrait bust of the late Lord Tweedsmuir in the Metropolitan Museum of Art today. Mr. Cole was representing the Canadian Club of New York. The bust, executed by Suzanne Silvercruys, is the same as one in Government House, Ottawa.

Refuses Permanent Writ

Dublin, Aug. 26 —(CP)— Justice Gavin Duffy declined today to make permanent a temporary writ of Habeas Corpus granted last Friday to Patrick McGrath and Thomas Green, Irish Republican Army suspects sentenced to death by a military court for the killing of a detective.

The case now goes to the Supreme Court. McGrath and Green contend the sentence of the military tribunal was unconstitutional.

DUKE OF GUISE, FRENCHCLAIMANT, DIES IN MOROCCO

In 1933 on Death of Cousin, He Became 'Chief of the House of France'

ISSUED MAINFESTOES

Larache, Spanish Morocco. Aug. 26—(AP)—The Duke of Guise, 66, pretender to the throne of France, died today.

The Duke had been living here with his wife, Princess Isabelle of France and his sons.

He is to be buried tomorrow.

Throughout most of his life the Duke of Guise was content to be a gentleman farmer, with estates in France and Spanish Morocco.

In 1933, however, seven years after the death of his cousin, Duke Philippe of Orleans, had placed him in the role of "Chief of the House of France," he issued a manifesto calling for a "dictatorship under the monarchy.".

A year later there was rioting in the place De La Concorde in Paris in which young Royalists joined with shouts of "Vive Le Roi!" (Long live the king).

"The Republic can not go on like this," one of the Duke's spokesmen said. "The next logical step might be a dictator. But we have no Mussolini, no Hitler. Why not then a return to the monarchy?"

His 1937 Manifesto

In November, 1937, the Duke issued another manifesto, announcing he had decided to "reconquer the throne of my fathers." He denounced Communism, Fascism and the French parliamentary system and advocated a conference table solution of labor problems.

With the collapse of French military power last June and the rise of the authoritarian regime of Marshal Philippe Petain, the pretender's claims began to attract more serious attention.

Observers speculated that Petain's assumption of the title "Chief of State" might be only a temporary device aimed to restore the monarchy. It was said that Petain himself had been impressed by the pattern of General Franco's Spanish Nationalist Government which had "left the door open" to restoration of the monarchy in Spain.

U. S. SECTION OF DEFENCE BOARD NOW IN OTTAWA

Party Headed by Mayor LaGuardia of New York and Will Meet Canadian Section for Board's First Meeting

GREETED BY RALSTON

Ottawa, Aug. 26 (CP)—Headed by Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York City, the United States section of the new Canadian-American joint defence Board arrived in the Canadian Capital shortly after noon today for the Board's first meeting.

The six American representatives were greeted at the station by the Canadian Board members, Dr. O. D. Skelton, Under Secretary of State for External Affairs, Major-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, Chief of the General Staff. Rear Admiral Percy Nelles, Air Vice-Marshal L. S. Breadner, and several other high government officials.

The party went at once to hotel quarters for a hasty lunch before proceeding to Parliamant Hill where the first meeting of the Joint Board was scheduled for three o'clock this afternoon. Before the meeting opened it was proposed that the American members would call upon Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Not a Pleasure Trip

"This is not a pleasure trip—make it snappy," Mayor LaGuardia said to photographers who asked him to re-enact his departure from the train for new pictures. But he obliged and the entire party was bombarded by flashlights as they walked from the station to the hotel.

Defence Minister Ralston met the party in the hotel lobby and was introduced to the Americans by J. Pierrepont Moffat, United States Minister to Canada.

Mayor LaGuardia said he might have a statement for the public at the close of the first session, late today. He wore a navy blue lounge suit and a broad-light-gray hat of the sombrero type.

Col. O. M. Biggar, K.C., who had been elected Chairman of the Canadian section at a meeting held just before the train arrived, walked to the hotel with Mayor LaGuardia, Mr. Moffatt walked with them.

Centre of Attraction

Mayor La Guardia was the centre of attraction of a large group at the station and in the hotel lobby. He wore a blue enamel winged badge in his lapel and explained to reporters that it was the emblem of the "Quiet Warbirds" Association.

"I am a member because I have grown old," said the former army airman. "The other members are in it because of their achievements," he added. He said it was composed of both war and civilian fliers.

The railway station was agleam with summer khaki uniforms, gold braid and red tabs of high army and air force officials, and with the blue and white of naval officers. Civilian dignitaries wore plain lounge suits.

Overhead the sky was filled with the roar of airplane motor as squadrons from nearby training stations went through formation exercises.

Personnel of P.S. Board

Those who accompanied Mayor La Guardia, as members of the American section, were:

Lieut.-Gen. Stanley D. Embick, Commander of the Fourth Corps Area at Atlanta, Ga.

Capt. Harry W. Hill, Navy and War Plans Division.

Cmdr. Forrest P. Sherman, U.S.N.

Lieut.-Col. J. T. McNarney, Army Air Corps.

John D. Hickerson, Assistant Chief of the State Department's Division of European Affairs and Secretary of the American Section of the Board.

A suite of offices was ready for the American section on the fourth floor of the Parliament Building. Mayor La Guardia will occupy the office of the chief government whip. Next door is the House of Commons office of Prime Minister Mackenzie King which will be headquarters of the Canadian section, while closeby is the government smoking room, a long, dark-panelled chamber overlooking the city, in which the plenary sessions will be held.

FOREST FIRES IN FRANCE REPORTED UNDER CONTROL

Vichy, France, Aug. 26—(AP)— Huge forest fires which at one time threatened France's Mediterranean naval base at Toulon were reported under control today, but dispatches from the French Riviera said other fires were raging further east in the area around Nice. The fires just north of Toulon were said to have swept through 10,000 acres of forest land before they were checked.

SKY-WRITING PLANES SEEN

London, Aug. 26—(CP)—Mysterious sky-writing planes were reported over a southeast England town this morning. The planes first made what looked like a giant question mark, then followed with an arrow point downward to the town. Ground observers were uncertain what the figures meant; and speculated over whether the planes were German or British.

DRIVER CRUSHED TO DEATH

Wheatley, Ont., Aug. 26—(CP)— John P. Thompson, 39, Rochester, N.Y., was killed instantly today when his car crashed into a telegraph pole on No. 3 Highway near Wheatley.

According to Provincial Traffic Officer J. W. Carpenter, Thompson was alone.

Thompson was thrown out of the car and was crushed to death when the machine rolled on top of him.

GERMAN IS HELD BY U.S. PATROL

Man Taken Into Custody Near International Falls., Minn., Believed to be Escapee from Camp in Canada

Toronto, Aug. 26—(CP)— Emil Cuss, a German, was convicted under the Defence of Canada regulations of using an assumed name. He was sent to jail for one month. He appeared before Magistrate R. J. Browne in No. 1 court today. Evidence a week ago showed the correct name of accused is Reinhold Kussmaul.

"He abreviated his name to Emil Cuss and has been using it for 10 years," declared H. S. Chaplin, defence counsel.

"He is a German," said Magistrate Browne. "How are the authorities going to keep check on these enemy aliens if they go around under assumed names."

Failed to Register

London, Ont., Aug. 26—(CP)— Otto Herman Gassner, 39-year-old German, was sentenced to one month in jail by Magistrate E. Donald Smith today on charges of failing to register under both National Registration and the Defence of Canada Acts. Gassner will also be recommended for internment.

The farmhand arrested on Aug. 22 after his employer, John Hann, of R.R. 8, London, brought him into the local Royal Canadian Mounted Police offices. He was the first person charged here for failing to heed the national registration law.

Col. O. M. Biggar Chosen Chairman Of Canadian Board

Ottawa, Aug. 26—(CP)— Col. O. M. Biggar, Ottawa constitutional and corporation lawyer, today was elected chairman of the Canadian section of the Canadian-American Joint Defence Board which is holding its first session here today.

Selection of Col. Biggar as Canadian chairman was made at a meeting of the five Canadian members of the Board shortly before the arrival of the United States members of the Board.

Gasoline Rationed In Old Country

Rationing of gasoline, limiting English motorists to approximately 150 miles per month is in force in the British Isles and is one means by which vital "petrol" is conserved for the use of the R.A.F. and other motorized units of the British Army, according to Dr. W. R. Thompson, assistant director of the Imperial Institute of Entomology and Superintendent of the Insect Parasite Laboratory, Farnham Royal Buckinghamshire, and now stationed at Belleville.

Gasoline is rationed to motorists according to the size and power of their automobiles, says Dr. Thompson. For the ordinary car which is much smaller than that in general use in Canada, the ration is five gallons per month. By special permission, when authorities consider a person's business of such importance as to warrant it, this ration can be increased slightly, but for the general public, the rule of approximately 150 miles per month for each automobile is adhered to.

NAZI BOMBER KILLS 3 GIRLS IN S. E. IRELAND

Cooperative Creamery at Campile Wrecked, One Girl is Injured

PROTEST TO BERLIN

Dublin, Aug. 26—(CP)—The government of Eire announced a German plane dropped bombs which killed three girls in southeastern Ireland today. An immediate protest was made to Berlin.

"A bomber aircraft of German nationality flew over the area of Campile, Ballymurphy, Bannow and Duncormick, County Wexford, between 2 and 3 o'clock this afternoon", said a statement by the government information bureau.

"Bombs were dropped at each of these points. The Co-operative Creamery at Campile was wrecked, three girls were killed and one injured by falling masonry.

"The Irish Charge D'Affairs in Berlin has been instructed to make a protest to the German Government and to demand full reparations".

Rumania Takes Over Large Oil Company

Bucharest, Aug. 26—(AP) — The Rumanian Government, through its oil commissar, today took over the affairs of Unirea, a large British Oil Company capitalized at $3,000,000 and with an annual production of 640,000 tons.

This was the second large British oil company to be placed under government control along with one French company. The oil commissar now directs half of Rumania's production.

Aging Ted Lyons Handcuffs Yankees With Three-Hitter to Break Six Game Win Streak

However, Yanks Win Second Game to Move Within 5½ Games of Indians

REDS WIN TWO

Cincinnati Increases Lead to 7½ Games Over Dodgers by Beating Phillies Twice

By BILL WHITE
Associated Press Sports Writer

Aging Ted Lyons and Sailor Bill Posedel deserve a vote of thanks. They proved to an anxious baseball world that the New York Yankees and St. Louis Cardinals, possessors of two terrific winning streaks, aren't invincible, after all.

It took some courage for the old men to find that out. The Yanks, thirsting for blood, had just won six straight from Detroit Tigers and Cleveland Indians. The cards had nine successive successes.

Lyons' 18 years of service in the majors stood him in good stead in the first game of the White Sox-Yanks doubleheader at the stadium before 70,740 yesterday. With his head and with his arm he handcuffed the Yanks with three hits to blank them 1-0 in the opener. Posedel twirled a five hitter to give Boston Bees a 4-1 victory over the Cardinals.

The Yanks came back, with Ernie Bonham pitching a five-hitter, to blast the Sox 3-1 in the afterpiece, while the Cards outslugged the Bees 8-5.

The Yankee split, plus Washington's victory over Cleveland by 5-4, left the world champions in third place only 5 1-2 games back of the Indians. That Washington victory was rookie Sid Hudson's 13th of the season and sent the Tribe down to its fourth straight defeat.

Detroit Gains on Indians

Detroit Tigers also cut their second place deficit to 2 1-2 games by thumping the Athletics 7-3, as Bucky Newsom scattered nine hits for his 16th victory.

In the American League's other offering, Boston Red Sox dropped into the second division by losing the first game to Johnny Niggeling and St. Louis Browns, 7-2, but then crept back into fourth place with a 17-3 win in the abbreviated nightcap, during which Jimmy Foxx hit a homer with the bases loaded.

The top club in the National League fared better than the top one in the American. Cincinnati Reds won a pair from the Phillies, 3-2 and 6-5, to stretch their advantage over Brooklyn Dodgers to 7 1-2 games. Jim Turner pitched five-hit ball to win the first, and the Reds simply out-hammered the Phils in the second.

Dodgers Split

The Dodgers split with the hard-punching Pittsburgh Pirates, losing the first 4-3 to Dick Lanahan's eight-hitter, but winning the second 8-1 as Fred Fitzsimmons spun a five hitter for his 13th win of the season and the 205th of his career.

New York Giants and Chicago Cubs split a double bill, Don Dallesandro's 10th-inning double giving the Cubs the first 5-4. The Giant hitters blasted out a 12-8 nightcap victory.

Saturday's feature was Bob Feller's try for his 23rd victory for the Indians against the Yanks. For seven innings he spun a no-hitter while his mates got him a 2-0 lead. But Babe Dahlgren singled in the eighth, the Yanks tied the score then and won in the ninth 3-2 on Bill Knickerbocker's single with the bases loaded.

Regina Roughriders In Western Union

Regina, Aug. 26—(CP)—Regina Roughriders are Western Interprovincial Football Union contenders again this season because big Dean Griffing and members of the club executive refused surrender in a financial crisis.

For weeks it appeared Regina would be forced to follow the lead of Edmonton Eskimos and drop from the Union for duration of the war because of financial difficulties. But Griffing, 210-pound snapback who came from Kansas State College in 1936 to coach and play for Riders, refused to admit defeat.

With big Dean promising to field a team if he had to play every position himself, such executives as Manager Jack Lockhart and N. J. (Piffles) Taylor set out to arouse the public. They sold $10 club memberships, arranged to finance the $5,000 1939 deficit. Somehow they gained sufficient support and Riders are in the league which opens Friday with Winnipeg at Calgary.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Ted Lyons, White Sox and Ernie Bonham, Yankees: Former pitched three hit shutout to break Yanks win streak in first game, while latter pitched five hitter in nightcap.

Johnny Niggeling, Browns and Jimmy Foxx, Red Sox: Former allowed eight hits in opener, while Foxx helped Boston win nightcap via 34th homer, with bases full.

Buck Newsom, Tigers: Tossed nine-hitter against Athletics.

Sid Hudson, Senators: Scored 13th victory of the year as Washington handed Indians fourth straight loss.

Bill Posedel, Bees and Johnny Mize, Cards: Former tamed Cards in first game, while latter's 37th homer of season gave Red Birds nightcap.

Dick Lanahan, Pirates and Fred Fitzsimmons, Dodgers: Dick gave up eight hits to win opener; while Freddie twirled a five hitter in afterpiece.

Leafs Defeat Syracuse in First 6-3 but Drop Nightcap Game 1-0

By The Associated Press

If the International Baseball League season had started just 25 games ago, Buffalo Bisons would be looking down on—instead of up at—practically all the rest of the clubs in the league.

For Bisons have been playing .760 ball for the last 25 days. But even that triumphant streak hasn't helped them move out of the second division. They're only in sixth place today, even after knocking off the league-leading Rochester club 7-6 in an 11-inning thriller yesterday.

Les Scarsella was the big hero of the victory. He rifled a shot into right field with the bases loaded to win the game before a happy home crowd.

The nightcap was called on account of darkness in the seventh inning with the count tied at two-all.

Walter Cazen's homer off Floyd Giebell with two on base in the ninth inning of the first game sent it into the overtime. All four runs in the afterpiece came on home-runs.

Royals on Rampage

Another victory run that can't be overlooked is the one Montreal are waging. By handing Baltimore Orioles a double defeat 7-6 and 3-0, Royals reached six wins the last seven times out.

Royals took the first by scoring two runs off Ted Olson and Italo Chelini in the eighth. Gus Suhr, with four straight hits, drove in five runs including the tying and winning tallies. The nightcap went an extra inning before George Staller hit his 11th homer of the season with two on.

Jersey City grabbed a pair of victories in a doubleheader with Newark Bears, winning the first 4-3 in 10 innings and the second 5-2 in seven. Dusty Cooke drove in the tying run in the opener in the ninth with a triple, and then contributed a game-winning single in the 10th.

Syracuse and Toronto split a doubleheader. Leafs taking the first 6-3 and Chiefs the nightcap 1-0. Three Syracuse errors in the first inning helped Leafs to three runs in the first game.

Ted Kleinhans pitched four-hit ball and drove in the only run of the nightcap with a single.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Aug. 26 —(AP)— Odds on the Yanks to cop the pennant have dropped from 12 to 1 right down to 4-1 since they started to sizzle the last couple of weeks . . . And the guys who study things like that say the Indians never will recover from the beating Bobby Feller took from the Champs Saturday after he had a no-hitter just about in his hip pocket . . . The Docs have put an official "okay" on Bill Decorrevont minus his appendix, and say he'll be ready to carry the mall for North-Western this fall . . . Around here they say Sammy Snead is the "good thing" in the P.G.A championship at Hershey this week, but Henri Picard's going to be awful tough in his own back yard . . .

Credit Ted Lyons, who's crowding 40, with the trick of the week—that three-hitter against the Yanks—which comes out here in a couple of couplets:

Teddy Lyons, old and gray
Beat the Yankees yesterday
Let them down with just three hits
And left the sluggers throwing fits.

Bob Pastor starts training again today for that off-again, on-again waltz with Billy Conn in the Garden Sept. 6 . . . Billy goes back to work tomorrow or Wednesday . . . An Bukowski, serving 'em up for the Kaufmann Maids softball team from Reading, tossed three straight one-hitters in one day to pitch the club to the Penn State gals championship . . . If that isn't a record, it'll do . . .

Up in Soo, Mich., the other day, sports commentator Porky Rousseau re-broadcast a Detroit-St. Louis ball game in the afternoon over the local station, and worked a hockey game a couple of hours later . . . Which is really getting around . . . The season's medal, with palm, goes to the fans down in Brewton, smallest town in the 'Bama State league . . . The club's been in the cellar just about all season, the grandstands burned last month—and still the town led the league in attendance for June and July.

YOUNGSTERS WIN TENNIS CROWN

Jack Kramer and Ted Schroeder, 19-Year-Olds, Annex Prized National Doubles Titles

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 26 (AP)—Although they have been operating as a tennis unit only eight months, Jack Kramer and Ted Schroeder, a pair of 19-year-old youngsters, today were the proprietors of the prized National Doubles titles—the youngest winners to bob up in 50 years.

They gained those honors in masterly fashion yesterday when they gave the much seasoned Gardnar Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla., and Henry Prusoff, of Seattle, a 6-4, 8-6, 9-7 drubbing by storming the net at every opportunity and keeping the ball in play until their opposition cracked.

After Kramer and Schroeder defied tradition by making their first start in the National event a winning one, the long established team of Alice Marble and Sarah Palfrey restored normality by gaining their fourth consecutive Women's Doubles titles by defeating Mrs. Johnny Van Ryn, of Austin, Tex., one of the 1936 winners, and Dorothy Bundy, of Santa Monica, Cal., 6-4, 6-3. Miss Marble rested about five minutes and then stepped out with Bobby Riggs of Chicago, and won the mixed doubles laurels from Miss Bundy and Kramer by 9-7, 6-1 margins.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was feeling slightly worried on our front steps, and pop came up and started to go in the house, and I said, Hay pop, I sent ma a present for a surprise this afternoon.

It wasn't anything alive, I hope, pop said, and I said, No sir, it was 2 dozen different color roses from the florist shop. I heard talking to somebody on the phone yestidday and saying today was going to be her wedding anniversity, so this afternoon I went up to Pockadopolo's florist shop on the Avenue and sent her the roses, I said.

Yee gods the occasion completely slipped my mind, pop said. I ought to be shot and maybe that's just what will happen. But say, where did you get enough money for 2 dozen roses at Pockadapolo's? he said, and I said, That's just it, pop, I mean I didn't have any money, so I told Mr. Pockadopolo to charge them. So jimminy, pop, maybe ma wont like the 2nd surprise when she gets the bill the first of the month, I said.

It's certainly a point to be considered, only possibly you're considering it a little late, pop said, and just then ma came to the front door saying to pop, I heard you talking, Willyum, and I just couldn't wait to thank you for the lovely roses and to apologize for doing you an injustice, because I was sure you had forgotten the date.

Yee gods, wasn't there any card with them? pop said, and ma said, Why no there wasn't, but why, how did you know, I mean if you left a card how did you know they omitted it?

Why, I sort of gather it from Benny, pop said. And by the way my conscience wont let me take full credit for remembering the occasion, because Benny reminded me. It seems he heard you talking on the phone or something yestidday, he said, and ma said, O well, all's well that ends well. Dinner's ready, she said.

The result being we went in and ate it, proberly all feeling lucky.

Considerable sports activity and water passed under the bridge since your reporter was counted out by "Kid Lumbago," but here goes to get back into the swing of things even though the reliable old Remington doesn't seem to spell any too well. It seems the Shell "Oilers" pushed Corbys and Trenton out of the O.A.S.A. picture during our absence, while Zellers were crowned champs. of the Ladies' Mercantile softball loop. Latta knotted up the South Hastings League play-offs with Cannifton last week forcing a fifth game tonight and as soon as this series is over Cannifton will select the best baseball nine out of the S.H.L. and play in the intermediate Ontario Baseball Association playdowns. Incidentally H. G. "Twigg" Woodley was prevailed upon to coach the "Sluggers" in their attempt to move into provincial baseball prominence and all of the games played by the South Hastings nine will be played at the local Fair Grounds, providing, however, some person rids the infield of obnoxious weeds.

So much for a quick review of district sport occurences, exclusive of tennis and golf at the request of the Kingston Softball League the Belleville-Kingston O.A.S.A. play-offs were postponed from last Friday and will commence at Kingston this evening, when the "Oilers" will get their first real test since they eliminated Corbys. The return game is scheduled to be played at the Flats Wednesday. However, their is a fly in the ointment—the 'Oilers" will be without the services of Eddie Schrieder in the Kingston series, as Eddie is vacationing. (Nice work if you can get it.) Skipper Harold Bawden will have to depend on brother Johnnie to carry the burden of the "Oilers", and we are quite confident that if Bawden is right and his teammates give him a few runs margin to work on, the "Oilers" will emerge on the right side of the ledger after the Kingston series. However, the Shell nine will have to sharpen up their batting eyes considerably, that is judging from their attempts at the plate during the first Bank of Commerce city championship game when 'Ding" Luffman let the "Oilers" down with two small hits.

Actually last Thursday night the softball fans of this community missed the best game of the season when the Point Anne "Cementmen" eked out a 3-2 win in the initial City Softball Championship game over the "Oilers". Luffman pitched two-hit ball, while Bawden allowed but four scratch base blows. Paced by Mike Whalen the Cementmen clicked with three fast double plays and the game was completed in exactly 57 minutes, nine full innings of softball. The handful of fans present agreed they received plenty for the meagre charge. However just when the Bank of Commerce series will continue is a problem that Prexy Edgecombe and Secretary Harry Knott are pondering over today. Shell plays Monday and Wednesday, with a possible third game with Kingston on Friday, while Point Anne meet Wooler on Tuesday and Thursday, with the possible third game slated for Saturday, so this week is well taken up with softball and the Belleville Fair crowded in for good measure on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

We want it made plain regarding the girls' softball final game. There was at no time a protest lodged by the K-Nines. However, what Coach Barrett and his associates wanted to know was whether or not the final game had been declared "no contest" or not. After listening to a verbal review of the entire proceedings, all present at last week's meeting agreed that the better plan was to let matters stand as they were on the field and Zellers were duly announced as champions. This year's girls' softball revival was purely in the experimental stage and the matter of a championship did not materially enter into the picture. However, a foundation for a good league has been solidly set for another year and it is hoped the sponsors another year will draft a regulation set of rules and head their league with that hard-working Ted Schwab, who made this year's league really go. In the meantime the sport fans of Belleville are urged to take in this week's game when champion Zeller's nine meet an All-Star team from the remainder of the clubs in the league with all receipts to be given to the Red Cross. This is only one of the few patriotic ventures planned by the girls' softball loop, but it is worthy of YOUR patronage.

"Red" Townsend's Uptown Juniors ran into difficulty at Oshawa on Saturday when the Motor City kids walloped the local teen-aged softballers 15 to 5. However, Red and his boys feel they have better than an even chance to tie up the series in the return game, slated to be played here Tuesday evening. Incidentally Jo-Boy Samain came all of the way from the St. Thomas air training school to play with the local kids Saturday. Oshawa and Belleville being the only two Junior O.A.S.A. teams in Eastern Ontario, their series is naturally a zone final, with the winner meeting Toronto. The Uptowns out-hit Oshawa 12 to 10, but walks proved the downfall of Mallory and Hook, the two local moundsmen.

A goodly delegation of Belleville baseball fans took in the Oshawa at Peterborough Johnson Cup series in the Liftlock City on Saturday. Reports from the scene of hostilities were anything but encouraging. "The pitching was poor and the fielding worse at times. Actually one couldn't imagine baseball could have slipped into such a low bracket in such a short space of time. It was far from the type of baseball seen in these parts a decade or more ago," lamented one veteran ball fan from this city as he shook his head in despair. Incidentally if that is the best class of ball played in the Inter-city loop, Kingston has nothing to fear and a brilliant future for their efforts of the past two years. Oshawa won both games and the Johnson Cup.

SPORT SPICE — Apparently they are getting the crowds, but not the cash during Kingston softball games. . . . It is more than possible that the Shell at Kingston O.A.S.A. game this evening will be played at Richardson Stadium, which indicates the fans will have to pay as they enter, or see no softball. . . . The Richardson Stadium was used for C.O.B.L. games away back in 1924, but a short right field fence soon terminated that practice. Incidentally Don Thomas, of the 3-47th Battery, and Pat Corrigan have been named as umpires in Kingston tonight, we hear. . . . It's a real race they're staging in the American League this year, there only being eight games difference between the league leaders and the fifth-placed White Sox. . . . The Yankees have won 15 of their last 18 starts, but were halted yesterday by that grand old moundsman, Ted Lyons, of the Pale Hose, who limited champs to three small hits. . . . Over in the National camp the Red legs continue to keep winning just sufficiently to retain their margin of leadership. . . . And that seems to be about the lot for here and now.

Vichy Gov't. Says Paris is to be Assured Of Supply of Wine

Vichy, France, Aug. 26 —(AP)— French officials announced today that 30,000,000 litres of wine (7,925,000 gallons) would be shipped into Paris by agreement with German authorities to assure Parisians a normal wine supply. Grape crops in France are sufficient to care for the needs of the whole country including any normal demand by the German army of occupation, government experts declared.

Wins Top Honors in Honey

Toronto, Aug. 26 —(CP)— J. W. Hunt of Dorchester, Ont., won top honors in the honey competition at the Canadian National Exhibition today. His entries placed first in the Dominion comb honey contest and in the honey display and third in the liquid-extracted group.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Enemy Agent"

Giant aircraft factories of Southern California where huge bombers, swift pursuit ships and other military planes are built for use in this country and abroad, form the background of Universal's graphic spy drama, "Enemy Agent," now at the Capitol Theatre, with Richard Cromwell, Helen Vincent, Robert Armstrong and Jack La Rue in leading roles. The story concerns efforts of G-Men in keeping aircraft plants free of foreign spies bent on sabotage and theft of secret military plane designs.

The companion feature, "When Ladies Meet," starring Ann Harding, Myrna Loy, Robert Montgomery and Frank Morgan will give you a new angle on the eternal problem of wife-husband and sweetheart, spotted with high-brow comedy bits and dramatic performance that will hold your interest throughout its running time.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Man with Nine Lives"

The picture that the king of horror, Karloff himself, dares you to see—his latest and greatest terrifying shocker, "The Man with Nine Lives" is now showing at the McCarthy Theatre.

The startling drama tells a blood-curdling story of "frozen sleep" in sensational fashion. "The Man with Nine Lives" is a real thriller-diller and only if you can stand sheer, unadulterated horror then the McCarthy Theatre is the place for you.

To let you in on the story angle of "The Man with Nine Lives" would be like putting the horse before the cart, as the saying goes, but we will tell you that Boris Karloff never before has brought such a chilling film to the screen and we doubt very much if ever again you will see Karloff portray a characterization which will have the terrifying thrills that come to life in "The Man with Nine Lives." Roger Pryor, Jo Ann Sayers, Stanley Brown and John Dilson are the major featured players with Karloff and each one comes through with a performance that could not be improved upon. Excellent short subjects precede the presentation of the feature at each performance.

"Hitler — Beast of Berlin"

See the true facts about Nazism, how it rose to power, the agony of Pastor Pommer, in the powerful story "Hitler — Beast of Berlin" which comes next to the McCarthy Theatre. Due to this picture's showing in Ontario, the film will not arrive in Belleville until the opening day and it has to be back in Toronto for its opening there.

It will not be held over in Belleville for this reason and you are advised to see it early at the McCarthy Theatre. The Ontario Censor Board in their report on this picture, "Hitler—Beast of Berlin," recommended that every loyal Canadian should see it.

AT THE BELLE

"Today We Live"

The appearance of Gary Cooper and Joan Crawford in a story written by William Faulkner and directed by Howard Hawks of "Scarface" fame, make "Today We Live" next at the Belle Theatre, one of the most anticipated motion pictures of the current season.

Miss Crawford is cast as a member of a British ambulance unit in the present picture which is described as the experiences of a woman and three men during the World War. Cooper has the principle male lead as an American aviator, the other members of the male triangle are played by Robert Young and Franchot Tone.

The activities of the British navy particularly their dangerous "skeeter destroyer," plays a prominent part in the action of "Today We Live" with further exciting episodes centred on the aerial spectacles, of bombing squadrons. Although the war serves as a background for the plot, the conflict is never allowed to submerge the focal point of drama in the strong personalities who are entangled in a struggle for life and love behind the lines.

Comedy interludes are brought into the story through the antics of Roscoe Karns as the "life of the billet," whose humorous philosophies serve to relieve the tension of the aviators who expect each day to be their last. The picture is likewise given lighter touches in the personality of Louise Closser Hale in the role of a faithful family servant who stops shedding tears over war troubles long enough to register her well-known inimitable dry wit. Rollo Lloyd and Hilda Vaughn complete the supporting cast.

"Today We Live," reaches its most stirring points in the first meeting of Miss Crawford and Cooper at the very moment when she learns of her father's death in France; the last five hours before Robert Young and Franchot Tone leave to enlist in the British navy; Cooper's bravery when he is taken aboard a secret speedboat which discharges a single torpedo at great risk to the pilots; and the final gesture of Young and Tone, who do a job for which Cooper was assigned and forfeit their lives in order to save his life for the girl they all love.

Also on the same program is "The Captain is a Lady," a howling comedy of the adventures of a sea captain who gets mixed up with a cargo of old maids — Charles Coburn, Beulah Bondi, Virginia Grey, Helen Broderick and Billie Burke are featured in the cast.

The popular Belle News reel will be presented on the same program.

COLD WEATHER AFFECTS CROPS

New York State Farmers Badly Hit by Frost and Heavy Rains

Albany, N.Y., Aug. 26—(AP) — New York farmers looked anxiously today to crops already damaged in some sections by the weekend's record-setting cold weather.

Oneida and Rome reported some damage and gardens were badly hit at Oneonta, where Saturday's 32 set a new 45-year August low. Forecasts indicate little relief before tomorrow, if then.

Rain added to the weekend's unpleasantness in southern New York. Jamestown had a minimum of 39 and a several-hours' rainfall. Binghampton also was wet, and its 34-degree temperature broke a record of 41 established in 1908.

Albany registered 54 at midnight after two days of record-shattering lows. Yesterday's minimum was 35 against 44 in 1874 and a maximum of 69. Saturday's 45 equalled the record for the date.

Syracuse had a low of 38, with 55 at midnight.

New York City's 51.5 yesterday was the lowest in the 70-year records. But Saturday's extreme lows still held for the state—26 at Machias and Wanakah.

Lithuanian Capital To Be Moved To Wilno May 1

Moscow, Aug. 26—(AP)— The supreme Soviet of Lithuania has voted to transfer the Lithuanian capital from Kaunas to Vilna (Wilno), ancient Lithuanian capital, before next May 1.

The city was the centre of a dispute between Poland and Lithuania after the last war, finally falling to Polish occupation in 1920. It remained Polish until after the division of Poland last year, when the city and district were returned to Lithuania by Soviet Russia.

Dispatches from the Baltic capitals today said the three parliaments of Lithuania, Estonia and Latvia, recently absorbed into the Soviet Union, have proclaimed themselves supreme Soviets and elected councils of peoples commissars.

PLAN FOR EVACUATION OF BRITISH CHILDREN WILL BE EXPLAINED

Ottawa, Aug. 26. — (CP)— R. Keith Jopson, Canadian representative of the Children's Overseas Reception Board of Britain, will explain to Canadians the British Government scheme for the evacuation of children over a Canadian Broadcasting Corporation network tomorrow at 8:15 p.m. E.D.T., it was announced today by the Director of Immigration, F. C. Blair.

SOLD . . . to the dizziest buyer!

The noisy and sweaty marts of the Old World . . . a study of color in chaos . . . barter based on the jumbled jargon of a dozen different tongues.

Picturesque? No doubt—if you were far enough removed, and the wind blowing the right way!

In the haggling and stickling of the ancient bazaar, the merchant cheapened himself as well as the goods he sought to sell. Without price standards, he could not maintain quality standards for his merchandise. He gambled his prosperity on his ability to deceive his customer.

Modern successful merchandising is built on integrity and the mutual trust of buyer and seller. In this, advertising plays a vital role.

You may study the advertisements in this newspaper with the full assurance that they are both statements of fact and symbols of good faith. And you can read them in your own home, in comfort and quiet—with no danger of being stampeded into a purchase by jabbering and arm-waving.

Fractured Skulls Cause of Deaths

Coroner Unable to Determine Cause of Crash Which Took Lives of Three Cabinet Ministers

Canberra, Aug. 26—(CP-Reuters) —A verdict of death by fractured skulls as a result of the crashing of an aircraft was returned today at the inquest into the death Aug. 13 of three members of the Australian war cabinet and seven other persons.

The coroner was unable to ascertain the cause of the accident but official witnesses testified that there were no suspicious circumstances.

The Ministers killed were Geoffrey Street, Defence; J. V. Fairbairn, Air and Sir Henry Gullett, Vice-President of the executive council, Gen. Sir Brudenell White, Chief of the Australian General Staff, was among the others who lost their lives.

The party were flying from Melbourne in a bomber plane to attend a cabinet meeting here. The machine crashed near Canberra airport.

21 Nazi Bombers Unload Cargoes On S. E. Coast Town

London, Aug. 26. (CP)—Twenty-one German bombers unloaded their cargoes on a southeast coast town this afternoon in the town's fourth raid since early morning.

A pall of smoke from the bombed town blotted out the white cliffs around it. Places nearby were shaken by the explosions.

Stubborn Fire Rages Not Far From Toulon

Vichy, Aug. 26—(AP) — A stubborn blaze which has destroyed 11,000 acres of forestland in southern France in the last five days, threatened today to spread to the naval base at Toulon and French troops were summoned to aid civilian fire fighters. Cinders carried by high winds were "raining" on the important Mediterranean base from blazing timberland six miles away.

CHAPTER 30

Suspense

Brooke had dressed so hurriedly when Rod phoned that her things were still scattered about. She flung off her wrap and began picking them up, thinking. "I'll call Julian in the morning....No, I'll call Rod first. I must see him first." She tried to hold her thoughts in check but they were spilling over in happy torrents....

It was a long time before she slept and it was noon when she awoke. She called Rod immediately.

His voice was edged with sarcasm. "Not just getting in from Connecticut?"

Brooke said, "I've been sleeping for hours I want to see you today Rod. We could have lunch...."

An hour later she met him downstairs and they walked some distance to a restaurant.

She thought, "I could have sent you a telegram, Rod. Oh, but I am sorry for you! You're sure of yourself again. Your step is jaunty. What you did wasn't wicked. It was just wrong and hasty...."

She said, "I'm not very hungry. Barney is a splendid host and the dinner was excellent. He enjoys his place in Connecticut tremendously." Then, "We talked about you, Rod. He wants you back...."

He stared, disbelieving.

She nodded. "Yes. So your new job is only a temporary one. You'll be back with Barney soon."

He was touched. "Have I you to thank for this, too?"

"No. Barney himself."

"Back with Barney. That was too good to hope for...."

She put her hand over his.

"And, Rod. I can't let you go on believing I'm the same girl I was in January and that I'll marry you when you are free."

He glanced up quickly but she went on, "You can't see it, can you, that I'm not the same? Oh, I look the same, yes! But it's called growing up when you can face realities and you cease to put a halo around the heads of certain people."

Not even around Julian's head, she thought. His stubbornness, the quick flare of his temper.. ..
